START

Microfilmed By:

NORTHEAST DOCUMENT CONSERVATION CENTER
Andover, MA 01810

July 1994

Camera Operator:
John Sullivan

MASTER NEGATIVE NUMBER: BSO-56-053

MICROFILMED
August 1993 - April 1994

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA SCRAPBOOK MICROFILMING PROJECT

Funded in part by

THE NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE HUMANITIES

Grant No. PS-20709-93

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA MICROFILMING PROJECT

A Cooperative Project Between the Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives and the Boston Public Library (August 1993 - April 1994)

The Microfilming Project incorporates two collections of scrapbooks housed in two separate repositories. The first set of scrapbooks (80 volumes) resides within the Allen A. Brown Collection of the Boston Public Library (BPL) Music Department. Their call number is M.125.5. The second set of scrapbooks (132 volumes) resides within the Press Clippings collection of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (BSO) Archives. They have the designation Pres 56.

The BPL scrapbooks begin with the founding of the BSO in 1881 and continue, through 79 seasons, to 1960. Articles consist mainly of reviews and feature stories from Boston and New York newspapers. Occasionally, magazine articles and press releases are also included. The scrapbooks cover most aspects of the BSO.

The BSO scrapbooks run from 1889, the Orchestra's 9th season, to 1973. In addition to local reviews and features, the volumes contain articles culled from national and international publications. The scrapbooks document, in detail, all aspects of the BSO: The Symphony Orchestra (including subscription concerts, tours, and trips), the Boston Pops, the Tanglewood Festival, the Tanglewood Music Center, and Symphony Hall.

The two sets of scrapbooks have been filmed as two separate entities. Researchers wanting to look at specific seasons or subjects must examine both sets of films to ensure full coverage.

The scrapbooks do not represent the complete holdings of either location on the subject of the BSO.

Requests for positive microfilm copies of individual rolls, or of film sets, should be directed to the respective repository:

Music Department
Boston Public Library
Post Office Box 286
Boston, MA 02117

Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives
Symphony Hall
Boston, MA 02115

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA SCRAPBOOKS

1889 - 1973

132 VOLUMES

Source: Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives

FINDING AID

Boston Symphony Orchestra Scrapbooks (Series 56, Sub-Series 1)

Source: Press Office (Office of the Public Relations Director)

The BSO scrapbooks comprise part of one series in the BSO Archives. Series 56, Press Clippings, is divided by format into 3 sub-series: 1) Scrapbooks, 1889-1973 (132 volumes); 2) Loose Clippings, 1931-1991 (9 record cartons); and 3) Oversize Newspapers and Journals, 1919-1979 (1 oversize box). Each sub-series is arranged chronologically.

The scrapbooks contain concert notices and reviews, record reviews, and feature articles. Early scrapbooks may also contain programs, tickets, and subscription orders. Materials are organized by concert season into the following categories: BSO (including tours); Kneisel Quartet (and later Boston Symphony Chamber Players); Boston Pops (referred to in early years as Promenade concerts); and Tanglewood (including the Tanglewood Music Center, the Tanglewood Festival, Tanglewood-on-Parade, and the Fromm Festival of Contemporary Music).

Reviews and articles cover a wide range of subjects: Founder H.L. Higginson; BSO conductors, players, trustees, and other personnel; guest artists and composers; BSO and Pops performances and recordings; U.S. and overseas tours; BSO/Cecilia Society joint performances; open rehearsals; and special events connected to anniversary celebrations and fundraising.

Feature stories document changes in the size, composition, and location of the orchestra. Topics include the hiring of women and minorities; the unionization of players; controversies (such as the internment of conductor Karl Muck during World War II); the sale of the old Music Hall; and the construction of Symphony Hall and other structures (such as the Koussevitsky Music Shed at Tanglewood).

Reproductions of the materials in the collection may not be made without permission from the Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives.

GUIDE TO CONTENTS

Institution: BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Series Name: PRESS CLIPPINGS
Series Number: 56
Series Dates: 1889-1991

Sub-series Name: SCRAPBOOKS
Sub-series Number: 1
Sub-series Dates: 1889-1973

VOLUME LISTING

VOL	TITLE	DATES
1	BSO	1889-1890
2	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1890-1891
3	BSO	1891-1892
4	Promenade (Pops)	1892
5	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1892-1893
6	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1893-1894
7	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1894-1895
8	BSO	1895-1896
9	Promenade (Pops)	1895-1896
10	BSO	1896-1897
11	BSO	1897-1898
12	Promenade (Pops)	1897-1898
13	BSO	1898-1899
14	BSO	1899-1900
15	Pops	1899-1900
16	BSO	1900-1901
17	BSO	1901-1902
18	Pops	1901-1903
19	BSO	1902-1903
20	BSO	1903-1904
21	BSO	1904-1905
22	Pops	1904-1905
23	BSO	1905-1906
24	BSO	1906-1907
25	BSO	1907-1908
26	BSO	1908-1909
27	BSO Pops	1909-1910
28	BSO Pops	1910-1911
29	BSO Advertisements	1910-1911
30	BSO Pops	1911-1912
31	BSO Pops	1912-1913
32	BSO Pops	1913-1914
33	BSO Pops	1914-1915
34	BSO Pops	1915-1916
35	BSO Pops	1916-1917
36	BSO Pops	1917-1918
37	Karl Muck	1918
38	BSO Pops	1918-1919
39	BSO Pops	1919-1920
40	BSO Advertisements	1919-1920
41	BSO Pops	1920-1921
42	BSO Pops	1921-1922
43	BSO BSO Advertisements Pops Advertisements	1922-1923
44	BSO Pops	1922-1924
45	BSO Pops	1924
46	BSO BSO Advertisements Pops Advertisements	1924-1926
47	BSO Pops	1925-1926
48	BSO Advertisements Pops Advertisements	1926-1927
49	BSO Pops	1926-1928
50	BSO	1928
51	BSO Pops	1928-1929
52	BSO Pops U.S. Tour	1929-1930
53	BSO	1930-1931
54	BSO Pops	1931-1932
55	BSO Pops	1932-1933
56	BSO	1933-1934
57	BSO	1934-1935
58	BSO	1935-1936
59	BSO	1936-1937

VOL	TITLE	DATES
60	Pops
	Tanglewood	1936-1937
61	BSO	1937
62	BSO	1937-1938
63	Pops
	Tanglewood	1938
64	BSO	1938-1939
65	Pops
	Tanglewood	1939
66	BSO	1939-1940
67	Tanglewood	1939-1941
68	BSO
	Pops	1940
69	BSO	1940-1941
70	Tanglewood	1940-1944
71	BSO	1941-1942
72	BSO	1942-1943
73	BSO	1943-1944
74	BSO
	Pops
	Tanglewood	1944-1945
75	BSO
	Pops
	Tanglewood	1945-1946
76	BSO
	Pops
	Tanglewood	1946-1947
77	Tanglewood	1947-1948
78	BSO	1947-1949
79	Tanglewood	1949-1950
80	BSO	1949-1951
81	Tanglewood	1950-1951
82	BSO
	Pops	1951-1952
83	BSO
	Pops	1952-1953
84	Tanglewood	1952-1953
85	BSO	1953-1955
86	Tanglewood	1953-1954
87	Tanglewood	1954-1955
88	BSO
	Pops	1955-1956
89	Tanglewood	1955-1956
90	Tanglewood	1955-1956
91	European Tour	1956
92	European Tour	1956-1957
93	BSO
	Pops	1956-1957
94	Tanglewood	1957
95	BSO	1957-1958
96	BSO
	Pops	1958-1959
97	BSO	1958-1959
98	Tanglewood	1958-1959
99	Tanglewood	1959
100	BSO
	Pops	1959-1960
101	Tanglewood	1959-1960
102	Far Eastern Tour	1959-1960
103	BSO
	Pops	1960-1961
104	Tanglewood	1961
105	BSO
	Pops	1961-1962
106	Tanglewood	1962
107	BSO
	Pops	1962-1963
108	Tanglewood	1963
109	BSO
	Pops	1963-1964
110	Tanglewood	1963-1964
111	BSO
	Pops	1964-1966
112	Tanglewood	1965
113	BSO 85th Anniversary	1965
114	BSO
	Pops	1965-1966
115	Tanglewood	1966
116	BSO
	Pops	1966-1967
117	Tanglewood	1967
118	BSO
	Pops	1967-1968
119	Tanglewood	1968-1969
120	BSO
	Pops	1968-1969
121	Tanglewood	1969
122	BSO
	Pops	1969-1970
123	Tanglewood	1970
124	BSO
	Pops	1970-1971
125	Tanglewood	1971
126	BSO
	Pops	1971-1972
127	European Tour	1970-1971
128	European Tour	1971
129	Tanglewood	1972
130	BSO
	Pops	1972-1973
131	Tanglewood	1973
132	BSO
	Pops	1973-1974

MATERIALS NOT FILMED

SUB-SERIES NUMBER	SUB-SERIES NAME	SUB-SERIES DATES
2	Loose Clippings	1931-1991
3	Oversize Newspapers and Journals	1919-1979

COPYRIGHT STATEMENT

The copyright law of the Unites States - Title 17, United States Code - concerns the making of photocopies or other reproductions of copyrighted material.

Under certain conditions specified in the law, libraries and archives are authorized to furnish a photocopy or other reproduction. One of these specified conditions is that the photocopy or other reproduction is not to be "used for any purpose other than private study, scholarship, or research." If a user makes a request for, or later uses, a photocopy or reproduction for purposes in excess of "fair use," that user may be liable for copyright infringement.

This institution reserves the right to refuse to accept a copy order if, in its judgment, fulfillment of the order would involve violation of the copy-right law.

TECHNICAL DATA

IMAGE PLACEMENT: (IA) IB IIA IIB

REDUCTION RATIO: 14X

FILM STOCK:

REEL 53

Volume 89

Tanglewood

1955-1956

PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm

A3

A4

A5

1.0 mm

1.5 mm

2.0 mm

2.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century

A&P

1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

MULTIPLE EXPOSURES DUE TO COLOR VARIATIONS AND OVERLAPPING MATERIAL

VOLUME 89

Tanglewood

1955 - 1956

NATIONAL FLAT BACK SCRAP BOOKS

FULL DUCK COVER, MANILA PAPER

Without Index, Ruling, Paging or Title

NUMBER	THICKNESS	SIZE
1032	72 Leaves	12⅝ × 10¼
1033	72 Leaves	15 × 10
1034	100 Leaves	15 × 10
1036	90 Leaves	16 × 11⅜
1038	150 Leaves	16 × 11⅜
1039	90 Leaves	18 × 13
→ 1041	150 Leaves	18 × 13
1042	150 Leaves	25 × 20

To duplicate this book Order Number indicated by arrow

Pg. 1

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, TUESDAY, AUGUST 2, 1955

Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 285,839

AUG 1 1955

Music in Review

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, July 31 — The beautiful all-Brahms concert by Pierre Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra this afternoon must have come as sweet consolation to the thousands who, because of the vicious traffic tie-up last night had to miss part of the Beethoven concert or the hundreds who did not get here at all.

The audience this afternoon reached the not inconsiderable number of 12,000 persons; the total for the week end was an impressive 35,000, the second biggest shed week end in Tanglewood history.

Mr. Monteux opened the program with a reading of the academic festival overture so full of "Gemutlich" that the one listener at least reached involuntarily for a stein of good German beer. These student songs, comprising the themes of the piece, have seldom sounded more invigorating.

Originally scheduled for the second work was the concerto for violin and cello in which Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky were to be soloists. However, Mr. Piatigorkgy became ill and the violin concerto was substituted.

Mr. Stern performed with his customary elan and elicited the customary bravos at the conclusion. Conductor and soloist were so incredibly attuned in matters of interpretation that the concerto became a symphony with added solo part rather than any example of virtuoso display.

The final work, Symphony No. 1 in C Minor, was designed to bring any audience to its feet, particularly since the fourth movement has that thrilling melody which dominates the last pages. Mr. Monteux, not fussing about details, allowed the orchestra to play it in a straightforward manner, and the effect was stimulating, to say the least.

All through the concert, Monteux accented the lyrical qualities of each work. The result was Brahms, warm and heart-touching, rather than either fifty or square-cut.

For this listener, t[he] was the best concert so far this season.

15,500 Crowd Tanglewood For All-Beethoven Program

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., July 31 — Tanglewood's attendance record nearly fell Sunday night when 15,500 persons in the Music Shed and on the lawn heard the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a Beethoven program under Charles Munch's direction, with Rudolf Serkin as a soloist in the "Emperor" Piano Concerto. The figure missed the peak mark set on a Saturday night in 1951 by only 300. No space was left in Tanglewood's vast parking lots, and later arriving cars had to be left farther afield. Tickets were sold to late arrivals up to the beginning of the last work in the program, the "Eroica" Symphony.

Twelve thousand heard Sunday afternoon's Brahms program by the Boston Symphony, under Pierre Monteux, making a total gate of more than 35,000 for the three regular orchestral concerts of the festival's fourth week, not including the 3,307 who heard Saturday morning's public rehearsal for the Boston Symphony's pension fund.

The last two programs were similar in pattern, with the "Egmont" Overture prefacing the two mighty works in E Flat Major Saturday night. The "Academic Festival Overture" was the prelude in Mr. Monteux Brahms list Sunday, which closed with the First Symphony. Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky were to have played the double concerto for violin and cello, but owing to a recent injury Mr. Piatigorsky had to withdraw from this concert as well as from those set for Aug. 10 and 12, and Mr. Stern was heard instead in the Violin Concerto in D Major.

The orchestra played admirably in both concerts and Mr. Serkin was in fine technical form for the "Emperor" Concerto, playing with a consistently delectable quality of tone and a finely graded dynamic range in an interpretation which also conveyed the essential dignity and expressive range of the work. The orchestral co-operation was unified, admirably balanced and expressively sympathetic. Mr. Stern's technique was also illustrated at its best in the Brahms Violin Concerto Sunday; the tone was clear, lyric and fine spun in a performance marked by dynamic and expressive sensitiveness. Here and there the music seemed to call for a slightly more substantial presentation; there was occasional room for more momentum and wider range of mood in the solo and in the laudably, proportioned collaboration of the musicians under Mr. Monteux.

Mr. Munch realized the dramatic values of the "Egmont" Overture and also the epic scale and emotional span of the "Eroica" Symphony. The threat posed at the beginning of a too rapid pace was not fulfilled, and after one instance the overstress of contrast between concentrated tension and relaxation which sometimes appears in this conductor's interpretation disappeared. Drama, expressive stress and climax were at hand, but Mr. Munch and the orchestra also did justice to the other aspects of the symphony, and the treatment of the finale, on a well planned gradually rising emotional level, was a feature of a memorable performance.

Mr. Monteaux' interpretations usually prefer flexible and continuous transitions of volume or mood to emphasis on contrast, and this was the case in the Brahms Symphony in C Minor. The "Academic Festival Overture" had a good humored and persuasive treatment. In the symphony, the lyric reverie of the second movement and an easy going relaxed atmosphere in the third effectively set forth the distinction between these parts of the work and the bolder expressive pronouncements of the first movement and the finale.

David Lloyd, tenor; Samuel Mayes, cellist, and a wind and piano quintet will replace Mr. Piatigorsky's sonata program of Aug. 10, and Mr. Munch will conduct Berlioz' "Fantastic Symphony," Debussy's "La Mer" and Ravel's Second Daphnis and Chloe Suite in his substitute program for Aug. 12.

The Saturday afternoon chamber music series on South Mountain near Pittsfield in an auditorium which antedates Tanglewood as a Berkshire home of music began Saturday, when the New Music String Quartet played Jerome Rosen's First Quartet, a work which won a Fromm Foundation award. Broadus Earle, Walter Trampler, Matthew Raimondi and David Soyer also played music by Casella and Anton Webern in the more or less modern portion of their program, and were also happy in the quartet by Mozart, which closed the list.

20 Italo-Americans are enrolled at Tanglewood's Music Center

Twenty Italo-American students from throughout the East are enrolled as students at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Mass.

The students, who are taught by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in various branches of music, study throughout the summer Festival of the Orchestra. In addition to attending classes, the students give regular performances, which are open to friends of the Music Center.

Among the students this summer is John R. Pandolfi of Manville, R.I., who was recently named first clarinetist with the New Orleans Symphony Orchestra.

Studying dramatics at Tanglewood is Miss Christina C. Cardillo, of 149 Pleasant st., North Adams. Miss Cardillo, who studied for two years in Milan, is the brother of Pasquale Cardillo, clarinetist in the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Other students at the Music Center are the following:

John Vincent Carbone of Providence, studying string bass; Zita Carno of the Bronx, N.Y., studying conducting; Anne C. T. Crisci of Charlestown, W. Va., studying composition under Mr. Blancher; Salvatore Martirano of New Rochelle, N.Y., studying composition under Roger Sessions;

Michael S. Mega of Bondsville, Mass., studying violin; Beatrice Messina of New York, studying bassoon; Louis Paul Nazzaro of Dover, N.J., studying percussion; Pasquale R. Parrinello, of Sherborn, studying piano; Albert F. Petrillo of North Conway, N.H., studying cello;

Placido J. Pietropaolo of 544 Main st., Medford, studying viola; Natalie S. Schmonelli of District Hieghtsm Md.; Gisles R. Selo, of New York;

Nina M. Tepedino of Ticonderoga, N.Y.; Joseph L. Umbrico of Thorold, Ontario, Canada, studying trumpet; Josephine J. Arlotta of Knickerbocker Village, N.Y., Joanne Marie Stuffo of Philadelphia; Carolyn K. Bruno of Conemaugh, Penn.; Nisa E. Delli-Pizzi of Ardmore Penn.; and Rachel M. Salzano of Brooklyn.

TANGLEWOOD STUDENT — John Pandolfi of Providence who is among the 20 Italo-American students enrolled at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Pandolfi was recently named first clarinetist of the New Orleans Symphony Orchestra.

Our correspondence with friends and relatives in Italy offer us a good opportunity to report the facts of life in America. Personal there. Letters that tell the true facts about America "show up" Communist lies.

Union-Tab

FIRST AID VOLUNTEERS SET FOR TANGLEWOOD

Pittsfield, July 29 — Red Cross volunteers who will cover the concerts at Tanglewood this week end were announced today by John H. Martin and Clarence E. King, co-chairmen of First Aid for the Berkshire County Chapter of the American Red Cross.

Volunteers for Saturday evening are Rudy J. Benedetti and Eugene J. McCarren of North Adams; George E. Lyman of Dalton; George F. Maynard and Alfred S. Anderson of Pittsfield; Walter E. Brown of Lee; and H. Albert Stevens, Jr., of Great Barrington.

Volunteers for Sunday afternoon are Peter A. Fachetti of Amherst; Mr. Lyman; Mr. Maynard, Percy O. Moulthrop and George E. Leonard of Pittsfield.

Each of the 13 major concerts at Tanglewood this summer will be covered by seven volunteers, under the direction of Warren U. Sears and Mrs. Ruth Sears, nurse in charge of the First Aid Station.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, JULY 31, 1955

Entire Boston Symphony Plays Again at Tanglewood

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., July 30 — The Boston Symphony Orchestra began the fourth week end of the Berkshire Festival and the second of concerts by its full complement of musicians in Tanglewood's Music Shed last night.

The program under the direction of Charles Munch was heard by 7,677 persons. The presence of a contemporary American work, Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," in the list, did not have the adverse effect which modern music is sometimes supposed to exert upon the attendance, which bettered the figure of the previous Friday's All-Beethoven program by forty-four.

Heard in December

Last night's other works, heard under other ideal weather conditions, were Harty's familiar arrangement of a suite from Handel's "Water Music," Schumann's Fourth Symphony in D Minor and the Fourth Symphony of Brahms.

Mr. Barber's Prayers was first played by this orchestra under Mr. Munch in Boston in December, when the Bostonians also gave it twice in New York. Leontyne Price again sang the soprano solos yesterday with Regina Sarfaty and Arthur Schoep as the contralto and tenor soloists with the festival chorus trained by Hugh Ross. Short as it is, taking little over fifteen minutes, this cantata can be considered as one of Mr. Barber's most significant works thus far, as a notable contribution to the American literature for chorus with orchestra.

The music preserves the essentially prayerful nature of the composer's selections from Kierkegaard's writings; it projects and reinforces their varying expressive atmosphere. A chance to follow the words during the performance in the darkened Music Shed might have given the audience a better opportunity to consider verbal and musical relations; the first chorus was sung very intelligibly, but the rest of the text seemed hard to catch without visual aid. This happens, indeed, in many of our best choral concerts. But there was no difficulty in appreciating the liberally [illegible] emotional content of [illegible] as a whole and in [illegible] divisions.

Skillful Scoring

Mr. Barber's scoring is [illegible] skillful and revealing [illegible] well as pronounced [illegible] expressive hues in the [illegible] and the voices which, [illegible] tinguished, are parts of a [illegible] deftly balanced and [illegible] tioned musical fabric. The idiom, dissonant or consonant in savor as the expressive situation requires, is individual in music which ranges from brooding to lyric confidence. There may be one or two slightly static moments, but the general impression is one of motion. The choral and orchestral performance under a conductor obviously devoted to the work had an admirable musical and emotional unity and lucidity and fineness of dynamic shading. With a high standard of tone and range of timbres, the choristers also understood the meaning of what they sang. Miss [illegible]'s singing was discerning [illegible] persuasive, and her two colleagues fared well in their [illegible] assignments.

The orchestra played the [illegible] Music flexibly and brilliantly without overweight. The interpretation of the Schumann symphony, sometimes rather [illegible] in the first movement, had pervasive vitality and [illegible]. Under Mr. Munch, the Brahms symphony was not [illegible] familiar music that could be taken for granted. At times, he overstressed a distinction between episodes of tension and emotional stress and others when the power, so to speak, was turned off rather than relaxed. But emotional force and musical conviction prevailed, particularly in the finale, in a performance which, as in the evening as a whole, revealed the orchestra at its best.

Paris Vacation Rush

PARIS, July 30 (AP)—Parisians jammed railway stations and filled highways today as the annual summer vacation exodus reached a peak.

Music: Lively Lenox

Vivacious Audience at Tanglewood Fete Complements Brisk Work by Munch

By HAROLD C. SCHONBERG

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 29—The second week-end of concerts in the music shed and the fourteenth program of the current season got under way Friday night at the Berkshire Music Festival. Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony, and the generous program consisted of Handel's "Water Music" Suite in the familiar arrangement by Sir Hamilton Harty, Schumann's Fourth Symphony, Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" and the Fourth Symphony by Brahms.

To one who has been away from Tanglewood some years, it was like picking up again almost without interruption. Little has changed—the scenery, the grounds, and even the musical programs. The grass is as violently green as ever and the trees as straight. The same predominantly young audience is attracted. They come long before 8:30 P.M., wander through the gardens and picnic on the grounds, many of them. The picnics, too, are often still of a gargantuan nature, complete with salad bowls, wine bottles with expensive-looking labels, and rare-looking viands.

During the afternoons, the heady noise of many instrumentalists rehearsing all at once fills the grounds. Students seem to be all over the place, and the tempo strolls gravely along.

Much in evidence are the two composition teachers, Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher. The two, it is said, have become inseparable, and have virtually converted into a "Dierhaus" a section of a local hotel, where they sit for long hours quaffing the noble brew and discussing music in all of its phases. Mr. Blacher's opera "Romeo and Juliet" will receive its Tanglewood premiere on Monday evening.

Mr. Munch was in a lively mood. He took the Handel as a brisk pole, constantly pushed it along, and gloried in the sonorities created by Harty. At the end of the work, he had the four horn players of the Boston Symphony share the applause.

He also abstained from the least suspicion of lag in the Schumann symphony. Like many conductors, he used an edited version of the score, one that points up a few instrumental niceties that the composer missed. Whether or not this is "echt-Schumann," its brilliance cannot be denied. Possibly because of the length of the program, Mr. Munch took almost no repeats, except in the scherzo movement.

The strings of the Boston Symphony shone through the night, the other choirs added their quota of brilliance, and, in the coda of the last movement, Mr. Munch whipped up the action with a frenzy that made the music not unlike the sound of a military brass band. It was quite effective, in its way, and the audience went wild.

Mr. Barber's new work, which received its première in Boston in December, 1954, and which first was heard in New York last season, was sung by Leontyne Price, soprano; Regina Safarty, contralto; Arthur Schoep, tenor, and the festival chorus trained by Hugh Ross.

Miss Price had been the soprano for all the previous Boston Symphony performances. Of the two other singers, Miss Safarty is a student of the Berkshire Music Center's opera department and Mr. Schoep is assistant stage director to Boris Goldovsky, head of the department.

Much attention obviously had been paid to Mr. Barber's score. Its many complications were transparently unraveled, and Mr. Munch had the musical layout at his fingertips. The soloists, too, were in fine voice, and the chorus, barring some questionable diction, performed nobly. The prose of Kierkegaard may seem an unlikely subject for a choral work, but Mr. Barber has set the theologian wisely and well; and with considerable conviction, too.

Sale Held P...

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 248,071

JUL 31 1955

Beethoven, Wagner Feature Fifth Festival Week Concerts

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its semi-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with the fifth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three piano sonatas performed by Rudolf Serkin, on Aug. 3 in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Beethoven and Wagner provide the fare for the three weekend concerts in the huge Music Shed. Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the three concerts, on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 7, and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the department of orchestra and conducting of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, takes the podium on Friday evening.

Mr. Bernstein, who came to Tanglewood as a student conductor in 1940 and 1941, then began his close association with the Berkshire music school in 1942 as [illegible] the orchestra's late conductor Serge Koussevitzky, will conduct Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" on Friday evening as a memorial to his patron. The evening-long orchestral and choral work was similarly performed at Tanglewood under Mr. Bernstein's baton two summers ago. Soloists on this occasion will be Adele Addison, soprano, Eunice Alberts, contralto, David Lloyd, tenor, Mac Morgan, bass. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center, Miss Addison in 1947, 1948 and 1950, Miss Alberts during 1941-45, Mr. Lloyd in 1947 and Mr. Morgan in 1953. The Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center Students of the chorus, opera and Study Group departments, trained by Hugh Ross, will also assist.

Mr. Munch's Saturday evening program will commence with a first Tanglewood performance of Beethoven's opera, "Fidelio", Act II, with the Festival Chorus trained by John Krueger of the Youngstown, Ohio, Philharmonic and Chorus, a Berkshire Music Center chorus faculty member this summer. Soloists are Margaret Harshaw, of the Metropolitan Opera, soprano; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; Arthur Schoep, tenor, and from the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, students Christina Cardillo (North Adams, Mass.), soprano, and Malcolm Bernstein (Baltimore, Md.), bass. The second half of the program is devoted to excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung", with Miss Harshaw soloist in the Immolation Scene, a selection which she did with great success at a Berkshire Festival concert in 1952.

The Sunday afternoon concert Mr. Munch will devote to Beethoven, whose music is a feature of the 1955 Berkshire Festival, with Eugene Istomin, pianist, making his debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra as soloist in the Concerto No. 4.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

A bonus for Festival patrons is the Sunday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed, at 10 a.m. (Aug. 7), for which a nominal charge is made of $1, for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

RADIO

Conversation (Wed. 8 p.m., NBC). "Basic Fears," discussed by Clifton Fadiman, Bennett Cerf, Charles Siepmann, Dr. John P. Spiegel.

Monitor (Sat. 8 a.m. to 8 a.m. midnight, NBC). A marathon all-weekend show of [illegible] etc.

Invitation to Learning [illegible] a.m., CBS). [illegible] World Music Festivals [illegible] p.m., CBS). [illegible] Conductors [illegible]

Berkshire Festival (Mon. [illegible] NBC). Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

TIME, AUGUST 8, 1955

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 74,966

JUL 29 1955

Boston Symphony Plays Tonight for Second Week End

Munch to Conduct, Including Tanglewood Premiere Of Score by Barber

Lenox, July 28 — The second week-end of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1955 Berkshire Festival will begin in the Music Shed at Tanglewood on Friday at 8:30 p. m. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a Suite from Handel's "Water Music" in the arrangement by the late Sir Hamilton Harty, the Symphony No. 4 in D minor by Schumann and the Symphony No. 4 in E minor by Brahms.

Play Barber's Score

In addition, the concert will feature the Tanglewood premiere of the latest score by Samuel Barber, the solo cantata "Prayers of Kierkegaard." Scored for orchestra, chorus and vocal soloists and commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, Barber's score was given its world [illegible] performance by Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra last December. The soprano soloist will be Leontyne Price, who also sang in the premiere; other vocal solos in the performance will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, and Regina Sarfaty, contralto soprano. Miss Sarfaty is a student in the Berkshire Music Center's opera department, and Mr. Schoep is assistant stage director to the opera department's head, Boris Goldovsky.

The programs Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon will be devoted entirely to the music of Beethoven and Brahms respectively. Saturday evening Mr. Munch will conduct the Overture to "Egmont" and the "Eroica" Symphony, and Rudolf Serkin will be soloist in the "Emperor" Piano Concerto. Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux will conduct the "Academic Festival" Overture and First Symphony of Brahms, and Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky will be the soloists in the Double Concerto in A Minor for Violin and Cello. A bonus for Festival patrons is the public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 10 a. m. in the Tanglewood Music Shed, when [illegible] will rehearse the Saturday evening program. A nominal admission of $1 is charged for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

Remaining tickets for Friday's concert, as well as all succeeding ones, are on sale at the Tanglewood boxoffice, telephone Lenox 600. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUL 30 1955

The cast of [illegible] opera by Boris Blacher (seated, center), to be presented Aug. 1 at Tanglewood near Lenox, Mass. From the left: Peyton Higgison, Regina Sarfaty, Lynn Detwiler, Gwendolyn Belle, Naomi Farr, Harold Johnson, and Robert Kerns.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUL 30 1955

Programs for Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its fifth week of summer symphonic music. It will open on Wednesday evening with a program of three Beethoven piano sonatas, performed by Rudolf Serkin in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Beethoven and Wagner provide the fare for the weekend concerts in the Music Shed. Charles Munch will conduct two of the three concerts, on Saturday evening (Aug. 6) and Sunday afternoon (Aug. 7). Leonard Bernstein will take the podium on Friday evening (Aug. 5).

Mr. Bernstein will conduct Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" on Friday evening as a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Mac Morgan, bass.

Mr. Munch's Saturday program will commence with a first Tanglewood performance of Beethoven's opera "Fidelio," Act II, with the Festival Chorus trained by John Krueger. Soloists will be Margaret Harshaw, soprano; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; Arthur Schoep, tenor; Christina Cardillo, soprano; and Malcolm Bernstein, bass. The second half of the program will be devoted to excerpts from Wagner's Götterdämmerung," with Miss Harshaw as soloist in the Immolation Scene.

The Sunday afternoon concert Mr. Munch will devote to Beethoven, whose music is a feature of the 1955 Berkshire Festival. Eugene Istomin, pianist, will make his debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra as soloist in the Concerto No. 4.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30; the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30.

Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 230,930

JUL 31 1955

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 130,559

JUL 30 1955

Munch, Monteux, to Conduct on Weekend

The second week-end of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in this summer's Berkshire Festival will be held in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight at 8:30 p. m. and tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 p. m.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct tonight's all Beethoven program which will include the Overture to "Egmont," the Piano Concerto No. 5 in E Flat Major (the "Emperor") with Rudolf Serkin making his Tanglewood debut as soloist, and the Symphony No. 3 in E Flat, the "Eroica."

Tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 p. m., Pierre Monteux will conduct an all-Brahms concert with Isaac Stern as soloist in the Violin Concerto in D Major, Opus 77. In addition, the program will include the "Academic Festival" Overture and the Symphony No. 1 in C Minor. This will be Mr. Stern's final appearance of the season at Tanglewood.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 369,241

JUL 31 1955

Three One-Act Operas at Tanglewood

Three contemporary one-act operas, by Boris Blacher, Darius Milhaud and Bohuslav Martinu, will be performed by students of opera of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Monday at 8:30 p. m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. A portion of the evening will also be devoted to choral works by Domingo Santa Cruz, Ross Lee Finney, William Billings and others. The performance is open to those who support the Summer music school of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

"Romeo and Juliet," a chamber opera in three parts, is by Boris Blacher, director of the Hochschule fuer Musik in Berlin, currently visiting the United States for the first time as guest composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center. The opera was given its first stage performance at the Salzburg Festival in 1950, and was first staged in the United States in 1953 by the Opera Workshop of the School of Music, University of Illinois. This will be its Tanglewood premiere. It will be sung in English.

"Ariana Abandoned" ("L'Abandon d'Arfane"), a one-act opera by Darius Milhaud, who was guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center in 1948, has a text by Henry Hoppenot, and is given, for the first time at Tanglewood, in the English version of Ludwig Zirner, head of the associate division of the opera department.

"Comedy on the Bridge"

"Comedy on the Bridge," a short comic opera by Bohuslav Martinu, guest composer at Tanglewood in 1946, was produced at the Berkshire Music Center in 1951. It has a libretto by V. K. Klicpera and an English version by Walter Schmolka. The three one-act operas are under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Tanglewood opera department.

On Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 8 and 9, the opera department will give the world premiere of the one-act "The Rope," by Louis Mennini of the faculty of the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N. Y. This is the first opera to be commissioned at Tanglewood under the Koussevitzky Music Foundation plan to develop young composers, which was initiated in 1953. "The Rope" is based on Eugene O'Neill's one-act play of the same name.

On the same program will be what, so far as is known, is the first American production of "Zaide" (K. 344), an unfinished two-act opera by Mozart, written at Salzburg in 1779 to a libretto by Johann Andreas Schachtner. The Tanglewood version of the opera has been prepared in English by Sarah Caldwell.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUL 29 1955

Rudolf Serkin, who will be piano soloist in Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto, No. 5, with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood Saturday evening.

'Pastorale' Of Munch Unusual

By TUCKER KEISER

The key to an understanding of Charles Munch's interpretation of Beethoven's "Pastorale," as for many of his performances, can be found in his book, "I Am a Conductor."

"My taste for painting," he writes, "often brings visual images to mind to mix with sounds . . . In the end, almost all music is descriptive for me, but sometimes I experience visual impressions that the composer had no intention of arousing.

Much has been made of the conductor's interest in the graphic arts. His home in Paris is said to be the envy of many museums, and he writes that after a concert has gone well he rewards himself by buying a picture, and after a concert has gone badly, he consoles himself—by buying a picture.

Beethoven suggested a picture for each movement in the "Pastorale": serene impressions on arriving in the country, a scene by the brookside, a thunderstorm interrupting a jolly gathering of country folk, and a shepherd expressing in song his gayety and thankfulness after the tempest is over.

This portrayal of moods rather than scenes, of serenity and merriment, of emotional outburst and calm happiness, is a kind of tone-painting still characteristically musical because it is dynamic, constantly moving and changing. As Munch conducts the score he seems to stand before a succession of static pictures, reacting independently to each, securing an illusion of movement only by the exclamatory intensity of his isolated impressions.

Whereas Beethoven seems to have a single generalized setting in mind for the first movement, which he approaches from every angle, Mr. Munch seems to be contemplating a number of distinct scenes, of each of which he takes an overexposed snapshot.

Running Brook

If we take the opening theme as a picture of a brook running through a meadow in a valley, we are reminded of this picture by the composer not only in the gentle development section, and again in the recapitulation, but finally in the coda. Through variations of tempo, the spotlighting of certain instrumental color, and dynamic level changes, Mr. Munch makes each return to the theme a quite new picture.

This is an original approach, and a fascinating subject for study, but an approaeh which sometimes appears more fitted to the dicipline of the plastic arts than to music.

In the thunderstorm sequence Beethoven describes a jolly gathering of country people surprised one droway afternoon by a sudden storm.

After a peasant festivity a la Breughel, Mr. Munch whips up a storm of frontal proportions during which the wind rises to hurricane fury, the lightning becomes apocalyptic, and the rain pours down from a cloudburst. After this violence, the abrupt calm which follows seems less peaceful than tense.

Beethoven adds bird calls after the second movement to round out his scene by the brook. Mr. Munch moves them into the foreground so that each song is a climax rather than an afterthought.

Perhaps his delight in the painter's art, an intense realization of a momentary impression, explains the curious staccato, hyperbolic, and exciting rather than integrated and essentially musical atmosphere which this reviewer has always sensed in his interpretations.

Wiusted Citizen 7/30

BOSTON SYMPHONY GIVING SECOND WEEK OF CONCERTS

The second weekend of concerts by the full Boston Symphony orchestra in this summer's Berkshire festival will be held in the Music shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight at 8:30 o'clock and tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will conduct tonight's all-Beethoven program which will include the overture to "Egmont," the Piano Concert No. 5 in E Flat Major (the "Emperor") with Rudolf Serkin making his Tanglewood debut as soloist, and the Symphony No. 3 in E Flat, the "Eroica."

Ever since his American debut in 1935 with Arturo Roscanini conducting the Philharmonic-Symphony orchestra of New York, Mr. Serkin has been one of the most popular and distinguished artists in the United States. In recent years he has journeyed annually to the small French village of Prades to participate in festival performance with the great cellist, Pablo Casals, the especially renowned [illegible] interpreter. A [illegible] in the summer [illegible] on a Vermont farm.

We have lots of children but none to spare.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

JUL 27 1955

Munch Revises Berkshire Program

Three programs of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on July 31, Aug. 10 and 12, have been revised by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, because a shoulder ailment will prevent cellist Gregor Piatigorsky's appearance as soloist. Mr. Piatigorsky regretfully wired Mr. Munch yesterday.

Mr. Piatigorsky also had to cancel the cello classes he was to conduct during the final two weeks of the Berkshire Music Center Summer school.

Instead of the Concerto for Violin and Cello Mr. Piatigorsky was scheduled to play with Isaac Stern on the all-Brahms program Pierre Monteux will conduct July 31. Mr. Stern will perform Brahms' Concerto for Violin in D major, Opus 77, one he has not previously given at Tanglewood.

In place of Ernest Bloch's "Schelomo" for cello and orchestra and the announced Brahms Variations on a Theme by Haydn, Mr. Munch on Aug. 12 will substitute the "Symphonie Fantastique" of Hector Berlioz. The revised program, all French music, will open with the Berlioz, conclude with Debussy's "La Mer" and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite No. 2.

Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, who was to play the three Beethoven cello sonatas with Mr. Piatigorsky on Aug. 10, has substituted Beethoven chamber music featuring six principals of the Boston Symphony with David Lloyd, tenor; and himself at the piano.

Record (e)
CHELSEA, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 5,432

JUL 26 1955

One Day Trip Tips

The following list of events ad one-day trips tips have been compiled by the Massachusetts Department of Commerce for the benefit of local residents:

Ballad Singer

Bill Bonyun, bearded ballad singer, strolls among the visitors to Old Sturbridge Village singing folk songs several times a day during July and August. Sturbridge, off Rte. 20.

Educational Holiday

Daily guided tours over the Historical Trail through Plymouth, "America's Hometown." Plymouth, Rte. 3 or 3A.

Sailing Regattas

Loads of picture opportunities for picture lovers. July 29-30 at Nantucket. Sunday, July 31, championship race at Namequoit, Orleans. Cape Cods, Rts. 3 and 6.

Tanglewood Festvial

Famous Berkshire Music festival at Tanglewood, with Boston Symphony Orchestra performing. Friday evening, July 29, Saturday evening, July 30 and Sunday afternoon, July 31. Lenox, Rte. 20.

Block Dancing

Gala outdoor Block Dance Festival, Wednesday, July 27, at 8 o'clock. Top New England callers will be on hand at the Gloucester High school courtyard. Gloucester, Rte. 127.

Horse Show

Largest one-breed show in the East, the National Morgan Horse Show, starting Friday, July 29, at 6:30 and continuing through Sunday at 5 o'clock. Tri-County Fair Grounds, Pioneer Valley, Northampton, Rte. 9.

Unique Sea Fair

Biggest little fair in New England, the Annisquam Sea Fair. Marine life exhibits, dory races, water shows, Saturday, July 30. Annisquam Village. Rte. 127.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

JUL 26 1955

Piatigorsky Cancels Dates At Festival

Three programs of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Sunday, July 31, Wednesday, Aug. 10 and Friday, Aug. 12, have been revised by Charle Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, it was announced today because of, shoulder ailment has necessitated cancellation of soloist engagements at these concerts by cellist Gregor Piatigorsky.

The noted musician regretfully wired Mr. Munch yesterday that he would be unable to leave his home in California to perform at the Berkshire Festival. Mr. Piatigorsky has also found it necessary to cancel the cello classes he was to conduct during the final two weeks of the current session of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school operated by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood.

Instead of the Concerto for Violin and Cello Mr. Piatigorsky was scheduled to play with Isaac Stern at Sunday afternoon's (July 31) Berkshire Festival concert, on the all-Brahms program Pierre Monteux will conduct with the Boston Symphony in the Tanglewood Music Shed, Mr. Stern will perform Brahms' Concerto for Violin in D major, Opus 77. Mr. Stern, a frequent soloist on Festival programs, has not previously given this concerto at Tanglewood.

Charles Munch's concert with the Boston Symphony on Friday evening August 12, on which Mr. Piatigorsky was announced to solo in Ernest Bloch's "Schelomo" for Cello and Orchestra, has been revised. For the Bloch selection and also the announced Brahms Variations on a Theme by Haydn, Mr. Munch will substitute the "Symphonie Fantastique" of Hector Berlioz, which was an outstanding success on the Festival programs of 1954 which observed the 150th anniversary of the birth of the French composer. The revised program, all French music, will open with the Berlioz, conclude with Debussy's "La Mer" and "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite No. 2.

"Upon Our Yesterdays We Built Our To-Morrows"

Wrinkled Citizen 7/30

THREE OPERAS TO BE GIVEN AT TANGLEWOOD

Two of Them Having Premiers at Berkshire Site—All To Be Sung in English

Three contemporary one-act operas in English, two of them Tanglewood premiere, by Boris Blacher, Darius Milhaud and Bohuslav Martinu, will be performed by students of Department 4 of the Berkshire Music center for a single performance at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Monday, Aug. 1, at 8:34 p. m., in the theater-concert hall. A portion of the evening will also be devoted to choral works by Domingo Santa Cruz, Ross Lee Finney, William Billings and others, sung by students of Department 2 (chorus).

The performance is open to those who support the summer music school of the Boston Symphony orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music center. All seats are reserved.

"Romeo and Juliet," a chamber opera in three parts, is by Boris Blacher, director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin, currently visiting the United States for the first time as guest composer in residence at the Berkshire Music center. The opera was given its first stage performance at the Salzburg festival in 1950.

"Ariana Abandoned" (L'Abandon d'Ariane), a one-act opera by Darius Milhaud, who was guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music center in 1948, has a text by Henry Hoppenot, and is given, for the first time at Tanglewood, in the English version of Ludwig Zirner, who is head of the associate division of the Opera department.

"Comedy on the Bridge," a short comic opera by Bomuslav Martinu, guest composer at Tanglewood in 1946, was produced at the Berkshire Music center in 1951.

Notes and Footnotes

TANGLEWOOD ENCORES: Saturday's whopping 15,000 was well past saturation point. Access roads unequal to demands, making impossible for hundreds to get into grounds for opening. Saw lines still buying tickets during intermission. Concert half over. Price full. . . . What regulation, if any, on impatient drivers honking during music, causing much distraction? May reason if the can not get to enjoy Beethoven, neither will others. . . . Notice when wind just so, can hear "taps" being blown at youth camp on Stockbridge Bowl while programs under way. Bugle sounds brassy in comparison. . . . Acoustics have a way of their own. During Saturday night numbers there was spot on lawn, far back near first path, you could hear Director Munch singing. Voice reflected from shell back, diverted by Shed baffles, and grounded by heavy tree foliage where we crouched. But Shed audience never heard a syllable. Went above heads. . . . Had chat with usher David Cullen, much interested in Dalton balloon ascension last Saturday. Remembered making flights himself about 1908 or '09 with Bill Van Sleet, pilot. His wife, then Miss Mildred Hill, was first woman, he added, to go up here. Made one flight with him and Van Sleet. Landed gently on Huntington farm, dinner with farm family, then to the station with deflated balloon and home on train. . . . Is Tanglewood drawing line? Seems as if some customers spend entire time lined up. First at ticket window, then for ushers, then at rest rooms, and later at phone booths. Final line of all, up Lenox Road in car en route home. . . . Brief chat with Dick Sharp, M.I.T., who drove up with three pals in his private hearse. A 1941 Packard with a '52 engine. Picked up for song ($150) couple years ago. Ideal for travel sleeping, with mattresses inside on floor in place of caskets (ugh). Fifteen other hearses owned by M.I.T. students for same reasons: Cheap (average $75) low mileage, good condition. Also Boston crowd in moving van with 16 bunks and kitchen aboard.

—o—

ULCER FACTORIES? Large American can company has, in 54 years, produced more than 320 billion cans for food.

—o—

THIS IS the season for surprises. Had visit other day from David Freud, New York City, here for Tanglewood, and anxious to check files of 30 years ago. Seems he was playing the Keith vaudeville circuit, and was on a bill here, with Edna Wallace Hopper. Found it in October, 1925. Miss Hopper, billed as "the eternal flapper" was age 62, and offered a special morning show at the Palace "for women only." "See her in her bed-bath exercises," said the ad. Customers lined up a block long. Wonder what they really saw.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 130,559

AUG 3 1955

CITY TO MARK FOUNDING

Mayor Hynes announced yesterday that the city will observe the 325th anniversary of its founding on Sept. 17 with a series of public events culminating in a Pops concert and fireworks at Hatch Shell on the Esplanade.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-0068

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,014

JUL 28 1955

Beethoven 6th Seen As Best Offering In Sunday Concert

Although Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra found it necessary to compete with a number of loud and strident cicadas, as well as a few low-flying airplanes, a large audience apparently enjoyed itself very much last Sunday afternoon, if the three-minute standing ovation given to the conductor and orchestra after the performance of the Beethoven "Pastorale" symphony is any indication.

The first work on the program was the Beethoven Symphony No. 1 in C major. The performance was an enjoyable one, although it seemed to this writer that the first movement could have been presented at a slightly increased tempo. A rather embarrassingly noticeable "flub" in the woodwind section marred the movement slightly. The second movement was somewhat better, but Mr. Munch and the orchestra really hit their stride in performing the last two movements of the work.

Beethoven's Symphony No. 4 in B flat was the second work to be presented. The rendition of this symphony achieved a nice balance of delicacy and vigor, and well-done horn passages in the second movement added to the pleasure of a thoroughly enjoyable performance.

Beethoven's 6th "Pastorale" Symphony was the final presentation of the afternoon, as well as the high point of the day in both performance and pleasure registered by the audience. Written as an expression of the mood experienced by the composer upon contemplating the wooded hills of the Wienerwald, and the beautiful countryside of Lower Austria, the symphony seemed to fit perfectly into the setting of the green Berkshire Hills and small New England Towns.

Week-End Program

Tomorrow evening in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, The Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch will perform the Handel "Water Music Suite," The Schumann Symphony No. 4 in D minor, Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" with chorus and Leontyne Price as soloist, and the Brahms Symphony No. 4 in E minor. The performance begins at 8:30 p.m.

Saturday evening, same time and place, the orchestra and Mr. Munch will present an all-Beethoven program consisting of the Overture to "Egmont", Piano Concerto No. 5 (Emperor), and Symphony No. 3 (Eroica).

Brahms is the feature of he Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p.m., with Pierre Monteux conducting the orchestra. Scheduled works of Brahms include: Academic Festival Overture, Concerto for Violin in D Major, Opus 77, with Isaac Stern as soloist; and the Symphony No. 1 in C minor.

Considering the traffic conditions around Lenox, Mass., before and especially after the concerts, prospective visitors will do well to follow the advice of the concert manage to "come early and stay late."

L. F. M.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 509,171 - S. 1,117,392

JUL 29 1955

MUSIC NOTES

Events tonight: Don Cossack Chorus and Dancers, Carnegie Hall; "La Traviata," Amato Opera Theatre; "La Bohème," Xavier Theatre, 40 West Sixteenth Street, and Guggenheim Memorial Concert, Goldman Band, Central Park.

The second week of co[illegible] by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, begins tonight in the Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Tonight's program will feature the first performance of Samuel Barber's cantata "Prayers of Kierkegaard."

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 509,171 - S. 1,117,392

JUL 31 1955

A CULTURAL OPPORTUNITY

Discussion continues about the possibility of a visit to the Soviet Union by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. There are many technical problems to be solved, of course, but the initial atmosphere of the project is hopeful. It deserves strong support in all quarters.

This, in our judgment, is a matter of importance. We have been having some experience with the reception that has been accorded to touring American musical and theatrical groups in other countries. It has been uniformly favorable to us and enjoyable to the people who are our international neighbors. This exchange of artistic interest is the best answer to the standard attack on the United States on the ground of our supposed "materialism."

It has been our great pleasure to entertain a magnificent orchestra from the Netherlands, a splendid dance troupe from India, [illegible] and poets from Western [illegible]. We also have something to offer to the world's culture, and the Boston Symphony is a true exponent of it. This is a real cultural opportunity that should be embraced. Both public and private effort should be expended to make the most of it.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,014

JUL 28 1955

Eugene Istomin, noted pianist, will be the soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, in a performance of Beethoven's Concerto No. 4 in G major, at the Berkshire Festival concert of Sunday afternoon, August 7 at 2:30 p. m. The concert will be held in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH
TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 92,365 - S. [illegible]

JUL 22 1955

Four Sign Up For BYU Music Clinic

Special to The Tribune

PROVO—Four guest conductors—Eugene Andrie, John H. Bloom, Dallin Neilson and Buford Wayt — will be featured July 25 to Aug. 6 in the 11th annual Music Clinic at Brigham Young University, announced Lawrence Sardoni, clinic director.

REGISTRATION will start Monday at 8 a.m., in the social hall. Students will study orchestra, chorus, concert and marching band techniques, said Dr. John R. Halliday, BYU music department chairman.

Mr. Andrie is associate professor of music at University of Montana. He will handle the orchestra which will appear Friday, Aug. 5, in concert with the chorus. He is conductor of the Montana Symphony Orchestra and formerly conducted the Grand Rapids, Mich., youth symphony. At present he is chairman of western division, American String Teachers' Assn.

MR. BLOOM is professor of music at University of Arizona. He will conduct the clinic chorus. He is director of choral activities and has studied at Cornell College, University of Iowa, Julleard School of Music, Columbia University, Chicago Musical College and Berkshire Music Center.

Mr. Nelson, director of instrumental music, Bear River High School, Tremonton, will direct the second concert band with Ralph G. Laycock, BYU music faculty, director of the first band.

Mr. Wayt, Western States College, Gunnison, Colo., will lead the [illegible] band. He has had experience in several Colorado high schools.

HOUSTON, TEX.
POST
Circ. D. 195,450 - S. 211,202

JUL 18 1955

ON THE AIR

Music, More Music Is Monday Night Schedule

By MARY BLOUNT

Monday is an excellent night for playing musical chairs or stop that tune. Where one program ends another is sure to carry on.

Blount

Thor Johnson, who has just returned from a concert tour of the Orient, will be the guest conductor on Berkshire Festival. The Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra, under Johnston's direction, will play music by Handel and Haydn. The program is at 7:15 PM over KPRC.

With nothing but a commercial in between, the Telephone Hour will follow at 8 PM over KPRC. Violinist Isaac Stern will make his first appearance on the program. He has chosen two numbers for presentation, one by Mendelssohn and the other by Fritz Kreisler. The regular conductor, Donald Voorhees, will lead the symphonic orchestra in Greig's "Erotok" and Rachmaninoff's "Prelude in C-sharp Minor."

Another commercial and then we'll be marching to the music of the Cities Service Band of America, led by Paul Lavalle. The 8:30 PM KPRC show will feature "John Peel—On Parade," "Polka Caprice" and "Big Time March."

If you'd like to sit this one out, KXYZ will offer Voice of Firestone at that same time. Robert Merrill, leading baritone of the Metropolitan Opera, will be guest soloist. He'll sing "Because," "Avant DeQuitter Ces Lieux" from "Faust" and "Trees" as solos. The chorus will join him for "Stouthearted Men."

Fibber McGee KPRC, 9 PM will interrupt the music for a brief 15 minutes and then the Hollywood Bowl concert will begin over the same station. Dorothy Kirsten will be guest soprano. George Solti will conduct the Los Angeles Philharmonic in symphonic, operatic and semi-classical selections, performed in the outdoor amphitheatre.

● One of Mutual's cowboy stars, Tex Fletcher, is eating off the mantle these days. He took a tape recorder and himself into the arena of a South Dakota rodeo last week to record the actual sounds of horses hooves pounding staccato-like on the dirt. Instead he got the sound of horses hooves pounding staccato-like on himself. A big stallion, rearing wildly, kicked Fletcher and his equipment across the arena site.

The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Monday, Aug. 1, 1955

Music

Tanglewood Hits Season's Peak

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

PIERRE MONTEUX used the exact same formula in laying out his Brahms program yesterday afternoon in the Music Shed at Tanglewood that Charles Munch had used on the previous evening with Beethoven. Conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra, each director chose an overture, a concerto and a symphony.

Favored by Berkshire summer weather at its best and with the extra magnets of two world-famous soloists, the two programs attracted audiences which were the biggest of the season and rivaled in figures the peaks reached at special individual concerts of other years.

* * *

ON YESTERDAY afternoon's Brahms program, Isaac Stern played the violin concerto as a replacement for the double concerto in which he had been scheduled to perform with Piatigorsky, and which had been canceled because of the cellist's indisposition. He had played the Beethoven concerto nine days before.

To play these two of the greatest works for the instrument with the Boston orchestra under such glamorous circumstances was as momentous an occasion for the soloist as it was a boon for the festival.

Stern again displayed the heights to which he has raised his art. He allowed us again to marvel at the expressiveness he extracts from a single long bow, as in the gorgeous slow movement, and at the technical discipline which permits him to do it. There may come a day when anachronistic cadenzas will become redundant, or will disappear from atrophy. Surely, the butterfly flutters which he included in the particular one he used added nothing to our enjoyment, nor to our estimate of his prowess. His playing was elevating in its simplicity and urgent without being temperamental, a happy combination of musical maturity and technical vitality. Monteux's accompaniment had been as much a part of the great success as the solo. Stern stepped to the stand of the first oboe to let Ralph Gomberg accept proper recognition for his solo in the slow movement.

* * *

THE CONCERT ended with the orchestra standing and joining with the huge audience in their ovation to Monteux for the first symphony. There was spaciousness to both the symphony and the Academic Overture with which the program had opened. In the symphony slow movement the orchestra sang and in the ensuing allegretto it was truly graceful. The clarinet was allowed to blow comfortably and yet be heard in all the full roundness of its tone. The strings proclaimed the final movement after the slow introduction with sonorous majesty.

* * *

THE ORCHESTRA had produced some of its best tone quality also in the Saturday night program when Munch led them in the Eroica of Beethoven. The violas and cellI, especially when they played without forcing, revealed the rich depth of which they were so capable. Munch was overeager in a few instances and asked for more than the orchestra could supply. In the opening "Egmont" overture, there was power rather than tone in the opening cavernous low chords.

Beethoven was deeply interested in the politics of his day as evidenced by his refusal to let stand the dedication of the Eroica to Napoleon after he proclaimed himself emperor. The story behind Goethe's "Egmont" stirred him also. The first awesome chords are symbolic of the opening scene of the play in which the oppressed Netherlanders beg the heroic count to help release them from the heel of the tyrannic Spaniards as they shout "Freiheit" and "Sicherheit," "Freedom" and "Security!" How constant are our desires and aspirations.

* * *

EVERY DETAIL of the overture and of the symphony came off well. The horns in the trio of the symphony scherzo responded with beautifully controlled restraint. The mammoth crowd would not let Munch retire but kept recalling him with increasing vehemence, it seemed, instead of letting each acknowledgement satisfy at least a fraction of the audience.

Rudolph Serkin was soloist in the E flat concerto, the fifth and so-called "Emperor." This was also written in days of political turmoil. The guns of the same Napoleon were pounding outside the gates of Vienna at the time he was engaged in writing it, and the thunder penetrated even Beethoven's deafness and forced him to seek refuge in a friend's cellar.

* * *

MAGNIFICENT describes the performance of this noble music. The soloist conveyed his exaltation with an intense and nervous vigor which raised the entranced audience to tremendous ebullience. His command of the piano's resources and the authority of his conception left nothing to be desired. Whether he was expending his incredible muscular power or regulating the more tender episodes, he made every note and phrase significant. Munch brought the orchestra along with him in the same glorified spirit.

It was piano playing on a massive scale and in the grand manner. Whether he was dashing off the famous thirds in contrary motion or expressing the lovely slow movement with caressing affection, or injecting an irresistible elan to the rhythm of the finale, he was giving form to one of the great concertos for the keyboard and body to Beethoven's inspiration.

* * *

IT IS DIFFICULT to maintain a lofty plane consistently for so large a project as is Tanglewood, but this brace of concerts which closed this fourth week of the six-week, 18th Berkshire festival was of the kind which will keep this venture in the pre-eminent place it has won and deserves. There are moments when the pace may prove a little too demanding and the standards slip for an instant, but, in addition to the participants who are directly concerned, there is a large background of supporters and well-wishers who are exultant when they see their artistic progeny prove their excellence. We need not be exactly rigid in our criterions, but we cannot fail to rejoice, chauvinistically, if you will, but rejoice, nevertheless, when we sense that the artists of these programs are maintaining a plane which holds to the highest artistic ideals.

U.N. Visitors Picnic at Tanglewood

Manos

Members of the United Nations Secretariat and their Berkshire hostesses picnic at Tanglewood before the Festival concert, at which they were guests of the Boston Symphony Orchestra yesterday. Seated, left to right, are Mrs. Robert S. Schoonmaker Jr., hostess chairman; Mrs. Norman B. Hollister, in charge of the luncheon; Miss Margaret Parsons, executive secretary of the U.N. volunteer service and leader of the U.N. group of 42; Miss Sheila Snowball, a guest from the United Kingdom; and Mrs. Frederick G. Crane Jr., of Dalton, a hostess. Standing: J. A. C. Robertson of the United Kingdom, personnel director of the U.N. Secretariat; S. Dharman, India; Dr. Maarten Bos, Netherlands, chief of its legal affairs; Miss Claire de Hedervary, Belgium; and Mrs. Frederick M. Myers, co-ordinator for the U.N. group and a local hostess. The visit was sponsored by the Workshop for World Understanding.

The Berkshire Evening E

Public Events

Tonight

1:00-6:00—Opening of outdoor sculpture show. Lenox Library gardens.

8:30—Berkshire Music Center concert of chorus and opera. (For BMC Friends. Special tickets required.)

8:30 — Lecture, Priyagopal, "Dancing in India." Jacob's Pillow, [illegible] Lee.

8:45—"Edward, My Son." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

BSO Trustees At Festival Concerts

Among weekend notables at the Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood were Edward A. Taft and his nieces, Mrs. Houghton P. Metcalf and Mrs. George S. Mumford, and Mr. and Mrs. Jacob J. Kaplan of Boston. Mr. Taft and Mr. Kaplan are trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Others in the [illegible] included Ralph [illegible] of the National [illegible]ra, Washington, [illegible] Black; and Ramsi Tick, [illegible] manager of the Buffalo (N.Y.) Philharmonic Orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,416

JUL 28 1955

Munch, Bernstein Take Podium For Tanglewood Concert

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its semi-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with the fifth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three piano sonatas performed by Rudolf Serkin, on August 3 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Beethoven and Wagner provide the fare for the three weekend concerts in the huge Music Shed. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the three concerts, on Saturday evening (August 6) and Sunday afternoon (August 7) and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the department of orchestra and conducting of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, The Berkshire Music Center, takes the podium on Friday evening (August 5).

Mr. Bernstein will conduct Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" on Friday evening. Soloists on this occasion will be Adele Addison, soprano, Eunice Alberts, contralto, David Lyon, tenor, Mac Morgan, bass. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center.

Mr. Munch's Saturday evening program will commence with a first Tanglewood performance of Beethoven's opera "Fidelio," Act II. The second half of the program is devoted to excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung," with Miss Harshaw as soloist in the Immolation Scene, a selection which she did with great success at a Berkshire Festival concert in 1952.

109 Church Street - New York

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S, 528,253

JUL 28 1955

List 1-Act Operas At Tanglewood

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., July 27.—Bohuslav Martinu's "Comedy on the Bridge" has been added to the bill of one-act operas which the Berkshire Music Center will stage at Tanglewood at 8:30 p. m. Monday night, Aug. 1. Boris Blacher's "Romeo and Juliet," Darius Milhaud's "Ariana Abandoned" and a short choral program complete the evening's schedule. The Martinu work was staged by the Center in 1951, the two other operas are new to Tanglewood.

Admission to Monday's performance, and to the opera double bill of Louis Mennini's "the Rope" and Mozart's "Zalde" set for Monday and Tuesday nights, Aug. 8 and 9, is limited to subscribing members of the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Ticket information may be obtained from the Friends' office at Tanglewood (Lenox 600).

Munc

To the I

The Geneva cedes into histo welcomed home efforts in his ca riers hampering
Russia, and else try's desire for world's troubles.

What next? will to dwindle interim between foreign minister the Boston Sym

The interval meeting can be can be used for ahead with eff blockade which these past 10 y mous symphony
Russia is an ex ident's plea tha is also a test terest in that c

Russia's mu is older than t can doubt that come Mr. Cha company? Wh can be advance

SUNSHINE SERENADE by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with an assist from Mother Nature, drew this crowd of 12,000 to Tanglewood yesterday afternoon. The weekend attendance totaled 35,177, to far outstrip last year's record weekend of 27,950. Mitchell

Berkshire Eagle 8/1/55

On the Contrary

It Takes Only a Few Billed Tourists To Give a Resort a Bad Reputation

By Robert Smith

SOMETIMES I wonder if the falling off in tourist business that some folks complain of could possibly have anything to do with the way tourists are occasionally treated hereabouts. While I don't believe most people object to being reminded that even natives are human and like to have their rights, and their lawns respected, some people who travel are human themselves and don't like to be misled by advertising or swindled by their hosts.

This solemn truth was brought home to me once, on a trip to Vermont, when I read an ad for a place called Bonnie Birches or Lovely Locusts or Splendid Spruces or some such thing on "Beautiful Lake Morey" where guests could boat and swim and bask in the sun and load up on good food without let. So my wife and I hastened there and counted ourselves fortunate indeed to find a room still available — not in the main lodge but in the charming annex "just a few minutes' walk" down the road.

* * *

STILL DAZED by the advertising, we were guided thither — it seemed a little far — and settled down in a room that seemed a little stuffy. But who cared — with lawns and swimming and what not just outside? So off I went to do business in a nearby city and my wife hurried to get her swim.

On my return, I found my exhausted wife very close to her last breath in a steaming cell, where the walls were of beaver board and the transom would not work, and where the scrape of our neighbor's razor sounded clearly through our bathroom wall. She had set out to swim and found that the shore on this side was a mudhole. She started for the main beach and found it was 25 minutes' walk away so she would have needed another swim when she got back. She had found no chairs on the sunny lawn and had at last taken a nap of exhaustion, only to wake up half an hour before the dining room closed. And because that too was "a few (thirty) minutes" away, she could not make it there for lunch.

Ah, well, I comforted her. They'll make it good. We'll have dinner and go our way. We had dinner and went our way. But not before the thrifty Yankee who ran the place had lifted $28 from us — because he "had to charge a full day" even though we could not sleep there and had eaten but one meal. It was only after long argument that he agreed that it might not be exactly fair to charge us for the next day's breakfast, so he allowed us two dollars off for that. Otherwise it would have been 30.

* * *

THIS TRADITION that a buck in the hand is worth any number in the distant city is not, I am afraid, peculiar to Vermont or to that particular lodge. And I suspect that one reason why advertising campaigns and publicity bureaus have a hard time luring non-festival visitors this way is that a hardy few resort owners still louse up the business for everyone by making it plain to the guest that he is there to have his pocket picked.

I have met people who came to Lenox in response to an ad describing their stopping place as "close to Tanglewood" — only to find they were six or seven miles away. I have known folks who bragged of getting more for an iron bed in a barn than you'd pay for a room with bath in the city. And I have heard storekeepers vow to their cronies that they would add about 10 per cent to every price when "those New York Jews" came in.

* * *

IT IS TRUE, alas, that the season is a short one and that the golden flow of cash dries up so soon after it starts that a man has to hustle to get his share. All the same, we cannot expect people to succumb to our lures, if they have once been hooked. And we cannot hope that a man who has been duped will not spread the word — or that that word will not travel faster than all the publicity we can dream up to circulate among the resort editors.

But worst of all, the men and women who do operate on the basis that even a summer visitor has a right to a dollar's worth for each dollar he spends have a hard time bucking the thrifty minority. Believe me a man who has been swindled spends more time talking about it than a man who has been treated right. And the best advertising for any resort is done right at the resort itself.

* * *

SATISFYING people and treating them fairly when they complain seems like a slow hard way of building a summer's business, compared to promising them a lot and soaking them for a little. But it is the surest way all the same. And I am convinced that, if our publicity folks would spend their time and cash discouraging the dollar-hungry, straightening out complaints, and checking the truthfulness of advertising, they would do Berkshire resort business more good than a dozen pretty newspaper ads. It might even work in Vermont.

Tanglewood Traffic Tangle Tries Tempers

Saturday Night Concert Crowd Close to Record

All roads in Berkshire County led to Tanglewood over the weekend and most of them were jammed bumper to bumper with traffic Saturday night as the Boston Symphony Orchestra drew the second largest crowd in its 21-year history.

Attendance at the Saturday night concert was 15,500, only 300 less than the record set at the final Saturday concert of the 1951 season.

There would have been more there last Saturday, but a king-sized traffic tie-up kept many music lovers from reaching the goal. From about 7:30 until well after the concert started at 8:30 Saturday evening cars were lined up for several miles from the Tanglewood gates in Lenox.

Traffic Bottled

At one time the tie-up extended all the way north to the intersection of Routes 7 and 20 at the Lenox by-pass and also for more than a mile through the middle of Lenox down Route 7 toward Stockbridge and Great Barrington.

They were still selling admission tickets at Tanglewood after the intermission. Some cars finally found parking spots only a few minutes before the concert ended.

One farmer on West Street near the Tanglewood main entrance picked up a nice piece of change by parking about 1,000 cars at 50 cents each.

35,177 at 3 Concerts

Many late arrivals at the Saturday night concert had difficulty making their way through the crowds on the lawns surrounding the Shed to get to their reserved

Traffic

Continued on Page 2

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,416

JUL 28 1955

Munch, Bernstein Take Podium For Tanglewood Concert

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its semi-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with the fifth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three piano sonatas performed by Rudolf Serkin, on August 3 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Beethoven and Wagner provide the fare for the three weekend concerts in the huge Music Shed. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the three concerts, on Saturday evening (August 6) and Sunday afternoon (August 7) and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the department of orchestra and conducting of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, The Berkshire Music Center, takes the podium on Friday evening (August 5).

Mr. Bernstein will conduct Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" on Friday evening. Soloists on this occasion will be Adele Addison, soprano, Eunice Alberts, contralto, David Lyon, tenor, Mac Morgan, bass. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center.

Mr. Munch's Saturday evening program will commence with a first Tanglewood performance of Beethoven's opera "Fidelio," Act II. The second half of the program is devoted to excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung," with Miss Harshaw as soloist in the Immolation Scene, a selection which she did with great success at a Berkshire Festival concert in 1952.

Munch: Blockade Runner

The Geneva meeting of the Big Four recedes into history. President Eisenhower is welcomed home from one of the most earnest efforts in his career to break down the barriers hampering popular understanding in Russia, and elsewhere abroad, of this country's desire for peaceful settlement of the world's troubles.

What next? Are the professions of good will to dwindle away, as in the past, in the interim between now and Autumn, when the foreign ministers renew their labors? Not if the Boston Symphony Orchestra has its way!

The interval before the foreign ministers' meeting can be of tremendous importance. It can be used for marking time, or for pressing ahead with efforts to break up the cultural blockade which has isolated West and East these past 10 years. The offer of the most famous symphony orchestra in America to tour Russia is an excellent follow-up of the President's plea that mutual isolation be ended. It is also a test of the Kremlin's claims of interest in that objective.

Russia's musical blockade against the West is older than the Communist regime, yet who can doubt that the Russian people would welcome Mr. Charles Munch and his admirable company? What conceivable reasons of state can be advanced to deny them the opportunity?

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S, 528,253

JUL 28 1955

List 1-Act Operas At Tanglewood

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., July 27.—Bohuslav Martinu's "Comedy on the Bridge" has been added to the bill of one-act operas which the Berkshire Music Center will stage at Tanglewood at 8:30 p. m. Monday night, Aug. 1. Boris Blacher's "Romeo and Juliet," Darius Milhaud's "Ariana Abandoned" and a short choral program complete the evening's schedule. The Martinu work was staged by the Center in 1951, the two other operas are new to Tanglewood.

Admission to Monday's performance, and to the opera double bill of Louis Mennini's "the Rope" and Mozart's "Zaide" set for Monday and Tuesday nights, Aug. 8 and 9, is limited to subscribing members of the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Ticket information may be obtained from the Friends' office at Tanglewood (Lenox 600).

...ater makes a taxing test at S... two water skis and outfitted with ...Telephoto)

Traffic

Continued From First Page

seats. The Shed seats about 6,000.

Total attendance at the three weekend concerts at Tanglewood was 35,177. Twelve thousand went to the concert yesterday afternoon; 7,677 were at the Friday night concert.

Pittsfield hotels, motels, inns and tourist homes were jammed to the hilt Saturday night after a better than average Friday business. As usual, there were plenty of rooms available last night.

The Hotel Wendell-Sherwood, which was already filled to capacity — 462 persons — Friday and Saturday evening, referred the an assist from Mother Nature, drew this crowd of 12,000 to ...ttendance totaled 35,177, to far outstrip last year's record weekend of 27,950.

Mitchell

Berkshire Eagle 8/1/55

On the Contrary

It Takes Only a Few Bilked Tourists To Give a Resort a Bad Reputation

By Robert Smith

SOMETIMES I wonder if the falling off in tourist business that some folks complain of could possibly have anything to do with the way tourists are occasionally treated hereabouts. While I don't believe most people object to being reminded that even natives are human and like to have their rights and their lawns respected, some people who travel are human themselves and don't like to be misled by advertising or swindled by their hosts.

This solemn truth was brought home to me once, on a trip to Vermont, when I read an ad for a place called Bonnie Birches or Lovely Locusts or Splendid Spruces or some such thing on "Beautiful Lake Morey" where guests could boat and swim and bask in the sun and load up on good food without let. So my wife and I hastened there and counted ourselves fortunate indeed to find a room still available — not in the main lodge but in the charming annex "just a few minutes' walk" down the road.

* * *

STILL DAZED by the advertising, we were guided thither — it seemed a little far — and settled down in a room that seemed a little stuffy. But who cared — with lawns and swimming and what not just outside? So off I went to do business in a nearby city and my wife hurried to get her swim.

On my return, I found my exhausted wife very close to her last breath in a steaming cell, where the walls were of beaver board and the transom would not work, and where the scrape of our neighbor's razor sounded clearly through our bathroom wall. She had set out to swim and found that the shore on this side was a mudhole. She started for the main beach and found it was 25 minutes' walk away so she would have needed another swim when she got back. She had found no chairs on the sunny lawn and had at last taken a nap of exhaustion, only to wake up half an hour before the dining room closed. And because that too was "a few (thirty) minutes" away, she could not make it there for lunch.

Ah, well, I comforted her. They'll make it good. We'll have dinner and go our way. We had dinner and went our way. But not before the thrifty Yankee who ran the place had lifted $28 from us — because he "had to charge a full day" even though we could not sleep there and had eaten but one meal. It was only after long argument that he agreed that it might not be exactly fair to charge us for the next day's breakfast, so he allowed us two dollars off for that. Otherwise it would have been 30.

* * *

THIS TRADITION that a buck in the hand is worth any number in the distant city is not, I am afraid, peculiar to Vermont or to that particular lodge. And I suspect that one reason why advertising campaigns and publicity bureaus have a hard time luring non-festival visitors this way is that a hardy few resort owners still louse up the business for everyone by making it plain to the guest that he is there to have his pocket picked.

I have met people who came to Lenox in response to an ad describing their stopping place as "close to Tanglewood" — only to find they were six or seven miles away. I have known folks who bragged of getting more for an iron bed in a barn than you'd pay for a room with bath in the city. And I have heard storekeepers vow to their cronies that they would add about 10 per cent to every price when "those New York Jews" came in.

* * *

IT IS TRUE, alas, that the season is a short one and that the golden flow of cash dries up so soon after it starts that a man has to hustle to get his share. All the same, we cannot expect people to succumb to our lures, if they have once been hooked. And we cannot hope that a man who has been duped will not spread the word—or that that word will not travel faster than all the publicity we can dream up to circulate among the resort editors.

But worst of all, the men and women who do operate on the basis that even a summer visitor has a right to a dollar's worth for each dollar he spends have a hard time bucking the thrifty minority. Believe me a man who has been swindled spends more time talking about it than a man who has been treated right. And the best advertising for any resort is done right at the resort itself.

* * *

SATISFYING people and treating them fairly when they complain seems like a slow hard way of building a summer's business, compared to promising them a lot and soaking them for a little. But it is the surest way all the same. And I am convinced that, if our publicity folks would spend their time and cash discouraging the dollar-hungry, straightening out complaints, and checking the truthfulness of advertising, they would do Berkshire resort business more good than a dozen pretty newspaper ads. It might even work in Vermont.

Tanglewood Traffic Tangle Tries Tempers

Saturday Night Concert Crowd Close to Record

All roads in Berkshire County led to Tanglewood over the weekend and most of them were jammed bumper to bumper with traffic Saturday night as the Boston Symphony Orchestra drew the second largest crowd in its 21-year history.

Attendance at the Saturday night concert was 15,500, only 300 less than the record set at the final Saturday concert of the 1951 season.

There would have been more there last Saturday, but a king-sized traffic tie-up kept many music lovers from reaching the goal. From about 7:30 until well after the concert started at 8:30 Saturday evening cars were lined up for several miles from the Tanglewood gates in Lenox.

Traffic Bottled

At one time the tie-up extended all the way north to the intersection of Routes 7 and 20 at the Lenox by-pass and also for more than a mile through the middle of Lenox down Route 7 toward Stockbridge and Great Barrington.

They were still selling admission tickets at Tanglewood after the intermission. Some cars finally found parking spots only a few minutes before the concert ended.

One farm on West Street near the Tanglewood main entrance picked up a nice piece of change by parking about 1,000 cars at 50 cents each.

35,177 at 3 Concerts

Many late arrivals at the Saturday night concert had difficulty making their way through the crowds on the lawns surrounding the Shed to get to their reserved

Traffic
Continued on Page 2

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 103,999

JUL 31 1955

Tanglewood Concerts Set For Special Broadcast Series

For the second consecutive year, WGBH-FM, Boston's educational station, is recording all 18 of the Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts at Tanglewood for broadcast during the Summer. While most of the concerts will be conducted by the orchestra's musical director, Charles Munch, guest conductors will include Pierre Monteur, Thor Johnson, and Leonard Bernstein.

A special feature of the 1955 season is a Beethoven cycle during which all the symphonies, the violin concerto, the piano concerti Nos. 4 and 5, and the "Missa Solemnis" will be performed.

In addition, 13 concerts by student ensembles and 6 recitals by chamber groups and soloists will be recorded by the WGBH-FM mobile production unit under the direction of Jordan M. Whitelaw, the station's music manager.

Concerts from Tanglewood will be broadcast in the regular Saturday night Boston Symphony time at 8:30 throughout August and September. Beginning Aug. 16 the Boston Symphony Orchestra also will be broadcast every Tuesday through Sept. 27 at 9 o'clock.

Performances by student ensembles, smaller chamber groups and soloists are being recorded during the current Tanglewood season for presentation on Sunday afternoons and Friday evenings throughout the coming year.

The schedule in prospect duplicates that of 1954-55 during which WGBH-FM has presented 50 weeks of music by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 48 concerts from the regular Friday-Saturday Symphony Hall subscription series, 18 from Tanglewood and 8 by the Boston Pops Orchestra.

WGBH-FM, operated with the advice and cooperation of the Lowell Institute Cooperative Bradcasting Council, will again present live broadcasts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts from Symphony Hall beginning with the first performance of the 75th season on Friday afternoon, Sept. 30.

The Boston Symphony is one of 11 members of the Lowell Institute Cooperative Broadcasting Council.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

JUL 29 1955

100 Volunteers Man Aid Stations At Tanglewood

Almost 100 Berkshire County Red Cross volunteers are giving first-aid coverage at the major Tanglewood concerts this summer, John H. Martin and Clarence E. King, co-chairmen of first aid for the chapter, announced today.

Seven volunteers cover each concert. The workers are under the direction of Mrs. Warren U. Sears, nurse in charge of the first-aid station, and Mr. Sears.

Thursday AUG. 11 • Events from 6 to 11 PM
RAIN OR SHINE
TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS.

"Tanglewood on Parade"

Including Shed Concert at 8:15 by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Conducted by LEONARD BERNSTEIN
Suite from "On the Waterfront" ..... Bernstein
(FIRST PERFORMANCE)
"A Lincoln Portrait" ..... Copland
(Speaker to be announced)

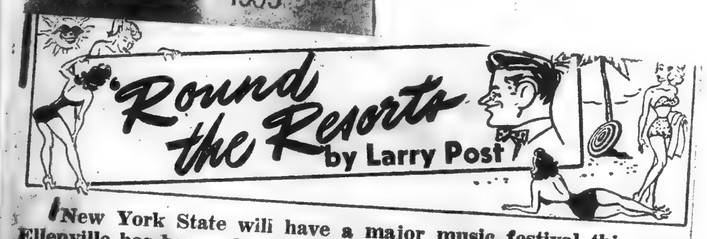
BOSTON POPS ORCHESTRA
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
In a typical Pops program—
Spanish Caprice ..... Rimsky-Korsakov
Rhapsody in Blue, for Piano and Orchestra ..... Gershwin
Soloist—LEONARD BERNSTEIN
Suite from the Ballet "Graduation Ball" ..... Strauss-Dorati
(Encores may be expected!)

LAWN PARTY ☆ PICNIC SUPPER
WALTZING ON THE LAWN ☆ DOOR PRIZES
TICKETS: Box Seats—$5; Front Sections (All seats reserved) $4 and $3; Unreserved Section $2.50
All who purchase tickets will be invited to attend the activities of the Berkshire Music Center at 6 o'clock:—
SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA ☆ OPERA SCENES
THE CHORUS ☆ CHAMBER MUSIC
REMAINING FESTIVAL CONCERTS
Fri. and Sat. Eves., Sun. Afts., Aug. 5, 6, 7; Aug. 12, 13, 14
(CHAMBER CONCERT—WED. EVE. AUG. 10)
Wed. Eve. Chamber Concerts—$2, $3; Fri. Eve., Sat. Eve. and Sun. Aft. Shed Concerts—$2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Box Seats). Admission $2.00.
Write or phone TICKET OFFICE, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. (Lenox 600)
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

Union Street - New York

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
POST
[illegible] - S. 258,545

1955



New York State will have a major music festival this year. Ellenville has been selected as the site by the festival board which is headed jointly by Jascha Rushkin and John Brownlee. Albert Gins, director general of the succesful Puerto Rico Opera Festival, is the business manager of this Empire State Music Festival, with headquarters at 36 W. 44th St. They expect the operation to get under way the first week in August and run for five weeks.

Planned for its first season are symphony orchestra concerts, as well as opera, ballet or festival plays each week. Negotiations with the Symphony of the Air are in progress for its members to participate. Internationally-known conductors have been invited.

Ellenville was selected due to its proximity to New York City (less than three hours) and its ideal location in Ulster County at the beginning of the mountain resorts area. Up to this time, New York State has had no festival of the scope of Aspen or Tanglewood, although there are several of lesser magnitude.

[illegible] Ernie's Jumping Brook Country [illegible]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

AUG 2 1955

Singers in "Zaide," unfinished opera by Mozart, having its U.S. première at Tanglewood Monday. From left: Howell Zulick, McHenry Boatwright, Christina Cardillo, Harold Johnson

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 52,692

JUL 13 1955

Berkshire Sets Art Exhibits

Weekly exhibits of paintings, sculpture, prints and photographs are a feature of the Berkshire Festival. The exhibits are housed in the reception hall at the main gate at Tanglewood and arranged through the courtesy of the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, and its director, Stuart C. Henry.

Currently on display are nine contemporary prints by modern artists. The display includes a limited edition 1895 lithograph, "Entree de Brasseur," by Toulouse-Lautrec, and a four-color lithograph, Bonnard's "Man with a Dog," on loan from the collection of Ferdinand Roten, Baltimore. The lithographs will be on view through Friday.

A series, "Paintings of the Weather," by Helmut Siber of Mill River, Mass., will be on exhibition beginning Saturday.

N. 116,000 Circ. D. 10,682 2/28/55

TANGLEWOOD

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 52,205

JUL 18 1955

Tanglewood String Orchestra Presents Vivaldi, Boccherini

Italian classics featured the seventh program in the Theater Concert Hall at Tanglewood Saturday. Opening with two Vivaldi concerti grossi, 11 and 10 of Opus 3, Musical Director Charles Munch found his string orchestra firmly responsive to the vigor he imparted.

The sudden echo effects, the superb balance and the flexible control in the trasitional sections revealed the artistry of the Boston Symphony string section. Beautiful phrasing in the tender large movements created an ethereal loftiness. In the second concerto, four solo violins dominated. Concertmaster Richard Burgin and his cohorts made this an exciting contribution.

The featured soloist was his brilliant young first cellist, Samuel Mayes. His interpretation of the Boccherini concerto, Op. 34, was most interesting. A work that depends almost entirely on the solo performer for full realization, the Boccherini, despite its thin scoring and modest musicality, held everyone in rapt attention. An excellent performance resulted from the complete freedom of the soloist to explore every nuance with abandon. Munch properly balanced the orchestra and anticipated each liberty. In spite of the heat and humidity, Mayes gave assurance to the technical displays, particularly in the two complicated cadenzas.

Returning to Vivaldi for the final half of the program, Hugh Ross led the festival chorus of 75 mixed voices in the Gloria for solo voices, chorus and orchestra. Taken from the ritual mass, this balanced musical unit begins and ends in high brilliance with contemplative and lively music alternating.

Sara Mae Endich, soprano, and Sadie McCollum, contralto, were attractive young soloists with Miss Endich particularly appealing.

The chorus, exuberant and well trained, supported Ross in the furious opening through the contrasts of the calm harmonic style and fugal imitations in later sections.

For a chamber concert this program offered great variety in the resources required in its presentation. Next week the concerts move to the large shed with the full forces of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in action.—C. F. S.

165 Church Street - New York

RICHMOND, VA.
TIMES-DISPATCH
Circ. D. 123,471 - S. 174,705

JUL 10 1955

Berkshire Center Opens 13th Year

—AP Photo
Sergei Koussevitzky

By John White

This week has been marked by the opening of the thirteenth season of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass. Tanglewood, an estate of 210 acres, has been the Summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra since 1936, when it was bequeathed to the orchestra by the late Mrs. Andrew Hepburn. It was once the meeting place of Emerson, Holmes, and Melville, and it was the residence of Nathaniel Hawthorne in 1850 and '51, where he wrote "The House of the Seven Gables."

Long a literary shrine, it is now one of the world's great music centers during the Summer months, rivaling in its plushness the festivals at Edinburgh, Venice, Salzburg, and Bayreuth. It is a favorite Summer vacation spot for hundreds of musically inclined Americans, and of course it is very convenient for New Yorkers and New Englanders wanting a week end in the country. What goes on in music at Tanglewood is watched from all over the world.

The festival is the child of Sergei Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony from 1924 to his death in 1951, who made that orchestra one of the greatest ever. Backed by an immense private fortune, after his own success was made he turned his resources to the encouragement of contemporary composers and younger performing talents.

Fast Successes

The roster of works commissioned by the Boston under Koussevitzky reads like a "Who and What" of twentieth century music. He saw the Berkshire Center as a retreat for Summer study and a workshop for new music, with the members of the orchestra as teachers, augmented by some prize names in the fields of opera and composition. Several younger Americans have had their first great success in the Music Shed at Tanglewood: Leonard Bernstein, Lukas Foss, Seymour Lipkin, and others.

Somewhat more restrainedly, the Berkshire Festivals have continued under the direction of Charles Munch, the superb French conductor who succeeded Koussevitzky at the head of the Boston Symphony. The adventurous side for the last three years has been steered by the assistant director of the festival, Aaron Copland, the American composer who is now a "father figure" to a host of composition students.

A study and conservative series of concerts has been arranged for this thirteenth season of six weeks, which began July 4 and will end August 14. Six Wednesday evenings are scheduled for the chamber music of Beethoven, with performances by the Kroll Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, and the New Music Quartet. Isaac Stern for violin sonatas, Rudolf Serkin for piano sonatas; and Gregor Piatigorsky will close the series on August 10 with the cello sonatas (all of them).

Bach Today

The week-end series of concerts is planned for the large in-and-out crowd of visitors, with three orchestral concerts—Friday and Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoon. Last week end and July 15 are "Bach-Mozart Concerts" played by a chamber orchestra, somewhat misnamed since only two are devoted exclusively to these composers: a performance of Bach's B minor Mass today, and on Friday an all-Mozart concert with Jennie Tourel. Conductors are Munch, Bernstein, and Thor Johnson. Contemporary music by Stravinsky, Milhaud, Hindemith, and Honnegger is programmed.

The full Boston Symphony Orchestra takes over the week end series on July 22, and the programs are a far cry from the exciting old Koussevitzky days: all nine Beethoven symphonies and the Missa Solemnis, Act II of "Fidelio," and lots of Wagner, Schumann, Brahms, and Strauss. The only "new" music is Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard." Conductors are Munch, Bernstein, and Pierre Monteux; pianists are Serkin and Eugene Istomin; and Margaret Harshaw sings Wagner.

The first chair men of the Boston Symphony teach in the Summer school, which is divided into four departments, instrumental music, chorus, composition, and opera. Bernstein teaches conducting, and William Kroll and Piatigorsky supervises chamber music. The distinguished Princeton composer, Roger Sessions, and the German Boris Blacher are composers in residence. The chorus is under the direction of Hugh Ross, and Boris Goldovsky will produce the student-prepared operas. We can look for more adventurous and challenging musical performers from the students than from their faculty.

MILLERTON, N. Y.
NEWS-REPUBLICAN
Circ. W. 3,617

JUL 14 1955

Kroll Quartet Opens Tanglewood Season

The Berkshire Festival, popularly known as "Tanglewood," opened its eighteenth season in the Theatre-Concert Hall, popularly known as "the little shed", at Lenox, Mass., Wednesday evening, July 6. The attraction was The Kroll String Quartet, which has been garnering increasingly impressive reviews in the metropolitan press during recent years. The program, in line with the general trend of Tanglewood billings for this summer, was "all Beethoven"--comprising No. 4 of Opus 18, the F Minor, Opus 95, and the most difficult and subtle C Sharp Minor, Opus 131.

With threatening weather cutting down the attendance, the celebrated Violinist's group nevertheless drew an enthusiastic response from a discriminating if predominantly youthful audience--the encores at the conclusion of the program pyramided to an ovation. This reviewer in all honesty must bring in a minority report. Willam Kroll, a brilliant soloist, seemed, unfortunately, a brilliant soloist competing with three other brilliant soloists (Louis Graeler, violin; David Mankovitz, viola, and Avron Twerdowsky, cello.) There was not the "fusion", nor the give-and-take, nor the humility in the face of the composer's intentions, which, it seems to this old-fashioned music lover, make for the best quartet playing. Especially when such an ethereal masterpiece as the Opus 131, is involved. What may develop after the quartet has played a few more years--since all four men are splendid instrumentalists--is, of course, another matter.

165 Church Street

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES UNION
Circ. D. 57,358 - S. 111,843

JUL 13 1955

Around the Town:

Tanglewood Magnet For Area Music Lover

By EDGAR S. VAN OLINDA

The Albany Metropolitan Area is an exclusive designation by The Albany Times-Union to indicate the vast perimeter of its circulation influence.

Fortunately,, it encompasses the verdant, rolling scenic beauty of the Berkshire Mountains which each summer, become the esthetic capital of the United States. Within an hour and a half's motor trip from Albany is a wide choice, of cultural, week-end objectives: the Tanglewood Music Festival, Ted Shawn's magnificent Dance Festival, the South Mountain chamber music festival, the dignified members of the Boston Symphony theatres.

Specifically, it is Tanglewood which is the magnet that attracts the metal license plates from every state in the Union, Mexico and Canada during July and August. Whereas, that city at the other end of the B. and A. Railroad was the inspiration for the quatrain which ends: "Where the Lowells talk only to Cabots and the Cabots talk only to God," at Tanglewood, everyone speaks to everyone else through the universal language of music.

As further evidence of the social lines that slackening to Orchestra played last [illegible] afternoon, in their shirt-sleeves. ber music concerts at [illegible] bijous for Summer

The question most [illegible] of this column is: "How do we get to [illegible] to Tanglewood?"

The answer is simple. Follow the Albany cars ahead of you on any Friday or Saturday evening or Sunday afternoon and you won't dare get out of line. Many ask where food and lodging may be obtained over the week-end, since many of the famous old hotels are constantly changing ownership and management with the resultant deviation from established standards of gustatory excellence.

WHERE ELITE MEET TO EAT

Well, the Albany Metropolitan Area has established a rendezvous for the elite at Crane Inn, in the center of the tree-shaded main street of Dalton, five miles east of Pittsfield on Route 9, presided over by Jim Donegan, the innkeeper, and a former Albanian, (Ten Eyck Hotel).

Here one may discuss the merits of the nearby concerts on the spacious veranda, or in one of the many early American dining rooms, over a basket of hot pecan and cinnamon buns and a generous cut of their famous pecan pie.

Crane Inn is maintained by the Crane family of Massachusetts, who make the rag paper on which the government bonds and currency are printed. And when you pay your indebtedness at the "End of a Perfect Day," you will be surprised and delighted how little of the finished Crane product and the Government Printing Office's joint partnership enters into the transaction.

ROME, N. Y.
SENTINEL
Circ. D. 16,796

JUL 18 1955

On the Air

Diamond Curtain' Scheduled

By MARGARET McCARTHY

A talented and beautiful small town girl makes good at a career in New York but falls victim to a smug and superficial society in "The Diamond Curtain," on the Robert Montgomery Summer Theatre presentation tonight at 9:30 on WSYR-TV (3) and WKTV (13). Augusta Dabney, Dorothy Blackburn, House Jameson and Charles Drake have leading roles.

Isaac Stern, American violinist will make his first appearance in The Telephone Hour tonight at 9 over WSYR. For this broadcast he has chosen Mendelssohn's "Concerto in E Minor" and Kreisler's "Sicilienne and Rigaudon."

Arthur O'Connell, Mark Lawrence, Bruce Gordon and Jack Klugman have leading roles in "A Terrible Day," a western drama, to be seen on WHEN-TV (8) tonight at 10. It is the story of conflict between a small western community and a rich landowner who threatens to wreck the town.

"Break Through the Bars," a story of medical treatment of mental illness, stars Lee J. Cobb, on The Medic, tonight at 9 on WSYR-TV (3).

The American conductor Thor Johnson will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berkshire Festival broadcast on WSYR tonight at 8:15. The program will include music of Handel and Haydn.

TUESDAY

Television comic Tony Randall joins the Garry Moore Show Tuesday morning at 10 on WHEN-TV (8) in a comedy sketch about summer camps for children.

"The Banjo's Back in Town," will open the Bob Crosby Show Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 on WHEN-TV (8). The Modernaires don Tom Sawyer costumes to stroll down by the old fishing stream when they sing "Hummingbird."

New York

DETROIT, MICH.
NEWS
Circ. D. 442,665 - S. 549,629

JUL 23 1955

BOSTONIANS TAKE TO AIR

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a broadcast from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood over the NBC radio network Monday night.

The entire program will be devoted to Beethoven's symphony No. 7 in A major.

This season's concerts at the Berkshire Festival will stress the music of Beethoven. Many of his works will be heard at the festival and re-broadcast in the NBC series on Monday evenings.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326
JUL 30 1955

Handle, Schumann, Brahms Lure 7,677 to Tanglewood

Perfect weather conditions and a program of music by Handel, Schumann, Barber and Brahms lured a crowd of 7,677 to Tanglewood in Lenox last night.

Second Week-End

Charles Munch conducted the full Boston Symphony orchestra as the second week-end of major shed concerts got underway. Another concert is scheduled this evening at 8.30 and the final one in the series will be tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 o'clock.

The opening selection last night was Handel's "Water Music," which was followed by Schumann's Symphony No. 4. The Festival chorus and Soprano Leontyne Price joined the orchestra in a performance of "The Prayers of Kierkegaard," by the modern American composer, Samuel Barber. The concert concluded with Brahms' Symphony No. 4.

Serkin Tonight

Tonight Rudolph Serkin will be heard in Beethoven's Concerto for piano in E Flat major. The other works on the program will be the overture to "Egmont" and the Symphony No. 3 in E Flat major. Mr. Munch will again conduct.

Pierre Monteux will be on the podium tomorrow for an all-Brahms program. Isaac Stern will play the violin concerto and other works will be "The Academic Festival Overture" and the Symphony No. 1 in C Minor.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 20,000
JUL 28 1955

Berkshire Festival Program Revised Due to Piatigorsky Shoulder Ailment

Three programs of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Sunday, July 31, Wed., Aug. 10, and Friday, Aug. 12, have been revised by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, it was announced yesterday, because a shoulder ailment has necessitated cancellation of soloist engagements at these concerts by cellist Gergor Piaigorsky.

The noted musician regretfuly wired Mr. Munch that he would be unable to leave his home in California to perform at the Berkshire Festival. Mr. Piatigorsky has also found it necessary to cancel the cello classes he was to conduct during the final two weeks of the current session of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school operated by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood.

Instead of the Concerto for Violin and Cello Mr. Piatigorsky was scheduled to play with Isaac Stern at Sunday afternoon's (July 31) Berkshire Festieal concert, on the all-Brahms program Pierre Monteux will conduct with the Boston Symphony in the Tanglewood Music Shed, Mr. Stern will perform Brahms' Concerto for Violin in D major, Opus 77. Mr. Stern, a frequent soloist on Festival programs, has not previously given this concerto at Tanglewood.

Charles Munch's concert with the Boston Symphony on Friday evening, Aug. 12, on which Mr. Piatigorsky was announced to solo in Ernest Bloch's "Schelomo" for Cello and Orchestra, has been revised. For the Bloch selection and also the announced Brahms Variations on a Theme by Haydn, Mr. Munch will substitute the "Symphonie Fantastique" of Hector Berlioz, which was an outstanding success on the Festival programs of 1954 which observed the 150th anniversary of the birth of the French composer. The revised program, all French music, will open with the Berlioz, conclude with Debussy's "La Mer" and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite No. 2.

Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, who was to play the three Beethoven Cello sonatas with Mr. Piatigorsky on the Festival's chamber music series Wednesday evening, Aug. 10, has substituted the following program: Beethoven Chamber Music featuring six principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (Gino Cioffi, clarinet; Samuel Mayes, cello; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; James Stagliano, French Horn); David Lloyd, tenor; and Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 91,975
JUL 29 1955

SHED CONCERTS THIS WEEK END AT TANGLEWOOD

Music of Brahms, Handel, Barber in Festival Shed This Evening

Tonight, the second week-end of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1955 Berkshire Festival will begin in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8.30 Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a suite from Handel's "Water Music" in the arrangement by the late Sir Hamilton Harty, the Symphony No. 4 in D minor by Schumann and the Symphony No. 4 in E minor by Brahms. In addition, the concert will feature the Tanglewood premiere of the latest score by Samuel Barber, the solo cantata, "Prayers of Kierkegaard," scored for orchestra, chorus and vocal soloists, and commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. Barber's score was given its world premiere performance by Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra last December. The soprano soloist will be Leontyne Price, who also sang in the premiere; other vocal solos in tonight's performance will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano. Miss Sarfaty is a student in the Berkshire Music Center's opera department and Mr. Schoep is assistant stage director to the opera department, head, Boris Goldovsky. Miss Price was a student in the opera department four summers ago and won wide acclaim for her performance in Richard Strauss' "Ariadne auf Naxos." Since then she has gained international renown for her performance as Bess in Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess."

The programs tomorrow evening and Sunday afternoon will be devoted entirely to the music of Beethoven and Brahms respectively. Tomorrow evening Charles Munch will conduct the Overture to "Egmont" and the "Eroica" Symphony, and Rudolf Serkin will be soloist in the "Emperor" Piano Concerto. Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux will conduct the "Academic Festival" Overture and First Symphony by Brahms. A bonus for Festival patrons is the public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, at 10 a. m. in the Tanglewood Music Shed, when Pierre Monteux will rehearse his Saturday evening program. A nominal admission is charged for the benefit of the Orchestra's pension fund.

Remaining tickets for tonight's concert, as well as all succeeding

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825
JUL 29 1955

Festival Moves Into Semifinal Week With Many Featured Soloists

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, moves into its semifinal week of summer symphonic music, opening with the fifth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three piano sonatas performed by Rudolf Serkin, on August 3 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Beethoven and Wagner provide the fare for the three weekend concerts in the huge Music Shed. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the three concerts, on Saturday evening (Aug. 6) and Sunday afternoon (Aug. 7), and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the department of orchestra and conducting of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, The Berkshire Music Center, takes the podium on Friday evening (Aug. 5).

Mr. Bernstein, who came to Tanglewood as a student conductor in 1940 and 1941, then began his long association with the Berkshire music school in 1942 as assistant to the orchestra's late conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will conduct Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" on Friday evening as a memorial to his patron. The evening-long orchestral and choral work was similarly performed at Tanglewood under Mr. Bernstein's baton two summers ago. Soloists on this occasion will be Adele Addison, soprano, Eunice Alberts, contralto, David Lloyd, tenor, Mac Morgan, bass. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center, Miss Anderson in 1947, 1948 and 1950, Miss Alberts during 1941-1945, Mr. Lloyd in 1947 and Mr. Morgan in 1953. The Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center Students of the chorus, opera and study group departments, trained by Hugh Ross, will also assist.

Mr. Munch's Saturday evening program will commence with a first Tanglewood performance of Beethoven's opera "Fidelio." Act II, with the Festival Chorus trained by John Krueger of the Youngstown, O., Philharmonic and Chorus, a Berkshire Music Center chorus faculty member this summer. Soloists are Margaret Harshaw, of the Metropolitan Opera, soprano; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; Arthur Schoep, tenor; and from the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, students Christina Cardillo (North Adams, Mass.), soprano, and Malcolm Bernstein (Baltimore, Md.), bass. The second half of the program is devoted to excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung," with Miss Harshaw soloist in the Immolation Scene, a selection which she did with great success at a Berkshire Festival concert in 1952.

The Sunday afternoon concert Mr. Munch will devote to Beethoven, whose music is a feature of the 1955 Berkshire Festival, with Eugene Istomin, pianist, making his debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra as soloist in the Concerto No. 4.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30, the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

The complete programs are:

Wednesday, Aug. 3, 8:30 p.m., Theatre-Concert Hall. Chamber Music: Beethoven, Piano Sonatas, F Major, Op. 10, No. 2; D Major, Op. 10, No. 3; B Flat, Op. 106 ("Hammerklavier"), Rudolf Serkin.

Friday, Aug. 5, 8:30 p.m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: Beethoven, Missa Solemnis (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky); soloists, Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; violin solo, Richard Burgin, organist; Willem Frank, Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Hugh Ross; Leonard Bernstein, conductor.

Saturday, Aug. 6, 8:30 p.m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: Beethoven, "Fidelio," Act II (first performance at Tanglewood): Leonore, Margaret Harshaw; Rocco, Mac Morgan; Pizzaro and Fernando, Malcolm Bernstein; Florestan, David Lloyd; Marzelline, Christina Cardillo; Jaquino, Arthur Schoep; Wagner, excerpts from "Gotterdammerung": Siegfried's Rhine Journey, Siegfried's Death Music; Immolation scene, soloist, Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Charles Munch, conductor.

Sunday, Aug. 7, 2:30 p.m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra (all-Beethoven): Beethoven, Symphony No. 8, in F Major; Piano Concerto No. 4, in G Major; soloist, Eugene Istomin; Symphony No. 5, in C Minor; Charles Munch, conductor.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326
JUL 29 1955

Bengtz Paintings To Be Exhibited At Tanglewood Gate

An exhibition of paintings, drawings and prints by Ture Bengtz, Berkshire resident and head of the Bengtz School of Art at Lenox school, Lenox, will be on display during the coming week from Saturday, July 30, until Saturday, Aug. 6 in the glassed exhibition hall, main gate, at Tanglewood, in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

The Bengtz show, as well as the others in the weekly displays of painting, sculpture and photographs at Tanglewood, has been arranged through the courtesy of the Berkshire museum, Pittsfield, and its director, Stuart C. Henry.

...March Street - New York
NEW YORKER
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL 30 1955

IN THE COUNTRY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Friday, July 29, at 8:30: Charles Munch directing the Boston Symphony, with Leontyne Price, soprano; and a chorus. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 30, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony in an all-Beethoven program, with Rudolf Serkin, piano. . . . ¶ Sunday, July 31, at 2:30: Pierre Monteux conducting the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms program, with Isaac Stern, violin, and Gregor Piatigorsky, cello. . . . ¶ Wednesday, Aug. 3, at 8:30: The fifth in a series of six programs of Beethoven's chamber music, this one made up of sonatas played by Rudolf Serkin, piano. . . . ¶ Friday, Aug. 5, at 8:30: Leonard Bernstein directing the Boston Symphony in a performance of Beethoven's Missa Solemnis, in memory of Serge Koussevitzky. With Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; and a chorus. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 6, at 8:30: Charles Munch directing the Boston Symphony in a Beethoven-Wagner program, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; and a chorus. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 7, at 2:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony in another all-Beethoven program, with Eugene Istomin, piano. . . . ¶ Monday and Tuesday, Aug. 8-9, at 8:30: Mozart's opera "Zaide," in an English version, and the first performances of "The Rope," an opera by Louis Mennini, based on Eugene O'Neill's one-act play. Presented by students of the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center and produced by Boris Goldovsky. For information on opera tickets, which are very scarce, may be procured at least a week in advance, address the Berkshire Music Center, (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Through Sunday, Aug. 14.)

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326
JUL 30 1955

Handle, Schumann, Brahms Lure 7,677 to Tanglewood

Perfect weather conditions and a program of music by Handel, Schumann, Barber and Brahms lured a crowd of 7,677 to Tanglewood in Lenox last night.

Second Week-End

Charles Munch conducted the full Boston Symphony orchestra as the second week-end of major shed concerts got underway. Another concert is scheduled this evening at 8.30 and the final one in the series will be tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 o'clock.

The opening selection last night was Handel's "Water Music," which was followed by Schumann's Symphony No. 4. The Festival chorus and Soprano Leontyne Price joined the orchestra in a performance of "The Prayers of Kierkegaard," by the modern American composer, Samuel Barber. The concert concluded with Brahms' Symphony No. 4.

Serkin [illegible]

Tonight, Rudolph Serkin will be heard in Beethoven's Concerto for piano in E Flat major. The other works on the program will be the overture to "Egmont" and the Symphony No. 3 in E Flat major. Mr. Munch will again conduct.

Pierre Monteux will be on the podium tomorrow for an all-Brahms program. Isaac Stern will play the violin concerto and other works will be "The Academic Festival Overture" and the Symphony No. 1 in C Minor.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825
JUL 29 1955

Festival Moves Into Semifinal Week With Many Featured Soloists

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, moves into its semifinal week of summer symphonic music, opening with the fifth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three piano sonatas performed by Rudolf Serkin, on August 3 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Beethoven and Wagner provide the fare for the three weekend concerts in the huge Music Shed. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the three concerts, on Saturday evening (Aug. 6) and Sunday afternoon (Aug. 7), and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the department of orchestra and conducting of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, The Berkshire Music Center, takes the podium on Friday evening (Aug. 5).

Mr. Bernstein, who came to Tanglewood as a student conductor in 1940 and 1941, then began his long association with the Berkshire music school in 1942 as assistant to the orchestra's late conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will conduct Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" on Friday evening as a memorial to his patron. The evening-long orchestral and choral work was similarly performed at Tanglewood under Mr. Bernstein's baton two summers ago. Soloists on this occasion will be Adele Addison, soprano, Eunice Alberts, contralto, David Lloyd, tenor, Mac Morgan, bass. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center, Miss Anderson in 1947, 1948 and 1950, Miss Alberts during 1941-1945, Mr. Lloyd in 1947 and Mr. Morgan in 1953. The Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center Students of the chorus, opera and study group departments, trained by Hugh Ross, will also assist.

Mr. Munch's Saturday evening program will commence with a first Tanglewood performance of Beethoven's opera "Fidelio," Act II, with the Festival Chorus trained by John Krueger of the Youngstown, O., Philharmonic and Chorus, a Berkshire Music Center chorus faculty member this summer. Soloists are Margaret Harshaw, of the Metropolitan Opera, soprano; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; Arthur Schoep, tenor; and from the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, students Christina Cardillo (North Adams, Mass.), soprano, and Malcolm Bernstein (Baltimore, Md.), bass. The second half of the program is devoted to excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung," with Miss Harshaw soloist in the Immolation Scene, a selection which she did with great success at a Berkshire Festival concert in 1952.

The Sunday afternoon concert Mr. Munch will devote to Beethoven, whose music is a feature of the 1955 Berkshire Festival, with Eugene Istomin, pianist, making his debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra as soloist in the Concerto No. 4.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30, the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

The complete programs are:

Wednesday, Aug. 3, 8:30 p.m., Theatre-Concert Hall, Chamber Music: Beethoven, Piano Sonatas, F Major, Op. 10, No. 2; D Major, Op. 10, No. 3; B Flat, Op. 106 ("Hammerklavier"), Rudolf Serkin.

Friday, Aug. 5, 8:30 p.m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: Beethoven, Missa Solemnis (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky); soloists, Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; violin solo, Richard Burgin, organist; Willem Frank, Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Hugh Ross; Leonard Bernstein, conductor.

Saturday, Aug. 6, 8:30 p.m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: Beethoven, "Fidelio," Act II (first performance at Tanglewood); Leonore, Margaret Harshaw; Rocco, Mac Morgan; Pizzaro and Fernando, Malcolm Bernstein; Florestan, David Lloyd; Marzelline, Christina Cardillo; Jaquino, Arthur Schoep; Wagner, excerpts from "Gotterdammerung": Siegfried's Rhine Journey, Siegfried's Death Music; Immolation scene, soloist, Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Charles Munch, conductor.

Sunday, Aug. 7, 2:30 p.m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra (all Beethoven): Beethoven, Symphony No. 8, in F Major; Piano Concerto No. 4, in G Major; soloist, Eugene Istomin; Symphony No. 5, in C Minor; Charles Munch, conductor.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326
JUL 29 1955

Bengtz Paintings To Be Exhibited At Tanglewood Gate

An exhibition of paintings, drawings and prints by Ture Bengtz, Berkshire resident and head of the Bengtz School of Art at Lenox school, Lenox, will be on display during the coming week from Saturday, July 30, until Saturday, Aug. 6, in the glassed exhibition hall, main gate, at Tanglewood, in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

The Bengtz show, as well as the others in the weekly displays of painting, sculpture and photographs at Tanglewood, has been arranged through the courtesy of the Berkshire museum, Pittsfield, and its director, Stuart C. Henry.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 20,000
JUL 28 1955

Berkshire Festival Program Revised Due to Piatigorsky Shoulder Ailment

Three programs of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Sunday, July 31, Wed., Aug. 10, and Friday, Aug. 12, have been revised by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, it was announced yesterday, because a shoulder ailment has necessitated cancellation of soloist engagements at these concerts by cellist Gregor Piaigorsky.

The noted musician regretfully wired Mr. Munch that he would be unable to leave his home in California to perform at the Berkshire Festival. Mr. Piatigorsky has also found it necessary to cancel the cello class which was to conduct during the final two weeks of the current session of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school operated by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood.

Instead of the Concerto for Violin and Cello Mr. Piatigorsky was scheduled to play with Isaac Stern at Sunday afternoon's (July 31) Berkshire Festival concert, on the all-Brahms program Pierre Monteux will conduct with the Boston Symphony in the Tanglewood Music Shed, Mr. Stern will perform Brahms' Concerto for Violin in D major, Opus 77. Mr. Stern, a frequent soloist on Festival programs, has not previously given this concerto at Tanglewood.

Charles Munch's concert with the Boston Symphony on Friday evening, Aug. 12, on which Mr. Piatigorsky was announced to solo in Ernest Bloch's "Schelomo" for Cello and Orchestra, has been revised. For the Bloch selection and also the announced Brahms Variations on a Theme by Haydn, Mr. Munch will substitute the "Symphonie Fantastique" of Hector Berlioz, which was an outstanding success on the Festival programs of 1954 which observed the 150th anniversary of the birth of the French composer. The revised program, all French music, will open with the Berlioz, conclude with Debussy's "La Mer" and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite No. 2.

Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, who was to play the three Beethoven Cello sonatas with Mr. Piatigorsky on the Festival's chamber music series Wednesday evening, Aug. 10, has substituted the following program: Beethoven Chamber Music featuring the principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (Gino Cioffi, clarinet; Samuel Mayes, cello; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; James Stagliano, French Horn); David Lloyd, tenor; and Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 91,975
JUL 29 1955

SHED CONCERTS THIS WEEK END AT TANGLEWOOD

Music of Brahms, Handel, Barber in Festival Shed This Evening

Tonight, the second week-end of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1955 Berkshire Festival will begin in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8.30. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a Suite from Handel's "Water Music" in the arrangement by the late, Sir Hamilton Harty, the Symphony No. 4 in D minor by Schumann and the Symphony No. 4 in E minor by Brahms. In addition, the concert will feature the Tanglewood premiere of the latest score by Samuel Barber, the solo cantata, "Prayers of Kierkegaard," scored for orchestra, chorus and vocal soloists, and commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. Barber's score was given its world premiere performance by Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra last December. The soprano soloist will be Leontyne Price, who also sang in the premiere; other vocal solos in tonight's performance will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano. Miss Sarfaty is a student in the Berkshire Music Center's opera department. Mr. Schoep is assistant director to the opera [illegible] Boris Goldovsky.

[illegible] a student in the [illegible] four summers [illegible] provide acclaim for [illegible] in Richard [illegible] auf Naxos." Since then she has gained international renown for her performance as Bess in Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess."

The programs tomorrow evening and Sunday afternoon will be devoted entirely to the music of Beethoven and Brahms respectively. Tomorrow evening Charles Munch will conduct the Overture to "Egmont" and the "Eroica" Symphony, and Rudolf Serkin will be soloist in the "Emperor" Piano Concerto. Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux will conduct the "Academic Festival" Overture and First Symphony by Brahms. A bonus for Festival patrons is the public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, at 10 a. m., in the Tanglewood Music Shed, when Pierre Monteux will rehearse his Saturday evening program. A [illegible] charged for the benefit of the Orchestra's pension fund.

Remaining tickets for tonight's concert, as well as all succeeding

[illegible] - New York
NEW YORKER
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL 30 1955

IN THE COUNTRY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Friday, July 29, at [illegible] Charles Munch directing the Boston [illegible] phony, with Leontyne Price, soprano, [illegible] a chorus. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 30, at [illegible] Charles Munch conducting the Boston [illegible] phony in an all-Beethoven program, [illegible] Rudolf Serkin, piano. . . . ¶ Sunday, July [illegible] at 2:30: Pierre Monteux conducting [illegible] Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms program, with Isaac Stern, violin, and Gregor Piatigorsky, cello. . . . ¶ Wednesday, Aug. [illegible] at 8: The fifth in a series of six programs of Beethoven's chamber music, this one made up of sonatas played by Rudolf Serkin, piano. . . . ¶ Friday, Aug. 5, at 8:30: Leonard Bernstein directing the Boston Symphony in a performance of Beethoven's Missa Solemnis, in memory of Serge Koussevitzky. With Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; and a chorus. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 6, at 8:30: Charles Munch directing the Boston Symphony in a Beethoven-Wagner program with Margaret Harshaw, soprano; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; and a chorus. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 7, at 2:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony in another all-Beethoven program, with Eugene Istomin, piano. . . . ¶ Monday and Tuesday, Aug. 8-9, at 8:30: Mozart's opera "Zaide," in an English version, and the first performance of "The Rose," an opera by Louis Mennini based on Eugene O'Neill's one-act play, presented by students of the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center, directed by Boris Goldovsky. For information on opera tickets, which are very scarce and must be procured at least a week in advance, address the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., through Sunday, Aug. 14.)

165 Church Street - New York
TACOMA, WASH.
NEWS TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 79,453 - S. 70,626
JUL 10 1955

Books And Arts

Musicians Watch Weather Closer Than Farmers In Summertime

By W. G. ROGERS
Associated Press Arts Editor

NEW YORK. AP—Now that vegetables are ready to pick in the garden, now that fruit is taking shape and color in the orchard, now that the time for harvest is drawing nearer, who watches the weather every minute with an anxious eye?

The music lover.

The big halls in the big squares in the big cities have closed their doors, cut off the lights; the caretakers are all off on vacation. But not the artists! They are busy right this minute, have been for a month, will be for another two months, taking a business's holiday at summer concerts in this country and Europe.

Many or most of our concerts are outdoors, in the park, at the Bowl, in the Stadium, at the river's edge. No farmer watches the sky with more concern, or reads weather forecasts with livelier hopes and fears, than the concert manager who may sell 10,000 tickets if it stays fair tonight, but lose his shirt if a single rain-bearing cloud blows up.

Patrons Cloud-Conscious, Too

After the managers and their performers, it's the countless patrons, like the thousands going to the two big outdoor attractions in this city, who are weather conscious right up to starting time. They don't forget about it, either, during the Beethoven and Brahms and so on, for a shower can call it all off in the middle and send them scurrying for cover.

But it's more fair than foul, and more scheduled concerts, by far, are presented than cancelled—in New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, the Berkshires, the Colorado mountains.

In this city Stadium concerts, with the Stadium Symphony orchestra conducted by Mitropoulos, Smallens, Monteux, Kurtz, among others, are held at Lewisohn Stadium, get their soloists from among the very best names: Serkin, Elman, Morini, Warfield, Peerce. The Guggenheim Memorial concerts, which besides their Central Park programs are given every week in Brooklyn's Prospect Park, feature Goldman's Band. Both series are now in their 38th seasons.

Cincinnati Zoo opera is under way, with such stars as Herva Nelli and Roberta Peters. The Philadelphia orchestra, back from Europe, has now become, for this month, the Robin Hood Dell orchestra and plays at the Dell for summertime audiences.

The open-neck, shirt-sleeved, slack-wearing audiences gathered this week for the famed Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass. Main attraction will be the Boston Symphony; and principal composer will be Beethoven.

The Newport (R. I.) festival opens tomorrow. The Marlboro (Vt.) music festival runs to Aug. 25. There are, here, there and everywhere, pop concerts, bach festivals, jazz festivals, light opera series, folk singing, barbershop quartet sings.

Aspen Festival On

The Aspen (Colo.) music festival, which like the Berkshire has its own school, is in session to Aug. 27. Conducted this year under the management of participating musicians, it has a special attraction for students from the Universities of Colorado, Denver and Wyoming: they get academic credit for attendance. Among the artists performing there are Primrose, Vronsky and Babin, and Uninsky.

A newcomer to the summer-concert field is the Empire State Music festival planned for Ellenville, N. Y., on the edge of the mountain resort area, in August. It is hoped that members of the Symphony of the Air will take part.

There is also a newcomer abroad: the first annual Festival of Athens opening Aug. 27. Dino Yannapoulos, of New York's Metropolitan, is artistic director, and among the stars will be Mitropoulos and the singers Nikolaidi, Thebom, Stevens and Steber.

The Edinburgh Festival of Music and Drama opens Aug. 21 and continues to Sept. 20. The Salzburg festival runs from July 24 to Aug. 30. The fifth Festival of Herlin will open Sept. 17.

In France several popular events are scheduled. At the moment the Prades Festival, under the direction of Pablo Casals, is under way and will last another week. The Aix-en-Provence programs start tomorrow and continue through the month.

MEMPHIS, TENN.
COMMERCIAL APPEAL
Circ. D. 197,729 - S. 248,619
JUL 17 1955

Hollywood Bowl Shows To Resume

Merrill Is To Be Guest On Howard Barlow Program Monday

ISAAC STERN, noted American violinist, will make his debut tomorrow as guest artist with the Telephone Hour. The program will be heard on WMC, The Commercial Appeal radio station, at 8 p.m.

For his Carnegie Hall concert, Mr. Stern has selected two well-known numbers. His first will be the joyful first movement of Mendelssohn's "Concerto in E Minor," for violin.

His closing number will be the "Sicilienne and Rigaudon" which Fritz Kreisler wrote some years ago in the style of the 16th century commposer, Francoeur.

The Boston Symphony, at 7:30 tomorrow night, will be conducted by Thor Johnson who will lead the group in Handel's "Concerto Grosso No. 12." Band of America, at 8:30 p.m., will feature selections from the spirited "Oklahoma!"

From Brooklyn

The famed Hollywood Bowl concerts will resume on WMC tomorrow at 9:15 p.m. The initial guest will be soprano Dorothy Kirsten.

Georgia Gibbs

Robert Merrill, leading baritone of the Metropolitan Opera, will be guest soloist when the Howard Barlow show is broadcast over WMPS at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow.

The Brooklyn-born star will feature Oscar Rasbach's beautiful "Trees" and, accompanied by the Firestone Orchestra and Chorus, he will sing "Stout-hearted Men" from Romberg's "New Moon."

From St. Louis

Pop Singers Alan Dale and Georgia Gibbs, and concert baritone Earl Wrightson will join Percy Faith and his orchestra on the Woolworth Hour, which will be heard on WREC at noon today. Miss Gibbs' recording of the teasing "Dance With Me, Henry" has been on the best-seller record lists for the past 15 weeks.

The complete third act of Richard Wagner's music drama, "Die Walkuere," will be performed by the Royal Orchestra of Sweden on WREC at 2 this afternoon.

Soprano Janet Medlin and baritone Edward Roecker will be soloists in a varied musical program with the St. Louis Municipal Opera on WREC at 5:30 p.m. today. Their program includes a duet on "Falling in Love With Love."

The only ball game slated for tomorrow is a minor league affray between Louisville and Charleston. It will be carried by WHBQ at 12:25 p.m.

TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE
Circ. D. 188,506 - S. 158,251
JUL 24 1955

New Opera Scheduled At Tanglewood

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

NEW YORK, July 23 (HTNS) — When Louis Mennini's "The Rope" is introduced by the Berkshire Music Center on Aug. 8 and 9 at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., it will be prefaced by a little known Mozart opera, "Zaide" (K. 344), composed in 1779 to a libretto by Johann Andreas Schachtner. These will probably be the first American performances of this unfinished work, which has been edited by Boris Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell for this production.

"The Rope" is based on Eugene O'Neill's one-act play of that title which was first staged by the Provincetown Players here in 1917. It is the first completed result of a $750 opera commission plan introduced by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation in 1953. For the last two summers, the composer has worked with the Center's opera department at Tanglewood, receiving its advice and co-operation through all stages of composition and preparation.

The opera department will occupy three other evenings during the Tanglewood season. Tuesday, July 26; Monday, Aug. 1 and Tuesday, Aug. 2. The schedule for these dates includes Boris Blacher's "Romeo and Juliet," Darius Milhaud's "L'Abandon d'Ariane" and excerpts from Berlioz's "The Trojans," which Mr. Goldovsky produced in Boston for the first time in America in March.

CINCINNATI, OHIO
TIMES-STAR
Circ. D. 150,489
JUL 18 1955

THOR JOHNSON, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, will be the guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Monday at 7:15 p. m. over NBC-R from the Berkshire Music Festival. Johnson has just returned from a concert tour of the Orient. The concert will feature music by Handek and Haydn. It will not be carried live by WLW-R because of a conflict with "The Lone Ranger."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-0068
Herald
CHICOPEE, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,675
JUL 28 1955

10

Berkshire Festival Moves Into Its Semi-Final Week Of Music At Tanglewood Shed

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its semi-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with the fifth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three piano sonatas performed by Rudolf Serkin, on Aug. 3 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Beethoven and Wagner provide the fare for the weekend concerts in the huge Music Shed. Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the three concerts, on Saturday evening (Aug. 6) and Sunday afternoon (Aug. 7), and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the department of orchestra and conducting of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school. The Berkshire Music Center, takes the podium on Friday evening (Aug. 5).

Mr. Bernstein, who came to Tanglewood as a student conductor in 1940 and 1941, then began his long association with the Berkshire music school in 1942 as assistant to the orchestra's late conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will conduct Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" on Friday evening as a memorial to his patron. The evening-long orchestral and choral work was similarly performed at Tanglewood under Mr. Bernstein's baton two summers ago. Soloists on this occasion will be Adele Addison, soprano, Eunice Alberts, contralto, David Lloyd, tenor, Mac Morgan, bass. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center, Miss Addison in 1947, 1948 and 1950; Miss Alberts during 1941-1945, Mr. Lloyd in 1947 and Mr. Morgan in 1953. The Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center Students of the opera and Study Group departments, trained by Hugh Ross, will also assist.

Mr. Munch's Saturday evening program will commence with a first Tanglewood performance of Beethoven's opera "Fidelio," Act II, with the Festival Chorus trained by John Krueger of the Youngstown, Ohio, Philharmonic and Chorus, a Berkshire Music Center chorus faculty member this summer. Soloists are Margaret Harshaw, of the Metropolitan Opera, soprano; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; Arthur Schoep, tenor; and from the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, students Christina Cardillo, soprano, and Malcolm Bernstein, bass. The second half of the program is devoted to excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung," with Miss Harshaw soloist in the Immoculation Scene, a selection which she did with great success at a Berkshire Festival

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680
JUL 28 1955

3 Final Events Listed For Music Center

Three events will conclude activities of the West Hartford Summer Music Center.

The first will be held Friday in the Webster Hill School auditorium at 10:45 a. m. when youngsters present their final assembly program. The public is invited.

Students and faculty will go to Tanglewood Saturday and attend the public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Charles Munch conducting.

The annual variety show will be held next Thursday night at the Webster Hill School auditorium. The public is invited.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,226
JUL 29 1955

Full Boston Symphony Opens Its Second Week-End Tonight

The second week-end of concerts by the full Boston Symphony orchestra in the 1955 Berkshire festival at Tanglewood will begin tonight in the music shed at 8.30 o'clock.

Munch to Direct

Charles Munch, music director of the symphony, will conduct a suite from Handel's "Water Music" in the arrangement by the late Sir Hamilton Harty, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor and Brahms' Symphony No. 4 in E minor.

In addition, the concert will feature the Tanglewood premiere of the latest score by Samuel Barber, the solo cantata, "Prayers of Kierkegaard." Scored for orchestra, chorus and vocal soloists, the work was given its world premiere performance by Mr. Munch and the symphony last December.

Soprano soloist will be Leontyne Price, tenor, Arthur Schoep, and mezzo-soprano, Regina Sarfaty.

Miss Price has gained international renown for her performance as Bess in Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess."

Tomorrow night's and Sunday afternoon's programs will be devoted to the music of Beethoven and Brahms, respectively. Charles Munch will conduct the orchestra tomorrow night in the "Egmont" overture, Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica") and the "Emperor" piano concerto. Rudolph Serkin is to be piano soloist in the concerto.

Sunday afternoon's concert will include Brahms' "Academic Festival" overture, Symphony No. 1 and the "Concerto for Violin in D Major," with Isaac Stern as soloist. Pierre Monteux will conduct.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
BURLINGTON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 6,584
JUL 29 1955

Music Festival Nears Final Week

LENOX, Mass.—The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood moves into its semi-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with the fifth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three piano sonatas performed by Rudolf Serkin, on Aug. 3 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Beethoven and Wagner provide the fare for the three weekend concerts in the huge Music Shed. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the three concerts, next Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon, and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the department of orchestra and conducting of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, The Berkshire Music Center, takes the podium on Friday evening,

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

JUL 28 1955

Operas Planned For Tanglewood

Three contemporary one-act operas, two of them Tanglewood premieres, by Boris Blacher, Derius Milhaud and Bohuslav Martinu, will be performed by students of Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Lenox, next Monday, at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. A portion of the evening will also be devoted to choral works by Domingo Santa Cruz, Ross Lee Finney, William Billings and others, sung by students of Department II (Chorus).

The performance is open to those who support the summer music school of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. All seats are reserved.

"Romeo and Juliet," a chamber opera in three parts, is by Boris Blacher, director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin, currently visiting the U. S. for the first time as guest composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center. The opera was given its first stage performance at the Salzburg Festival in 1950. It was first staged in the U. S. in 1953 by the Opera Workshop of the School of Music, University of Illinois, and this will be its Tanglewood premiere. It will be sung in English.

"Ariana Abandoned" (L'Abandon d'Ariane), a one-act opera by Darius Milhaud, who was guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center in 1948, has a text by Henry Hoppenot, and is given, for the first time at Tanglewood, in the English version of Ludwig Zirner, who is head of the Associate Division of the Opera Dept.

"Comedy on the Bridge," a short comic opera by Bohuslav Martinu, guest composer at Tanglewood in 1946, was produced at the Berkshire Music Center in 1951. It has a libretto by V. K. Klicpera and an English version by Walter Schmolka.

The three one-act operas are produced under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Tanglewood Opera Department.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

JUL 29 1955

Second Weekend Of Shed Concerts Begin Tonight

Tonight the second weekend of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1955 Berkshire Festival will begin in the great Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a Suite from Handel's "Water Music" in the arrangement by the late Sir Hamilton Harty, the Symphony No. 4 in D Minor by Schumann and the Symphony No. 4 in E Minor by Brahms. In addition, the concert will feature the Tanglewood premiere of the latest score by Samuel Barber, the solo cantata "Prayers of Kierkegaard." Scored for orchestra, chorus and vocal soloists, and commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, Barber's score was given its world premiere performance by Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra last December. The soprano soloist will be Leontyne Price, who also sang in the premiere; other vocal solos in tonight's performance will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano. Miss Sarfaty is a student in the Berkshire Music Center's opera department, and Mr. Schoep is assistant stage director to the opera's head, Boris Goldovsky.

Miss Price was a student in the opera department four summers ago and won wide acclaim for her performance in Richard Strauss' "Ariadne auf Naxos." Since then she has gained international renown for her performance as Bess in Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess." She made her New York recital debut last November and last January appeared as Tosca in the NBC-TV production of Puccini's dramatic opera. Her appearance tonight will be her first Tanglewood performance since the 1953 "Tanglewood on Parade" concert when she and her husband, the baritone William Warfield, appeared in a special concert presentation of "Porgy and Bess," Act II, under the direction of Leonard Bernstein.

The programs tomorrow evening and Sunday afternoon will be devoted entirely to the music of Beethoven and Brahms respectively. Tomorrow evening Charles Munch will conduct the Overture to "Egmont" and the "Eroica" Symphony, and Rudolf Serkin will be soloist in the "Emperor" Piano Concerto. Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux will conduct the "Academic Festival" Overture and First Symphony by Brahms and Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky will be the soloists in the Double Concerto in A Minor for Violin and Cello. A bonus for Festival patrons is the public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, at 10 a.m. in the Tanglewood Music Shed, when Pierre Monteux will rehearse his Saturday evening program.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

JUL 28 195

Reservations Still Available For Trip To Tanglewood Sunday

A few reservations still are open for the Inter Se club's annual summer outing to the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood on Sunday, according to an announcement by the Misses Irene Stopa and Stasia Ostrowski, reservation chairmen.

Those wishing to attend who have not yet reserved a place on the bus chartered for the occasion have been asked to do so as soon as possible with one of the chairmen.

A stop at the Marian Center, Eden Hill, Stockbridge, also is planned for the group enroute to Lenox. Arrangements for the bus, which will leave Sunday morning at 10:45 from the corner of Maple and Fountain Sts., have been made by Miss Bertha Mikuszewski.

Returning home Sunday evening, the girls plan to dine at one of the Berkshire restaurants, where reservations have been made by Miss Helena Kusek.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 103,999

JUL 31 1955

ISAAC STERN SOLOIST

Isaac Stern, noted American violinist, will be soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under direction of Charles Munch in the broadcast from the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood Monday on WBZ-NBC radio, 8.15 p. m.

169 Church Street

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 52,205

JUL 16 1955

Weekend Shed Concerts To Start at Tanglewood

Inauguration of the annual series of weekend concerts in the Music Shed will mark next week's program of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

Having completed its assignments in the Esplanade concerts in Boston and with the Boston "Pops," the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will move to Tanglewood.

The first of the "Shed" concerts will be Friday night under the direction of Charles Munch, the symphony's music director, and the weekend programs in the Music Shed will continue until the conclusion of the festival Aug. 14.

The third week of the festival concerts also will include a chamber music concert at 8:30 p. m. Wednesday, when Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin will offer a program of Beethoven violin sonatas in the Theater-Concert Hall.

The initial concert by the full Boston Symphony at 8:30 p. m. Friday will be an all-Beethoven program, which will include Overture to "Coriolan," Violin Concerto, Mr. Stern, soloist, and Symphony No. 7 in A.

Pierre Monteux will conduct the Symphony in the second Shed concert next Saturday night in a program of music by Beethoven, Sessions and Richard Strauss. Monteux, who was music director of the Symphony from 1919 to 1924, has been a regular guest on the Tanglewood podium since 1951.

The concluding concert of the weekend will be offered at 2:30 p. m. Sunday, July 24, when Mr. Munch will lead the orchestra in three Beethoven symphonies.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Citizen (e)
WINSTED, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 3,445

JUL 30 1955

BOSTON SYMPHONY GIVING SECOND WEEK OF CONCERTS

The second weekend of concerts by the full Boston Symphony orchestra in this summer's Berkshire festival will be held in the Music shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight at 8:30 o'clock and tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will conduct tonight's all-Beethoven program which will include the overture to "Egmont," the Piano Concert No. 5 in E Flat Major (the "Emperor") with Rudolf Serkin making his Tanglewood debut as soloist, and the Symphony No. 3 in E Flat, the "Eroica."

Ever since his American debut in 1935 with Arturo Roscanini conducting the Philharmonic-Symphony orchestra of New York, Mr. Serkin has been one of the most popular and distinguished artists in the United States. In recent years he has journeyed annually to the small French village of Prades to participate in festival performance with the great cellist, Pablo Casals. He is especially renowned as a Beethoven interpreter. A Berkshire neighbor in the summer, he lives on a Vermont farm.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 55,423

JUL 29 1955

Tanglewood to Present Three One-Act Operas

LENOX—Three contemporary one-act operas, two of them Tanglewood premieres, by Boris Blacher, Darius Milhaud and Bohuslav Martinu, will be performed by opera students of the Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood Monday at 8.30 p. m. in the Theater-Concert Hall. A portion of the evening also will be devoted to choral works by Domingo Santa Cruz, Ross Lee Finney, William Billings and others, sung by choral students.

"Romeo and Juliet," a chamber opera in three parts, is by Boris Blacher, director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin, who is visiting the U. S. for the first time as guest composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center. The opera was given its first stage performance at the Salzburg Festival in 1950. It was first staged in the U. S. in 1953 by the Opera Workshop of the School of Music, University of Illinois, and this will be its Tanglewood premiere. It will be sung in English.

"Ariana Abandoned" (L'Abandon d'Ariane), a one-act opera by Darious Milhaud, who was guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center in 1948 has a text by Henry Hoppenot, and is given, for the first time at Tanglewood, in the English version of Ludwig Zirner, who is head of the associate division of the Opera Department.

"Comedy on the Bridge," a short comic opera by Bohuslav Martinu, guest composer at Tanglewood in 1946, was produced at the Berkshire Music Center in 1951. It has a libretto by V. K. Klicpera and an English version by Walter Schmolka.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 130,559

AUG 3 1955

Serkin Tonight on Tanglewood Program

Tonight at 8:30 p.m., the fifth concert in this season's series of Wednesday evening chamber music programs will be given in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, as part of the 1955 Berkshire Festival. Rudolf Serkin, the eminent pianist who made his Tanglewood debut earlier this season, will play three Piano Sonatas by Beethoven: the Sonata in F Major, Opus 10, No. 2; the Sonata in C Major, Opus 53, called the "Waldstein" Sonata; and the Sonata in B Flat, Opus 106, the "Hammerklavier" Sonata.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
MIRROR
Circ. D. 901,735 - S. 1,709,854

JUL 31 1955

Keeping Pace With YOUR AUTO

by Gene Graf

Some of my friends who are Canada bound this Summer asked me the other day for a new route to the Montreal-Quebec area. They said they'd been up Route 9 along the Hudson and Lake Champlain several times and would like a different route.

I put the query to the travel counselor at Sinclair's Tour Bureau, who suggested my friends head north through western New England.

THE ROUTE outlined headed out of the metropolitan area via the Merritt Parkway as far as Norwalk, where the motorist turns north on to U. S. Route 7. This highway can be followed through New England to the Canadian border.

Route 7 in Connecticut runs through the colorful cities of Danbury, New Milford, and Canaan, site of the historic Canaan Furnace State Mounment.

Music lovers may be interested in the fact that special string quartet recitals are held each Sunday through Labor Day on the Music Mountain in Falls Village, south of Canaan.

ALSO FOR MUSIC lovers, of course, are the concerts of the annual Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood near Lenox, on Route 7. The festival runs through Aug. 14.

Everyone in the family will enjoy motoring through the scenic Berkshire Hills of western Massachusets.

Just before leaving Massachusetts, Route 7 goes through the home town of colorful Williams College, which has a fine campus.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Herald (e)
NEW BRITAIN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 26,853
JUL 28 1955

Week's Guide to Straw Hat And Nearby Music Circuit

By JUDITH V. WELD

Here we go again . . . another sweltering week and once more the question of what to focus attention on in the hopes of forgetting the heat. Luckily, the playhouses and concert sheds haven't been melting away as the temperatures climb and the shows to see this week are varied and interesting . . .

Once in an Oval Moon

A captivating and wide-eyed comedy, "The Moon Is Blue" has no purpose in life other than the amusement of an audience . . . and this it does admirably in the Oval in the Grove production which opened Tuesday for a two-week run.

The story of how Peggy O'Neill captures the hearts of a young architect and an attractive middle-aged roue with her candor and blunt questions, the play features a great deal of sophisticated conversation and little action. The Oval presentation, however, directed by Miss Betty Kimball of this city, is consistently gay, buoyant and smartly paced.

As the debonair Southern gentleman about town whose ideals change under Patty's influence, Richard Nicholson is thoroughly charming and urbane, while Suzanne Sears is brightly winning as the outspoken girl. A student at TCC, Richard White plays the part of the architect with appropriate befuddlement; and Harlan Judd of New Britain, properly forbidding as Patty's policeman dad, completes the cast. An ingenious and pleasing set has been designed by Philip Blakesly of the TCC faculty.

Greenwich Village Caper

In "Wonderful Town" the Oakdale Musical Theater has a wonderful show this week and one of its best productions of the season. The light-hearted yarn of how a cuddly blonde and her intellectual older sister come from Ohio to conquer Greenwich Village, the Portuguese navy, the New York publishing world and the night club business, it is based on the familiar "My Sister Eileen" stories.

The cast—to a member—does a fine job, with Patricia Wilkes, as a wryly humorous Ruth, pacing the show with expert comedy sense, particularly in her numbers, "A Sure Way to Lose a Man" and "Swing." Other pleasing features are the rich baritone voice of Kenneth Smith; the wholesome femininity of Eileen; a hopped-up night club owner and his avant-guard clientele; the conga-crazy foreign sailors; a chorus of adoring cops; in short . . . you guessed it . . . the whole thing is pretty swell!

Incidently, don't expect to leave the theater humming any of the tunes as the music has an ultra modern, almost atonal at times, twang to it, especially apparent in the jazz numbers. You should leave the show, however, with a happy feeling about the world in general and Oakdale's "Wonderful Town" in particular!

Caine Docks at Clinton

Although you may have read the book and seen the movie, "The Caine Mutiny Court Martial" is still an engrossing and new experience for playgoers. Conducted as a trial, the production has no action other than the testimony of witnesses and the mounting tension of a courtroom struggle. This is enough, however, to spellbind an audience, as it did Monday night at the Clinton Playhouse opening.

The question of whether Maryk was a mutineer becomes one of whether Captain Queeg was capable of military command as the trial progresses. Portraying the lawyer who plays cat and mouse with the commander's distorted mentality and hates what he has to do to win the case, Jeffrey Lynn is convincingly bitter and controlled. His soft-spoken quality, no doubt patterned after Henry Fonda who originated the role, is not without its barbed effect.

The nuances of Queeg's twisted personality are a little beyond Stephen Elliott, whose raving is much less convincingly than a pathetically wandering interpretation would have been, but other members of the cast afford excellent support. Some fine comedy is contributed by Jerry Crews as a bewildered signalman and by two "know-it-all" psychiatrists.

Norwich, Too, Ivoryton

"The Caine Mutiny Court Martial" will play at Clinton through Saturday night, running concurrently with another production of the trial being presented at the Norwich Summer Theatre. The same was put on a couple of weeks ago at Ivoryton where the well-known movie actress, Joan Blondell is starring this week in "A Palm Tree in a Rose Garden," a new drama which aspires to Broadway.

Outdoor Concerts

For concertgoers who like natural air conditioning, complete with stars overhead, there are many attractive programs within easy driving distance. Ten leading dancers from the Royal Danish Ballet will perform with the Connecticut "Pops" tomorrow evening at 8:30 on the Fairfield University grounds; and the New Haven Symphony will present its fourth "Pops" concert Tuesday night at 8:15 in the Yale Bowl. An all-Gershwin program will be featured with Oscar Levant, pianist, playing "Rhapsody in Blue" and the Concerto in F.

The soft green lawns of Tanglewood make a pleasant setting in which to listen to the music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, either tomorrow or Saturday evening or on Sunday afternoon. The Saturday concert will be an all-Beethoven program with Rudolf Serkin as piano soloist, while an all-Brahms concert will be played Sunday. At Jacob's Pillow, the program this weekend will include classic ballet, modern dance works and Spanish selections.

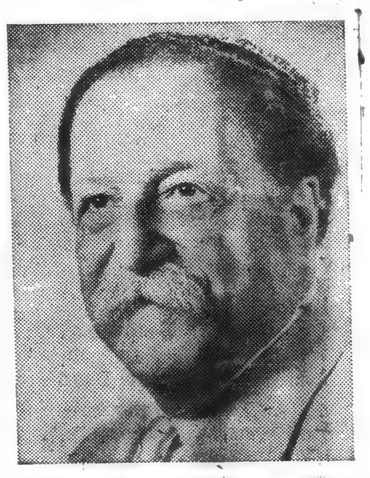
New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Citizen (e)
WINSTED, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 3,445
JUL 26 1955

FOURTH CONCERT OF CHAMBER MUSIC AT TANGLEWOOD

Three weeks still remain in the 1955 Berkshire festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., by the Boston Symphony orchestra. Tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the intimate theater-concert hall the fourth concert in this season's chamber music series will be given by the New Music string quartet. The program will be made up of three string quartets by Beethoven, Quartet in G Major, Opus 18, No. 2; Quartet in E Flat, Opus 127, and Quartet in A Minor, Opus 132.

The New Music string quartet is the quartet-in-residence of the International Aspen festival in Colorado. Its members are Broadus Earle and Matthew Raimondi, violins; Walter Trampler, viola, and David Soyer, 'cello. Mr. Earle, a native of Chicago, joined his first string quartet at the age of 15 and chamber music has remained his absorbing interest ever since. He is a graduate of the Julliard School of Music and Columbia university. The violinist, Walter Trampler, is a former member of the Boston Symphony orchestra and the famed Strub quartet which made annual concert tours of the European continent. Mr. Soyer, the 'cellist, was born in Philadelphia and had given several New York recitals. He has also made several solo appearances with the Philadelphia orchestra.

MILLERTON, N. Y.
NEWS-REPUBLICAN
Circ. W. 3,617
JUL 14 1955



PIERRE MONTEUX is guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at three Berkshire Festival concerts during the summer of 1955; in the Music Shed at Tanglewood.

On Sat. July 23 at 8:30 p.m. Mr. Monteux conducts an orchestral program of works by Bach-Respighi, Beethoven, Sessions, Richard Strauss.

On Sun. July 31 at 2:30 p.m. Mr. Monteux leads an all-Brahms program, with Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists.

On Sat. Aug. 13 at 8:30 p.m. Mr. Monteux conducts a program of Wagner, Brahms, Debussy and Richard Strauss.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326
JUL 30 1955

Beethoven, Brahms' Works to Be Played At Music Festival

The second week-end of concerts by full Boston Symphony orchestra in this summer's Berkshire Music festival will be held in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight at 8:30 and tomorrow afternoon at 2:30.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct tonight's all-Beethoven porgram which will include the Overture to "Egmont," the Piano Concerto No. 5 in E Flat Major (the "Emperor") with Rudolph Serkin making his Tanglewood debut as soloist, and the Symphony No. 3 in E Flat, the "Eroica."

Ever since his American debut in 1935 with Arturo Toscanini conducting the Philharmonic Symphony orchestra of New York, Mr. Serkin has been one of the most popular and distinguished artists in the United States. In recent years he has journeyed annually to the small French village of Prades to participate in festival performances with the great cellist, Pablo Casals. He is especially renowned as a Beethoven interpreter. A Berkshire neighbor in the summer, he lives on a Vermont farm.

Tomorrow afternoon, Pierre Monteux will conduct an all-Brahms concert with Isaac Stern as soloist in the Violin Concerto in D Major, Opus 77. In addition, the program will include the "Academic Festival" Overture and the Symphony No. 1 in C Minor. This will be Mr. Stern's final appearance of the season at Tanglewood.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 509,171 - S. 1,117,392
JUL 27 1955

PIATIGORSKY UNABLE TO APPEAR AT LENOX

Three programs of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., have been revised because 'cellist Gregor Piatigorsky, the scheduled soloist, is unable to appear.

The programs, revised by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are those of Sunday, Wednesday, Aug. 10, and Friday, Aug. 12.

Mr. Piatigorsky wired Mr. Munch yesterday from his home in California that because of a shoulder ailment he would be unable to participate in this year's Berkshire Festival.

At Sunday afternoon's concert, Isaac Stern will instead be the soloist, playing the Brahms Concerto. The scheduled solo recital by Mr. Piatigorsky on Aug. 10 will be replaced by an all-Beethoven chamber music program. The Friday concert, which was to have offered Mr. Piatigorsky as soloist in Bloch's "Schelomo," will replace that work with Berlioz' "Symphonie Fantastique."

SAGINAW, MICH.
NEWS
Circ. D. 47,561 - S. 47,422
JUL 16 1955

Guest Conductor

The American conductor Thor Johnson will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra in the "Berkshire Festival" broadcast at 8:15 p.m. Monday, July 18, on NBC Radio. Johnson has just returned from a highly successful concert tour of the Orient as one of the conductors of the Symphony of the Air.

BRONXVILLE, N. Y.
Review Press & Reporter
Circ. W. 3,745
JUL 28 1955

Village Vagabonds To Visit Tanglewood

Village Vagabonds are planning a group outing to Tanglewood Music Festival this week-end, as part of their Summer activities program. They will leave July 30 for the Massachusetts music center. Last week the group attended the ballet program at Lewisohn Stadium in New York City.

Miss Peggy Swikart, 49 East 63rd Street, was hostess at a buffet supper for the Vagabonds before the concert. Featured performers at the Stadium were members of the Danish Ballet.

Whiting, secretary.

More Than 15,000 Cheer Munch, Serkin In Festival Event

What a beautiful night; tall pines silhouetted against the sky by a clearly shining moon all around made a perfect setting for another evening of Beethoven at Tanglewood.

The star of the program was pianist, Rudolph Serkin, but the high point of the evening came with Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony, No. 3 in E-flat major. Charles Munch ably directed the members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra through the change of pace and dynamics in his eminently satisfying way. This symphony is an exultant one, assertive and even jubilant. In the second movement, marked Marcia Funebre, there is no feeling of doleful sorrow usually associated with death, only a new life force, almost a phoenix rising from the ashes.

Mr. Serkin who played in the Emperor Concerto, for piano and orchestra, No. 5 in E-flat major, did not seem at his best last night. Although he is a masterful artist, a decisive and forceful pianist, there was some discrepancy between what he wanted and what Mr. Munch seemed to be trying to instruct the orchestra to do. There was also disagreement among the audience as to exactly where the fault lay. The effort of all concerned was quite exciting though especially when the brasses lent their particular brand of excitement to the proceedings. Mr. Serkin's playing was both brilliant and subtly subdued as the music demanded, revealing a thoughtful musicianship. The concerto itself is one of differing moods, from the dreamy Adagio to the impetuous third movement with the tantalizing way you have to wait for the Allegro theme. The "Egmont" Overture which opened the program was reportedly very well done. We much regret that we arrived too late to hear anything but the last few phrases.

In 1951 at the first concert that Charles Munch conducted there was an all high record crowd of 15,800. Last night's attendance of 15,500 was the largest since then. The press bureau said it had not anticipated such throngs and the traffic problem was impressive.—F. M. R.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

JUL 28 1955

Operatic Music At Tanglewood

Three contemporary one-act operas, two of them Tanglewood premieres, by Boris Blacher, Darius Milhaud and Bohuslav Martinu, will be performed by students of Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Mon. Aug. 1, at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. A portion of the evening will also be devoted to choral works by Domingo Santa Cruz, Lee [illegible] William Billings and others, by students of Department [illegible] (chorus).

The performance is open to those who support the summer music school of the Boston Symphony orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. All seats are reserved.

"Romeo and Juliet", a chamber opera in three parts, is by Boris Blacher, director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin, currently visiting the U. S. for the first time as guest composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center.

"Ariana Abandoned" (L'Abandon d'Ariane), a one-act opera by Darius Milhaud, who was guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center in 1948, has a text by Henry Hoppenot, and is given, for the first time at Tanglewood, in the English version of Ludwig Zirner, who is head of the Associate Division of the Opera Dept.

"Comedy on the Bridge", a short comic opera by Bohuslav Martinu, guest composer at Tanglewood in 1946, was produced at the Berkshire Music Center in 1951. It has a libretto by V. K. Kliopera and an English version by Walter Schmolka.

The three one-act operas are produced under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Tanglewood Opera Department.

On Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 8 and 9, the Opera department of the Berkshire Music Center will give the world premiere of a one-act opera, "The Rope", by Louis Mennini, of the faculty of the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N. Y. This is the first opera to be commissioned at Tanglewood under the Koussevitzky Music Foundation plan to develop young composers, which was initiated in 1953. "The Rope" is based on Eugene O'Neill's one-act play of the same name.

On the same program will be what, so far as is known, is the first American production of "Zaide" (K.344), an unfinished two-act opera by Mozart, written at Salzburg in 1779 to a libretto by Johann Andreas Schachtner. The Tanglewood version of the opera has been prepared in English by Sarah Caldwell.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 230,930

JUL 31 1955

RUDOLF SERKIN PLAYS SONATAS AT TANGLEWOOD

Pianist Acclaimed for Performance of Beethoven Works

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 3—Rudolf Serkin, pianist who won an ovation following his performance of Beethoven's Fifth Concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, tonight gave a recital in the theater concert hall before a discriminating and appreciative audience of 2456. His program consisted of three Beethoven sonats the "Sonata in F Major No. 2, Op. 10", "Sonata No. 21 in C Major, Op. 53," known as the "Waldstein," and "Sonata No. 30 in E Major, Op. 109," known as the "Hammert-Klavier." No finer view of the flowering of Beethoven's art seems possible.

Works Reflect Development

The piano sonatas are the finest reflection of Beethoven's development. Beethoven's first published music was the set of three sonatas written when he was 12 years old, and published in 1783 without opus number.

Between 1796 and 1802 Beethoven wrote the bulk of his piano sonatas. In the piano sonatas one hears the virtuoso speak, exulting in pianistic difficulties.

In Three Movements

Tonight, we had a little of everything. As Mr. Serkin has long been one of the foremost interpreters of the music of Beethoven, what we heard was definitive.

There was first the delightful "Sonata in F Major, No. 2, Op. 10," one of the early three-movement sonatas, later to be practically eliminated by the four-movement plan. The pianist communicated the essentially lyric mood of the work and brought clarity and the gayest of tone to the short finale.

In the "Sonata No. 21 in C Major, Op. 53" there is violent tumult in two movements, but the slow movement relieves the tension. Mr. Serkin provided an exciting performance, one rich in contrast and mood, ranging from the vehemence of the opening movement, through the enchantment of the slow movement, to the joyous abandonment of the final rondo.

Difficult to Perform

If the "Hammert-Klavier" sonata is heard less often than some of the others, the reason seems obvious. It demands so much physically and intellectually that few pianists undertake it. Serkin has had a tremendous success with this sonata and the success continued tonight. He had the power, discipline and intelligence to provide an all-embracing performance of this demanding work. The final variations were set forth in wonderful manner, each admirable in conception.

One could feel the enthusiasm mount as the recital continued and there were five recalls after the first two sonatas. One wondered just how Mr. Serkin got through the evening. It was hot in the auditorium and what it must have been on stage baffled imagination. Mr. Serkin does not spare himself. That is plain to see. His two appearances here this season have added lustre to the festival and tremendous acclaim for himself.

Music Review

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, July 29 — When the Boston Symphony Orchestra announced a Beethoven festival for this summer, the management probably never imagined the tremendous drawing power of the composer. Tonight the audience broke a five-year record in attendance; there were over 15,500 listeners.

The traffic jam must be experienced to be believed. Cars bringing people to the concert were jammed two and a half miles in each direction from the Tanglewood grounds.

Listeners were arriving and even buying tickets well past the intermission and even until the end of the first movement of the "Eroica."

Every parking space was taken, and the audience on the lawn reached as far back from the music shed as the Administration House.

But it was a beautiful evening for music. The air was cool and the moon shone with surprising brightness. The vigorous sounds of a Beethoven Symphony added the touch to make it a memorable one.

Mr. Munch opened the concert with the overture to "Egmont" and followed this with a performance of the "Emperor" concerto with Rudolph Serkin as soloist.

As to how these were played, I cannot report first hand. Caught in the worse traffic jam I have ever been in at that time, I was inching my way down from Lenox.

But the "Eroica" received an animated performance from conductor and orchestra. Mr. Munch, obviously enjoying the music he was leading to the fullest, sang energetically along with the orchestra.

It was not the kind of Beethoven which would go particularly well in Symphony Hall, since the conductor was obviously adjusting his reading to the vast reaches of the shed and the huge crowd of intent listeners on the lawn. But it was the kind of "Eroica" which sent the audience home a bit more uplifted for having exprienced it.

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS., Concerts Through Aug. 14

Berkshire Festival
BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
A Season of BEETHOVEN
Tonight (Theater) at 8:30—RUDOLF SERKIN—Beethoven: Piano Sonatas
Shed Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra
Fri., Aug. 5 at 8:30—BEETHOVEN—Missa Solemnis (BERNSTEIN)
Sat., Aug. 6, at 8:30—BEETHOVEN—WAGNER (MUNCH)
Soloist: Margaret Harshaw, Soprano
Sun., Aug. 7, at 2:30—BEETHOVEN PROGRAM (MUNCH)
Tickets, Wed., $2, $3; Shed—$2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Adm. $2)
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—Thurs. Aug. 11
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras
Conductors, Leonard Bernstein, Arthur Fiedler
Lincoln Impersonation by CLAUDE RAINS
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records
For programs and ticket information apply:
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD; LENOX, MASS. PHONE LENOX 000

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 103,999

JUL 31 1955

Tanglewood to Conduct Annual Benefit Aug. 11

Special to The Telegram

LENOX—Tanglewood will be "On Parade" Thursday, August 11, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, which attracted 10,050 persons last year in afternoon and evening festivities here in aid of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer school of music, now in its 13th session in conjunction with the six-week Berkshire Festival. The day activities, from 6 to 11 p. m., include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, an evening concert, drawing on the lawn. Fiedler, who has been conducting the Art Commission Pop dancing on the lawn.

The Boston "Pops" Orchestra, with Arthur Fiedler, its celebrated conductor for 26 years, will perform a typical "Pops" program, as it did in 1954 when it made its first appearance in Tanglewood's 6000-seat Music Shed, helping to shatter all attendance records for "Tanglewood On Parade." Concerts in San Francisco's Civic Auditorium, will fly to conduct the Miami Beach Pops Concerts in Florida on Aug. 7, and then to the Berkshires for "Tanglewood on Parade."

The first half of the concert program in the Shed will be given at 8.15 p. m. by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's orchestra and conducting departments, and himself a student at the music school in 1940, the first year of its foundposer who is assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center (on leave of absence in 1955.) It was first performed by the Boston Symphony on April 9, 1943.

Bernstein, noted equally as composer, conductor and concert pianist, will be soloist with the Boston "Pops" in George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." Fiedler's program also will include the 'Caprice Espagnole' of Rimsky-Korsakov and the suite of Johann Strauss dances from the ballet "Graduation Ball" as arranged by Mittal Dorati. A number of encores in typical light popular "Pops" vein will follow.

ing. Bernstein will conduct the first performance anywhere of a suite he has arranged from the music he composed for the film, "On the Waterfront," which won the 1955 Academy Award and additional Oscar for its star, Marlon Brando, and its director, Elia Kazan.

Also on this portion of the program will be "A Lincoln Portrait" by Aaron Copland, the distinguished American com-

TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE
Circ. D. 188,506 - S. 158,251
JUL 17 1955

Site Of Music Festival Concerts

LENOX, Mass., July 16—Above is the Music Shed at Tanglewood in the Berkshires, where the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Muench, with choruses and prominent soloists, annually presents one of America's most celebrated music festivals. Weekend concerts are given on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from mid-July to mid-August. The festival includes many other musical activities.

ATHENS, N. Y.
HERALD
Circ. W. 315
JUL 14 1955

Berkshire Festival Begins Second Week Of Concerts At Tanglewood

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood in Lenox, comprises an evening of Beethoven trios by the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano) on Wednesday (July 13); and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 15 and 16) and Sunday afternoon (July 17).

The Friday evening program marks the return to the Tanglewood podium, after a year's leave of absence, of noted young American composer - conductor - pianist, Leonard Bernstein, who also heads Department I (orchestra and conducting) of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. Mr. Bernstein has chosen an all-Mozart program, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano who teamed with Mr. Bernstein for a memorable Festival concert two summers ago, as soloist, the program designed as a preview of the widespread observance of Mozart's bicentennial which will commence generally with the fall music season. Miss Tourel will sing three arias, two from "Idomeneo", and Mr. Bernstein will double as soloist in the Piano Concerto in G major.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct both the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts. The July 16 program is 18th century Italian music of Vivaldi and Boccherini, highlights of which are the Boccherini Concerto for Cello, with Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony, as soloist; and Vivaldi's Gloria, which will be conducted by Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, assisted by the Festival chorus of Mr. Ross's students and among the soloists Saramae Endich and Sadie Ruth McCollum, both of New York city. Miss Endich is a Tanglewood opera department student this summer, Miss McCollum is a chorus leader student. Mr. Munch's Sunday afternoon program, all French orchestral music, comprises selections from Rameau, Ravel, Faure, Milhaud and Honneger.

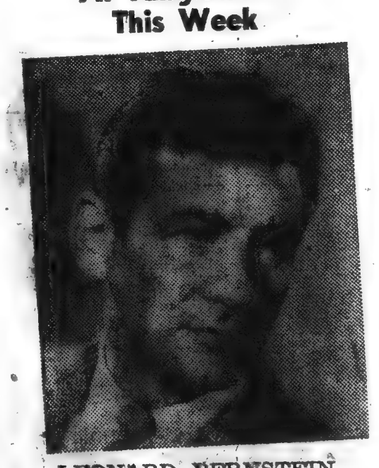
During this week, first performances at Tanglewood will be given of Mozart's Overture to "Don Giovanni" (July 15); Boccherini: Concerto for Cello(July 16); Faure: Pavane (July 17); Milhaud: Serenade (July 17); and Honneger: Symphony No. 4 (July 17).

All four of next week's Berkshire Festival concerts are given in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious lawns, are placed on sale the day of performance, and in the event of rain the weekend concerts will be moved to the capacious Music Shed.

During the coming week all five departments of the Berkshire Music Center, now in its 18th session at Tanglewood, will be in full operation. Friends of the Music School who make a voluntary contribution to its support are invited to the following student performances: Sunday morning chamber music by Department I students (10 a. m., July 10 and 17, Chamber Music Hall); Sunday evening composers' forum by Department III students (8:30 p. m., July 17, Chamber Music Hall); forums by staff members, Berkshire Music Center, moderated by Ralph Berkowitz, Dean (8:30 p. m., Sedgwick Hall, Lenox, July 11 and 18); symphony concert by the student orchestra of Department I (8:30 p. m. July 14, Music Shed.)

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood boxoffice for all Festival concerts, and reservations may be made by telephone. Programs and a calendar of the more than 25 events at the Berkshire Music Center, with information on how to join the Friends Society, will be mailed on request.

At Tanglewood This Week



LEONARD BERNSTEIN

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD JOURNAL
Circ. D. 129,251
JUL 17 1955

14

Music

Glenn and List to Play In S.U. Women's Hall

By E. V. W.

The second concert of Syracuse University Summer Session Series is announced for tomorrow night at 8:15 o'clock in Crouse auditorium when Prof. George Mulfinger of the piano faculty will play Schumann's Symphonic Etudes. In the program also will be Prof. Mulfinger's own "Poeme" and "Scherzo" and compositions by Bela Bartok and Khachaturian, Rameau, Lully, Scarlatti, also by Brahms, a Ballade, two Intermezzi and a Rhapsody and a Theme and Variations by Mozart.

Pianist List, Violinist Glenn

Violinist Carroll Glenn and Pianist Eugene List will give a concert in the Women's Building next Thursday night and, on the following day, will give a Lecture Forum. Their numbers will be the Haydn Double Concerto and the Richard Strauss Sonata for Violin and Piano. Mr. List will play the Chopin Sonata in B Flat Minor Opus 35 ("Funeral") and a group of shorter pieces: Virgil Thomson's "Ragtime Bass"; Lecuona's "La Comparsa" and Ravel's "Toccata."

Both artists have appeared here in solo and in joint recitals. In private life, Carroll Glenn is Mrs. List. She is the only winner of all four major awards offered in open competition in the United States — the Naumberg, Town Hall, Schubert and Federated Music Clubs. Mr. and Mrs. List have a young daughter. Their summer home is in Vermont. List, winner of the Philadelphia Orchestra competition when he was in his early teens, studied with the late Olga Samaroff Stokowski. He served in the Armed Forces during World War II and while in Europe played for the then President Truman.

This date in music: 1870, born, in Hungary, Eduard Remenyi, violinist, who introduced Hungarian folk music to Brahms.

The Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra, Walter Hendl, conductor, will present concerts this afternoon and Tuesday night in the amphitheater in Chautauqua. Pianist Richard Cass will be soloist at today's concert, playing the Prokofieff Third Concerto with Orchestra. Other numbers will be the Hoh "Fugal" Overture and the Fourth Symphony of Beethoven. The July 19 concert will be an all-Tschaikowsky program and will feature Jacob Lateiner, pianist. The Concerto No. 1 for Piano and Orchestra and the Fifth Symphony will be performed.

This marks the final weekend of chamber music concerts in "Tanglewood" summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in near Lenox, Mass. This afternoon's all-French concert will be directed by Charles Munch, conductor of the Symphony and director of the Berkshire Music Center. The program comprises a Suite from the opera, "Dardanus" by Rameau; Ravel's Orchestral Suite, "Le Tombeau de Couperin"; a "Pavane" by Garbriel Faure; Darius Milhaud's Suite for Small Orchestra(also known as his Third Symphony) and the Fourth Symphony by Arthur Honneger. The Faure, Milhaud and Honneger works will be performed for the first time in Tanglewood.

Last night's concert featured Italian works, including those by Vivaldi, famed 18th century composer; the Berkshire Festival Chorus singing, with soloists. Commencing next weekend, the nights of July 22-23 and the afternoon of July 24, the 104-piece Boston Symphony will assemble to inaugurate the season's concerts in the 6,000 seat Music Shed. On Friday night, Conductor Munch will direct an all-Beethoven program with Isaac Stern, violin soloist.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TELEGRAPH
Circ. D. 70,130
JUL 28 1955

Duke Drops 'Alter Ego'

Composer Will Continue To Write Serious Stuff, But Not as 'Dukelsky'

(By United Press)

"I'm through being a two-headed monster," said composer Vernon Duke.

The name Vernon Duke has been affixed to such popular songs as "April in Paris," "Autumn in New York," "Taking a Chance on Love," "I Can't Get Started with You," "Cabin in the Sky" and to the scores of a couple of dozen movies and a dozen stage works.

His other self, however, functioning under his given name, Vladimir Dukelsky, has been responsible for six ballets and over 20 serious compositions, including his first and second symphonies which have been played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the London Philharmonic and the Warsaw Philharmonic. His third symphony will receive its American premiere at the Tanglewood Music Festival July 31 under the baton of Walter Hendl.

Approach to Composition

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 509,171 - S. 1,117,392
JUL 26 1955

BERNSTEIN TO DO SERIES

He Will Lead Six Concerts by Symphony of the Air

Leonard Bernstein will lead the Symphony of the Air in six subscription concerts at Carnegie Hall during the coming season.

The series opens Nov. 9, with other concerts scheduled for Dec. 13, Jan. 6, Feb. 3, March 7 and April 18.

Mr. Bernstein thus becomes the first full-season conductor of the Symphony of the Air since it ended its connection with the National Broadcasting Company in April, 1954. Since that time, the orchestra has had a number of guest conductors, including Mr. Bernstein.

It is expected that Mr. Bernstein's series with the Symphony of the Air will be his only conducting appearances in New York next season. The composer-conductor is at work on a composition that was commissioned for the seventy-fifth anniversary celebration of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He is also preparing a musical based on Voltaire's "Candide."

TAMPA, FLA.
TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 118,657 - S. 132,487
JUL 10 1955

Boston Symphony At Berkshire Festival

By PHIL BARNEY
Tribune Staff Writer

Concerts of the annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will be broadcast, beginning tomorrow night (WFLA—8:15 o'clock). The programs will feature the great Boston Symphony Orchestra, with distinguished vocal and instrumental soloists. Charles Munch is the regular conductor. Programs, conductors and soloists are yet to be announced.

Samuel Sorin, pianist, will be the first of four past winners of Young Artist Awards of the National Federation of Music Clubs to be heard on The Music Room, this morning (WDAE—9:15 o'Clock). He will perform works of Scarlatti, Granados and Prokofieff.

Frances Yeend, soprano of the New York City Opera, who has appeared here with the Tampa Philharmonic, will be one of the guests on What's New in Music this afternoon (WDAE—1 o'clock). Others are Kay Armen, popular vocalist, and The Crew Cuts, male singing group, with orchestra as usual conducted by Percy Faith.

* * *

THE 1955 Stockholm Festival in Sweden will provide material for the broadcast of World Music Festivals today (WDAE — 2:30 o'clock). Featured will be most of the second act of Wagner's Die Walkuere, with Birgit Nilsson, great new dramatic soprano; Set Svanholm, Wagnerian tenor of the Metropolitan; Sigurd Bjorling, Swedish bass-baritone; Bette Bjorling, mezzo, and Aase-Nordmo-Lovberg, Norwegian soprano.

"Where do we stand on civil defense?" is the question to be discussed on America's Town Meeting of the Air tonight WSUN—8 o'clock). Guests are Val Peterson, Civil Defense Administrator; Mayor August Walz of Wilmington, Del., and Rep. Daniel Flood (D., Penn.)

* * *

EACH OF THE EIGHT members of the program's regular mixed chorus will be featured in solos and duets on the Voice of Firestone tomorrow night (WSUN—8:30 o'clock) in a program made up of numbers most often requested in letters from listners.

Singers are Margaret Broderson, contralto; Emil Markow, bass-baritone; Elizabeth Winslow, soprano; Russell Hammar, tenor; Frances Wyatt, lyric soprano; Bette Terrell, soprano; William Toole, tenor, and Loren Welch.

The selections are Friml's Only a Rose, Wagner's Evening Star, Jewel Song from Gounod's Faust, Romberg's Will You Remember, Snow White medley by Frank Churchill, Elgar's Pomp and Circumstance and Suppe's Beautiful Galatea Overture.

* * *

LUBEN VICHEY, celebrated basso profundo of the Metropolitan from Bulgaria, will make his radio debut as soloist on the Telephone Hour tomorrow night (WFLA—9 o'clock), singing famous arias from Mozart's The Magic Flute, Gounod's Faust and Verdi's Simon Boccanegra. Vichey last week broke into business news by purchasing National Concert and Artists Corporation and Civic Concert Service, Inc., from O. O. Bottorff and Marks Levine. CCS, formed in 1921, is the oldest concert service business in America, and NCAC, from 1941, is one of the world's leading managements, operating in every field of entertainment.

On Paul Lavalle's program for Band of America tomorrow night (WFLA—9:30 o'clock) are the ballet music from Verdi's Aida, marches by Fillmore, Ventre and Sousa and other numbers.

Barbara Young's Forum, eath morning on WSUN, is heard now at an earlier period, 10:45 o'clock. This week she continues her series of interviews with members of the Pinellas County Industrial Council.

CINCINNATI, OHIO
ENQUIRER
Circ. D. 200,412 - S. 282,550
JUL 12 1955

15

Johnson Conducts BSO In Berkshire Festival

LENOX, MASS., July 10 (Special)—The Second Chamber Orchestra concert in the 1955 Berkshire Festival was given yesterday by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Thor Johnson, guest conductor, in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., at 8:30 p. m.

JOHNSON

Mr. Johnson, who is music director of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, was the very first student accepted for study at the Berkshire Music Center and he attended the sessions of 1940 and 1941 as a conducting pupil of the late Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the Berkshire Music Center. During the war he spent four years in the Army Signal Corps and during this period, with the Army's permission, he filled his first big guest engagements with the Philadelphia Orchestra, the Chicago Symphony, the New York Philharmonic and the Boston "Pops." In addition to his duties with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, where he has been since the autumn of 1947, he is head of California's annual Ojai Music Festival, which he organized; director of the Moravian Early American Music Festival in Bethlehem, Pa., and the Peninsula Festival at Ephraim, Wis., and a regular conductor at the May Festival in Ann Arbor, Mich., by the Philadelphia Orchestra.

He was also a guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the 1948-49 season. He has just returned from a tour of the Far East as coconductor of the Symphony of the Air, the former NBC Symphony Orchestra.

At the concert Mr. Johnson conducted Handel's Concerto Grosso No. 12 in B Minor; the Sinfonia Concertante in B Flat with Oboe, Bassoon, Violin and Cello by Haydn; Hindemith's Concerto for Viola and Orchestra, "Der Schwanendreher," with Joseph de Pasquale as soloist, and Haydn's Symphony No. 98 in B Flat. Both the Hindemith Concerto and the Haydn Symphony received their first Tanglewood performances.

* * *

AGAIN in 1955, the Berkshire Festival will consist of 24 concerts, with the first of six Wednesday concerts of Beethoven's chamber music by such noted aggregations as the Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, the New Music String Quartet, and recitals by Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, Rudolf Serkin and Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz. The two weeks preceding the appearance of the full orchestra in the Music Shed will be devoted to what were originally (and still are known as) the "Bach-Mozart" concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Given Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afernoons in the Theater Concert Hall, commencing Friday, July 8, the six concerts will also present works of Stravinsky, Handel, Hindemith, Vivaldi, Boccherini, Haydn, Ravel, Rameau, Milhaud, Honegger, Faure.

The concert on the afternoon of July 10 had the assistance of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists (Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm), in the presentation of Bach's Mass in B Minor.

* * *

JULY 15 will welcome Leonard Bernstein back to Tanglewood, after a year's sabbatical, in an all-Mozart program; the young conductor will also be soloist in the Concerto in G Major, and Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will be heard in three arias. Three first desk members of the orchestra will appear as soloists in this series: Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Joseph de Pasquale, viola, and Samuel Mayes, 'cello. Hugh Ross, director of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, will conduct the orchestra and chorus in a performance of Vivaldi's "Gloria."

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH, with the assistance of Pierre Monteux (three concerts), and Leonard Bernstein (one), will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 12 Music Shed concerts, also on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, commencing Friday, July 22, and concluding Sunday, August 14. Soloists include Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price, Rudolf Serkin, Gregor Piatigorsky, Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd, Eugene Istomin, Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, Catherine Akos, Mac Morgan and Donald Gramm.

* * *

THE FESTIVAL concerts for 1955, as planned by Mr. Munch, will feature the music of Beethoven, including all nine symphonies, "Fidelio" (Act II in concert performance, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures, the "Missa Solemnis" (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, late music director of the orchestra and director of the Berkshire Music Center). A representative range of Beethoven's chamber music including string quartets, trios and violin, piano and cello sonatas will be heard on the Wednesday evening programs.

Dividends for Festival patrons are four Saturday morning rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, at admission of $1, for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,252 - S. 982,681
JUL 23 1955

Munch Opens Beethoven Cycle

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 23.—Choosing Beethoven's music for this year's Berkshire Festival because "it expresses everything that a human being can feel," Charles Munch opened the Beethoven cycle last night with the overture to "Coriolanus," the violin concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist, and the Seventh Symphony.

Through the emotional content of this program may not have fully complied with this reason, it ranged widely through the happiness, the suffering, and the feeing of exultation common to human being. And Munch approached it all with an intensity, vitality, and ennobling quality altogether human.

The high point of the concert came in the concerto where conductor and soloist achieved a singularly communicative mood.

Stern appeared especially attuned to the inherent beauty of the first movement's second theme and the whole of the slow movement, while Munch contributed an 'accompaniment" that was sheer magic in texture of sound and subtlety of phrasing. It was a beautifully proportioned interpretation with just the right lilt to the finale.

The drama of "Coriolanus" unfolded convincingly and set the keynote of the human element that Munch stresses. He himself appeared quite human in the performance of the symphony.

Given to contrasts, he found several opportunities to make them, notably slowing down the second movement and then vitalizing the third almost to excess.

He indulged himself in the allegretto as though he were momentarily subject to a strongly personal feeling and again in the finale which he turned into a dramatic orgy as he drove the orchestra into almost a Bacchanalian frency. That swept the audience into a round of cheers quite irrepressible.

That Beethoven will be vitally treated was quite apparent from this concert.

Marietta, Ohio
Daily Times
July 9, 1955

Musicians Watch Weather

By W. G. ROGERS
Associated Press Arts Editor

New York (AP)— Now that vegetables are ready to pick in the garden, now that fruit is taking shape and color in the orchard, now that the time for harvest is drawing nearer, who watches the weather every minute with an anxious eye?

The music lover.

The big halls in the big squares in the big cities have closed their doors, cut off the lights, the caretakers are all off on vacation. But not the artists! They are busy right this minute, have been for a month, will be for another two months, taking a busman's holiday at summer concerts in this country and Europe.

Many or most of our concerts are outdoors, in the park, at the Bowl, in the Stadium, at the river's edge. No farmer watches the sky with more concern, or reads weather forecasts with livelier hopes and fears, than the concert-manager who may sell 10,000 tickets if it stays fair tonight, but lose his shirt if a single rain-bearing cloud blows up.

After the managers and their performers, it's the countless patrons, like the thousands going to the two big outdoor attractions in this city, who are weather conscious right up to starting time. They don't forget about it, either, during the Beethoven and Brahms and so on, for a shower can call it all off in the middle and send them scurrying for cover.

But it's more fair than foul, and more scheduled concerts, by far, are presented than canceled—in New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, the Berkshires, the Colorado mountains.

In this city Stadium concerts, with the Stadium Symphony Orchestra conducted by Mitropoulos, Smallens, Monteux, Kurtz, among others, are held at Lewisohn Stadium, get their soloists from among the very best names: Serkin, Elman, Morini, Warfield, Peerce. The Guggenheim Memorial concerts, which besides their Central Park programs are given every week in Brooklyn's Prospect Park, feature Goldman's Band. Both series are now in their 38th seasons.

Cincinnati Zoo opera is under way, with such stars as Herva Nelli and Roberta Peters. The Philadelphia Orchestra, back from Europe, has now become, for this month, the Robin Hood Dell orchestra and plays at the Dell for summertime audiences.

The open-neck, shirt-sleeved, slack-wearing audiences gathered this week for the famed Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass. Main attraction will be the Boston Symphony; and principal composer will be Beethoven.

The Newport (R. I.) festival opens tomorrow. The Marlboro (Vt.) music festival runs to Aug. 25. There are, here, there and everywhere, pop concerts, Bach festivals, jazz festivals, light opera series, folk singing, barbershop quartet sings.

The Aspen (Colo.) music festival, which like the Berkshire has its own school, is in session to Aug. 27. Conducted this year under the management of participating musicians, it has a special attraction for students from the universities of Colorado, Denver and Wyoming: They get academic credit for attendance. Among the artists performing there are Primrose, Vronsky and Babin, and Uninsky.

A newcomer to the summer-concert field is the Empire State Music Festival planned for Ellenville, N. Y., on the edge of the mountain resort area, in August. It is hoped that members of the Symphony of the Air will take part.

There is also a newcomer abroad: the first annual Festival of Athens opening Aug. 27. Dino Yannapoulos of New York's Metropolitan is artistic director, and among the stars will be Mitropoulos and the singers Nikolaidi, Thebom, Stevens and Steber.

The Edinburgh Festival of Music and Drama opens Aug. 21 and continues to Sept. 20. The Salzburg festival runs from July 24 to Aug. 30. The fifth Festival of Herlin will open Sept. 17.

In France several popular events are scheduled. At the moment the Prades Festival, under the direction of Pablo Casals, is under way and will last another week. The Aix-en-Provence programs start tomorrow and continue through the month.

8/4

World Premiere Next Week for Opera, 'The Rope'

Lenox, Aug. 3—"The Rope," an opera in one act by Louis Mennini, commissioned for production by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, will have its world premiere by students of Boris Goldovsky's opera department in the Theater-Concert Hall at 8.30 next Monday and Tuesday evenings. On the same program will be "Zaide" (K. 344), an unfinished two-act opera by Mozart; so far as can be learned, the Tanglewood performances will be the first in the U. S. Two different casts of students of the opera department will sing.

The performances are open to those who support the summer music school by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. All seats reserved, and reservations may be made through the Friends' office, Tanglewood, telephone Lenox 600.

"The Rope" was composed by Mennini, of the faculty of the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N. Y., who spent the summer of 1953 at Tanglewood on commission by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation and prepared his work from the beginning in consultation with Mr. Goldovsky and his staff. The opera is based on Eugene O'Neil's one-act play of the same name, which was originally performed by the Provincetown Players on April 26, 1917.

The Mozart opera, "Zaide," which will precede "The Rope," was written at Salzburg in 1779 to a libretto by Johann Andreas Schachtner. The Tanglewood version, in English, has been prepared by Sarah Caldwell, who will stage the work.

Miss Aviva Einhorn, Israeli student studying in Paris, will conduct an orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center's Department I (orchestra) students for "Zaide," and Henry Janiec is in the pit for the performances of "The Rope."

will be composed of songs not heard before at the barn.

Dyer-Bennet's audiences have been amazingly varied. It has been observed at the Music Barn that the enthusiastic auditors include the many whose devotion to classical music is absolute, and in the other direction, a number of jazz addicts say, "Dyer-Bennet is really cool."

Tickets are available at the box office. Reserved seats can be bought by phoning Music in the Round, Springfield.

Claude Rains Is Narrator for 'Lincoln Portrait'

Lenox, Aug. 3—The distinguished actor, Claude Rains, will narrate Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," which will be a highlight of the gala evening concert Thursday, Aug. 11, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, during "Tanglewood On Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school.

The Broadway star of Sidney Kingsley's dramatic "Darkness at Noon" and of T. S. Eliot's comedy-drama entitled "The Confidential Clerk," will make his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting, and his debut at Tanglewood in the stirring musical portrait of the Great Emancipator which was composed during the war by Mr. Copland, the noted American composer who is assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center (on leave of absence in 1955) and which was first performed by the Boston Symphony on April 9, 1943.

Mr. Bernstein also will include on his portion of the "Tanglewood On Parade" concert the first performance anywhere of a suite he has arranged from the music he composed for the Academy Award-winning film "On the Waterfront."

Arthur Fiedler and the celebrated Boston "Pops" Orchestra, in a program of Rimsky-Korsakov, Johann Strauss and Gershwin, with Mr. Bernstein soloist in the "Rhapsody in Blue," will conclude the concert.

165 Church Street

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES UNION
Circ. D. 60,449 - S. 116,052

JUL 15 1955

Program at Tanglewood

The final week-end of chamber orchestra concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in this summer's Berkshire Music Festival in the Theatre-Concert Hall will begin this evening, at 8:30 o'clock. Leonard Bernstein, as guest conductor will direct an all-Mozart program in which Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano will be the soloist. Mr. Bernstein will also play the piano concerto, No. 17 in G-minor with the orchestra.

Tomorrow evening and Sunday afternoon, Charles Munch will return as conductor to French composers. Samuel Mayes, first 'cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the outstanding guest artist, last season, with the Albany Symphony Orchestra, will be heard in the Boccherini concerto Saturday night.

The opening of the major series of concerts in the large shed will be held Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon, July 22, 23 and 24, with Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux alternating. Isaac Stern will be the guest soloist, Friday night, playing the Beethoven concerts for violin with the orchestra.

Monteux Conducts Music Of Brahms; Stern Is Soloist

The Academic Festival Overture was a sturdy beginning for a Sunday afternoon of Brahms' music at Tanglewood in the Berkshires. With Pierre Monteux guest conducting the program, one could almost hear the relaxed and comfortable settling back of the 12,000 listeners as the overture was introduced. A mixture of student songs overlaid with a dignified but happy development, Mr. Monteux drew the Boston Symphony Orchestra through its many stages with the proper amount of authority and indulgence, never allowing the music to become boisterous or out-of-hand, which sounded very much like a group of well-behaved students on a holiday with the younger ones now and then giving way to a bit of jollying, and ending with the grandiose strains of the "gaudeamus igitur."

Isaac Stern once again appeared at Tanglewood, playing this time the D major concerto for violin and orchestra. Unlike Joachim, the great violin virtuoso who played this concerto at its premiere, and of whom one critic suggested that he had not sufficiently studied it, Mr. Stern imparted a feeling of tender and thoughtful devotion to the composer's only violin concerto. A long and reflective first movement with a tedious cadenza, it was artfully played by Mr. Stern, each voice given its proper emphasis, with each theme presented in a manner so delicate and revealing one almost resented the inability to encompass and retain the whole. A romantic second movement had its beginning melody supposedly an old Bohemian folk-song, introduced by the oboe, and then taken up by the violin, with modifications. That one violinist can produce such a warm and resonant tone, to be heard piannissimo against a background of strings, and without stidency, is a constant source of wonder and of course, great pleasure. The lilting third movement, strongly reminiscent of Hungarian folk-tunes, with its brilliant and intricate passages, was a perfect toil for Mr. Stern's virtuoso ability. The audience recalled Mr. Stern innumerable times. He graciously shared the acclaim with Mr. Monteux, Mr. Gomberg, the oboeist, and the orchestra.

After an intermission Mr. Monteux and the orchestra presented the first symphony, Op. 68, in C minor. A work of great proportions in its harmonic and rhythmic ingenuity, Mr. Monteux developed the whole, enlarging and expanding the tone color to a new beauty; music suited to his personality, stately and enduring, with a compelling personal warmth extended through the music to the whole audience. Only at one time did orchestra and conductor seem at odds, the first violins in unexpected syncopated opposition to the woodwinds, but Mr. Monteux soon collected them and the symphony proceeded to its stupendous finale. The audience, except for the inevitable and obtrusive early leave-takers, were loath to relinquish Mr. Monteux, without whom the Berkshire Festival, series would be incomplete. — M. deB. B.

TAMPA, FLA.
TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 118,657 - S. 132,487

JUL 10 1955

Boston Symphony At Berkshire Festival

By PHIL BARNEY
Tribune Staff Writer

Concerts of the annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will be broadcast, beginning tomorrow night (WFLA—8:15 o'clock). The programs will feature the great Boston Symphony Orchestra, with distinguished vocal and instrumental soloists. Charles Munch is the regular conductor. Programs, conductors and soloists are yet to be announced.

Samuel Sorin, pianist, will be the first of four past winners of Young Artist Awards of the National Federation of Music Clubs to be heard on The Music Room, this morning (WDAE—9:15 o'Clock). He will perform works of Scarlatti, Granados and Prokofieff.

Frances Yeend, soprano of the New York City Opera, who has appeared here with the Tampa Philharmonic, will be one of the guests on What's New in Music this afternoon (WDAE—1 o'clock). Others are Kay Armen, popular vocalist, and The Crew Cuts, male singing group, with orchestra as usual conducted by Percy Faith.

* * *

THE 1955 Stockholm Festival in Sweden will provide material for the broadcast of World Music Festivals today (WDAE — 2:30 o'clock). Featured will be most of the second act of Wagner's Die Walkuere, with Birgit Nilsson, great new dramatic soprano; Set Svanholm, Wagnerian tenor of the Metropolitan; Sigurd Bjorling, Swedish bass-baritone; Bette Bjorling, mezzo, and Aase-Nordmo-Lovberg, Norwegian soprano.

"Where do we stand on civil defense?" is the question to be discussed on America's Town Meeting of the Air tonight (WSUN—8 o'clock). Guests are Val Peterson, Civil Defense Administrator; Mayor August Walz of Wilmington, Del., and Rep. Daniel Flood (D., Penn.)

* * *

EACH OF THE EIGHT members of the program's regular mixed chorus will be featured in solos and duets on the Voice of Firestone tomorrow night (WSUN—8:30 o'clock) in a program made up of numbers most often requested in letters from listners.

Singers are Margaret Broderson, contralto; Emil Markow, bass-baritone; Elizabeth Winslow, soprano; Russell Hammar, tenor; Frances Wyatt, lyric soprano; Bette Terrell, soprano; William Toole, tenor, and Loren Welch.

The selections are Friml's Only a Rose, Wagner's Evening Star, Jewel Song from Gounod's Faust, Romberg's Will You Remember, Snow White medley by Frank Churchill, Elgar's Pomp and Circumstance and Suppe's Beautiful Galatea Overture.

* * *

LUBEN VICHEY, celebrated basso profundo of the Metropolitan, from Bulgaria, will make his radio debut as soloist on the Telephone Hour tomorrow night (WFLA—9 o'clock), singing famous arias from Mozart's The Magic Flute, Gounod's Faust and Verdi's Simon Boccanegra. Vichey last week broke into business news by purchasing National Concert and Artists Corporation and Civic Concert Service, Inc., from O. O. Bottorff and Marks Levine. CCS, formed in 1921, is the oldest concert service business in America, and NCAC, from 1941, is one of the world's leading managements, operating in every field of entertainment.

On Paul Lavalle's program for Band of America tomorrow night (WFLA—9:30 o'clock) are the ballet music from Verdi's Aida, marches by Fillmore, Ventre and Sousa and other numbers.

Barbara Young's Forum, each morning on WSUN, is heard now at an earlier period, 10:45 o'clock. This week she continues her series of interviews with members of the Pinellas County Industrial Council.

Jacob's Pillow Flourishing In 14 Season in Berkshires

Herald 8/3

By ELINOR HUGHES

Though hot weather is not usually supposed to be conductive to appreciation of the arts, the flood of activity now going on in the Berkshires, in the vicinity of Lenox, Lee and Pittsfield makes one wonder whether Americans aren't more eager for culture in July and August than in December and January.

The Berkshire Festival, now in its 18th season, is the most prominent of the undertakings, but so far as longevity is concerned it is closely pressed by the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, now in its 14th year at Lee, Mas., under the direction of Ted Shawn. And the very fact that the two festivals are only 13 miles apart by road makes it the most natural thing in the world to find many of the same people at a matinee in Lee that you may have seen at the Shed at Lenox the night before.

Last week was an especially tet, also to music by Satie, in which he was assisted by his company of five; and "Banjo," a gay and witty work based on American folk music.

This week's program, starting tonight and continuing through Saturday, will present Mia Slavenska and Adreano Vitale (ballet), Birgit Akesson, Sweden's foremost modern dancer in her American debut; Josefina Garcia in Latin American dancers; and Dance Drama Company of Emilt Emily Frankel and Mark Ryder.

Herald Tribune 8/3

Culture in the Catskills

Aug. 3, 1955, has a good chance of being written down as a significant date in American cultural and entertainment annals. For at 8:45 p. m. today, in the Catskill Mountain town of Ellenville, N. Y., a new musical festival will come into being. Of all such American summer festivals, only one—Tanglewood—has so far managed to attain major status. But judging by the talent which it has lined up, and by the seriousness with which its sponsors have undertaken their task, the Empire State Music Festival shapes up as a very impressive affair. Its orchestra is the renowned Symphony of the Air—formerly the NBC Symphony—and its opening-night conductor is Eduard van Beinum, regular director of the Amsterdam Concertgebouw Orchestra. And a first-class array of talent has been lined up by John Brownlee, of the Metropolitan, who is directing operatic affairs at Ellenville.

The festival has chosen to pitch its tent in the heart of the Catskill Mountain resort area—the famous "borscht circuit" where many Broadway and Hollywood performers began their careers. To find a trend to entertainment which is a little more serious but no less exhilarating is cheerful news indeed. The Empire State Music Festival is a welcome visitor as it marches in to put culture in the Catskills, cream in the borscht. We hope it prospers for many years.

LaFleche

THE KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
ALBANY 1, NEW YORK

Willbrook Round Table 8/28

17

Tanglewood Features Beethoven

Devoting the 15th program at Tanglewood Saturday night to Beethoven, musical director Charles Munch, in the role of a sincere humanist, communicated the message of this great music. For the spirit of the evening lay in the power of the verities of Beethoven forcefully restated. The audience of 15,500 reflected the keen interest in this program.

From the dramatic opening chords of the Overture to Goethe's "Egmont," the enduring fabric of the conception was clearly rewoven. Munch gave meaning to this performance. The sweeping allegro sections surrounding the solemn music dedicated to the martyr reached a climax that immediately established the tone of the concert.

For the soloist Munch chose Rudolf Serkin, a pianist dedicated to the traditions of the classical school. Appearing for the first time at Tanglewood, Serkin brought the imperious grandeur that the "Emperor" Concerto demands. Playing with his accustomed vigor and intensity of concentration, and seeming to draw inspiration from the broad orchestra ritornelles conceived by Munch.

Serkin performed with an artistry that resulted in one of the longest ovations of the series. For beautiful tone and poetry of feeling the Andante movement was a splendid example. If the faster sections did not always maintain perfect ensemble, Serkin asserting some individualistic concepts in tempo changes, the driving force of the whole was always commanding, inspired playing.

The second half of the program offered the "Eroica" Symphony No. 3, in E flat. Munch was emphatic here. The soaring heights of this music were pointed by the detail of structure and varied sonorities in this sensitive approach. In the Funeral March this reading brought clarity to the contracts of dynamic stress so essential to Beethoven. Following the defiant Allegro con brio, with its shouting brass and insistent drive, the appeal of the more temperate sections received skilful etching.

Munch fully portrayed the heroic Bethoven, the faith and strength of enduring musical values, in every moment of this evening, certainly one of the finest of the season.—C. F. S.

Tanglewood to Feature Beethoven and Wagner

MARGARET HARSHAW
Festival Soloist

Music by Beethoven and Wagner will provide the fare for the three Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood next weekend.

Leonard Bernstein, head of the orchestra department of the symphony's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, will take the podium Friday night.

He began his long association with the school in 1942 as assistant to the orchestra's late conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, and will conduct Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" as a memorial to his patron.

Soloists for this evening-long orchestral and choral work will be Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor, and MacMorgan, bass. The festival chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will assist.

Mr. Munch's program next Saturday night will open with Beethoven's opera "Fidelio," Act II, with the festival chorus. Soloists will be Margaret Harshaw, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, Mr. Lloyd, Mr. Morgan, Arthur Schoep, tenor, and two students, Christina Cardillo, soprano, and Malcolm Bernstein, bass.

The second half of this program will be devoted to excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung," with Miss Harshaw as soloist in the immolation scene.

Mr. Munch will devote the Sunday afternoon concert to music by Beethoven, with Eugene Istomin, pianist, making his debut with the Boston Symphony as soloist in Concerto No. 4.

Noted Pianist

RUDOLPH SERKIN, noted pianist, will perform Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto, No. 5, with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, at the Berkshire Festival concert of Sat. eve. July 30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood (8:30 p.m.).

Mr. Serkin will also donate his services to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra, in a program of Beethoven Sonatas in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall on Wed. Eve. August 3 (8:30 p.m.).

All of us have to face the facts of life occasionally.

4th Week of Concerts At Berkshire Festival

Millbrook N.Y. 7/28

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet, on July 27 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony conducts two of the weekend's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday (July29) and Saturday (July 30) evenings, and Pierre Montex takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon (July 31) for the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

Charles Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, which is largely devoted to the music of the German composer, on Saturday evening, when Rudolph Serkin, noted pianist and Tanglewood neighbor in Vermont, makes his first appearance in the Music Shed, as soloist in the "emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program of Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern as soloist in the Concerto for Violin in D major, opus 77. Gregor Piatigorsky, who was to have been soloist with Mr. Stern in the Concerto for violin and cello, has found it necessary to cancel his Tanglewood engagements because of a shoulder ailment.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

Programs are available at the Millbrook Press.

Art Show Set At Tanglewood

An exhibition of paintings, drawings and prints by Ture Bengtz, head of the Bengtz School of Art at Lenox School, Lenox, will be on display starting Saturday at the exhibition hall at the main gate in Tanglewood.

The Bengtz show, in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be on view until Aug. 6.

A native of Finland, Mr. Bengtz came to America in 1927 and studied at the Boston Museum School, where he is head of the department of drawing and graphic arts.

His Tanglewood exhibit will include such recent work as "Olive Bank," oil painting abstract of a Swedish sailing vessel; "Horses Resting," "The Fiddler" and "Children in the Countryside."

Whittier To Attend Tanglewood on Parade

Lt. Gov. Sumner G. Whittier will attend Tanglewood on Parade Thursday, Aug. 11, it was announced today by Albert W. Barris, chairman of the Republican City Committee.

Tanglewood on Parade is the annual benefit given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the Berkshire Music Center, its summer music school.

Book Outlines History of Tanglewood

The early history of the music festival at Tanglewood is recounted in a new book, "Music Under the Moon," written by John G. W. Mahanna, county editor of the Berkshire Eagle, Pittsfield.

The author was able to draw upon the minutes of meetings of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc. from 1934 to 1945. In addition to 30,000 words of text, the 125-page book contains nearly 100 photographs, many of which are published for the first time. There is an epilogue which covers highlights of the festival from 1945 to the present.

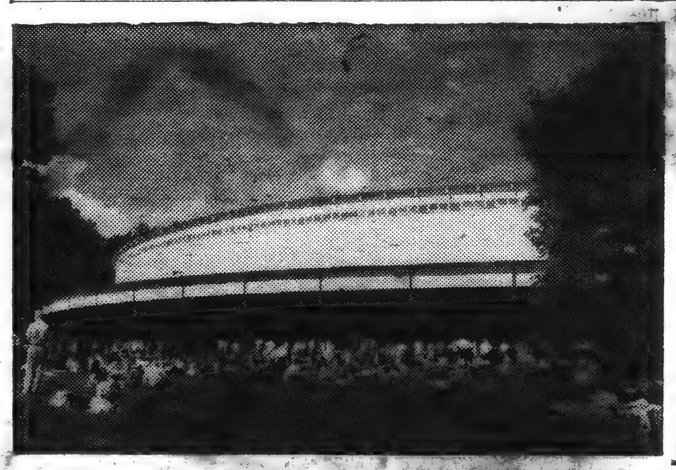
Mr. Mahanna started his newspaper career in 1933 as Lenox correspondent for the Berkshire Eagle and has been associated with news coverage of the festival since its inception. He was appointed county editor in 1947.

Berkshire Eagle 8/2

Novoye Russkoye Slovo
СРЕДА, 20 ИЮЛЯ 1955 ГОДА

Известный пианист Рудольф Серкин выступит на Беркширском Фестивале — 30 июля он исполнит Концерт №5 Бетховена.

РАЗДНОВАНИЕ ГОДОВЩИНЫ



Вид Беркширского Фестиваля Бостонского Симфонического Оркестра. — В 1954 году этот фестиваль посетили 135,775 человек.

Novoye Russkoye Slovo
July 20 1955

Serkin to Play Piano Sonatas By Beethoven

Sp. Lenox 8/3

Lenox, Aug. 2—The fifth concert in this season's series of Wednesday evening chamber music programs will be given in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood on Wednesday at 8:30 as part of the 1955 Berkshire Festival. Rudolf Serkin, the eminent pianist who made his Tanglewood debut earlier this season, will play three Piano Sonatas by Beethoven: the Sonata in F Major, Opus 10, No. 2; the Sonata in C Major, Opus 53, called the "Waldstein" Sonata; and the Sonata in B Flat, Opus 106, the "Hammerklavier" Sonata.

Mr. Serkin made his American debut 20 years ago with Arturo Toscanini and the Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra of New York. Ever since he has been one of the most popular and distinguished concert artists in the United States. He is especially renowned as a Beethoven interpreter.

Music

Music Center Parades Its Talent

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

"BERKSHIRE Music Center on Parade" was the order of the day at Tanglewood last night. The school established by the late Serge Koussevitzky in connection with the annual Berkshire Festivals put on a program which allowed them to show most of their best talent in the opera and choral departments and the work of practically all of their eminent faculty.

Three of the most distinguished composers who have graced their faculty in the last decade were each represented by a short opera of which the first to be heard last night was by the incumbent in the composition branch of the Center, Boris Blacher, director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin. His opera, "Romeo and Juliet" is necessarily a telescoped version of Shakespeare. It is classified as a "chamber" opera and is in three parts.

* * *

THE ORCHESTRA enlists a scant dozen instrumentalists. Indeed, one of the first points apparent in Blacher's style in his economical type of writing, for even with limited instruments, he still makes sparse use of them and often a single instrument or two supplies the background for the stage action and vocal work.

A chorus of a dozen voices is disposed on both sides of the pit with some members sitting on stairs up to the stage lip. They sing and chant before the curtain parts and during the entr'actes to supply pertinent information concerning the progress of the lovers' suit. Blacher succeeds definitely in establishing mood and he was fortunate in having such beautiful voices to sing for him and such skilled and competent craftsmen responsible for all the other ingredients of the production.

* * *

THE STAGING, by Sarah Caldwell, was consistently impressive; the setting, by Jack Brown, striking, and the costumes, by Laura Zirner, remarkably appropriate and ingenious.

The narrating chorus begins immediately to present their argument. This did not come off as successfully as we would have liked, but once the principals were in view, the play became engrossing. Naomi Farr and Harold Johnson in the title roles were excellent, but the greatest interest lay in the orchestra.

* * *

BLACHER LIKES syncopation in the orchestra and dynamic rhythm is constantly stressed. He succeeds in making many of cept for a short introduction by the scenes poignant by such devices as the echolalic use of slow thrice-repeated descending half-steps, moving down chromatically eight or nine times, always in the same idiom on one instrument, the piano, in this case, and then repeating the process on the trumpet, etc.

* * *

THE FIRST choral group included contemporary works by Julius Chajes, The 142nd Pslam, showing a remarkable knowledge of the placement of timbre, two Pilgrim Psalms by Ross Lee Finney, and Three Songs of Spring by Domingo Santa Cruz, one of the most promising of the composers of Chile. All of these, exorgan and piano used by Chajes, were sung without accompaniment. Later came another group of choruses by an early American composer, William Billings, and the Russian of the late last century, Sergey Taneyef.

The second opera was "Ariana Abandoned" by Darius Milhaud who had been guest teacher of composition at the Center in 1948. The English version of Henri Hoppenot's libretto was done so effectively by Ludwig Zirner that the action of this short little farce was the best appreciated of all the evening. It had an excellent cast: Claire Watson and Lee Gobel as Ariana and her sister Phedra, McHenry Boatwright, a sonorous Dionysos, and Peter Roberts as Theseus.

Berkshire Music Center Stages 3 Modern Operas

Tribune

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 2.—In contrast with the conservatism of this summer's regular festival programs at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center staged a trio of modern works last night for its first major production of the season, offering Boris Blacher's "Romeo and Juliet," Darius Milhaud's "Ariana Abandoned" and Bohuslav Martinu's "Comedy on the Bridge." This was not all, for the generous program in the Tanglewood Theater - Concert Hall also provided interludes of mainly contemporary choral music sung by a student group under several student conductors.

The composers of the three one-act operas all have Tanglewood associations, since Mr. Blacher is teaching here this summer, and Mr. Milhaud and Mr. Martinu both taught here in previous sessions.

First Given as Cantata

"Romeo and Juliet" was introduced to New York six years ago in concert form in a League of Composers program, but yesterday marked its first American staging east of the Appalachians. Composed in 1941, it was first performed as a cantata; the composer has said that it can be given either as an operatic or a concert work. When staged, he prefers a simple, scenic investiture, such as the one supplied yesterday.

Like its successors in the program, "Romeo and Juliet" was sung yesterday in English. The text followed Shakespeare as closely as possible in condensing the main course of the tragic action into about fifty minutes. There are eight vocal roles, besides the acting choristers on the stage and a small vocal ensemble in the pit with a chamber orchestra under Kalman Novak's conductorship.

The music fulfills its general purpose with directness and simplicity. The orchestral score, while important, is mainly unassuming. This and the vocal elements are admirably blended and balanced; the music carries out and enhances the textual line. The writing for the solo voices is often a continuous lyric utterance, which turns into more definite melody without marked transition.

The style is generally individual and homogeneous. There was one romantic episode when an undulating melody recalled a corresponding part of Tchaikovsky's Fantasia on this subject, but such retrospectiveness was not characteristic.

The score was most persuasive when it presented the emotions of the characters and situations quietly, contemplatively and lyrically, while not losing sight of the drama's underlying tragedy. The writing for the crowd scenes was less distinctive, and one or two emotional climaxes seemed musically understated.

But in general "Romeo and Juliet" seemed an exceptional work which accomplishes its aim, even while it left a question as to whether, on repeated hearings, it might seem slight too drawn out.

Harold Johnson and Naomi Farr exhibited appealing voices and expressive understanding in the title roles; Regina Sarfaty, Gwendolyn Belle, Peyton Higginson and Robert Harold Kerns were among the others in the meritorious cast. Sarah Caldwell staged the smoothly running production.

"A Brief, Humorous Trifle"

"Ariana Abandoned" can be described as a brief, humorous trifle with the humor lying in the situation rather than in the music. This has, indeed, some wit along with considerable color, but on the whole it seemed to represent some of Mr. Milhaud's routine work. "Comedy on the Bridge" is already known both in Tanglewood and in New York. Here the humor of the situation is also inherent in the fluent melody of the score.

Both works were effectively performed, with Igor Chichagov conducting the orchestra and singers in the Milhaud score, and Boris Goldovsky providing a piano accompaniment for "Comedy on the Bridge." Julius Chajes, Ross Lee Finney, Domingo Santa Cruz and an early American, William Billings, were among the composers represented in the choral portion of the program heard by a capacity audience of members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Opera by Blacher Performed at Lenox

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 1—Three one-act operas and several groups of choral works were presented here Monday night in the theatre-concert hall. The presentations were a combined effort of the Berkshire Music Center, making use of the opera, chorus and orchestral departments.

Of the three one-acters, most attention was focused on Boris Blacher's "Romeo and Juliet," if only for the reason that Mr. Blacher is one of the composers-in-residence this summer at the music center.

*

Mr. Blacher, the director of the Hochscule Fuer Musik in Berlin, has subtitled his opera as "After Shakespeare." He has not adhered strictly to the text: the opera, which has four scenes, runs about fifty minutes, and much of the action had to be cut. Essentially, however, the basic ingredients, as Shakespeare conceived them, are present. A sort of Greek chorus, dispersed about the orchestra pit, comments on the action and even serves as a motivating force (it hands Juliet the potion).

Listeners who have a preconceived notion about Shakespeare's play may have trouble adjusting to Mr. Blacher's expressionistic conception and treatment. Not much of the youthful, passionate and ardent character of the original lines comes through. Mr. Blacher's philosophy of opera, like that of so many other modern composers, encompasses melodic fragments that are mostly of a declamatory nature with the orchestra outlining the mood and commenting on the stage goings-on.

Mr. Blacher nowhere in his opera has written a vulgar phrase or a meretricious effect. This is the work of a disciplined composer. But, while "Romeo and Juliet" will be listened to with respect, and even admiration, the chances are that never will it command rapture.

This performance, conducted by Kalman Novak, had a student cast headed by Naomi Farr and Harold Johnson.

*

The other operas, which came too late in the long program for comment, were also composed by men who previously had been composers-in-residence here. Darius Milhaud, who was guest teacher of composition in 1948, was represented by his "L'Abandon d'Ariane," in an English translation by Ludwig Zerner. Bohuslav Martinu, who taught here in 1946, was represented by his "Comedy on the Bridge." Igor Chichagov conducted the Milhaud work and Boris Goldovsky played the piano accompaniment for the Martinu. All three operas were produced under Mr. Goldovsky's direction.

The choral section of the program, prepared by Hugh Russ, presented music by Chajes, Finney, Santa Cruz, Billings and Taneiev. Several conductors from the choral department shared the podium for this enterprise. H. C. S.

Music at Tanglewood and Castle Hill

Isaac Stern Soloist in Brahms Concerto

By Jules Wolffers
Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

News that there is to be a cultural exchange between the United States and the Soviet Union involving Yehudi Menuhin and David Oistrakh has increased the speculation at the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra about the orchestra's proposed tour to Russia, mentioned in these columns last week.

Unfortunately there is little more to add at this time. The orchestra is ready and willing to go, but final word must come from the sources which control decisions in such matters.

Apparently the climate here is ready for such a cultural mission. If farmers, why not also musicians? One was unable to find a single person who did not favor the trip among the dozen or so with whom one discussed the matter. Undoubtedly there are Americans who may be opposed, but they were not in evidence at Tanglewood.

Regarding the Menuhin-Oistrakh exchange, for the sake of the record it should be stated that Mr. Menuhin is by no means "the first American musician to gain international celebrity," as was stated in at least one newspaper. Mr. Edward MacDowell was greatly admired in Europe, as were Lily Nordica and Geraldine Farrar. Albert Spalding, another prime example, actually was more appreciated in Europe than he was in his native country.

* * *

Numbers are also a matter of news at Tanglewood where the audience on Saturday night numbered more than 15,500 persons, largest attendance figure in four years and the second largest on record.

Such an immense audience brings its problems, however, as many a listener and a considerable number of would-be listeners can testify. With all the various improvements effected in the roads leading to Tanglewood, they cannot effectively handle the traffic. Cars were backed up for miles, and tickets were still being sold after the last number on the program had begun.

Nor are the various facilities provided in Tanglewood adequate to meet the demands of a large crowd. The lines in front of the refreshments stands on Sunday afternoon were reminiscent of wartime queues. If the management sells tickets to 15,000 persons, it has an obligation to provide facilities to care for them.

But both Saturday and Sunday audiences took such minor inconveniences in good spirits and with little grumbling. The music was the thing after all, and the quality of the performances evoked enthusiastic approval.

This was particularly in evidence Saturday night when Charles Munch continued the Beethoven series with the Overture to Goethe's "Egmont," Opus 84, the "Emperor" Piano Concerto, and the "Eroica" Symphony. Rudolf Serkin was soloist in the Concerto, and both he and Mr. Munch were equally heroes of this auspicious occasion.

* * *

For the Sunday afternoon program Pierre Monteux wisely selected an all-Brahms list by way of contrast. There was a change of program from that originally announced. With Gregor Piatigorsky unable to appear in the Concerto for Violin and Cello, but with his partner, Isaac Stern, ready, able, and willing, the Violin Concerto was substituted on short notice.

If one meets Mr. Monteux on his own ground one can find a great deal to admire in his cool and poised handling of the players and the compositions. Thus the "Academic Festival" Overture was done in so deliberate a style as to quite change the character of the good-humored music and give it a serious atmosphere not far removed from a certain degree of pomposity.

As for Mr. Stern, he displayed all the violinistic virtues which have brought him well deserved recognition. Yet the Brahms Concerto is not heard at its best with understatement and extremely controlled feeling. So profound is the work that the soloist must live it rather than merely perform it. One felt that Mr. Stern was more the interested observer than a vital medium between composer and bearer. Granting him every facility of finger and bow, one might have preferred less ease and more sense of involvement with the music itself.

But the audience was extremely satisfied, and the Brahms First Symphony brought the weekend to a glorious close.

Blacher, German composer, is guest teacher this ... at the Berkshire Music ... at Tanglewood. His chamber opera, "Romeo and Juliet," will be presented tonight.

Daily Hampshire Gazette

One-Act Operas, Some Choral Works At Music Center

Three contemporary one act operas were presented Monday evening at the theatre concert hall at Tanglewod, along with some choral works by the Berkshire Festival Chorus, under the auspices of the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Considering the fact that the whole program was in rehearsal not more than two or three weeks, and perhaps less, and that a potpourri of individuals was necessary for the varied productions, the evening was interesting and enjoyable, if not exciting.

As Mr. Goldovsky said, someone must suffer if music is to survive, so we should consider it our duty to strive for an understanding of the many languages spoken in the music of various contemporary and less well-known composers. Thus our grandchildren will enjoy that which we consider worthy of repetition.

One opera, "Romeo and Juliet," by Boris Blacher, composer in residence at Tanglewood, was well-sung, but with few emotional overtones. The orchestral music, with the breathless and repetitive tones of the violins and the pulsating plucking of the cellos, the charming dance theme first heard by the flute and clarinet, was a perfect background for the atonal themes of the singers. The scenery and lighting by David Hayes when co-ordinated, reflected well the moods of this tragic story.

"Ariana Abandoned," by Darius Milhaud, with a text by Hoppenot, and the English version by Ludwig Zirner of the Opera department, is a satire on Greek mythology. The music tells its story amusingly and briefly, that of Theseus stranded on an island with two sisters, Phedre, who loves him madly, and Ariana whom he loves madly, but who does not return his love. Dionysius, disguised as a begger takes pity on the sisters, and gives Theseus a potion which makes his see double. He takes Phedre, and supposedly Ariana and sails away. Ariana is then granted her dearest wish by Dionysius, that of becoming a constellation, and everybody is happy once again. Artfully costumed by Anna Aubin and suggestively staged by Boris Goldovsky the singers enhanced their parts with the proper tongue-in-cheek effects.

Undoubtedly the most ambitious opera of the evening was Bohuslav Martinu's "Comedy On the Bridge." Sung to a piano accompaniment with occasional percussion it was a delight to see and hear. Characterizations were well-chosen, timing a little laggard in spots, but on the whole fresh and witty.

The choral part of the program included works by Chajes and Ross Lee Finney, the latter smoothly sung by the chorus, and conducted by Willis Becket. Also "Three Songs of Spring" by the Chilean composer Domingo Santa Cruz, modern and harmonic. Three songs, a capella, two by William Billings, "Lamentation over Boston and Modern Music were humorous as to words but quite serious in the harmonic modulations of the music. The third song, "The Stars, by Taneyef, Russian composer and teacher of Rachmaninoff, started smoothly, and proceeded to a rather unrehearsed finish. In all the songs the diction was excellent.

All whose names are too numerous to mention can be congratulated on their efforts in making the evenig a provocative one for their many followers.—M. deB. B.

'THE ROPE' AS OPERA

Mennini Work, Based on O'Neill Play, Bows Monday at Lenox

"The Rope," a one-act opera by Louis Mennini, wil have its first performance at the Berkshire Music Festival, Lenox, Mass., Monday evening. On the same program will be Mozart's unfinished opera, "Zaide."

The Mennini opera, commissioned by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, is based on Eugene O'Neill's play of the same title.

"The Rope" will be staged by Boris Goldovsky. It will have scenery by David Hays and costumes by Leo van Witsen. Henry Janiec will conduct. The double bill be repeated Tuesday evening. Two different casts of student singers will sing the two performances.

Times 8/4

My job with the Berkshire Hills Conference nearly went up in smoke at one meeting of the directors. I made the statement that after due consideration I had concluded that the worst thing that had happened to the Berkshires was the Tanglewood music festival. And I still contend that any attraction that brought crowds in for a weekend and left hundreds of empty rooms on a Monday morning was not good business. Also, what was there to do about the people whose vacation came the last two weeks of July or the first two of August? This is a prime example of a regional promotion that does not fit the community's facilities. Cape Cod's "Have Fun" is another. It is the type of unbalance that breeds trouble as well as undesirable business to boot.

* * *

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Allston Citizen
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 7,750

JUL 28 1955

Park Department's Playground Program Now At Midsummer Peak

The programs at playgrounds operated by the Boston Parks and Recreation Department in Brighton and Allston are now in their full mid-summer stride, with attendance good and interest high, according to Director of Recreation Patrick J. Ryan.

Miss Joanne B. Rogers of 60 Undine road, Brighton, who is the play leader at Rogers Park, reports that squash ball, tennis and baseball are the most popular activities there. Miss Rogers, who is a graduate of Sacred Heart High School, Newton Center, and State Teachers College at Boston, is a teacher of kindergarten during the school year.

The small fry at Murray Park seem to prefer the swings to other forms of sport, according to Miss Dorothy A. Sollitto of 27 Hayes road, Roslindale. Miss Sollitto, a graduate of Girls' Latin and Boston College School of Education, says "I am very much interested in the children at my playground, and I will cooperate with the parents of this district to the beest of my ability."

At Cleveland Circle the play leader is Miss Janice Kellert of 24 Glenville avenue, Allston. She reports that the children are busy at swings and slide, checkers, arts and crafts, and informal games. A graduate of Brighton High School and Boston State Teachers College, Miss Kellert is a teacher in Grade 2 at the Prince School, Boston. She says, "This is my second season at Cleveland Circle. I'm glad to be back."

Miss Marlene Cohen of 84 Lanark road, Brighton, says that the children under her supervision at the Monastery Project prefer gimp, amateur shows and softball. Miss Cohen, who attended Brighton High School, says "I am a scholarship student at Boston Music School. I have been invited to spend the summer at Tanglewood by Boris Goldovsky. I gave several joint concerts in Boston and am planning my own concert in the Fall."

At Ringer Playground most of the youngsters are busy at baseball, horse-shoes, swings, shuffleboard and checkers, according to Miss Ann M. Ford of 236 Washington street, Brighton, the play leader. Miss Ford is a graduate of St. Columbkille's High School and Regis College. She says her favorite sports are basketbell, swimming and badminton.

Miss Mary B. Campbell of 110 Parsons street, Brighton, who is stationed at McKinney Playground, is a graduate of Holy Cross Academy and Emmanuel College. She lists her favorite sports and hobbies as skiing, skating, swimming, sailing, photography and basketball.

The play leader at the Faneuil Housing Project is Miss Ann Elaine Bernard of 41 Linden road, Brighton, who attended Mt. Alvernia Academy. She gives her favorite sports as skating, bowling, swimming, golf(tennis, and basketball.

Archie's Thoughts

Berkshire Eagle 8/2/55

FAIR OR FOUL

By Roger O'Gara

A SHRUG of the shoulders was Archie Moore's reaction to the information that Rocky Marciano, in a surprise move the past weekend, had started to spar.

Then he said softly, "So?" He hesitated a few seconds, and philosophized, "He knows what he's doing."

He looked from the tiny porch of his cabin, stretched his massive arms, and observed, "So many people these days are trying to be fight connoisseurs."

He paused, then continued, "I'll tell you what about this fight. Time always has been my ally. It ain't going to forsake me over night."

o—o

ASKED WHAT he thought the Don Cockell fight proved insofar as Marciano's nose was concerned, Archie chuckled, and said, "I don't think he was hit more than once."

He didn't say so, of course, but you just gathered as he occasionally rubbed a closed left hand with the open fingers of his right that the southpaw mitt often would probe the Rock's nasal needlework.

He saw the Cockell fight on theater television. He thought that Rocky "started surprisingly fast that night, as if he wanted to get it over in a hurry."

He has seen Marciano in four in-the-flesh bouts. He was at the champion's two meetings with Jersey Joe Walcott, the Joe Louis fight and the first engagement with Ezzard Charles.

He doesn't use fight movies. He said he doesn't study "a man's style too much."

o—o

MOORE APPEARS to be genuinely enthused about his camp.

"I fell in love with the place the minute I saw it," he said.

His cabin is in a shady grove. Francis Cormier, the 40-year-old co-owner of the camp, said that even on the hottest nights, a person needs a blanket.

"It's cool here after the sun goes down," Cormier said.

Moore posed at the waterfront with attractive Mrs. Cormier, who actually is director of the camp. He looked out at the mountains, held up his hand, and said, "Feel it? A breeze."

Moore is a superlative-user. Everything thus far has been "great," "wonderful," or "fine."

o—o

SOMEONE suggested that the proximity to the water would make it possible for Archie to take an occasional swim.

"I can't swim a stroke," he said laughingly. "It never interested me."

Moore doesn't look his age, which is listed as 38, although some say he's three or four years older. His face is unmarked. He has a small mustache and straight hair.

A glib conversationalist, he emphasizes the important words. There's considerable stress on "work," which he employed several times as he discussed picture dates with newspaper and newsreel photographers. He has set aside the greater part of tomorrow for the shooting of the early part of his training.

"Let's clean up a lot of it then," he said, "because I want to get to work."

o—o

ARCHIE LOVES his jive. He brought a record player with him. It's right next to his bed. Cormier said he played it before he went to sleep.

"I like all kinds of music," Archie said.

He owns a big music library. He's proud of his affiliation with Lucky Thompson, the band leader.

"That man is the world's greatest saxophonist," he said. "The greatest without any question."

Archie expressed interest in the Berkshire Symphonic Festival at Tanglewood. He inquired as to the distance from his camp. He would like to attend several concerts.

"Isn't that wonderful?" he said when told that more than 15,000 were present at the concert Saturday night. "So many come to hear music way up here."

o—o

NO ONE IN Moore's party calls him by his first name. He's Champ to them.

Cheerful Norman, the 235-pound head trainer, savors the word as he uses it often. As he looks fondly at Moore, you can tell that his reference isn't to the lesser crown which Archie holds. He's looking at the big one.

Norman is a great kidder. He smiled indulgently when asked what his professional boxing experience was.

He fought professionally for nine years. No, he wasn't a heavyweight. In those days, he was considerably lighter. He was a welterweight.

"Hey, you've expanded," a man said.

Cheerful shook with laughter. "That's all right," he said, "I'll have to use that."

Cheerful was asked whether he followed Moore in the early morning runs.

"Yeh," he said, "in that car over there."

Someone observed that he ought to use a bicycle.

"That would be all right," he said, "except that I hear they have some real big hills around here. I wouldn't mind going down them, but going up might kill me. My running days are over."

o—o

CLEM FARRELL, commissioner of Little League in District 8, has asked that we provide space to explain in detail why the recent Adams-Lee tournament game was replayed in entirety. You'll recall that it was announced that Farrell ordered the whole game to be replayed after he upheld Lee's protest of a faulty interpretation by an umpire.

Farrell says he had no authority to order such a thing. He merely asked the Adams men to agree to it, and they did so without any hesitation. He praised them for their good sportsmanship.

Here's how the play went. Adams had a runner on first base, and there was a hit to center field. The runner on first ran into the second baseman, who was standing in the base line. Ray Trombley, the base umpire, immediately called interference.

The batter rounded first, and started toward second. Shaken by the play, the front runner stayed at second. Thus Adams soon had two men on second. The front runner broke for third, and was involved in a rundown. Trombley called for time, and said he wanted the runner on third. The rundown continued, and the runner was hit in the back by the ball, which bounced into left field. The runner scored.

Trombley ordered that the runner couldn't go beyond third. Umpire-in-chief Bud Murray overruled him. He permitted the run to score, and the game was over, with Adams a 4-3 victor.

"I suggested that the whole game be played over, but Adams had to consent to it, "Clem said. "Actually, the contest could have been resumed with Adams runners on second and third bases, but I didn't want Lee to be under that much of a strain. If we had used that plan, those boys would have traveled all the way to Adams for just one pitch."

Music

Music Center Parades Its Talent

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

"BERKSHIRE Music Center on Parade" was the order of the day at Tanglewood last night. The school established by the late Serge Koussevitzky in connection with the annual Berkshire Festivals put on a program which allowed them to show most of their best talent in the opera and choral departments and the work of practically all of their eminent faculty.

Three of the most distinguished composers who have graced their faculty in the last decade were each represented by a short opera of which the first to be heard last night was by the incumbent in the composition branch of the Center, Boris Blacher, director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin. His opera, "Romeo and Juliet" is necessarily a telescoped version of Shakespeare. It is classified as a "chamber" opera and is in three parts.

* * *

THE ORCHESTRA enlists a scant dozen instrumentalists. Indeed, one of the first points apparent in Blacher's style in his economical type of writing, for even with limited instruments, he still makes sparse use of them and often a single instrument or two supplies the background for the stage action and vocal work.

A chorus of a dozen voices is disposed on both sides of the pit with some members sitting on stairs up to the stage lip. They sing and chant before the curtain parts and during the entr'actes to supply pertinent information concerning the progress of the lovers' suit. Blacher succeeds definitely in establishing mood and he was fortunate in having such beautiful voices to sing for him and such skilled and competent craftsmen responsible for all the other ingredients of the production.

* * *

THE STAGING, by Sarah Caldwell, was consistently impressive; the setting, by Jack Brown, striking, and the costumes, by Laura Zirner, remarkably appropriate and ingenious.

The narrating chorus begins immediately to present their argument. This did not come off as successfully as we would have liked, but once the principals were in view, the play became engrossing. Naomi Farr and Harold Johnson in the title roles were excellent, but the greatest interest lay in the orchestra.

* * *

BLACHER LIKES syncopation in the orchestra and dynamic rhythm is constantly stressed. He succeeds in making many of the scenes poignant by such devices as the echolalic use of slow thrice-repeated descending half-steps, moving down chromatically eight or nine times, always in the same idiom on one instrument, the piano, in this case, and then repeating the process on the trumpet, etc.

* * *

THE FIRST choral group included contemporary works by Julius Chajes, The 142nd Pslam, showing a remarkable knowledge of the placement of timbre, two Pilgrim Psalms by Ross Lee Finney, and Three Songs of Spring by Domingo Santa Cruz, one of the most promising of the composers of Chile. All of these, except for a short introduction by organ and piano used by Chajes, were sung without accompaniment. Later came another group of choruses by an early American composer, William Billings, and the Russian of the late last century, Sergey Taneyef.

The second opera was "Ariana Abandoned" by Darius Milhaud who had been guest teacher of composition at the Center in 1948. The English version of Henri Hoppenot's libretto was done so effectively by Ludwig Zirner that the action of this short little farce was the best appreciated of all the evening. It had an excellent cast: Claire Watson and Lee Gebel as Ariana and her sister Phedra, McHenry Boatwright, a sonorous Dionysos, and Peter Roberts as Theseus.

Notes and Footnotes

SOMETHING of a sparkling personality burst on the local scene last week when Carlos J. Todd fulfilled a 15-year urge by coming to Tanglewood. His native Havana, Cuba, offers nothing quite like the music festival. He is delighted, and his keen, Cuban features light up, so you realize he isn't fooling.

The name Todd is not one you would associate with a native of Cuba, but the answer is simple. His father was Scotch, his mother Venezuelan, and his wife is a girl from Lynn, Mass. She and Mrs. John G. W. Mahanna were classmates at the College of Mount St. Vincent in New York. That's how the Todds come to be visiting the Mahannas. They traveled by freighter to be able to bring their car.

Mr. T also is interested in amateur theater, and is a member of the Little Theater of Havana. They have their own 300-seat house, and do plays exclusively in English; plays like "Teahouse of the August Moon," "The Solid Gold Cadillac," and "My Three Angels." There's a large American colony in Havana, and all educated Cubans speak perfect English, as does Mr. Todd. Play profits, which run well into the thousands of dollars per show, go to charity.

Little theaters in Havana are a serious business. Each play is rehearsed six weeks, four hours a night, five nights a week. If you have a lead role you just drop all business affairs for six weeks, and concentrate on the show. Mr. Todd is in sugar, which had to take a back seat when he recently played Joseph, the embezzler, in "Three Angels."

His diligence paid off, too. He won the Cuban critics' award for the role, and has been offered a berth with the extremely desirable Patronato del Teatro, a professional company. He's going to take it, too "you bet," and his eyes snap happily.

One thing puzzles him, though. After traveling nearly 2,000 miles straight north from Cuba, he finds it hotter here than at home. But he is in good company. Everyone else is puzzled, too.

—o—

In Brief . . .

The report that July was the hottest month in the history of local weather reporting doubtless rates as the least surprising news story of the year. We'd be a lot happier if August weren't acting so darned anxious to break the record . . . If nothing else, Ed Kearney's candidacy for mayor seems likely to prove a painful but deserved boomerang to the Democratic operators who pushed him into the state senatorial race last year and then abandoned him in midstream . . . Whatever else can be said of the past weekend at Tanglewood, it most certainly proved the urgent need for some concentrated attention to the problem of providing better auto access to the grounds. When customers are unable to get to the box-office until the performance is half over, it's inevitably going to have an ill effect on future Tanglewood attendance and, to be perfectly mercenary about it, on summer business in the Berkshires . . . The announcement that Norman Rockwell will be among the artists represented at the fourth annual Berkshire Art Association show opening tonight at the Museum is all the more noteworthy for the fact that it marks the first time he has exhibited anything other than strictly illustrative work in this area . . .

Only depression in this country is the dumps Ike's critics are in.—New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Down to Earth

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

Enthusiasm with what Eagle columnists write usually results in a mentally drafted letter seldom written; disapproval puts pen in hand pronto with no clichés spared.

Reaction to Mr. Walter Prichard Eaton's "Culture Busting Out All Over" [July 27] was of the unwritten praise type letter, especially after having missed the column and having it unequivocally praised by two ardent Eagle readers, one, in fact, a staffer.

When erudite Eaton's indifference to culture as a spectator sport is actually accepted word for word, my heretofore mental wanderings must become tangible.

Firstly, the piece by my own rating had at least one belly laugh, something Thurber frequently does but which I don't expect in Mr. Eaton's work—smiles, smirks and snickers, yes, but no guffaws.

But the prime virtue of W.P.E.'s gem was the feeling imparted that all this brain-beating at culture's shrine is being taken too seriously by not only the promoters who have valid reasons but the weekend painters, the living room chamber music makers, the one-play-a-year drama experts, the foreign film experts and all the rest, in field or bleachers who are taking themselves so all-fired serious.

All these activities are fun to the majority of folks participating, so why not have fun pursuing them, whether it be from a Sheffield porch or a martini-stained blanket on the Tanglewood campus?

When the gleanings of a mind of Walter Prichard Eaton's capacity can be enjoyed for a nickel, particularly when it brings down to earth the local eight-week wonders, how ungrateful can you get?

NORMAN DELLERT.

Pittsfield.

Public Events

Tonight

8:00—Annual Summer Members' Night, featuring films, opening of Berkshire Art Assn. and other exhibits. Berkshire Museum.

8:30—Opera scenes by Berkshire Music Center students. Tanglewood theater, Lenox. (BMC Friends, with special tickets.)

8:30—Carlos Montoya, Flemenco guitar; Trianita, Flamenco dancer. Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 - S. 3,653,302

JUL 28 1955

Berkshire Operas

"The Rope," one-act opera by Louis Mennini, will have its world premiere on a bill with Mozart's "Zaide," Aug. 8 and 9 at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Tanglewood Tales

With Pops Orchestra

When the Boston Pops Orchestra comes to Tanglewood on Parade next Thursday it will include three players who are not regularly with the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Pianist Leo Litwin of Boston, a piano teacher; third trumpet Robert Mogilnicki of New Bedford, and Joseph Lutatsky, English hornplayer, of Springfield. Mogilnicki and Lutatsky, wintertime, play in the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra.

* * *

Fiedler Reunion

Arthur Fiedler, the maestro of the Pops, will have something of a family reunion at Tanglewood, when he arrives for rehearsals Wednesday next. His sister, Elsa Fiedler, is coaching repertory in the Berkshire Music Center's opera department. Two cousins are Josef Zimbler, Boston Symphony Orchestra cellist and organizer of the Zimbler Sinfonietta; and Mrs. E. Panenka, wife of the Boston Symphony bassoonist.

* * *

Count Now 15,624
For Saturday Concert

The final count for the enormous crowd that attended the Berkshire Festival concert of Saturday, July 30, a careful checking of admission stubs reveals, stands at 15,624. Only once before has an audience of anything like the same proportions stormed Tanglewood, on the final Saturday night of the 1951 summer, when Charles Munch was on the podium for his first summer concerts with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, attendance was 15,800, The program on that occasion consisted of Beethoven's Symphony No. 1, Honegger's Fifth Symphony, and the Tchaikowsky "Pathetique," with no soloist.

The three Festival concerts of that 1951 weekend totaled 36,050 persons, as against the 35,301 July 29, 30 and 31.

* * *

Flying to Amsterdam

John N. Burk, program annotator for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is flying to Amsterdam next Thursday with his wife, for a six-week holiday, which will include the Rhineland, Paris, Heidelberg, Munich, Salzburg, Vienna, Rome, Florence, Venice, Switzerland and London. The Burks will be joined in Paris, after the Boston Symphony's Berkshire Festival closes, by their daughter Margaret, who is secretary to orchestra personnel manager Rosario Mazzeo.

* * *

Study Group Busy

With the final two weeks of Tanglewood now under way, 23 new students have come, for the concluding fortnight of the Tanglewood Study Group, while 30 two and four-week Study Group students have already departed the campus. This week the Study Group, almost in a body, is rehearsing for participation in Friday evening's performance at the Berkshire Festival concert of Beethoven's Missa Solemnis, in memory of the late Serge Koussevitzky. Leonard Bernstein conducts.

* * *

Composers' Forums

There will be two final composers' forums before the Berkshire Music Center's activities fold for the season on Aug. 14. Normally scheduled for Sunday evenings in the Chamber Music Hall at Tanglewood, the final composers' sessions will be held on Saturday afternoon, Aug. 6, at 3 p.m., and on Monday, Aug. 8, at 4:30 p.m.

* * *

Parade Demonstration

The Tanglewood Study Group will give a demonstration for patrons of Tanglewood on Parade at 4 p.m. in the barn on Thursday, Aug. 11. The first portion of the program, baroque music, will consist of Francesco Barsanti: Concerto Grosso in D; Antonio Caldara: Stabat Mater; P. Peuerl: Oh Musica; H. Isaak: Innsbruck. The feature work is the cantata by Caldara, an Italian contemporary of Bach. The concert's second half is devoted to contemporary works, including Hindemith's Frau Musica, and two sections, The Shepherd and Spring, from the cantata, "Little Boy Lost," by Allen Sapp, who on a Samuel Wechsler commission wrote this piece especially for performance by the Tanglewood Study Group. In its entirety the Sapp cantata had its premiere at Tanglewood on Parade in 1953.

Lutheran Pastor Suspended Prior To Heresy Trial

MILWAUKEE, (AP)—A United Lutheran pastor to stand formal church trial for heresy in the 60-year history of the Northwest Synod — the second in six weeks —faces a trial board of fellow clergyman later this month.

The Rev. John Gerberding, 33, of Menomonee Falls is accused of doctrinal deviation similar to that for which his friend, the Rev. George Crist Jr. of Durham, another Milwaukee area community, was tried and convicted last week.

Verdict Next May

Pastor Crist was suspended from his church duties yesterday by Dr. Paul E. Bishop of Minneapolis, president of the synod, who thus followed the recommendation of the trial committee.

The 31-year-old Durham minister is vacationing with his wife and three daughters and has not yet been reached for comment on what he plans to do between now and next May, when the synodical conference will review his case and decide on punishment. This may range from a rebuke to dismissal from the Lutheran ministry.

Thursday AUG. 11 • Events from 6 to 11 P.M.
RAIN OR SHINE
TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS.

"Tanglewood on Parade"

Including Shed Concert at 8:15 by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Conducted by LEONARD BERNSTEIN
Suite from "On the Waterfront".....Bernstein
(FIRST PERFORMANCE)
"A Lincoln Portrait".....Copland
Lincoln Impersonation by CLAUDE RAINS

BOSTON POPS ORCHESTRA
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
In a typical Pops program—
Spanish Caprice.....Rimsky-Korsakov
Rhapsody in Blue, for Piano and Orchestra.....Gershwin
Soloist—LEONARD BERNSTEIN
Suite from the Ballet "Graduation Ball".....Strauss-Dorati
(Encores may be expected!)

LAWN PARTY ☆ PICNIC SUPPER
WALTZING ON THE LAWN ☆ DOOR PRIZES
TICKETS: Box Seats—$5; Front Sections (All seats reserved) $4 and $3; Unreserved Section $2.50
All who purchase tickets will be invited to attend the activities of the Berkshire Music Center at 6 o'clock:—
SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA ☆ OPERA SCENES
THE CHORUS ☆ CHAMBER MUSIC
REMAINING FESTIVAL CONCERTS
Fri. and Sat. Eves., Sun. Afts., Aug. 5, 6, 7; Aug. 12, 13, 14
(CHAMBER CONCERT—WED. EVE. AUG. 10)
Wed. Eve. Chamber Concerts—$2, $3; Fri. Eve., Sat. Eve. and Sun. Aft. Shed Concerts—$2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Box Seats). Admission $2.00.
Write or phone TICKET OFFICE, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. (Lenox 600)
Baldwin Piano — RCA Victor Records

IN THE COUNTRY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Final performances of the season—Friday, Aug. 5, at 8:30: Leonard Bernstein directing the Boston Symphony in a performance of Beethoven's Missa Solemnis, in memory of Serge Koussevitzky. With Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; and a chorus. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 6, at 8:30: Charles Munch directing the Boston Symphony in a Beethoven-Wagner program, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; and a chorus. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 7, at 2:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony in an all-Beethoven program, with Eugene Istomin, piano. . . . ¶ Wednesday, Aug. 10, at 8:30: The last in a series of six programs of Beethoven's chamber music. . . . ¶ Thursday, Aug. 11, at 6: The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" program, including offerings by the various student departments of the Berkshire Music Center, a lawn party, a concert by the Boston Symphony (conducted by Leonard Bernstein) and the Boston Pops (conducted by Arthur Fiedler, with Leonard Bernstein, piano), door prizes, and waltzing on the lawn. For the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. . . . ¶ Friday, Aug. 12, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony in a varied program; no soloists. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 13, at 8:30: Pierre Monteux conducting the Boston Symphony in a varied program; no soloists. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 14, at 2:30: Charles Munch directing the Boston Symphony in another all-Beethoven program, with Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; and a chorus. (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.)

MUSICIANS at play: Eagle music critic tells how awhile back he criticized the New Music Quartet for playing a certain Beethoven movement too fast. The quartet manager, a personal friend, later wired the critic "Have open date between Oct. 19 and 21. Can you book quartet? Will play Beethoven slowly for two days." In somewhat the same vein, and apropos the hinted Boston Orchestra tour of Russia, Director Munch chided the violin section during recent rehearsal for failing to produce tone he desired. "Tried again. No luck. Shaking his head he exclaimed, "What will Oistrahk think?" Oistrahk is the leading violinist in Russia.

—o—

Tanglewood Tales

Final Student Event
Saturday, Aug. 13

The season's final student symphony orchestra program will feature the presentation of prizes and awards to students of all departments of the Berkshire Music Center, presented at intermission by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the music school. The final concert, not as customary on a Thursday evening, is held Saturday, Aug. 13, at 3 p.m. in the Tanglewood Music Shed. The program will consist of: Mendelssohn: "Italian Symphony," conducted (first two movements) by Miss Aviva Einhorn, Israeli student resident in Paris, (final two movements) by Kenneth Schermerhorn; the movement "Fetes" from Barlioz' "Romeo and Juliet," conducted by George Mester; a Piece for Orchestra by Salvatore Martirano, conducted by Seymour Lipkin, who assists Leonard Bernstein in training the student symphony; Dvorak: "Scherzo Capriccioso," conducted by Mr. Lipkin; and "The Tower of St. Barbara," by Ingolf Dahl, head of the Tanglewood Study Group, conducted by the composer. The Martirano work won the Segalyn award for the best orchestral work written and completed at Tanglewood: the composer is a student of composition at Tanglewood this summer.

* * *

Student Program

The Tanglewood on Parade program of the student symphony orchestra at 6 p.m. in the Music Shed on Aug. 11 will consist of: Copland: "Outdoor Overture," conducted by James Yannatos; Brahms: "Tragic Overture," conducted by Kenneth Schermerhorn; Debussy: "Afternoon of a Faun," with George Mester on the podium; and the "Roman Carnival Overture" of Berlioz, conducted by Henry Janiec.

Members Meet At Museum For Opening

Varied Program of 17th Annual Event Attracts About 250

The 17th annual "Summer Members' Night" at the Berkshire Museum last evening was attended by about 250. Probably due to the fact that the event was the second at the museum in a week, the crowd was smaller than usual. The first was "Celebrity Night" last Tuesday.

The program included a short French film on the scaling of the Eiffel Tower, a lecture illustrated by color slides on "Wildflowers Along New England Trails," by Raymond D. Wood of Mount Kisco, N.Y., and the opening of the fourth annual Berkshire Art Assn. exhibition.

Also on exhibition were watercolors by Wilfred G. deGlehn, photographs by Alfred Eisenstadt, sculpture by Peter Abate, paintings by Paul Decker, and a Boston Symphony Orchestra exhibit of photographs of famous musicians by George J. Kossuth.

Preceding the program in the museum theater Gardner S. Morse, president of the trustees, welcomed the members and briefly reviewed improvements and additions of the past year and prospective ones. He asked the continued support of the community.

Refreshments were served in the Ellen Crane room, where members and exhibitors met to discuss the show.

Lenox

String Quartet At Service Sunday

LENOX—A string quartet and a guest soloist all from Tanglewood will furnish the music Sunday morning at 11 at the Church-on-the-Hill, Congregational.

Miss Helen Zimbler, soprano soloist, a former student at Tanglewood and wife of Josef Zimbler, a cellist in the Boston Symphony, will sing Bach's "Be Thou Near Me" and the Andante from the Motet "Exsultate, Jubilate" by Mozart. During the winter Mrs. Zimbler is soloist at the First Parish Church in Brookline.

The quartet accompanying Mrs. Zimbler is composed of Jesse Cecl, John Fiasca and Mr. Zimbler, all of the Boston Symphony, and Mrs. John Fiasca.

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

'Missa Solemnis' Friday at Lenox

With two more week-ends left for the Berkshire Festival at Lenox, Mass., this Friday's concert will be a particularly good one for enthusiasts who prefer sitting outside on the grass to the confines of seat under cover.

Beethoven's monumental "Missa Solemnis," with the Boston Symphony conducted by Leonard Bernstein and with collaborating chorus and soloists, should carry far into the distant confines of the Tanglewood estate, home of the Festival.

Soloists for the event will be Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor, and Mac Morgan, bass. Richard Burgin, concertmaster, will be the solo violinist for the "Benedictus." The Festival chorus will be comprised of students from the Berkshire Music Center, under the direction of Hugh Ross.

Charles Munch returns to the podium for the Saturday concert when the second act of Beethoven's "Fidelio" will be heard in concert form followed by excerpts from Wagner's "Goetterdaemmerung" with Metropolitan Opera soprano, Margaret Harshaw, as soloist.

Istomin Plays Sunday

All-Beethoven is the schedule for Sunday afternoon with Munch again on the podium and Eugene Istomin, pianist, soloist in the Fourth Concerto in G Major. The Eighth and Fifth Symphonies complete the program.

"The Rope," one-act opera by Louis Mennini, selected for production by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, will be preemed by students of Boris Goldovsky's opera department at Tanglewood, in Lenox, Mass., next Monday and Tuesday (8-9). On the same program will be "Zaide" (K. 344), an unfinished two-act opera by Mozart which, it's believed, will be getting its first U.S. performances.

Miss Robinson Smith, Mahanna on WBEC

Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge, president of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc., and John G. W. Mahanna, county editor of The Eagle, will be interviewed tonight at 8:30 over WBEC by Martin Booksband of the Tanglewood public relations staff.

They will describe the early days of the Festival in Berkshire County as well as Mr. Mahanna's book, "Music Under the Moon," a history of the Festival which was published last month.

HIRE GAZETTE, NORTHAMI

Serkin, Pianist Thrills Audience At Tanglewood

Rudolph Serkin, pianist, has a wonderful way with Beethoven sonatas, and the how, why and wherefore of this way was demonstrated to more than 2,500 enthusiastic persons who heard his Theatre Concert Hall recital at Tanglewood last night.

Mr. Serkin is one of the most distinguished artists of our time. His playing of three Beethoven sonatas was in the finest tradition and could only serve to enhance his already brilliant reputation.

The sonatas included on the program proved an excellent illustration of the composer's development. First was the sonata in F. Major, Op. 10, No. 2, built along the more rigid lines of the classical period, with its formal following in the allegro of the sonata-allegro form, and with its three movement plan. Mr. Serkin captured the gayety inherent in the work, especially the lilt and the flow of the first movement. While it was breathless and free, it was also a careful study.

The second programmed work was the Waldstein sonata. Here the composer's bridge from classicism to romanticism is apparent, especially in the powerful first and third movements. Mr. Serkin played cleanly and lovingly, more than equal to the torturous demands of the Allegretto.

The Hammerklavier sonata which closed the program is clearly romantic, the last phase of the composer's maturation. It is a horrifyingly difficult work, especially the final movement.

Mr. Serkin was more successful with the first three; in the last there were moments when the tone was simply loud. In spite of this minor complaint, the performance was a triumph.

Unfortunately, Mr. Serkin has accumulated mannerisms which serve only to distract. He smiles, sighs, sings (in a monotone) and stamps, even rising from his seat occasionally to emphasize a particularly forceful phrase.

But with eyes closed, one can only bask in the beauty of delicate and finely molded phrases, sweeping, gradual and powerful crescendos, soft and melting pianissimos, and ringing and singing tone. Mr. Serkin's coupling of magnificent technical proficiency with profound artistry marks him as one of the musical "great." His superb playing of a difficult but dazzling program last night illustrated this to an eminently satisfying degree.—R. D.

Kansas City Star 7/31 19E

Musical Impressions Mostly Electrifying at Tanglewood

By Joseph Kaye,

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS., July 30.—The first week end of the Berkshire Festival concerts in the shed with the full Boston Symphony orchestra, left three impressions—an electrifying performance of the Beethoven Seventh by Charles Munch, an introduction to Roger Sessions's "The Black Maskers" by Pierre Monteux, and the presentation by Munch of three Beethoven symphonies on one program, the First, Fourth and Sixth. The first two impressions were positive; the third, on the negative side.

In years of concert-going one would have been hard put to recall a more exciting interpretation of the Seventh. Munch and his men seemed transported, and so did the audience, for there were shining faces all around and cheers vaulted down from the high ceiling to envelop the huge auditorium with enthusiasm.

"The Black Maskers" offered a new appraisal of its noted American composer. First written over thirty years ago as incidental music to Andreyev's play of the same title, and later rewritten as a suite, it is a powerful theatrical piece with some overwhelming climaxes. Surprisingly, it is melodic.

In spirit this composition is reminiscent of both the Saint-Saens "Dance Macabre" and Dukas's "The Sorcerer's Apprentice," but the instrumentation and the tone painting are of tremendous scope and strength.

As for the three Beethoven symphonies combined on one program — though performed with grace and feeling, as the music required, the similarity of style created some boredom. The old story—too much of one thing.

Syracuse Herald Journal 8/3

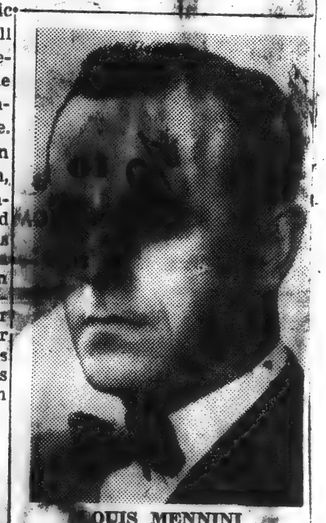
TALKING IT OVER

Eastman Scholar's Opera to Be Sung in 'Tanglewood'

By EMMA VAN WORMER

The world premiere of "The Rope," a one-act opera by Louis Mennini of the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, will take place next Monday and Tuesday nights in "Tanglewood." The work was commissioned by the Berkshire Music Center.

Boris Goldovsky of the Music Center's Opera department will direct the opera which was begun in "Tanglewood" during the summer of 1953 when the composer was in residence there. A student of Dr. Howard Hanson and Bernard Rogers in Eastman, Composer Mennini won the National Institute of Arts and Letters Award in 1949 and has composed another one-act opera, "The Well." He also has written an Arioso for strings, an overture and an andante for orchestra and a sonatina for cello and piano. The opera is adapted from Eugene O'Neil's one-act play. Mennini did both the libretto and score.



LOUIS MENNINI

* * *

Chautauqua Will Honor Memory of Albert Stoessel

Berk. Courier 8/4

Tanglewood Will Be On Parade August 11

Arthur Fiedler Will Conduct Boston "Pops"

Annual Event for Benefit of Berkshire Music Center Attracted 10,500 Last Year.—Every Department of Summer Music School Will Give Demonstrations.

Tanglewood will be On Parade Thursday, August 11. The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, which attracted 10,500 persons in 1954, afternoon and evening festivities in Lenox, is in aid of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, now in its thirteenth session in conjunction with the six-week Berkshire Festival. The gala day's activities, from 6:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m., include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, an evening concert, followed by drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

The Boston "Pops" Orchestra, with Arthur Fiedler, its celebrated conductor for 26 years, on the podium, will perform a typical "Pops" program, as it did in 1954 when it made its first appearance in Tanglewood's 6000-seat Music Shed, helping to shatter all attendance records for "Tanglewood on Parade." Through its annual seasons in Symphony Hall and at the Esplanade concerts on the Charles river mall in Boston, its extensive tours, and the mediums of recordings, radio and television, probably more people have heard the "Pops" and Arthur Fiedler than any other orchestra or conductor in history. Mr. Fielder, who conducted the Art Commission Pop Concerts in San Francisco's Civic Auditorium last week, flies to conduct the Miami Beach Pops' Concerts in Florida on August 7, will fly to the Berkshires for "Tanglewood on Parade," then flies to Miami for a second concert August 14, returning immediately to Boston to conclude the Esplanade series August 15 to 20.

The first half of the concert program in the shed next Thursday will be given at 8:15 p.m. by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's orchestra and conducting departments, and himself a student at the music school in 1940, the first year of its founding. Mr. Bernstein will conduct the first performance anywhere of a suite he has arranged from the music he composed for the film, "On the Waterfront," which won the 1955 Academy Award and additional Oscars for its star, Marlon Brando, and its director, Elia Kazan. Also on this portion of the program will be "A Lincoln Portrait" by Aaron Copland, the distinguished American composer who is assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center (on leave of absense in 1955). It was first performed by the Boston Symphony on April 9, 1943.

Leonard Bernstein, noted equally as composer, conductor and concert pianist, will be soloist with the Boston "Pops" in George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." Mr. Fiedler's program will also include the "Caprice Espagnole" of Rimsky-Korsakov, and the suite of Johann Strauss dances from the ballet "Graduation Ball" as arranged by Antal Dorati. A number of encores in typical light popular "Pops" vein will follow.

Seats for "Tanglewood on Parade" are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office, and may be reserved by telephone.

Musical Vignettes

Kansas City Star 7/31

OUR New York correspondent, Joseph Kaye, covering the summer's first Boston Symphony concert in the shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., described a "remarkable performance" of Beethoven's Seventh symphony . . . Kaye mentioned that Richard Wagner called this composition an apotheosis of the dance, and added: "Mr. (Charles) Munch made it into a dance of life, vigorous, joyful, tender, groping, and finally nobly and passionately triumphant" . . . The violin soloist on this all-Beethoven program was Isaac Stern, in the Concerto in D Major, and Stern's interpretation "was sweet and rather small-scaled, being most effective in the purely lyrical and long, sustained passages."

Wrote Kaye: "Twelve concerts in the shed are to be given during the next four week ends, and Mr. Munch will dedicate himself largely to the works of Beethoven. When the festival closes August 14 he will have played all the nine symphonies, several concertos and overtures, and presented the second act of 'Fidelio' and the 'Missa Solemnis'."

23

Berk. Courier 8/4

Festival Audience Thrills to Brahms

Monteux Is Guest Conductor at Tanglewood Sunday

Isaac Stern Reaches Great Heights In "Concerto for Violin With Orchestra In D Major."—Rudolph Serkin Enticed Audience With Piano Concerto Saturday Evening.

By George E. Membrino

Brahms was the "Magic Word" Sunday as the fourth week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox was brought to a close. An extremely large audience thrilled to strains of the music by Brahms with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor.

Mr. Monteux is a conductor extremely cautious in the conservation of motion. This feeling of no wasted motion accounts for the artistic ease with which Mr. Monteux conducts.

The "Academic Festival Overture" opened the program. A most vibrant and rollicking mood was set. The many themes of "collegiate" nature were blended with excellent results.

Returning for the third time this season was the violin soloist, Isaac Stern. The "Concerto for Violin with Orchestra in D major" was substituted in place of the "Concerto for Violin and Cello with Orchestra in A major" due to Gregor Piatigorsky's unavailability. Mr. Stern reached great heights in the second movement. The adagio was played most fluently and tranquilly.

Highlights of the afternoon's performance was "Symphony No. 1 in C minor." In the second movement (andante sostenuto) attention was directed to the superb solo violin passage offered by Concertmaster Richard Burgin. The third movement was short and delightful.

The final movement, (adagio, allegro non troppo ma con brio) brought to play the light pizzicatto of the strings followed by the brass choir in a choral style. It was a fitting climax to an afternoon of musical pleasure rich in experience.

A most varied program was presented Friday evening. Music by Handel, Schumann, Barber and Brahms was heard. Charles Munch's first offering was "Suite for Orchestra" by Handel. This composition is better known as the "Water Music." The suite, happy and charming, provided delightful listening through the ease and light reading offered by the conductor.

Symphony No. 4 in D minor, by Schumann, interested us from the standpoint of having no complete breaks between movements. This remains an extremely difficult role for the conductor to give balance and co-ordination for the comprehensive effect of the entire work. Maestro Munch succeeded in enabling his listeners to realize the full impact of this symphony.

Both these works gave the brass section of the orchestra (the horns in particular) an opportunity to come to full light and prominence. This section, seldom singled out for honors, was accorded special recognition by Mr. Munch.

The expected highlight of the evening, Mr. Barber's "Players of Kierkegaard," proved to be a great disappointment in musical content. Praise is high for the soprano soloist, Leontyne Price, chorus, and all concerned, but however, it was the music that left us cold.

The Barber piece was commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation and was first performed last year. This work paralleled a composition of Lucas Foss, "Parable of Death," performed at Tanglewood in 1953. Both by contemporaries, they lack the qualities of great choral and orchestral works such as Beethoven's and Mahler's, to mention a few. Deep emotional feeling, as is the case in such works, was lost, as the orchestra completely dominated the choral scene at climatic points.

Following intermission the Brahms "Symphony No. 4 in E minor" was played. Here the conductor returned to his lofty place as an interpreter of the finest in musical taste. With the exception of the Barber work Mr. Munch conducted without the aid of a score.

An all-Beethoven program was offered Saturday evening. Heard was the "Overture to Goethe's Egmont," "Concerto for Piano No. 5 in E flat major," and "Symphony No. 3 in E flat major Eroica." Soloist for the piano concerto was Rudolph Serkin.

Mr. Serkin enticed the audience into rendering the greatest ovation of the current season and certainly one of the greatest afforded any guest soloist in all Tanglewood history.

The audience Saturday night was also one of the largest ever attending a single concert. Numbering well over 15,000 persons and stretching as far back on the lawn as the main administration building, they were rewarded with an evening of Beethoven rarely heard under such favorable conditions.

It is quite understandable why Mr. Munch chose to honor Beethoven this summer. A smile little short of rapturous comes over his face when conducting the works of this great master of the past. E flat seemed to be the keynote of the evening's pleasure, with both the "Piano Concerto" and the "Eroica Symphony" being written in that key.

An oft-repeated anecdote of the "Eroica" remains constant in our minds with each new hearing. Beethoven supposedly had Napoleon in mind for this symphony. All that is great in human stature is definitely portrayed in this symphony. Even the slow second movement funeral march rises to the height of strength in life before it subsides. The knowledge of Napoleon's real self later turned the intention of Beethoven. We now prefer to think of the "Eroica" as giving us an insight into the greatness of Beethoven rather than Napoleon.

BIG CATTLE SHOW IS PROMISED FOR DUTCHESS FAIR

The 110th annual Dutchess County Fair in Rhinebeck, N. Y., will have more than 1,000 head of dairy and beef cattle on the showgrounds this year — a gain of 25 percent more than last year's record entry, Samuel Morrison predicted today. He is the general superintendent of cattle.

While the $7,718 being offered in open class premiums is a big drawing card to herdsmen, the change in dates for the fair this year appears to be the reason for the gain. The Dutchess Fair will play for five days and nights, beginning Saturday, August 27.

"I already have had several notes from cattlemen saying that they want to show their stock at Rhinebeck this year for the first time," said Mr. Morrison. "Because our fair previously conflicted with other fairs, they could not show in Rhinebeck in the past."

No cattle will be judged on Sunday, August 28.

On opening day, Saturday, 4-H Club dairy and beef showmanship contests will get under way at 10 a.m., and open class Ayrshires will be judged starting at 2 p.m. On Monday, 4-H Club Holsteins and open class Aberdeen Angus will be judged at 10 a.m.

On Tuesday, 4-H Club steers and open class Holsteins will be judged at 9 a.m., open class Herefords at 11 a.m., and 4-H Club Guernseys at 1 p.m. On closing day, Wednesday, open class Guernseys and Jerseys will be judged at 10 a.m.

All cattle entries close August 12.

TANGLEWOOD PLANS MUSICAL WIND-UP

Tanglewood will open its programs this weekend with the evening-long performance on Friday of Beethoven's Missa Solemnis conducted by Leonard Bernstein. On Saturday evening Charles Munch will conduct Act 2 of Beethoven's Fidelio with soloists Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd, Mac Morgan, Christina Cardillo, Malcolm Bernstein and Arthur Schoep. The program will also include excerpts from Gotterdammerung with Miss Harshaw as soloist in the Immolation Scene. On Sunday afternoon, August 7, Munch will again conduct an all-Beethoven program; the 8th Symphony in F major; the Piano Concerto No. 4 in G major with Eugene Istomin, soloist; the 5th Symphony in C minor.

During next week Tanglewood plans a musical fare which includes a Wednesday chamber music all-Beethoven concert at the Theater-Hall; Tanglewood on Parade will draw thousands to Lenox on Thursday, August 11, with Boston Symphony, Boston "Pops" and various student groups giving performances throughout the evening; Friday evening, August 12, Mr. Munch will conduct an all-French program of Berlioz' Symphonie Fantastique, Debussy's La Mer, Ravel's Daphnis and Chloe Suite No. 2. On Saturday Pierre Monteux will take up the baton for Wagner's overture to The Flying Dutchman; Brahms' Symphony No. 3 in F major; Debussy's Three Nocturnes, Clouds, Festivals, Sirens. On Sunday, August 14, Mr. Munch closes the season with Beethoven's Overture to Leonore and the monumental 9th Symphony with soloists and chorus.

Grace Notes

TANGLEWOOD, JULY 29
By A. C. S.

Some 7,000 persons were on hand this evening to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch in a program that could be criticized only in terms of personal preferences for certain schools of musical composition. There could be no quarrel with the performance. It was brilliant in all respects.

Three works were from the standard repertoire: Hamilton Harty's arrangement of Handel's Water Music, the Fourth Symphony of Schumann, and the Fourth Symphony of Brahms.

The other work was Samuel Barber's Prayers of Kierkegaard, for mixed chorus, soloists, and orchestra. A recent composition by Barber, and one which will enhance his already fine reputation, it was commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation and given its first performance last December. It is a work which demands rehearing, but even the first time the auditor is aware of sincerity and integrity in the writing. The idiom ranges from consonance to dissonance; from a quasi-plainsong simplicity to an extreme complexity of triple choirs and elaborate orchestration. Leontyne Price sang the soprano solos, which she premiered last winter, with great warmth. The incidental solos for contralto and tenor were sung by Regina Sarfaty and Arthur Schoep. Mr. Munch, obviously dedicated to the new score, gave a unified reading.

TANGLEWOOD, JULY 30
By A. C. S.

In his address at the first assemblage of students at Tanglewood this summer, Charles Munch gave the following words as a reason for featuring music by Beethoven at the Festival: "It expresses everything that a human being can feel; happiness and suffering. It is elevating and ennobling. And it will forever be as necessary to us who love music as faith is necessary to those who love Christ." The sincerity of this statement was truly exemplified in the concert given this evening. More than 15,000 persons came to Lenox to hear three familiar works, the Egmont Overture, the Concerto No. 5, for piano and orchestra, and the Third Symphony.

Rudolph Serkin made his initial appearance at Tanglewood tonight. He will undoubtedly be asked to return many times. As soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto he dazzled us with his technical proficiency, moved us with the thoughtful mood of the Adagio, and frolicked through the Rondo. The audience was receptive and applauded vigorously.

Mr. Munch gave a highly personal reading of the "Eroica" Symphony. There were moments of brooding over some passages while others were played more casually. His approach had a tendency to give a more "romantic" feeling than one generally associates with his work. However, consistency made this approach convincing. All the qualities enumerated by Mr. Munch were present, qualities which made the performance a rewarding experience for all.

TANGLEWOOD, JULY 31
By A. C. S.

Pierre Monteux appeared as guest conductor this afternoon in a program devoted to music by Johannes Brahms. The famous octogenarian began the concert with a buoyant rendition of the Academic Festival Overture. One was tempted to burst into song in the closing "Gaudeamus igitur."

The Concerto for Violin and Cello, originally scheduled for the program, had to be cancelled. The cellist, Gregor Piatigorsky, was unfortunately indisposed. The violinist, Isaac Stern, was on hand, however, to play the Concerto for Violin and Orchestra. His playing was sensitive, with clarity of tone and a lyric quality. The orchestral collaboration was handled to perfection, Mr. Monteux permitting the soloist to shine without losing any of the fine points in the accompaniment.

The First Symphony was projected as a study in contrasts. The first and last movements loomed massively on either side of the more delicate middle movements. The second movement became a real rondo while the third ambled good-naturedly along. Some 12,000 listeners joined the members of the Boston Symphony in giving Mr. Monteux a well deserved standing ovation at the close of the concert.

(Continued on Page Twelve)

Due to his recent injury, Mr. Piatigorsky's appearances at Tanglewood on August 10 and 12 have also been cancelled. The Fantastic Symphony of Berlioz will probably replace the Schelomo for cello and orchestra on the latter program.

Claude Rains To Narrate In Tanglewood on Parade

Prominent stage and screen actor Claude Rains will take the role of narrator for Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," a high light of next Thursday's Tanglewood on Parade program, it was announced today.

Mr. Rains, who will be making his debut at Tanglewood with this reading, has made three appearances in this work with Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra. The performance in the Music Shed will be his first with Leonard Bernstein and the Boston Symphony for the Broadway star of "Darkness at Noon" and "The Confidential Clerk."

Shavian Favorite

Mr. Rains, familiar to motion picture fans for featured roles in half a hundred films, including "The Invisible Man," "Anthony Adverse," "Juarez," "Here Comes Mr. Jordan," "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," "Caesar and Cleopatra" (he was Bernard Shaw's personal choice for the Roman dictator), "Casablanca" and "Notorious," was born in London and has been an actor since childhood.

He came to the U.S. first in 1914 with the late Harley Granville-Barker to act in Shaw's "Androcles and the Lion," then, after service in World War I and a dozen London productions, returned to Broadway for a notable group of plays produced by the Theater Guild, including "Volpone," "Marco Millions," "The Moon in the Yellow River," "The Apple Cart" and "Too True To Be Good." Before he went to Hollywood and stardom in 1935 he acted the dynamic counsel for the defense in "They Shall Not Die."

He made a concert tour under the title "Words and Music" this spring, and currently can be heard over the NBC network in a program of dramatic readings. The noted actor is coming to Tanglewood next week directly from Stock Grange, the 400-acre farm he owns and operates near Philadelphia.

One of Three Portraits

Mr. Copland's Lincoln study was inspired by Andre Kostalanetz, who during the crucial weeks following the U.S. entry into the second world war, gave thought to a means by which music could be used to mirror the spirit of our country. The result was a triptych of musical characterizations, Mr. Copland's, Jerome Kern's on Mark Twain, and Virgil Thompson's on the late Mayor LaGuardia of New York. Mr. Copland's text comes from the letters and speeches of Lincoln, and the music incorporates two songs of the period, the famous "Camptown Races" and a ballad of 1840 known today as "Springfield Mountain."

Claude Rains

The composition is divided into three sections, the first suggesting the mysterious sense of fatality that surrounds Lincoln's personality, including something of his gentleness and simplicity; the middle one sketching the background of his era; the last with a simple but impressive frame about the words of Lincoln himself. The work received its first performance by the Boston Symphony on April 9, 1943.

'Waterfront Suite'

Mr. Bernstein's Shed program will also include the world premiere of a suite arranged from his music for the Academy Award film, "On the Waterfront," and he will appear as piano soloist in George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" during the portion of the program devoted to Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops.

The early part of the annual benefit program, from 6 to 8 p.m., will feature simultaneous demonstrations by all five departments of the Berkshire Music Center. Holders of box seats and reserved ticket patrons also are invited to a performance by the opera department of Puccini's "Gianni Schicchi," in the formal gardens.

Tanglewood On Parade To Feature Claude Rains August 11 At Lenox

Distinguished stage, screen, radio and television star Claude Rains will narrate Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," which will be a highlight of the gala evening concert next Thursday (August 11), in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., during "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school.

The Broadway star of Sidney Kingsley's dramatic "Darkness At Noon" and of T. S. Eliot's comedy-drama "The Confidential Clerk" will make his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting, and his debut at Tanglewood in the stirring musical portrait of the Great Emancipator which was composed during the war by Mr. Copland, the noted American composer who is assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center (on leave of absence in 1955) and which was first performed by the Boston Symphony on April 9, 1943. Mr. Rains made three appearances in "A Lincoln Portrait" with the Philadelphia Orchestra, Eugene Ormandy conducting, twice in Philadelphia and once at Carnegie Hall, New York, in April, 1949.

Claude Rains, familiar to motion picture fans for featured roles in half a hundred films, including "The Invisible Man," "Anthony Adverse," "Juarez," "Here Comes Mr. Jordan", "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington", "Caesar and Cleopatra" (he was Barnard Shaw's personal choice for the Roman dictator) "Casablanca" and "Notorious," was born in London and has been an actor since childhood. He came to the U. S. first in 1914 with the late Harley Granville-Barker to act in Shaw's "Androcles and the Lion", then after service in World War I and a dozen West End productions, returned to Broadway for a notable group of plays produced by the Theatre Guild, including "Volpone," "Marco Millions," "The Moon in the Yellow River," "The Apple Cart" and "Too True to be Good." Before he went to Hollywood and stardom in 1935 he acted the dynamic counsel for the defense in "They Shall Not Die." He made a concert tour under the title "Words and Music" this spring, and currently can be heard over the N. B. C. network Monday through Friday afternoons in a program of dramatic readings. The noted actor is coming to Tanglewood next week directly from Stock Grange, the 400-acre farm he owns and operates near Philadelphia.

Rev. Howard Conn To Preach Here Sunday Morning

The Rev. Howard J. Conn of the Plymouth Congregational Church, Minneapolis, Minn., will be preacher at the First Congregational Church, 10 a.m., Sunday.

Mr. Conn was minister of the Congregational Church in Great Barrington, from 1941 until 1944. He has just completed 11 weeks on the National Radio Pulpit. Last year Harper & Brothers published a book by Mr. Conn, "The Hope That Set Men Free."

He is chairman of the policy and planning committee of the Board of Home Missions of the Congregational Church and has just completed a term as president of the Minneapolis Council of Churches. His topic Sunday will be "Finding Power in the Upward Reach."

Miss Lee Goebel of Tanglewood will be soloist. She will sing "Patiently Have I Waited" and "Thou, O Lord, Art My Protector," both numbers by Saint-Saens.

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS. Concerts Through Aug. 14

Berkshire Festival

BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

A Season of BEETHOVEN

Shed Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra

Fri., Aug. 5 at 2:30—BEETHOVEN—Missa Solemnis (BERNSTEIN)
Sat., Aug. 6 at 2:30—Beethoven—WAGNER (MUNCH)
Soloist: Margaret Harshaw, Soprano
Sun., Aug. 7 at 2:30—BEETHOVEN PROGRAM (MUNCH)
Soloist: Eugene Istomin, Piano
Tickets: Wed., $2, $3; Shed—$2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Adm. $2)

"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—Thurs. Aug. 11
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestra—Conductors, Leonard Bernstein; Arthur Fiedler—Lincoln Impersonations by CLAUDE RAINS

Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

For programs and ticket information apply

TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD; LENOX, MASS. PHONE LENOX 000
OPEN REHEARSAL SAT. AT 10 A.M.—ADMISSION $1

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 130,559

AUG 1 1955

25

Rich and Rewarding Weekend At Berkshire Music Festival

By ELINOR HUGHES

set of week-end programs at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood provided rich and rewarding classical music fare, not many surpieces but performances of exceptional quality and audiences of substantial size.

The crowd present last night for the all-Beethoven program conducted by Charles Munch with Rudolf Serkin as soloist came, by actual count, to 15,500 persons, the largest assemblage since 1951. And the one attending this afternoon's all-Brahams concert conducted by Pierre Monteux was very nearly as large, held down in size, perhaps, by the relentless heat of the sun.

PROGRAM EXPLAINED

This summer's programs at Tanglewood were questioned, in advance because the main concerts in the Shed did not include new music and were, in fact, devoted mainly to the works of Brahns and Beethoven. The explanation for the nature of the concerts for this 18th season can be found in Charles Munch's address to the students of the Merkshire Music Center at its first assemblage early last month.

"The principal reason why we musicians must always listen to this music and why we must make it heard is that it is above all human. Everyone can find in it what he needs and what he is searching for. This music, which is not sensual, not abstract, not dramatic in the sense of Wagner, not romantic in the sense of Schumann, not sentimental, not pathetic—is all of them at once. It expresses everything that a human being can feel: happiness and suffering. It is elebating and ennobling. And it will forever be as necessary to us who love music as faith is necessary to those who love Christ."

Considering the performances I was fortunate enough to hear, most especially that glorious Beethoven evening, when Serkin and the orchestra made the "Emperor" Concerto a thing of nobility and fire, and a beautiful example of perfect balance between the soloist and the accompanying musicians, it seems that apoligies are needless for devoting a music festival to the greatest of composers.

Mr. Munch himself glorified his decision by conducting, Friday night, a romantically lovely program consisting of a suite from Handel's "Water Music," arranged by Sir Hamilton Harty; Schumann's Symphony No. 4, Brahms' Symphony No. 4, and Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," with Leontyne Price as chief soloist (she sang at the Boston premiere last season), the Festival Chorus, Hugh Ross conductor, and Regina Sarfaty and Arthur Shoep as assisting soloists. And yesterday in addition to the "Emperor" Concerto, he also conducted the "Eroica" with eloquence and majesty," the Overture to "Egmont" with fine dramatic feeling.

This afternoon, Pierre Monteux took the stand to conduct the all-Brahms program, consisting of the Academic Festival Overture, which seemed to take on a special appropriateness in the Tanglewood atmosphere; the Symphony No. 1 and the Concerto for Violin and Orchestra with Issac Stern as soloist.

Deepite the seadily increasing heat, the enthusiasm of the audience was enormous, and justified. Mr. Stern played with serene beauty of tone, perfect mastery certo, for all its familiarity, of technique and a feeling for the music that made the consurely be said for the symphony, which Mr. Monteux conducted fresh and new. The same could with authority and affection.

TRAFFIC SITUATION

Everything, in short, was of top quality, everything—and I hate to bring this matter up again but it can't be avoided —but the traffic situation. Whether in the public parking place or the smaller parking place for the box-holders, it was enough to try the patience of saints and traffic police.

The single narrow exit from the box-holders' space proved a nightmare in today's heat—why it can't be doubled in width and another exit added is hard to figure. And that narrow road from the big parking space to the center of Lenox—well, it's a miracle that it usually empties out the thousands of cars in about an hour, but it hardly seems ideal. The Festival program pleads for patience but offers no hope of relief.

ORTHAMPTON, MASS., THURSDAY, A

F/4

One-Act Opera World Premiere At Tanglewood

"The Rope," an opera in one act by Louis Mennini, commissioned for production by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will have its world premiere by students of Boris Goldovsky's opera department in the Theatre-Concert Hall at 8:30 on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 8 and 9. On the same program will be "Zaide" (K. 344), an unfinished two-act opera by Mozart; so far as can be learned, the Tanglewood performances will be the first in the U. S. Two different casts of students of the opera department will sing.

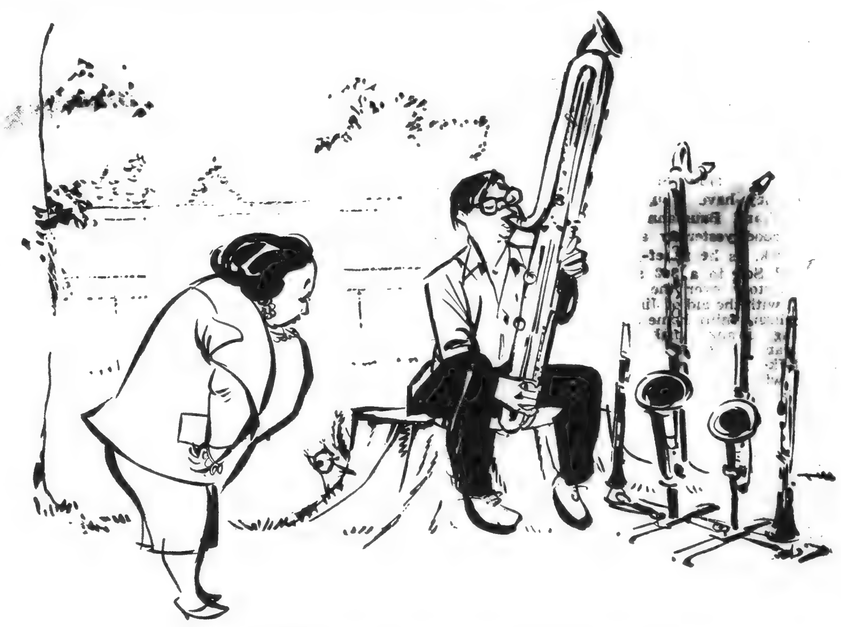
The performances are open to those who support the summer music school by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

"The Rope" was composed by Louis Mennini, of the faculty of the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N. Y., who spent the summer of 1953 at Tanglewood on commission by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation and prepared his work from the beginning in consultation with Mr. Goldovsky and his staff. The opera is based on Eugene O'Neil's one-act play of the same name, which was originally performed by The Provincetown Players, Provincetown, Mass., April 26, 1917.

"The composer has worked in close consultation with our staff at Tanglewood," says Mr. Goldovsky, "through all stages of operatic composition, beginning with the choice of text and initial arrangement of the libretto and continuing through to the final matters of orchestral scoring, scenic and costume investiture. Mr. Mennini has supervised casting and attended vocal and instrumental rehearsals. By providing an opportunity for a young composer to live with the musical theatre, the Koussevitzky commission is enabling him to steep himself in the problems peculiar to it."

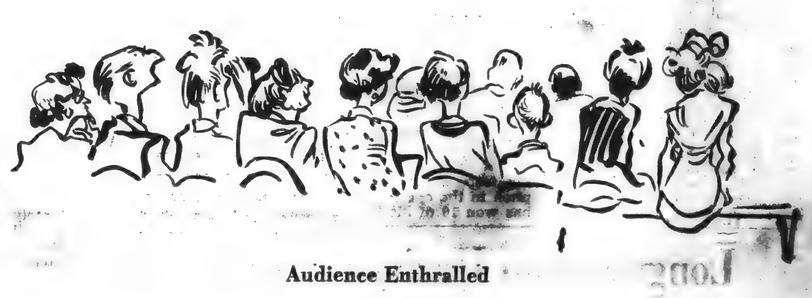
Non-par clear
Circ. 165,872
AUG 1 1955

Like a Breughel Painting, Crowds on the 'Festwiese,' or Festival Grounds, Wait for the Concert



Wood Wind Department: Genius and Admirer

SCENES at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Music Festival and Music Center at Tanglewood, as seen by Emil Weiss. "The atmosphere," says the artist, "is à la Salzburg but younger and fresher and therefore more enthusiastic. Even tourists become music lovers there. . . ."



Audience Enthralled

Music All Over the Place

Brass: Duetto in the Woods

'Two Tickets to Heaven, Please'

Conductor Charles Munch

Serious Solitary Practice in Scattered Huts

International Huddle: New Students From Abroad

The Jakeville Journal 8/4/55

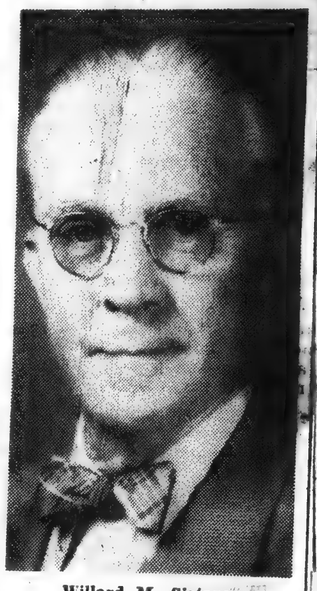
27

W. M. Sistare Takes Post in Connecticut

Eagle 8/4

Pittsfield Man Will Manage New University Auditorium

Willard M. Sistare of Pittsfield has been appointed manager of the newly completed auditorium at the



Willard M. Sistare

University of Connecticut at Storrs, it was learned today.

Mr. Sistare, who will join the university staff in September, will have charge of the operation of the new, imposing landmark on the main campus at Storrs, which will be the center of many of the large-scale university activities and functions. Among these events will be the annual exercises which were held in the new structure last month as the initial event.

The auditorium, built on two levels, has on its first level a hall of approximately 4,2000 movable seats, including balcony, with permanent seating. On a lower level will be the university museum, where there will be on display a number of collections heretofore not shown publicly or in their entirety, due to lack of adequate space. A little theater annex to the auditorium is under construction seating 500, which will have its own entrance.

Mr. Sistare, who was long associated with the Berkshire Festival as head of Shed personnel, has been New England representative since 1942 for Community Concerts Inc., division of Columbia Artists Management of New York.

Springfield Native

A native of Springfield, Mr. Sistare was educated at the University of Pennsylvania, receiving a B.S. degree in economics from the Wharton School. He served as supply officer during World War I at the Naval Air Station, Cape May, N.J., and between 1919 and 1942 was Western Massachusetts representative, first for the Guaranty Co. of New York and later for the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Co., Hartford.

Mr. Sistare, during his undergraduate years at Pennsylvania was a member of the Friars Senior Society, the Varsity, and Mask and Wig clubs. He also was a leader of the U. of P. Glee Club and is a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity.

His wife is the former Marion Rice of Pittsfield. The Sistares have a son, Sanford Rice Sistare, now doing graduate work at the University of Pennsylvania.

lovely young wife, Janna, was mistress of the piano keyboard. Russian-born and educated at the Moscow Conservatory, she is now an American citizen and mother of two potential Presidents of the U. S. A. The audience echoed her five-year-old's "Mama, you played fine" and agreed with him that the best part of the composition was the brief duet she played with his papa.

Less prejudiced members of the audience expressed their appreciation also for Rossi's singing violin and the Quartet's tender, wistful rendering of the Dumka (Andante con moto) portion of this opus.

It was an afternoon to be remembered for many special reasons — for thoughtful programming of variety in composition and combination of players; for the high quality of skills they displayed and the contagious spontaneity and joy of their performance.

TANGLEWOOD OPERA
By D. K.

In a long but rewarding program at Tanglewood Monday evening, students of the opera and chorus departments presented three modern one-act operas and eight unusual choral numbers.

The major event was the production of Romeo and Juliet, a chamber opera in three parts by Boris Blacher, director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin and guest composer in residence this summer at the Berkshire Music Center. Professor Blacher has accomplished a remarkable task in telescoping the play, using the lush language with batim, and preserving the spirit of Shakespeare's drama of the "star-cross'd lovers." Yet the composer, in looking at the play in a new way, has made his operatic interpretation of it a creative work in its own right.

Both as drama and music, the opera lends itself most appropriately to the fresh, youthful voices of the talented young people who performed it. Although no attempt was made to conceal the fact that Lord Capulet was as young and handsome as Romeo, there seemed nothing wrong about this in the kind of enthusiastic student performance given at Tanglewood.

Gabriel de Los Rios was lithe and graceful, both in his singing and acting, as the young Romeo. But the opera, like the play, is Juliet's show. Naomi Farr in the role of Juliet seemed at first competent but routine, but by the end of the second part had attained real stature. The climactic scene when she quaffed the sleeping potion was deeply moving and truly beautiful. Miss Farr's voice and Mr. Blacher's music, with the help of Shakespeare's glorious poetry, made the scene the high point of the production. The choral requiem that closed the scene was not only ingenious technically but beautifully staged and sung.

Professor Blacher's use of the chorus made much sense. The setting by Jack Brown was subtly suggestive, the lighting by David Hays highly effective, and the costumes by Laura Zirner lovely and simple. Robert Kerns, who sang the small part of Benvolio, through his rendition of what is a rather dull, expository speech in the play, made his one scene an outstanding solo.

Ariana Abandoned by Darius Milhaud was the second opera on the program. A brief, tongue-in-cheek spoofing of the Greek myth, it was done as great fun, and was cleverly staged by Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department.

The last opera, Bohuslav Martinu's Comedy on the Bridge, a slapstick musical comment on the senseless aspects of war, was sung with gusto and humor. It suffered from coming at the end of a long program when the audience was perhaps already sated with such a large helping of new, difficult music.

The choral numbers, all generally unfamiliar, were sung with warmth and sincerity. The audience seemed especially to enjoy two museum pieces by William Billings, self-taught American composer of the eighteenth century. His "Lamentation Over Boston" was an unintentionally humorous paraphrase of "By the Waters of Babylon," modernized for Billings' day to read "by the waters of Watertown."

Both Mr. Goldovsky and Hugh Ross, head of the chorus department introduced the various student enterprises with witty, discerning, and the modest comments on the works performed.

Eagle 8/4

Berkshires Prepare for Big Weekend

Tanglewood Crowds Expected To Fill Most Hotels, Inns

Berkshire County appears headed for another large influx of visitors this weekend with most of the area's major hotels and inns already reporting sellouts for Friday and Saturday nights

At Tanglewood in Lenox, officials of the Berkshire Music Festival report heavy advance reservations but estimate that total attendance probably will be somewhat smaller than the record 35,177 who turned out for the three concerts last weekend.

Festival officials are expecting attendance to average about 10,000 for the Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon concerts.

Many Inns Filled

The Berkshire Hills Conference reported this morning that a spot check shows many hotels and inns already booked solidly through the weekend

The Conference reported the following places as being sold out for Friday and Saturday: Red Lion Inn and Heaton Hall, Stockbridge; Williams Inn, Williamstown; Crane Inn, Dalton; Sheffield Inn, Sheffield; Elwal Pines, Williamstown; Berkshire Inn, Great Barrington; Music Inn, Lenox, and the Hotel Wendell-Sherwood in Pittsfield.

Both the Conference and the Pittsfield Chamber of Commerce Information Booth reported that there are still plenty of rooms available in guest houses.

Memorial Concert

A larger than usual crowd is expected at Tanglewood tomorrow for the annual memorial concert for Serge Koussevitzky. Last night a season's record crowd of 2,456 overflowed the theater for a chamber music session. The theater seats 1,200

In Lenox, where a two-hour traffic jam was caused by the 15,500 attending last Saturday's concert, the Kiwanis Information Booth reported that the rush there is as heavy this week as last week.

This weekend is the next to the last in the series of six at Tanglewood.

Vincent Books Buses for Tanglewood Event

Eagle 8/4

Sammy Vincent, North Street music store proprietor, announced today that he had arranged with the management of the Berkshire Street Railway Co. to have bus service to Tanglewood on Parade next Thursday night. The bus will leave Park Square at 5 p.m., Mr. Vincent said, and return when the "parade" program is completed.

Mr. Vincent previously arranged with the bus company to have buses run to Tanglewood on nights of the major concerts. Regular fares are charged but Mr. Vincent agreed to pay the amount under a certain minimum established by the company.

Eagle 8/4

OVERHEARD during great traffic tie-up on West Street, Lenox, after Saturday's Tanglewood concert, a stalled motorist to a lady in front of a guest house: "Do you have any rooms?" The answer was no. "Well," came back the tourist, "how flat is your roof?"

BSO Shares in Will Of $500,000 Estate

Eagle 8/4

DEDHAM (AP) — Under the will of Mrs. Marcia King Chamberlain of Brookline filed Tuesday in Norfolk Probate Court, the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and the Boston Symphony Orchestra will share approximately half of her $500,000 estate. Mrs. Chamberlain, a native of Lamoine, Maine, died May 29.

Specific bequests included: $5,000 each to Lamoine Baptist Church, Lamoine; Radcliffe College and the Radcliffe College Alumni Assn.; and $10,000 each to Mrs. Myrtle B. Ross, Exeter, N.H.; Marianne C. Moore, Brooklyn, N.Y.; and Kath-

Boston Herald 8/6

Opera Scenes at Tanglewood Tonight

With concerts tonight at 8:30 o'clock and tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 the 1955 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, moves into its final weekend but one. Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct both concerts.

The program this evening will be devoted to excerpts from two of the greatest operas in the literature—Beethoven's "Fidelio" and Wagner's "Die Goetterdaemmerung." With Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd and Mac Morgan as the principal soloists and the Berkshire Festival Chorus trained by John Krueger, the first half of the program will consist of a concert presentation of the second act of "Fidelio" (a Tanglewood first performance). After the intermission, three excerpts from "Die Goetterdaemmerung" will be heard: Siegfried's Rhine Journey, Siegfried's Death Music, and the Immolation Scene in which Miss Harshaw will sing Bruennhilde.

Notes and Footnotes

Eagle 7/5

WEEKEND WINDUP: Why summer theaters leave the heavy stuff alone. At Williamstown the new playhouse racked up lowest box-office take from "The Crucible," a play with a Message. The message was bad news for the cash box . . . Christian Dior just reversed last year's stand and admits bosoms are here to stay. Back to the front, eh? . . . To get the proper belt out of this, you've got to be in the know. Two men arrived via Cadillac at Tanglewood to join the Friends group. Were told any donation, a dollar up was acceptable. First man gave 10. Second man asked further, learned $150 would make a scholarship, and wrote out a check. "Oh, you can afford it," oh-ed the first man. "You're foundation." Seems the biggest fortunes in U.S. are held in foundations for tax and other purposes. Unfortunately, lots of us haven't even yet dug our cellar. Foundation, indeed . . . The best way to get a job done is to give it to a busy man. He'll have his

Kingston Gleaner 7/28

8,700 Heard Concert At Tanglewood, Mass. Sunday Afternoon

By W. W. FREDENBURGH

At the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Mass, last Sunday afternoon, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conductor, presented three Beethoven Symphonies, the First, Fourth and Sixth (The Pastoral). This was a pretty heavy dose of symphonic music to be taken at one setting, but performed in the order listed, they provided variety and contrast.

There was not a dull or uninteresting moment from the opening Adagio of the First, through its beautiful Andante Cantabile on into the Fourth with its contrasting phrases with the wood winds and strings, on into the Sixth with its serene impressions on arriving in the country, its dramatic thunder storm and tempest, closing with the glorious Song of Thanksgiving after the storm.

At the close, the audience of nearly 6,000 in the Music Shed stood and applauded for several minutes in tribute to Mr Munch and his wonderful orchestra.

Next Sundays program, July 31, will be conducted by Pierre Monteux and will be devoted to works by Brahms. Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsey will be the soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

The attendance last Sunday was 8,700 thus making the attendance for the three week-end concerts nearly 25,000 persons.

Jewish Advocate, Boston
8/4/55

Claude Rains to Narrate Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait" at Tanglewood

Distinguished stage, screen, radio and television star Claude Rains will narrate Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," which will be a highlight of the evening concert next Thursday (August 11), in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, during "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school.

The Broadway star of Sidney Kingsley's dramatic "Darkness At Noon" and of T. S. Eliot's comedy-drama "The Confidential Clerk" will make his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting, and his debut at Tanglewood in the stirring musical portrait of the Great Emancipator which was composed during the war by Mr. Copland.

Mr. Copland's Lincoln study was inspired by Andre Kostelanetz, who, during the crucial weeks following the U. S.'s entry into the second world war gave thought to a means by which music could be used to mirror the magnificent spirit of our country. The result was a triptych of musical characterizations, Mr. Copland's, Jerome Kern's on Mark Twain and Virgil Thompson's of the late Mayor LaGuardia of New York. Mr. Copland's text comes from letters and speeches of Lincoln, and the music incorporates two songs of the period, the famous "Camptown Races" and a ballad of 1840 known today as "Springfield Mountain." The composition is divided into three sections, the first suggesting the mysterious sense of fatality that surrounds Lincoln's personality, including something of his gentleness and simplicity; the middle one sketching the background of his era; concluding with a simple but impressive frame about the words of Lincoln himself.

Leonard Bernstein, who is conducting "A Lincoln Portrait" with Mr. Rains as speaker with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, also will include on his portion of the "Tanglewood on Parade" concert the first performance anywhere of a suite he has arranged from the music he composed for the Academy Award - winning film "On The Waterfront."

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston "Pops" Orchestra, in a program of Rimsky-Korsakov, Johann Strauss and Gershwin, with Mr. Bernstein soloist in the "Rhapsody in Blue," will conclude the gala concert.

During the early part of "Tanglewood on Parade," patrons are invited to simultaneous demonstrations from 6-8 p. m. by all five departments—student orchestra, chorus, composition, opera and Study Group—of the Berkshire Music Center, and as a dividend to holders of box seats and reserved ticket patrons, there is a performance in the formal gardens by the opera department of Puccini's short comic opera, "Gianni Schicchi."

NY Times 8/6

Six in Symphony to Retire

Six members of the Boston Symphony will retire at the end of the Berkshire Music Festival on Aug. 14. They are Jacob Raichman, first trombonist; Carlos Pinfield and Paul Fedorovsky, first violinists; Ralph del Sordo, second violinist; Louis Artieres, violist, and Walter G. McDonald, French horn player.

Tanglewood Concert Honors Koussevitzky

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 5—Since the death of Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the Berkshire Music School and guiding spirit of the Berkshire Music Festival, one program during the festival season is given in his memory.

We believe that all these programs have been directed by Leonard Bernstein, his favorite pu-

Continued On Page 11

Boston Symphony Orchestra Members End Long Careers

Lenox, Aug. 5—Six members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will retire at the conclusion of the orchestra's Berkshire Festival on Aug. 14 are Jacob Raichman, principal trombone; first violinists Carlos Pinfield and Paul Fedorovsky; second violinist Ralph del Sordo; Louis Artieres, viola; and Walter G. MacDonald, French horn.

Mr. Raichman has been a member of the orchestra since 1927. Mr. Pinfield joined the orchestra in 1912; Fedorovsky in 1925; Artieres and Sordó have both been with the Boston Symphony for 35 years, MacDonald, since 1932.

Incoming members are cellists Richard A. Kapuscinski, of Cincinnati, and Robert Ripley, of Cleveland Heights; violinists Noah Bielski, of Queens Village, N. Y., Alfred Schneider, of St. Louis, and Joseph Silverstein, of Detroit; and trombonist William M. Gibson, of Pittsburgh.

Greatest Operas Will Be Heard At Tanglewood

Lenox, Aug. 5—With concerts on Saturday at 8:30 p. m. and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 p. m., the 1955 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, moves into its final week end but one. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct both concerts.

The program Saturday will be devoted to excerpts from two of the greatest operas in the literature — Beethovens "Fidelio" and Wagner's "Die Gotterdammerung." With Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd and Mac Morgan as the principal soloists, and the Berkshire Festival Chorus trained by John Krueger, the first half of the program will consist of a concert presentation of the second act of "Fidelio," a Tanglewood first performance. After the intermission, three excerpts from "Die Gotterdammerung" will be heard: Siegfried's Rhine Journey, Siegfried's Death Music, and the Immolation Scene in which Miss Harshaw will sing Brunnhilde.

Three assisting "Fidelio" soloists have been chosen by Charles Munch from Tanglewood's opera departments: Malcolm Bernstein of Baltimore, bass, who has the dual role of Pizzaro and Fernando; Christina Cardillo, soprano, North Adams, who sings Marzelline, and Arthur Schoep, New York, who is Jaquino.

Tanglewood

Continued From Page 1

pil and protege. Tonight Mr. Bernstein conducted a glowing, reverent performance of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis in D Major," a performance of which Mr. Koussevitzky assuredly would have approved.

The soloists, all former members of the Berkshire School of Music, were Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Mac Morgan, bass. The eloquence of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was at its greatest communicative power.

Beethoven's mass needs hearing after hearing to gauge its magnitude, depth of feeling and honesty of purpose. He does not give his solo quartet beautiful arias. Nor is there an abundance of purely melodic choral passages. Rather, he works with brief rhythms, fragments of melody and exciting contrasts ranging from fortissimi to pianissimi. In fact, the Gloria is the only section which ends fortissimo, except near the end of the "Agnus Dei." There is both exaltation and humility in this music.

No music is of more personal reflection of Beethoven's belief in his God. Intense personal feeling was the motive of this work and it is not surprising that he wrote over the score: "Coming from the heart, may it again reach the heart."

Chorus Performs Well

The festival chorus had worked diligently and some fine singing was the result. The opening ejaculation, "Kyrie," had tremendous impact. The "Gloria" was sheer magnificence, a composer praising his God. The "Credo" is by far the longest and most comprehensive of the sections, a mighty utterance of Christian faith. There is not a section of the mass where the music does not illuminate the text, not a note which does not testify to the devoutness of the composer, his integrity and musical stature.

Mr. Bernstein's conception of the mass was all-embracing. It was Beethoven who spoke at all times, sometimes in flashes of light and at other times with sublime tenderness.

Miss Addison Excels

The solo quartet, all seasoned singers, were consistently a delight to the ear. Miss Addison's clear soprano floated to the furthest reaches of the shed. David Lloyd, whose knowledge of style is consummate, sang with his accustomed authority. Miss Alberts and Mr. Morgan fitted well into the ensemble, even though they had less to offer vocally than Miss Addison and Mr. Lloyd.

Under Mr. Bernstein's direction, the orchestra played with all the glow and virtuosity it is capable of and Richard Burgin's violin solo in the "Sanctus" was as notable an accomplishment as one heard during the performance.

One could only admire a chorus which had had relatively few rehearsals and which sang with such style and contracting tones, yet one has come to expect the impossible of Tanglewood choruses. The singers were carried along on the unceasing surge of the music and, like the orchestra, gave utterance to the magnificent words in superb fashion.

An audience of 6400 expressed their approval by prolonged and enthusiastic applause.

THE NEW YORK TIMES, THURSDAY, AUGUST 4, 1955.

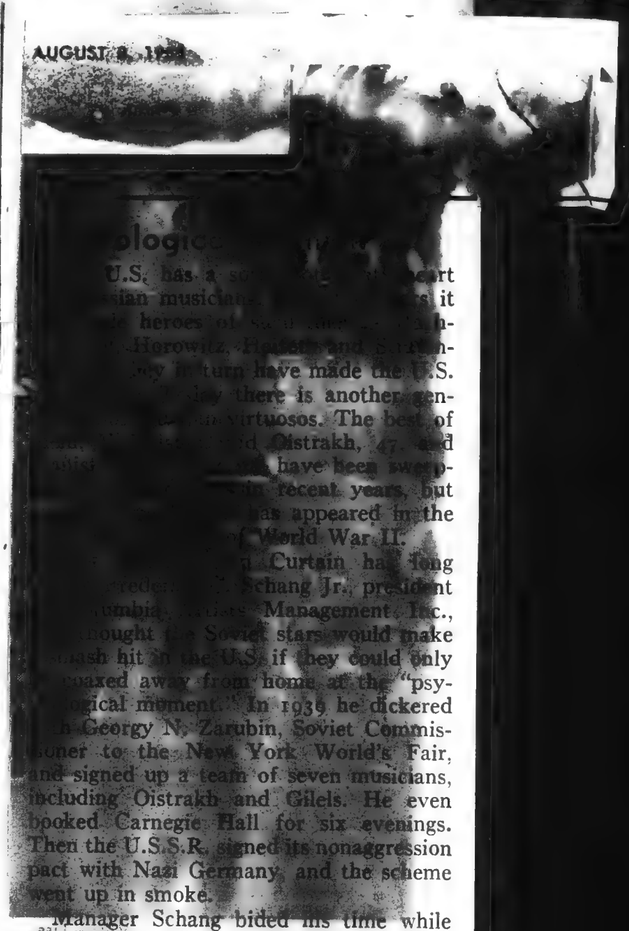
ART EXCHANGE PLANNED

U. S.-Russian Program Pushed by National Foundation

Efforts are being made to pave the way for an exchance of paintings and entertainers with the Soviet Union. Carleton Smith, chairman of the advisory committees of the National Arts Foundation said yesterday that the approval of the Soviet Embassy in Washington had been obtained.

Mr. Smith will leave tomorrow by plane for Moscow to confer with the Minister of Culture and VOKS, a Soviet Government department that handles foreign cultural relations.

The first step is under way, according to Mr. Smith. At the request of the Stanislavsky Museum in Moscow, the National Arts Foundation is sending photostatic copies of letters written by Konstantin Stanislavsky, the famous Russian stage director. Those having such letters are urged by Mr. Smith to allow his office at 60 Broadway to make copies.



AUGUST 8, 1955

...logical ... U.S. has a ... ...sian musicians ... heroes of ... Horowitz, ...y in turn have made the U.S. ... there is another gen- ... virtuosos. The best of ... Oistrakh, ... have been swept ... recent years, but ... has appeared in the ... World War II. ... Curtain has long ... Schang Jr., president ... Management, Inc., ... brought the Soviet stars would make ... hash hit in the U.S. if they could only ... maxed away from home at the "psy- ...gical moment." In 1939 he dickered ... Georgy N. Zarubin, Soviet Commissioner to the New York World's Fair, and signed up a team of seven musicians, including Oistrakh and Gilels. He even booked Carnegie Hall for six evenings. Then the U.S.S.R. signed its nonaggression pact with Nazi Germany, and the scheme went up in smoke.

Manager Schang bided his time while U.S.-Russian relations blew hot and blew cold until, about a year ago, the Soviets joined UNESCO. That, decided Schang, meant a major policy shift, and he promptly opened negotiations with the Soviet embassy in Washington to import Russian musicians. His cause was helped by the fact that the Soviet ambassador is the Georgy Zarubin of World's Fair days. It may also have been helped by the fact that Violinist Yehudi Menuhin met Oistrakh in London and began his own correspondence with the State Department in the hope of winning his colleague a visa to the U.S. When Schang asked about visas, he said, the State Department "encouraged" him. Last week, Pianist Gilels told the embassy he was willing to come. Schang took an option on Carnegie Hall for three dates late in September.

At week's end, Schang was confident that "Gilels is in the bag." Oistrakh may come next spring, if international tempos remain steady. By that time, Schang hopes to see some of his top clients—Conductors Dimitri Mitropoulos, Eugene Ormandy and Leopold Stokowski, Violinist Yehudi Menuhin, Bass-Baritone George London—solidly booked for concerts in Russia.

Back Bay Ledger &
Beacon Hill Times
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 10,000 Free

JUL 28 1955

Symphony Bids To Visit Russia In 1956 Tour

With the announcement in Geneva that President Eisenhower suggested to the Soviet leaders that the iron curtain be lifted for the interchange and improvement of cultural relations, the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra through its president Henry B. Cabot announced that the Boston Symphony would be happy to tour Russia while visiting other European countries in 1956. According to Mr. Cabot, the invitation was extended to the appropriate authorities in Moscow, but no official reply has as yet been received.

Continued on Page Eight

Symphony Bids

Continued from Page One

The orchestra is planning a European trip in September, 1956. Present plans in the negotiating stages, include an opening week festival at Edinburgh after that a visit to Russia could very well be arranged. Mr. Cabot pointed out that if the invitation of the Boston Symphony is accepted that it would be the first time for an American orchestra to visit Russia.

In former years Russia produced musicians and artists of renown. In fact, Serge Koussevitsky, late leader of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was Russian born and a product of its musical schools. So too, we had frequent visits and concerts by individual artists and composers but there is no record of a full symphony orchestra interchange between the two countries.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

AUG 1 1955

Music at Tanglewood

Isaac Stern Soloist in Brahms

By Jules Wolffers
Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

News that there is to be a cultural exchange between the United States and the Soviet Union involving Yehudi Menuhin and David Oistrakh has increased the speculation at the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra about the orchestra's proposed tour to Russia, mentioned in these columns last week.

Unfortunately there is little more to add at this time. The orchestra is ready and willing to go, but final word must come from the sources which control decisions in such matters.

Apparently the climate here is ready for such a cultural mission. If farmers, why not also musicians? One was unable to find a single person who did not favor the trip among the dozen or so with whom one discussed the matter. Undoubtedly there are Americans who may be opposed, but they were not in evidence at Tanglewood.

Regarding the Menuhin Oistrakh exchange, for the sake of the record it should be stated that Mr. Menuhin is by no means "the first American musician to gain international celebrity," as was stated in at least one newspaper. Mr. Edward MacDowell was greatly admired in Europe, as were Lily Nordica and Geraldine Farrar. Albert Spalding, another prime example, actually was more appreciated in Europe than he was in his native country.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 55,423

JUL 27 1955

Following the Farmers

So stimulating has been the experience of Soviet agriculturalists in Iowa and Iowa farmers in Russia that the idea of professional and cultural exchange between the two countries is catching on in other fields. When six of the dozen touring Communists attend Sunday services in a little Presbyterian church out in the corn country, almost anything can happen.

Among the first to jump in with an offer to join the goodwill movement has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra. At Tanglewood, where it is taking part in the Summer season with customary success, the Boston orchestra reacted promptly. Henry B. Cabot, president of trustees, said the Boston orchestra is "ready and eager, if the President wishes, to be the first American orchestra to play in Moscow."

Well, it should be said immediately that a few concerts in Moscow by an American orchestra, even the excellent Boston Symphony, will not untangle the German unification knot. Nor will the tour of a Moscow ballet company in this country accomplish disarmament. Yet if the Iron Curtain is to come down, as it must in order to dispel hostile feelings, cultural exchanges will be important.

Certainly there is not the slightest harm in sending all the orchestras and other cultural agencies we can to the Soviet Union. Nor can any harm be done by welcoming Russian performers here. If we can book a few Soviet lecturers for some of our clubs, let them come. The only requirement should be that the exchange be two-way, as in the case of the farmers.

Journal American
NEW YORK
TRUTH, JUSTICE PUBLIC SERVICE
TUESDAY, JULY 26, 1955 ★★

Say It with Music

THE Boston Symphony Orchestra, one of the finest anywhere in the world, has sent out a flute-like feeler toward Moscow about being invited to tour the Soviet Union next year. It is an idea to which we would like to give big-drum support.

Such a visit would be in line with President Eisenhower's suggestions for lifting the Iron Curtain by cultural exchange. It fits in perfectly with the conviction W. R. Hearst Jr. brought back with him from his Moscow visit that this nation has a great many good things to show the world besides Cadillacs and bathtubs . . . and must show them to win the battle of competitive co-existence.

There is going on right now an exchange of American and Russian farmers. Why not an exchange of orchestras, or ballet companies? In the meantime, a bravo for Boston.

The Boston Daily Globe
Published by GLOBE NEWSPAPER COMPANY
242 Washington St. Boston 7, Mass.
(Established March 4, 1872. Evening edition first issued March 7, 1878. Sunday edition first issued Oct. 14, 1877)

MONDAY, JULY 25, 1955

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

	Daily Per Mo.	Daily Per Yr.	Sunday Per Mo.	Sunday Per Yr.
Boston Postal Zone	1.25	15.00	1.00	12.00
New England States	1.00	12.00	.95	11.40
Elsewhere in United States & Possessions	1.25	15.00	1.15	13.80
Canada	1.35	16.20	1.20	14.40
Other Foreign Countries	2.50	30.00	1.90	22.00

(Please do not send cash. Use money orders or checks.)

Back numbers (per copy): 1 week or older, 5c daily, 20c Sundays; over 3 months old, out of print.

Entered as second class mail matter at Boston, Mass., under the act of March 3, 1879—242 Washington st.

The Associated Press is entitled exclusively to the use for republication of all the local news printed in this newspaper.

Published by GLOBE NEWSPAPER COMPANY
242 Washington St. Boston 7, Mass.
(Established March 4, 1872. Evening edition first issued March 7, 1878. Sunday edition first issued Oct. 14, 1877)

Globe Man's Daily Story

Pope Pius XII recently demonstrated that he knows something about American press photographers.

The Pope received Mayor Wagner of New York in audience and posed for pictures with him. The cameraman, Luigi Felici, was turning away, deeming his work finished, when the Pope recalled him.

"Please, one more," His Holiness said, and then added to the Mayor, "This is because I know that the Americans always want one more, to be sure."

THE PAPER

Munch: Blockade Runner

The Geneva meeting of the Big Four recedes into history. President Eisenhower is welcomed home from one of the most earnest efforts in his career to break down the barriers hampering popular understanding in Russia, and elsewhere abroad, of this country's desire for peaceful settlement of the world's troubles.

What next? Are the professions of good will to dwindle away, as in the past, in the interim between now and Autumn, when the foreign ministers renew their labors? Not if the Boston Symphony Orchestra has its way!

The interval before the foreign ministers' meeting can be of tremendous importance. It can be used for marking time, or for pressing ahead with efforts to break up the cultural blockade which has isolated West and East these past 10 years. The offer of the most famous symphony orchestra in America to tour Russia is an excellent follow-up of the President's plea that mutual isolation be ended. It is also a test of the Kremlin's claims of interest in that objective.

Russia's musical blockade against the West is older than the Communist regime, yet who can doubt that the Russian people would welcome Mr. Charles Munch and his admirable company? What conceivable reasons of state can be advanced to deny them the opportunity?

THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, JULY 31, 1955.

A CULTURAL OPPORTUNITY

Discussion continues about the possibility of a visit to the Soviet Union by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. There are many technical problems to be solved, of course, but the initial atmosphere of the project is hopeful. It deserves strong support in all quarters.

This, in our judgment, is a matter of importance. We have been having some experience with the reception that has been accorded to touring American musical and theatrical groups in other countries. It has been uniformly favorable to us and enjoyable to the people who are our international neighbors. This exchange of artistic interest is the best answer to the standard attack on the United States on the ground of our supposed "materialism."

It has been our great pleasure to entertain a magnificent orchestra from the Netherlands, a splendid dance troupe from India, painters and poets from Western Europe. We also have something to offer to the world's culture, and the Boston Symphony is a true exponent of it. This is a real cultural opportunity that should be embraced. Both public and private effort should be expended to make the most of it.

MUSIC STUDENTS AT TANGLEWOOD IN GREAT FORM

Singers, Musicians, Perform Well in Opera and Orchestra Concerts

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 7—Having paid their due to Blacker and Milhaud, the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center here turned last week to some of the composers whose operas contain what Boris Goldovsky, director, characterizes as "bread and butter" roles. The occasion served also to introduce the considerable vocal talents of Christina Cardillo, soprano, of North Adams, who is a winner of the current Metropolitan Auditions of the Air and who has recently returned from a year in Italy.

Miss Cardillo was heard in the role of Zerlina in two scenes from Mozart's "Don Giovanni." Attractive in person, she disclosed a light, pure voice and an excellent singing style. Springfield will remember her as soloist at a Pops concert of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra. Miss Cardillo is an accomplished actress and as she was ably seconded in the scenes by her colleagues, she scored with the audience.

Of particular interest and given for the first time at Tanglewood was the complete second act of the opera, "Eastward in Eden," by Meyerowitz. This story deals with the romance between Emily Dickinson and Dr. Wadsworth. The second act depicts their first meeting and is really a complete opera in itself. Saramae Endich sang the role of Emily Dickinson, bringing a lovely voice and simple approach to the role. Dr. Wadsworth was sung by baritone Peyton Higgison, one of the busiest students in the department and surely one of the most versatile.

The final scene from Act III of "Der Rosenkavalier" served to introduce Claire Watson as the Marschallin. She has a glorious voice and great dignity of presence. The Octavian of Regina Sarfaty was a joy to both eye and ear. She is, we are told, 19 years old, but her singing and acting are those of a veteran.

A scene from "Aida" between Amneris and Aida was carried off in stunning style by Mary MacKenzie as Amneris and Helen Hess as Aida. Both have fine voices and both realized fully the dramatic situation.

A scene from "Don Pasquale" enlisted a large group of singers, all of whom were excellent. Peyton Higgison was outstanding as Dr. Malatesta and Susan Winchester was a charming, light voiced Norina.

Mr. Goldovsky added to the pleasure of the evening with his inimitable remarks and his admirable support at the piano.

It had been three weeks since we last heard the student orchestra. What a change in so short a time. There was an integration, balance and firmness in the playing that surpassed some professional orchestras we have heard.

With student conductor Arthur Winograd at the helm, the orchestra tossed off an exciting performance of the overture to "La Forza Del Destino." Then student conductor Kenneth Schermerhorn took over and provided a most sensitive and penetrating reading of the movement of Bruckner's "Symphony No. 7 in E major." We believe he conducted without score. Schermerhorn is an extremely talented young man. The Bruckner symphony is difficult, intricate in detail and heavily scored, but it emerged crystal clear in this reading.

The third number served to introduce George Mester, a Hungarian student who hails from Mexico. He conducted the second and third movements of the "Concerto for Piano and Orchestra" by Bartok. The admirable pianist was student Susan Pearlman. This also is a difficult work with its weaving patterns and rhythmic changes. Both conductor and soloist were fully capable and the performance was excellent.

Following intermission, Richard Burgin took over and led the orchestra through the Ravel arrangement of Moussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition." The confidence instilled by Mr. Burgin in the orchestra resulted in some of the finest playing of the evening. The orchestra has some splendid first desk players and Moussorgsky provides them plenty to do.

The orchestra department of the Berkshire Music Center is one of the most rewarding activities. We have talked to numerous students in it and find them enthusiastic and well aware of the splendid training and the opportunities for performance they are getting.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUL 31 1955

Students at Tanglewood In Three One-Act Operas

Lenox, July 30—Three contemporary one-act operas, two of them Tanglewood premieres, by Boris Blacher, Darius Milhaud and Bohuslav Martinu, will be performed by students of Department IV (opera) of the Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Monday night at 8.30 in the Theater-Concert Hall. A portion of the evening will also ne devoted to choral works by Domingo Santa Cruz, Ross Lee Finney, William Billings and others, sung by students of Department II (chorus).

The performance is open to those who support the summer music school of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. All seats are reserved.

Guest Composer

"Romeo and Juliet," a chamber opera in three parts, is by Boris Blacher, director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin, currently visiting the U. S. for the first time as guest composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center. The opera was given its fist stage performance at the Salzburg Festival in 1950. It was first staged in the U. S. in 1953 by the opera workshop of the School of Music, University of Illinois, and this will be its Tanglewood premiere. It will be sung in English.

"Ariana Abandoned" (L'Abandon d'Ariane), a one-act opera by Darius Milhaud, who was guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center in 1948, has a text by Henry Hoppenot, and is given, for the first time at Tanglewood, in the English version of Ludwig Zirner, who is head of the Associate Division of the Opera Dept.

"Comedy on the Bridge," a short comic opera by Bohuslav Martinu, guest composer at Tanglewood in 1946 was produced at the Berkshire Music Center in 1951. It has a libretto by V. K. Klicpera and an English version by Walter Schmolka. The three one-act operas are produced under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Tanglewood Opera Department.

Choral Music

On the same program will be a concert of choral music, prepared by Hugh Ross, head of Tanglewood's chorus deaprtment, with the assistance of Iva D. Hiatt and John Krueger. The choral program is: "The 142d Psalm" (1941) by Julius Chajes, for mezzo-soprano, tenor and baritone solo, mixed voices and organ; "Two Pilgrim Psalms" (1951) by Ross Lee Finney, Ann Arbor, Mich., Psalm 138: "With al my hart I'le Thee confess, and Psalm 95: "Come, let us to the Lord showt joyfully." Also "Three Songs of Spring" (01955) by Domingo Santa Cruz, Chile: "From the mountains comes the snow, On the arid earth [illegible]," "Where are the ones that are departed?"; "Lamentation Over Boston" and "Modern Music" by William Billings (1746-1800) and "The Stas," by S. J. Taneyef. Students of Department II (Chorus) and conductors from the choral department will participate.

THUNDERSTORM FAILS TO MAR ISTOMIN DEBUT

Serkin Pupil Gives Warm Performance in Tanglewood Program

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 7—What a concert and what a rain!

They both occurred simultaneously this afternoon and Eugene Istomin played the Beethoven "Piano Concerto No. 4 in G Major" to the accompaniment of grumbling thunder.

Recalls Memory

It reminded one of the historic evening when concerts were being held in a tent. The heavens opened and Koussevitzky had thunder and lightning accompanying the overture to the "Flying Dutchman," or was it "The Ride of the Valkyrie?"

Close to 10,000 people braved the weather today and they were amply repaid. Mr. Istomin, a pupil of Rudolf Serkin, who made history here eight days ago with his performance of the Fifth Piano Concerto, was making is debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, playing the Fourth Piano Concerto.

It was a warm and glowing performance, particualrly lovely in the lyricism of the second movement and bright and hearty in the finale. Mr. Istomin is a true lyricist, a refined, technically assured pianist. It was, no doubt, due to the excitement of a debut that caused some erratic moments in the opening movement and cadenza.

Continued On Page 8

Thunderstorm

Continued From Page 1

The Fourth Piano Concerto was placed between "Symphony No. 8 in F Major" and "Symphony No. 5 in C Minor." Mr. Munch provided a crisp, rhythmical reading of the Eighth Symphony. It was a well-integrated, nicely contrasted reading, one of the finest of this Beethoven season.

Rewarding Music

It seems unnecessary to go into the details of the performance of the Fifth Symphony. It is music so well known, so often heard and so rewarding that it seldom fails to go over. Mr. Munch and the orchestra offered a richly satisfying performance, wide in dynamics, spacious in conception. Particularly fine was the andante movement which was beautifully detailed and colored. The depth and fire of this music was fully revealed as were its moments of tenderness, reflection and apparent resignation.

The audience crowded into the shed from all over the grounds, but there was little delay and almost no disturbance. This has been a fine week end from audience standpoint. The four concerts of the week drew a total of 27,993 persons. Saturday night's concert drew 9422 people and an estimated 9717 were on hand this afternoon.

Monday night the opera department puts on its biggest undertaking when "The Rope" by Mennini and Mozart's unfinished opera "Zaide" will be sung. It will be repeated Tuesday night

Due to the illness of Piatagorsky, Wednesday night's chamber m concert will be given over to a miscellaneous program of Beeth ven music, featuring David Lloyd in the "An Ferne Gelibte" cycle of songs.

Storms Bring

'Tanglewood On Parade' Scheduled for Thursday

Leonard Bernstein, Distinguished Graduate, Ha Major Role in Annual Music Center Benefit

Lenox, Aug. 7—"Tanglewood On Parade," annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will have the participation of one of its most illustrious graduates, Leonard Bernstein, in the triple capacity of conductor, composer and concert pianist.

Fiedler To Share

On Thursday at Tanglewood, music lovers will hear Mr. Bernstein open a concert in the 6000-seat music shed at 8.15 p. m., conducting the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra.

His portion of the program—the concert—will be shared by Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston "Pops" Orchestra—will consist of a first performance of a suite Mr. Bernstein has arranged from music he composed for the film, "On the Waterfront," which won the Academy Award in 1955.

Mr. Bernstein also will pay tribute to the noted American composer Aaron Copland, on leave of absence as assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, with a performance of "A Lincoln Portrait," which will have Claude Rains as narrator. During Mr. Fiedler's period of the podium, Leonard Bernstein will be piano soloist in George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

Studied With Koussevitzky

Mr. Bernstein, who will be 37 Aug. 25, studied conducting with Serge Koussevitzky, the late conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the music center's first two season, 1940 and 1941. The following summer he returned as Mr. Koussevitzky's assistant in conducting, and joined the faculty of the school in 1946. He is head of its orchestra and conducting departments and trains the symphony orchestra of 1[illegible] scholarship students from all over the U. S., Canada and foreign countries for the weekly concerts which attract audiences of more than 3000 during the Tanglewood season.

As a composer, Mr. Bernstein has written two symphonies, the "Jeremiah" and "The Age of Anxiety"; the ballets "Fancy Free" and "Facsimile"; the violin concerto "Serenade," which Isaac Stern performed for its premiere by the Boston Symphony last season; the opera "Trouble in Tahiti," done by Tanglewood's opera department in 1952, later on television, last season on Broadway the scores for the Broadway musicals "On the Town" and "Wonderful Town"; and songs for the Jean Arthur-Boris Karloff 1951 Broadway revival of "Peter Pan." His newest work is a full-length opera from Voltaire's "Candide" which with Tyrone Guthrie directing, will be produced on Broadway next year.

On the Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony this summer, Mr. Bernstein conducted an all-Mozart concert July 15, with Jennie Tourel as soloist, and doubled as soloist in the Piano Concerto in G Major. Also he led the symphony, soloists and chorus in a performance of Beethoven's Missa Solemnis, in memory of Dr. Koussevitzky last Friday. He also conducted at two concerts by the student symphony orchestra during the summer.

Seats for "Tanglewood On Parade" are on sale at the Tanglewood box office and reservations may be made by telephoning Lenox 600.

© 1955, Field Enterprises, Inc.

pany will provide the musical setting for a vesper service at Ocean Park temple. The "Tales of Hoffman" is scheduled for next week.

Tanglewood Notes

Distinguished stage, screen, radio and television star Claude Rains will narrate Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," which will be a highlight of the gala evening concert next Thursday, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, during "Tanglewood on Parade."

The Broadway star of Sidney Kingsley's dramatic "Darkness At Noon" and of T. S. Eliot's comedy-drama "The Confidential Clerk" will make his first appearance with the Boston Symphony orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting, and his debut at Tanglewood in the stirring musical portrait of the Great Emancipator which was composed during the war by Mr. Copland, the noted American composer who is assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center (on leave of absence in 1955) and which was first performed by the Boston Symphony on April 9, 1943. Mr. Rains made three appearances in "A Lincoln Portrait" with the Philadelphia orchestra, Eugene Ormandy conducting, twice in Philadelphia and once at Carnegie Hall, New York, in April, 1949.

Notable Career

Claude Rains, familiar to motion picture fans for featured roles in half a hundred films, including "The Invisible Man," "Anthony Adverse," "Juarez," "Here Comes Mr. Jordan," "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," "Caesar and Cleopatra" (he was Bernard Shaw's personal choice for the Roman dictator) "Casablanca" and "Notorious," was born in London and has been an actor since childhood. He came to the U. S. first in 1914 with the late Harley Granville-Barker to act in Shaw's "Androcoles and the Lion." Before he went to Hollywood and stardom in 1935 he acted the dynamic counsel for the defense in "They Shall Not Die." He made a concert tour under the title "Words and Music" this spring, and currently can be heard over NBC network Monday through Friday afternoons in a program of dramatic readings.

6 Symphony Players Retire in Lenox

Six prominent members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra were honored last week at Tanglewood on their retirement from the group. Conductor Charles Munch presented the instrumentalists with gold watches at a luncheon held under the direction of Gaston Dufresne, string bass.

The members retiring are Jacob Raichman, principal trombone; Carlos Pinfield, first violinist who has been with the Symphony since 1912; Paul Federovsky, first violinist; second violinist Ralph del Sordo; Louis Artieres, viola; Walter MacDonald, French horn.

Opera Premiere at Tanglewood Tonight

"The Rope," an opera in one act by Louis Mennini, commissioned for production by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center—the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, Lenox—will have its world premiere by students of Boris Goldovsky's opera department [illegible] Theatre-Concert Hall at 8:30 tonight and Tuesday night. On the same program will be "Zaide" (K. 344), an unfinished two-act opera by Mozart so far as can be learned, the Tanglewood performances will be the first in the U. S. Two different casts of students of the opera department will sing.

31

"THE ROPE," A ONE-ACT OPERA BY MENNINI, IN WORLD PREMIERE AT TANGLEWOOD

A dramatic scene from the work which will be sung Monday and Tuesday by students of the Berkshire Music Center opera department. Based on a one-act play by Eugene O'Neill, it was commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. The performers, left to right, are Holly McLennan, Mary McKenzie, Lynn Detwiler, Robert Kirkham, Malcolm Bernstein.

Gus Manos

Thunder Adds Sound Effects To Beethoven at Tanglewood

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 7.—Swishing rain and crashing thunder added sound effects not planned by Beethoven at Tanglewood this afternoon while Istomin and the Boston Symphony Orchestra were playing the immortal Ludwig's Piano Concerto in G Major. Before the rain Mr. Munch and his musicians had begun the all-Beethoven program with the Eighth Symphony, and the Fifth Symphony provided the finale.

Rain also fell last night, but waited until just after Margaret Harshaw and the conductor were taking their bows at the end of the immolation scene from Wagner's "Goetterdaemmerung." This was musically more appropriate if inconvenient for the departing audience, since Wagner prescribes some dramatic scenic effects at this close of the Ring cycle. The orchestra also played the daybreak Rhine journey and death music in a program which began with the second act and finale of Beethoven's "Fidelio." Here Miss Harshaw sang Leonore with David Lloyd as Florestan and Mac Morgan as Rocco. Malcolm Bernstein doubled as Pizarro and Fernando, and Christina Cardillo and Arthur Shoep were the other solo singers.

Yesterday was the first time that any extensive part of "Fidelio" was presented at Tanglewood. The second act, heard this time without the spoken passages, can stand by itself, at least if the listener has a cursory knowledge of what has gone before; the action is swift and direct, and the emotional and dramatic situations are poignantly reflected in the music. Much of its power and expressive vividness, its initial brooding and despair followed by tense conflict and final triumph, were persuasively brought forth in a well-organized and proportioned performance. And yet some of the steadily increasing tension of the music seemed incompletely revealed, especially at the cumulative moment before and when the distant trumpet peal heralds the ruin of Pizarro's evil designs. Perhaps the stage setting is hard to forego without some loss, except in an ideal concert performance.

Miss Harshaw's voice had notable power and frequent dramatic intensity. The top notes were somewhat spread at first, but later gained in focus. Mr. Lloyd in generally good voice sang with musicianship and vocal hues which reflected the color of his aria early in the act and the two principals' duet after the trumpet call was duly exultant. The finale sometimes performed as a separate act has lass dramatic force than the second act proper; all that remains is to rejoice with some moralizing. The choral jubilation was brilliantly and triumphantly sung by the festival chorus. The orchestra was at its best, and the prelude to the act was played with particular sensitiveness.

As Bruennhilde in the immolation scene Miss Harshaw usually realized the wide emotional span and pervasive intensity of the music. There was power but also understanding of more intimate moods. Mr. Munch and the orchestra also answered the demands of the score convincingly; the instrumental postlude gave the needed impression of concluding a musical epic.

Mr. Istomin, who was making his first appearance with the Bosotn Symphony, had an admirable technical command of Beethoven's G Major Piano Concerto; the tone was delectably musical, the details always clear and the dynamic shading discerning and judicious. An even more important aspect of his playing was his understanding and communication of its play of moods, its contrast of intimacy and spirit; this was an interpretation by an exceptionally discerning artist. The orchestra gave an expressively sympathetic and dynamically well balanced co-operation. The Eighth Symphony was played rather heavily, with some loss of its essential spirit and effervescence. The rain stopped as the Fifth Symphony ran its course, and the spiritedly played finale gave the concert a proclamative and efective close.

WINSTON-SALEM JOURNAL August 1, 1955

Reporter Tells About Twin Citian Playing With the Boston Symphony

"The young American lad at my right, blowing negligently into that grandpa of all woodwinds—a contra bassoon — and producing a moan with a built-in vibration, he had a kindly look."

That was reporter Duane LaFleche's impression of young Richard Plaster of Winston-Salem, a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Reporter LaFleche tells about that meeting with Mr. Plaster in a feature story that appeared last week in the Knickerbocker News, Albany, N. Y.

Mr. LaFleche's story tells of the day he spent at Tanglewood, N. H., watching the Boston Symphony rehearse under the baton of Pierre Monteux.

One of the first members of the orchestra he met was Mr. Plaster:

"Richard Plaster, 27, from Winston-Salem, N. C., in his third season with the Boston Symphony after graduation from the Julliard School of Music and playing with the Baltimore Symphony," Mr. LaFleche wrote.

The reporter asked Mr. Plaster how one becomes a contra-bassoonist.

"It developed one doesn't just become a contra-bassoonist, he more often has the instrument thrust on him," the story states. "He starts off, perhaps, as a clarinetist and then, in high school or such, a bassoon and contra-bassoon player is needed in the orchestra. A likely lad is selected and the world has a new bassoonist.

"But Mr. Plaster also had an aim and a practical eye. He wanted to play with a great orchestra; the contra-bassoonist in the three or four great orchestras in the East were growing old. Mr. Plaster first applied himself, then applied to the Boston Symphony for an audience. He made it."

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TELEGRAPH
JULY 25, 1955

Barney Nagler

Archie Will Strike a Blow For Culture

For years, Rocky Marciano, at Grossinger's, has been identified with the borscht belt. He's as indigenous to the Catskill foothills as herring with or without potatoes. He is the sour cream de la sour cream of the area. He is a living symbol, with muscles yet, of the vacation paradise, north by west from New York as the borscht flows. Right now, Marciano is at Grossinger's, running up hill past Pincus Pines and down hill past the Violet Mikvah, getting ready to pull on training gloves in preparation for the gymkhana with Archie Moore at the Yankee Stadium, September 20. And where is Moore?

Moore, Mr. Toscanini, is packing his gear before adding his measure of culture to the Berkshires, in Marciano's home state of Massachusetts. Culturally, the Berkshires will never be the same.

For years it has struggled along artistically with the Tanglewood Music Festival, at Lenox, and the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival at Lee, and now Archie is coming to the rescue. He's going to train at a boys' camp at North Adams.

Word of Moore's coming must have reached the happy ears of Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, by now. Mr. Munch is the man with the baton at Tanglewood and doubtless has heard of his colleague in the arts, ancient Archie, a mean man with tissue paper and comb.

For a time, Moore was passed off as a musician. He was reputed to be able to do tricks with the bass fiddle. "I fool around with it, but I'm no good behind it," he explained recently.

"Then you're not a musician?"

"I got music in my heart," Moore said, "I guess that makes me a musician.'

▼

So if Mr. Munch needs a man to play a heart at Tanglewood he will have Archie on tap. All he has to do is ring the bell. Moore's a cinch to come out swinging.

Not, mind you, that Archie is a bebop man. "I like suave music," he has said. "The danceable kind." Mr. Munch may yet have to add "Body and Soul" to the Tanglewood repertoire.

It's a cinch Moore is going to bring Lucky Thompson up to North Adams. Mr. Munch may never have heard of Lucky, but hes "sweet and suave" with a tenor sax, according to Archie, who regards Thompson as the greatest since Beethoven.

Thompson, Archie's pal, won the "Esquire" magazine award in 1951 for the finest tenor sax man around. What's Mr. Munch done to top this?

As for Ted Shawn, he's in for a treat. If he wants some new steps for his dancers all he has to do is move over to North Adams and watch Moore work. My, wouldn't Archie be wonderful in the Grand Pas de Deux, from "The Nutcracker Suite" and from "Don Quixote."

In the first, he would be simply superb. After all, he's been cracking assorted nuts over the heads for years. And his footwork has always been a revelation, even in the dusk of his career.

▼

As for "Don Quixote," who better than Moore? He'll be tilting with windmills going against Marciano and what surer way is there to prepare for the assignment? If physical verve is required, Moore has it; if the allegro manner is called for, he's got it. Man, he sure knows all the moves.

So Ted Shawn is in for a real treat. His dance theatre will never be the same once Archie shows up, for better or worse.

There may be some who will sk what Moore, a fist-fighter, is oing at a boys' camp in the first lace.

The question was put the mo- ent it was learned that Moore as moving into the boys' retreat the Berkshires.

h," somebody said, "what's g with having Moore up ? Ain't he an expert in ju- le delinquency?"

NY Times
Mon Aug 8

24 C

Music: Lenox Week-End

Theme Is Beethoven— 'Fidelio' Act Sung

By ROSS PARMENTER
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 7 — Beethoven is the theme composer of this year's Berkshire Festival. The claims of comprehensiveness therefore dictated that there should be representation of "Fidelio," his one essay in the operatic field. Those claims were satisfied Saturday night when Charles Munch conducted a concert version of most of the opera's second act.

Only the spoken dialogue was omitted, which meant that the 9,400 listeners heard thirty minutes of the prison scene and the thirteen-minute finale, which depicts the release of the prisoners. Not one of the opera's four overtures was given though. Mr. Munch is saving the "Leonore" No. 3 for the festival's closing program next Sunday.

●

Margaret Harshaw, making her Tanglewood debut, was the Leonora of the opera. She proved the shining light of its cast. Always her voice could be heard over the orchestra. She sang with finely shaded emotional expressiveness and she colored her tones in such a way that, despite the fact that she was standing before the listeners like a Roman goddess in deep red robes, her sounds conveyed the illusion of a young wife who might convincingly be mistaken for a youth.

The casting of the male parts was less happy. David Lloyd, who sang the Florestan, is a tenor whose voice has a particularly fine lyric quality. To sing the heroic measures of this role with the requisite volume, he had to thicken his tones to such an extend that one felt a sense of strain at the same time one missed the old quality.

●

Malcolm Bernstein had not enough menace in his pleasant-sounding voice for the villainous Pizarro, and Mac Morgan was a somewhat colorless Rocco. These drawbacks, added to the lack of scenery and stage action and the decidedly rough choral singing, meant the performance was not stirring dramatically. But it had its musical values, and the Haydnesque trio between the three main singers emerged as its particular delight.

The remainder of the program contained excerpts from Wagner's "Goetterdaemmerung." The orchestra began with the "Daybreak" music and Siegfriend's Rhine Journey, continued with Siegfried's Death Music and ended with the "Immolation" scene. Miss Harshaw sang the scene brilliantly, earning thereby an ovation.

Margaret Harshaw

This afternoon's program, which closed the festival's fifth week, was all-Beethoven. Mr. Munch led the Boston Symphony in the Eighth and Fifth symphonies and Eugene Istomin was the soloist in the Fourth Piano Concerto. This was Mr. Istomin's Tanglewood debut and also his first appearance with the Boston Symphony.

●

Mr. Istomin's playing of the first movement was technically fluent, but the tone was a little hard and the reading was external. In the second movement he had bad luck with the weather. Just as he began its melting opening in a way that gave promise of more inwardness, the rain, which had begun earlier, began to drum heavily on the roof and there was intermittent thunder. The poetic effect of the movement was lost and the finale seemed swiftly routine. The audience, though, gave him a great hand.

Mr. Munch's conducting of the two symphonies was vigorous and rough-hewn. This particular approach was more suitable for the Fifth than for the lighter Eighth. But both performances had vitality and he, too, was roundly applauded.

The afternoon's audience totaled 9,715. Many of those who listened from the lawns were drenched, but it did not seem to dampen their enthusiasm and good spirits.

3E

Thunderstorm Obbligato

Pianist Istomin Stars In Tanglewood Concert

By RAYMOND MORIN, Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — The real news at Tanglewood during the Sunday afternoon concert was a performance of Beethoven's Fourth Piano Concerto by Eugene Istomin with the Boston Symphony and Charles Munch that must have broken a record for competition.

In spite of a heavy percussion obbligato that grew worse and worse in the form of a thunderstorm, pianist and conductor refused to give up. The sensitive second movement — a beautiful dialogue in which the orchestra makes austere remarks and the piano replies gently — probably wasn't heard beyond the first few rows. For a time it looked as if the performance would be halted.

To make matters worse, Mr. Istomin was required to use his respites mopping up the keyboard and 9715 people did their best to concentrate on what they were able to hear from the stage.

Artistic Stature

Therefore the credit runs high that Mr. Istomin was able to disclose that he is a young pianist of full artistic and technical stature. His style of presentation is extremely attractive, simple, direct, unfettered from mannerisms, and musicianly.

The best test of his musicality appeared in the first movement cadenza which he played with sympathy and great concern over its poetry. Discounting the growls from without, we were close enough to the stage to appreciate the ringing, lyrical tone that Mr. Istomin elicited from the fragile statements.

A spirit of exuberance was released in the rondo, and Mr. Munch did an admirable job of co-ordinating the orchestral repartee with the soloist's style.

Received Ovation

Mr. Istomin received an ovation. It's no discredit to him to suggest that it may have been in part for his sportsmanship and power of concentration, but certainly his art received the lion's share.

The balance of this all-Beethoven program included the fifth symphonies. We have stant aliveness. As we stated in a previous review, the Munch style is as direct as possible and as devoid of superfluous gesture. Not having heard music here since the Koussevitzky era, we find this a startling innovation.

The excellence of the Eighth was determined by strong, articulate phrasing, precise changes of volume, and soaring melodies. The trio of the third movement, which can bring ruin to the performance, was beautifully played by the wind instruments, especially the brasses.

Exciting Close

Sacrificing excessive speed for clarity the finale brought the work to an exciting close.

As was to be expected, the Fifth Symphony received a memorable performance. A full range of reflection was derived from the second movement — the basses and cellos played brilliantly during the trio — and the finale rose to heroic proportions.

Tonight at 8.30 the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center will present the American premiere of Louis Mennini's "The Rope." The performance is open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

heard voiced criticism that too much Beethoven music is being played at this festival.

If we are to judge by the performances we've heard of Missa Solemnis—the second act of the opera, "Fidelio" and these symphonies, the arguments against this musical fare are stone cold.

Direct as Possible

The Munch approach to the eighth was most interesting it combined a successful transmission of philosophy with a con

Milford Bride-Elect Feted at Shower

MILFORD—Miss Barbara Tocci, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Tocci of 264 Central street, was honored at a bridal shower at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Pellegrini of 37 Main street.

Miss Tocci will be married to Ernest Pellegrini Jr., on Labor Day in Sacred Heart Church. Hostesses for the affair were Miss Louise Pellegrini, sister of the groom-to-be, Misses Sue and Josephine Norcia and Rita Norton.

Miss Tocci is employed at the Dennison Mfg. Co. and Pellegrini is associated with his father in business.

Some people can pass on colds without catching them themselves.

In Brief . . .

These last parched weeks produced something unique to Berkshire besides brown lawns and haunting fears of forest fires: Though yesterday's showers drenched golfers and competed with Beethoven, not even the Tanglewood management was heard to complain . . . The blood flown Friday from Pittsfield to Boston for a six-year-old local boy because of a shortage in that huge city is justification for pride in the continuing response by Berkshire people to the volunteer Red Cross program . . .

We hope a prompt response will be given to the appeal by Miss Esther Jaquith of the New England Home for foster parents in the area. No greater contribution to the well-being of unfortunate youngsters could be made . . . We'll be surprised if the New Haven's Pat McGinnis doesn't turn up shortly at the Wichmann homestead in New Lenox, the onetime depot where today the "freight" to be loaded is likely to be blueberry pie for the crew. Not everybody gets an invitation like that from Mrs. Wichmann . . .

A Yale professor claims that a man can't get intoxicated on beer. They don't get around much at Yale—or they'd learn that a Harvard man can do anything.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A home town is a place where they always wonder how you got as far as you have.—The Pointer (Barbers Point, T.H.)

Letters

Complaint

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

What price culture? Are taxpayers of Lenox, who live on Under Mountain Road, entitled to any consideration? Those who moved here before Tanglewood, with the idea of living on a quiet wooded road, have had a rude awakening.

The BSO has long promoted this narrow country road as a by-pass to Pittsfield. Now the Lenox Selectmen have made it official and the heat is on.

This road is winding, sandy, narrow and rutty, as many know, with passing space only at limited points. It was never intended for the heavy traffic now using it constantly.

Our houses and gardens are bathed in dust and this inconsiderate horde of tourists and sightseers have not the politeness to drive slowly. Would they in turn care to have their own lawns littered with papers and beer cans?

Perhaps to those solely interested in music, it is of minor importance that during six weeks of our short summer, we are unable to enter or exit from our own driveway for two hours before or after a concert.

Since the BSO is interested in making as much money as possible and this traffic is helping them in their project, I suggest that they, the BSO, do something about returning to the road in question the surface that has been ground off in the interest of Tanglewood.

(Mrs.) ELEANOR S. HIBBARD.
Lenox.

of silence is created. Now if someone would set up two juke-boxes on same principle, a coin in one would knock out racket of the other.

—o—

MONEY is funny. The U.S. Mint reports that coins tend to accumulate in certain cities. Cincinnati goes for nickels, dimes pile up in San Francisco and quarters go for Minneapolis. The last is attributed to the number of cereal firms there which give prizes for box tops accompanied by 25 cents. Most coins, incidentally, have a life span of about 30 years.

—o—

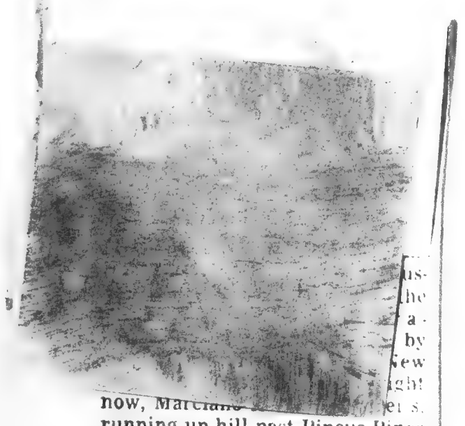
WILD GAME provides about 250 million pounds of meat annually to be eaten by Americans. May account for some of the wild driving, with autoists regarding a tour as a kind of game, devil take the hindmost which, alas, often happens.

RICHARD V. HAPPEL.

There may be some who will ask what Moore, a fist-fighter, is doing at a boys' camp in the first place.

The question was put the moment it was learned that Moore was moving into the boys' retreat in the Berkshires.

"Oh," somebody said, "what's wrong with having Moore up there? Ain't he an expert in juvenile delinquency?"



now, Marciano ... et s. running up hill past Pincus Pines and down hill past the Violet Mikvah, getting ready to pull on training gloves in preparation for the gymkhana with Archie Moore at the Yankee Stadium, September 20. And where is Moore?

Moore, Mr. Toscanini, is packing his gear before adding his measure of culture to the Berkshires, in Marciano's home state of Massachusetts. Culturally, the Berkshires will never be the same.

For years it has struggled along artistically with the Tanglewood Music Festival, at Lenox, and the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival at Lee, and now Archie is coming to the rescue. He's going to train at a boys' camp at North Adams.

Word of Moore's coming must have reached the happy ears of Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, by now. Mr. Munch is the man with the baton at Tanglewood and doubtless has heard of his colleague in the arts, ancient Archie, a mean man with tissue paper and comb.

For a time, Moore was passed off as a musician. He was reputed to be able to do tricks with the bass fiddle. "I fool around with it, but I'm no good behind it," he explained recently.

"Then you're not a musician?"

"I got music in my heart," Moore said, "I guess that makes me a musician.'

▼

So if Mr. Munch needs a man to play a heart at Tanglewood he will have Archie on tap. All he has to do is ring the bell. Moore's a cinch to come out swinging.

Not, mind you, that Archie is a bebop man. "I like suave music," he has said. "The danceable kind." Mr. Munch may yet have to add "Body and Soul" to the Tanglewood repertoire.

It's a cinch Moore is going to bring Lucky Thompson up to North Adams. Mr. Munch may never have heard of Lucky, but hes "sweet and suave" with a tenor sax, according to Archie, who regards Thompson as the greatest since Beethoven.

Thompson, Archie's pal, won the "Esquire" magazine award in 1951 for the finest tenor sax man around. What's Mr. Munch done to top this?

As for Ted Shawn, he's in for a treat. If he wants some new steps for his dancers all he has to do is move over to North Adams and watch Moore work. My, wouldn't Archie be wonderful in the Grand Pas de Deux, from "The Nutcracker Suite" and from "Don Quixote."

In the first, he would be simply superb. After all, he's been cracking assorted nuts over the heads for years. And his footwork has always been a revelation, even in the dusk of his career.

▼

As for "Don Quixote," who better than Moore? He'll be tilting with windmills going against Marciano and what surer way is there to prepare for the assignment? If physical verve is required, Moore has it; if the allegro manner is called for, he's got it. Man, he sure knows all the moves.

So Ted Shawn is in for a real treat. His dance theatre will never be the same once Archie shows up, for better or worse.

NY Times
Mon Aug. 8

24 C

Music: Lenox Week-End

Theme Is Beethoven—'Fidelio' Act Sung

By ROSS PARMENTER
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 7 — Beethoven is the theme composer of this year's Berkshire Festival. The claims of comprehensiveness therefore dictated that there should be representation of "Fidelio," his one essay in the operatic field. Those claims were satisfied Saturday night when Charles Munch conducted a concert version of most of the opera's second act.

Only the spoken dialogue was omitted, which meant that the 9,400 listeners heard thirty minutes of the prison scene and the thirteen-minute finale, which depicts the release of the prisoners. Not one of the opera's four overtures was given though. Mr. Munch is saving the "Leonore" No. 3 for the festival's closing program next Sunday.

•

Margaret Harshaw, making her Tanglewood debut, was the Leonora of the opera. She proved the shining light of its cast. Always her voice could be heard over the orchestra. She sang with finely shaded emotional expressiveness and she colored her tones in such a way that, despite the fact that she was standing before the listeners like a Roman goddess in deep red robes, her sounds conveyed the illusion of a young wife who might convincingly be mistaken for a youth.

The casting of the male parts was less happy. David Lloyd, who sang the Florestan, is a tenor whose voice has a particularly fine lyric quality. To sing the heroic measures of this role with the requisite volume, he had to thicken his tones to such an extend that one felt a sense of strain at the same time one missed the old quality.

•

Malcolm Bernstein had not enough menace in his pleasant-sounding voice for the villainous Pizarro, and Mac Morgan was a somewhat colorless Rocco. These drawbacks, added to the lack of scenery and stage action and the decidedly rough choral singing, meant the performance was not stirring dramatically. But it had its musical values, and the Haydnesque trio between the three main singers emerged as its particular delight.

The remainder of the program contained excerpts from Wagner's "Goetterdaemmerung." The orchestra began with the "Daybreak" music and Siegfriend's Rhine Journey, continued with Siegfried's Death Music and ended with the "Immolation" scene. Miss Harshaw sang the scene brilliantly, earning thereby an ovation.

Margaret Harshaw

This afternoon's program, which closed the festival's fifth week, was all-Beethoven. Mr. Munch led the Boston Symphony in the Eighth and Fifth symphonies and Eugene Istomin was the soloist in the Fourth Piano Concerto. This was Mr. Istomin's Tanglewood debut and also his first appearance with the Boston Symphony.

•

Mr. Istomin's playing of the first movement was technically fluent, but the tone was a little hard and the reading was external. In the second movement he had bad luck with the weather. Just as he began its melting opening in a way that gave promise of more inwardness, the rain, which had begun earlier, began to drum heavily on the roof and there was intermittent thunder. The poetic effect of the movement was lost and the finale seemed swiftly routine. The audience, though, gave him a great hand.

Mr. Munch's conducting of the two symphonies was vigorous and rough-hewn. This particular approach was more suitable for the Fifth than for the lighter Eighth. But both performances had vitality and he, too, was roundly applauded.

The afternoon's audience totaled 9,715. Many of those who listened from the lawns were drenched, but it did not seem to dampen their enthusiasm and good spirits.

Thunderstorm Obbligato

Pianist Istomin Stars In Tanglewood Concert

By RAYMOND MORIN, Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — The real news at Tanglewood during the Sunday afternoon concert was a performance of Beethoven's Fourth Piano Concerto by Eugene Istomin with the Boston Symphony and Charles Munch that must have broken a record for competition.

In spite of a heavy percussion obbligato that grew worse and worse in the form of a thunderstorm, pianist and conductor refused to give up. The sensitive second movement — a beautiful dialogue in which the orchestra makes austere remarks and the piano replies gently — probably wasn't heard beyond the first few rows. For a time it looked as if the performance would be halted.

To make matters worse, Mr. Istomin was required to use his respites mopping up the keyboard and 9715 people did their best to concentrate on what they were able to hear from the stage.

Artistic Stature

Therefore the credit runs high that Mr. Istomin was able to disclose that he is a young pianist of full artistic and technical stature. His style of presentation is extremely attractive, simple, direct, unfettered from mannerisms, and musicianly.

The best test of his musicality appeared in the first movement cadenza which he played with sympathy and great concern over its poetry. Discounting the growls from without, we were close enough to the stage to appreciate the ringing, lyrical tone that Mr. Istomin elicited from the fragile statements.

A spirit of exuberance was released in the rondo, and Mr. Munch did an admirable job of co-ordinating the orchestral repartee with the soloist's style.

Received Ovation

Mr. Istomin received an ovation. It's no discredit to him to suggest that it may have been in part for his sportsmanship and power of concentration, but certainly his art received the lion's share.

The balance of this all-Beethoven program included the fifth symphonies. We have stant aliveness. As we stated in a previous review, the Munch style is as direct as possible and as devoid of superfluous gesture. Not having heard music here since the Koussevitzky era, we find this a startling innovation.

The excellence of the Eighth was determined by strong, articulate phrasing, precise changes of volume, and soaring melodies. The trio of the third movement, which can bring ruin to the performance, was beautifully played by the wind instruments, especially the brasses.

Exciting Close

Sacrificing excessive speed for clarity the finale brought the work to an exciting close.

As was to be expected, the Fifth Symphony received a memorable performance. A full range of reflection was derived from the second movement — the basses and cellos played brilliantly during the trio — and the finale rose to heroic proportions.

Tonight at 8.30 the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center will present the American premiere of Louis Mennini's "The Rope." The performance is open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

heard voiced criticism that too much Beethoven music is being played at this festival.

If we are to judge by the performances we've heard of Missa Solemnis—the second act of the opera, "Fidelio" and these symphonies, the arguments against this musical fare are stone cold.

Direct as Possible

The Munch approach to the eighth was most interesting it combined a successful transmission of philosophy with a con

Milford Bride-Elect Feted at Shower

MILFORD—Miss Barbara Tocci, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Tocci of 264 Central street, was honored at a bridal shower at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Pellegrini of 37 Main street.

Miss Tocci will be married to Ernest Pellegrini Jr., on Labor Day in Sacred Heart Church. Hostesses for the affair were Miss Louise Pellegrini, sister of the groom-to-be, Misses Sue and Josephine Norcia and Rita Norton.

Miss Tocci is employed at the Dennison Mfg. Co. and Pellegrini is associated with his father in business.

Some people can pass on colds without catching them themselves.

Letters

Complaint

To the Editor of THE EAGLE.—

What price culture? Are taxpayers of Lenox, who live on Under Mountain Road, entitled to any consideration? Those who moved here before Tanglewood, with the idea of living on a quiet wooded road, have had a rude awakening.

The BSO has long promoted this narrow country road as a by-pass to Pittsfield. Now the Lenox Selectmen have made it official and the heat is on.

This road is winding, sandy, narrow and rutty, as many know, with passing space only at limited points. It was never intended for the heavy traffic now using it constantly.

Our houses and gardens are bathed in dust and this inconsiderate horde of tourists and sightseers have not the politeness to drive slowly. Would they in turn care to have their own lawns littered with papers and beer cans?

Perhaps to those solely interested in music, it is of minor importance that during six weeks of our short summer, we are unable to enter or exit from our own driveway for two hours before or after a concert.

Since the BSO is interested in making as much money as possible and this traffic is helping them in their project, I suggest that they, the BSO, do something about returning to the road in question the surface that has been ground off in the interest of Tanglewood.

(Mrs.) ELEANOR S. HIBBARD.
Lenox.

In Brief . . .

These last parched weeks produced something unique to Berkshire besides brown lawns and haunting fears of forest fires: Though yesterday's showers drenched golfers and competed with Beethoven, not even the Tanglewood management was heard to complain . . . The blood flown Friday from Pittsfield to Boston for a six-year-old local boy because of a shortage in that huge city is justification for pride in the continuing response by Berkshire people to the volunteer Red Cross program . . .

We hope a prompt response will be given to the appeal by Miss Esther Jaquith of the New England Home for foster parents in the area. No greater contribution to the well-being of unfortunate youngsters could be made . . . We'll be surprised if the New Haven's Pat McGinnis doesn't turn up shortly at the Wichmann homestead in New Lenox, the onetime depot where today the "freight" to be loaded is likely to be blueberry pie for the crew. Not everybody gets an invitation like that from Mrs. Wichmann . . .

A Yale professor claims that a man can't get intoxicated on beer. They don't get around much at Yale—or they'd learn that a Harvard man can do anything.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A home town is a place where they always wonder how you got as far as you have.—The Pointer (Barbers Point, T.H.)

of silence is created. Now if someone would set up two jukeboxes on same principle, a coin in one would knock out racket of the other.

—o—

MONEY is funny. The U.S. Mint reports that coins tend to accumulate in certain cities. Cincinnati goes for nickels, dimes pile up in San Francisco and quarters go for Minneapolis. The last is attributed to the number of cereal firms there which give prizes for box tops accompanied by 25 cents. Most coins, incidentally, have a life span of about 30 years.

—o—

WILD GAME provides about 250 million pounds of meat annually to be eaten by Americans. May account for some of the wild driving, with autoists regarding a tour as a kind of game, devil take the hindmost which, alas, often happens.

RICHARD V. HAPPEL.

33

What It Takes to Write Opera

By JAY S. HARRISON

LENOX, Mass.

Opera composing, at best, is a hazardous profession whose practitioners fall snugly into two opposing groups. On the one hand there are the ivory-tower boys who wait idly for the Muses to offer up their secrets of inspiration and are therefore usually incapable of distinguishing a mezzo-soprano from a fire-hydrant; and, on the other, are the gentlemen who have spent their early, middle and late days in the opera house and have, as a result, come to understand that constant contact with the lyric theater is the straightest route to appreciating its problems and insuring its successes.

The latter course, some years ago, was accepted by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation and it led in turn to a fat commission. Louis Mennini, a young and talented musician, was chosen to write an opera for Tanglewood, financed by the foundation, with the provision that the composer spend a summer in the school's opert department learning through assimilation those tricks of the trade that make the complex art form come alive on stage. Tomorrow night the child of the $750 Koussevitzky grant, a one-act opera titled "The Rope," will receive its world premiere at the hands of students of the Berkshire Music Center in a production directed by Boris Goldovsky, head of Tanglewood's opera department.

THE ROPE—Louis Mennini's one-act opera, based on Eugene O'Neill's play, will receive its world premiere tomorrow and Tuesday at the Berkshire Music Festival. The work, which has been produced by Tanglewood's Opera Department, features Malcolm Bernstein as Abraham Bentley and Susana Naidich as Annie, his daughter.

It Looks Good

How the work will be received is, of course, anybody's guess, though advance reports glow brightly. For his part, Mr. Mennini remains unruffled and speaks about his new venture with unshakable calm. "When the Koussevitzky Foundation asked me to write a chamber opera of less than an hour's duration," he remarked the other day, "I decided to score it for only twenty-five instrumentalists so that it could be used in universities and colleges. I didn't want to write a one-shot work that would die after a single performance; I tried to make it good enough, melodic enough so that groups all over the country would take a crack at it.

"And if 'The Rope' is a success a lot of it is due to the work I did here in the summer of '53. It was a tough summer, I remember that. I've been teaching at the Eastman School of Music for the last six years," said the thirty-four-year-old Mr. Mennini, "and on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays I'd hold classes in Rochester and then drive to Tanglewood to learn what I could learn from Thursdays through Sundays. And believe me, the information I picked up in a few weeks would take a lifetime to get anywhere else."

Describes Lessons

Mr. Mennini, who is the older brother of Peter Mennin, one of the most prolific and well known of our younger composers, continued by explaining precisely what it was that Tanglewood had given him in terms of experience. "Most of my weekends were spent walking into any and all opera rehearsals and in visits to studios to watch vocal coaches and teachers in action. I kept my eye on the directors, studied all the operas that the students themselves were studying and paid special attention to the ways in which music, voice and action were tied together in the performance.

"Because of constant repetitions and the suggestions of Boris Goldovsky and his staff even the most involved things would soon clarify themselves, and as the days passed I actually found out what makes a first-class opera tick. I learned, for instance what is stageworthy and what isn't; what will work and what wont. With that knowledge when I got around to reading Eugene O'Neill's 'The Rope,' after going through hundreds of other plays, I knew that I had hit the right one. You see, I discovered that a good operatic drama is one in which the singers have a legitimate motivation for their numbers, since all of them lead to a logical climax. Much to my surprise, I found that in opera one idea leads to another, just like a good orchestral piece.

"Problem of Timing"

"Most important of all, I came face to face with the problem of timing. Timing, as I see it, deals with the matter of giving enough music to each character so that he can accomplish what needs to be accomplished. Different kinds of personalities need different amounts of music to establish that personality, and too much or too little ruins the character's effect on the audience. There are five people in 'The Rope'—four singers and a little child. Each one, I hope, is firmly identified by his music."

Mr. Mennini, whose athletic appearance and disarmingly boyish manner suggest anything but the recondite art with which he is allied, further implied that the question of "spacing" had been answered for him in Tanglewood. "An opera composer," he said, "must know how to space his big arias and duets so that they'll be placed where they do the most good. Sometimes an area is the worst thing you can insert because it's too liable to stop the action dead. Also, sometimes, singing isn't as strong as plain speech. And at all times words have to be set naturally. If they're put to music artificially they're difficult to catch and ridiculous to hear.

"Dark, Somber Story"

"Take 'The Rope.' It's a dark and somber story—one of O'Neill's early 'Sea Plays'—dealing with greed and a sort of prodigal son twist. With a background like that I couldn't very well have a young child singing arias on stage. It would be both artificial and unsuitable. So in the opera the most she does is hum, which is what all children do. I think it works out fine.

"In fact," Mr. Mennini concluded, "thanks to the help of the whole opera department here I'm really satisfied with what I've done. And I'm surprised, too. You don't know really what your opera is going to be like until you get it on stage. Sure, you can visualize how it sounds, but it's not the same as the real thing. It's like looking at a ham sandwich. You think you know what it tastes like by looking at it, but the reality of the taste, once you've bitten into it, is even better."

Boston Symphony

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has been invited to play in the 1956 Edinburgh Festival, and may also go as far afield as the Soviet Union during the European tour which it hopes to open late next summer. In that event, it will be the first American orchestra ever to play in Russia.

"Barkis is willin'" Thomas D. Perry, the Bostonians' manager, said last week about this possibility. The attitude summed up in this classic quotation from "David Copperfield" is that the orchestra will be receptive to any invitation that may come from Russia. While no definite steps have been taken yet toward making arrangements, the current feeling at Tanglewood is optimistic, especially in view of other recently launched projects toward the exchange of American and Soviet musicians.

As for the tour as a whole, the chief problem is the familiar one of financing. The orchestra hopes that some of this support will come from the State Department, and would also welcome contributions from foundations and individual gifts. It would prefer to look for the necessary money outside the ranks of its regular contributors, thinking that sufficient calls are made upon them to maintain the organization's regular activities.

The length of the tour is limited by the Berkshire Festival at one end and the home season in Boston at the other

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

TODAY, 10 A. M., Chamber Music Hall. Concert of chamber music by students.

TODAY, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch; Eugene Istomin, pianist. Beethoven program: Symphony No. 8; Piano Concerto No. 4 in G; Symphony No. 3.

MONDAY AND TUESDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall. Louis Mennini's The Rope (world premiere), and Mozart's Zaide, sung and conducted by students of the Berkshire Music Center.

WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall. Program of chamber music by six members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with David Lloyd, tenor, and Ralph Berkowitz, pianist. Beethoven program: Trio in E flat, Op. 11; An die ferne Geliebte (six songs for tenor and piano); Sonata in A, Op. 69; Trio in G; Quintet in E flat.

THURSDAY, Tanglewood on Parade. 5:45 P. M., Fanfare and welcome. 6 P. M., simultaneous sessions of each department at work: Music Shed—Student symphony orchestra. Theatre-Concert Hall—student opera. Chamber Music Hall—student chamber music. 7 P. M., Picnic supper and lawn party and concert by student chorus. 8:15 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Leonard Bernstein and Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler; Mr. Bernstein, pianist; Claude Rains, narrator.
Suite from On the Waterfront (first performance) ..... Bernstein
A Lincoln Portrait ..... Copland
Caprice Espagnole ... Rimsky-Korsakoff
Rhapsody in Blue ..... Gershwin
Suite from Graduation Ball ..... Strauss-Doratti
10:30 P. M., Music Shed. Drawing for door prizes.
11 P. M., Waltzing on the lawn.

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch.
Symphonie Fantastique ..... Berlioz
La Mer ..... Debussy
Daphnis and Chloe, Suite No. 2 ..... Ravel

SATURDAY, 3 P. M., Music Shed. Symphony concert by students of Department I.

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Pierre Monteux.
Overture to The Flying Dutchman ..... Wagner
Symphony No. 3 ..... Brahms
Three Nocturnes ..... Debussy
Suite from Der Rosenkavalier... Strauss

NEXT SUNDAY, 10 A. M., Chamber Music Hall. Chamber music concert by students of Department I.

NEXT SUNDAY, 2:30 P. M., Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch; Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; combined chorus of Berkshire Music Center students and Chorus of Springfield, Mass. (Closing concert of festival.) Beethoven program: Leonore Overture, No. 3; Symphony No. 9.

From Those Smoky Cellars

Jazz Moves Outdoors Into the Country Air

By JOHN HAMMOND

Open air festivals may be an ancient story to the devotees of symphonic, operatic and chamber music, but until this year very little in the way of jazz has been offered to concert audiences who prefer their music without the encumbrances of ceilings, walls and doors. A most successful outdoor jazz presentation took place in Newport last summer, when more than 10,000 people came from all over the continent (including Canada and Mexico) to hear two modest evenings of solo and small group jazz. This year the Newport Jazz Festival was expanded to three nights, and nearly 30,000 people paid up to eight dollars a seat per concert to hear the greatest variety of jazz stars ever assembled in one place: big bands, vocal and instrumental soloists of every style and description.

Up in Lenox, Mass., another New England resort, the Music Barn was opened recently for the sole purpose of bringing jazz and folk music to audiences whose only previous fare had been the austere programs of Tanglewood and the chamber music at South Mountain. The Barn is actually an outdoor arena nestled among the barns and stables of the old estate now known as Music Inn.

For the past five years Philip and Stephanie Barber, the operators of Music Inn, have been blazing new trails in Lenox by conducting jazz seminars with experts from the fields of psychiatry, anthropology and religion arguing with musicians of every status the role of jazz in American life, with live demonstrations by Dixieland and "bop" artists, gospel singers, and blues shouters. Until this year these affairs were held indoors, but the steadily increasing patronage forced them out in to the open air.

Marshall Stearns, a professor of English at Hunter College and president of the Institute of Jazz Studies, provides an erudite tone to these sessions which seems acceptable even to the most rigid disciple of the Boston Symphony at nearby Tanglewood. Stearns is not a man to let music speak for itself; he prefers to have it analyzed and dissected, and the audiences seem to agree.

Continued on page 5, column 3

Jazz Moves Outdoors

(Continued from page one)

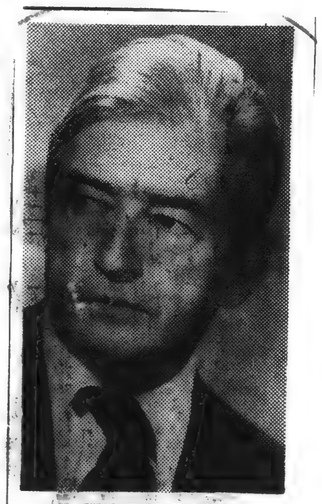
ence (thanks perhaps to Tanglewood), every member of the band played as though inspired, and even the usual reticent leader was so overcome by an excellent piano and the surroundings that he played chorus after chorus on his own.

Worcester Gazette
8/4



CLAUDE RAINS
At Tanglewood Aug. 11

Rains to Narrate "A Lincoln Portrait"

LENOX, Aug. 4 — Claude Rains will narrate Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," which will be a highlight of the evening concert Thursday, Aug. 11, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, during "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer music school.

Rains will make his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting, and his debut at Tanglewood in the musical portrait of the Great Emancipator, which was composed during the war by Mr. Copland, who is assistant director of the center, and which was first performed by the Boston Symphony on April 9, 1943. Mr. Rains made three appearances in "A Lincoln Portrait" with the Philadelphia Orchestra, Eugene Ormandy conducting, twice in Philadelphia and once at Carnegie Hall, New York, in April, 1943.

Music

BSO Music Triumphs Over Nature

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE NEXT to the last weekend at Tanglewood came to a close yesterday afternoon with a spirited playing of an all-Beethoven program. The weather had been gray at concert time, but Charles Munch started the eighth symphony with all circumstances apparently propitious. After a very few bars, however, and while still waving his baton, he twisted around to find out the reason for the buzzing commotion to the rear of the Shed. It was the crowds from the lawns moving in under the colonnades as rain started to fall. It settled down to a reasonably quiet downfall and the symphony proceeded without incident from that source.

When Eugene Istomin came out to play the fourth piano concerto, however, a real rainstorm started. By the time he got to the slow movement, which is in a gentle, quiet mood, the heavens were at their angriest. Fortunately, Istomin wisely chose to disregard the storm and allowed nothing to disturb his beautiful playing.

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH, leading the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the two symphonies was at a peak of exhilaration. He penetrated the eighth in every detail, and gave it without any extravagance or decoration. Beethoven in no other symphony gets down to clear melody and lucid music-making more quickly than in this one. At the outset of each of the four movements, he tells what he proposes to do and forthwith does it. There is none of the inward struggle of mind as in the one preceding and the one following it.

Munch might have delineated more distinctly and with more contrast the graceful theme of the minuet following the intentionally heavy-footed opening bars.

* * *

IN THE FIFTH Symphony, Munch plays the first two "fate" idioms in one cluster. Some readings from the same stage have allowed time for each "knock" to be answered before proceeding to the next one, a detail over which scholars have long argued. The 'celli sang the andante with deep resonance and the basses, in their famous solo in the trio of the third movement, retained here the virtuosity of the tradition instilled by their former virtuoso bass-playing conductor. Munch kept this movement in excellent control and as he led up to the majestic finale, he gradually worked up from the awesome double piano he had imposed to the throbbing broad allegro. Then, suddenly he released the flood of tone he had been holding back and with a baritone war-whoop that was audible on the eastern horizon let rush the torrent of one of Beethoven's most thrilling pages.

* * *

ISTOMIN PLAYED with such thorough competence and lack of outward ostentation that one could appreciate what he was doing more fully by listening without watching. Looking at him gave the impression he was doing a routine job. But it was no ordinary performance. There was poetry and, on demand, disciplined ardor which gave warmth and animation to the whole concerto.

Everyone in the audience must have asked himself when the storm rose to its peak, "What would I do in such a situation?" Istomin played on without altering the mature plan of his interpretation and did not attempt to adjust the dynamics and defy the weather. This was certainly the right thing to do and no one ever emerged from such harassment with more honor.

* * *

THE PRECEDING evening, Saturday, Munch had led the orchestra with the Festival chorus and six soloists in the second act of Beethoven's opera "Fidelio" and, after intermission, in several excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung," in which Margaret Harshaw sang the "Immolation" scene.

David Lloyd as Florestan gave utterance dramatically to his early recitative: "Gott! welch ein Dunkel hier!" Miss Harshaw as Leonore and Mac Morgan as Rocco made the ensuing duet melodramatic, and set the mood well. The smaller assignments which fall to Pizzaro and Fernando (both sung by Malcolm Bernstein) Marzelline (Christina Cardillo) and Jaquino (Arthur Shoep), were more than effectively rendered, yet there was less than complete illusion about the entire presentation.

* * *

THERE COULD have been no question about the music, but whether its application to the situation was sensed was not convincingly proven. The great love story was insufficiently brought forward and Miss Harshaw's "O namenlose Freude" was stupendous vocalism without theater.

From the last opera of Wagner's "Ring," Munch selected "Daybreak" and "Siegfried's Rhine Journey," the "Siegfried Death Music" and to close, the final scene in which Brunhilde sings over the pyre of the slain Siegfried. Miss Harshaw expressed passionate grief eloquently and with a power that not even Munch's overloud orchestra could overwhelm. There was stately grandeur to her appearance and regal authority in her voice. It was a thrilling experience in which some of the imbalances could well be overlooked to remember only the urgency of the performance.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Public Events

Tonight

8:30—Student performance of Mennini's opera, "The Rope," Tanglewood theater, Lenox. (BMC Friends. Special tickets required.)

8:30—Lecture by Walter Terry, "Movement in Opera," with Lorna Sydney Jacob's Pillow, east of Lee.

8:30—Modern Jazz Quartet, Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox.

8:45—"The Tender Trap." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly
Independent
Circ. 5,679

AUG 5 1955

Many Prizes Are Announced For Tanglewood on Parade

A high fidelity phonograph and an electric refrigerator will be among numerous prizes to be awarded at Tanglewood on Parade Thursday, Mrs. Bruce Sanborn of Lenox, chairman of the prize committee announced today.

The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will take place rain or shine from 4 p.m. to midnight at Tanglewood.

RCA-Victor has donated its newest high fidelity machine, "The Mark IV" and the General Electric Co., a large refrigerator. A season ticket for two for the 12 concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood during the summer of 1956 is third prize.

Anonymous Donation

Other prizes include an English racing bicycle, which has been donated anonymously; a lifetime subscription to High Fidelity, monthly music magazine published in Great Barrington; an original by Ture Bengtz, Lenox sculptor and painter and director of the Bengtz School of Art; "an evening in the Berkshires," which entitles the winner to dinner for two at the Morgan House in Lee, a pair of seats at Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival and a skirt from the Lenox shop of Calypso of Bermuda; and a similar package, consisting of a dinner for two at Williams Inn and two seats for a performance at Adams Memorial Theater, Williamstown, plus a stole from Bratton Inc., a country shop in Williamstown; recordings of Beethoven's Symphonies 1, 3, 5, 7 and 9 performed by the Boston Symphony under the direction of Serge Koussevitzky or Charles Munch, donated by Victor Records; and the 25th anniversary record of the Boston Pops Orchestra under the direction of Arthur Fiedler.

Silent Auction Planned

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, of Lenox, widow of the former conductor of the Boston Symphony, has drawn likenesses of her husband, of Charles Munch, of composer Aaron Copland and of maestro Arturo Toscanini, and these will be placed in the glassed hall at the main gate at Tanglewood for silent auction. The highest bidder announced at auction time will receive them autographed.

Boris Goldovsky, head of the Tanglewood opera department, will draw the winning ticket numbers during the concert in the Music Shed, about 10 p.m., just after intermission and before Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra commences its portion of the program.

Program Listed

The Shed concert has programmed the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Berstein conducting, with actor Claude Rains as narrator in Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," and the premiere of Mr. Bernstein's film music from "On the Waterfront." Mr. Fiedler will lead the Pops in selections by Rimsky-Korsakov, Johann Strauss and Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue," with Leonard Bernstein as piano soloist.

Seats for Tanglewood on Parade are now on sale at the Tanglewood boxoffice, and telephone reservations are being accepted for seats and boxes. Unreserved seats entitle holders to seats in the Shed's rear sections and to participation in the prize-drawing.

Lenox

ROBERT U. JOHNSON — Tel. 163

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 39,951

AUG 4 1955

Claude Rains Sets Debut At Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 4 —(UP)— Actor Claude Rains will make his debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra here next Thursday during the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" program of the Berkshire Music Festival.

Rains will be narrator in a performance of Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait." Leonard Bernstein will be the conductor.

More Rooms Needed To House Tourists

LENOX — A call for additional rooms to be registered with the Kiwanis Information Center was made today by Mrs. John M. O'Brien, who closed down her booth at 1:30 p.m. Saturday after sending 300 tourists to Lee and Pittsfield for accommodations.

In spite of a record 200 rooms registered, all were filled by Friday night, said Mrs. O'Brien. With the final four-day series of concerts bringing music lovers into this town starting Thursday, for Tanglewood on Parade, all registered rooms may be taken by that night.

A check of inns and hotels in Lenox, including the Curtis Hotel, Elm Court and the Corner House, shows that these establishments are booked solid the final week of Tanglewood.

Tanglewood Concerts Will End August 14

Koussevitzsky Memorial To Be Given Friday

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. moves toward its close next Sunday, August 14, with several climatic events this week and next. One of the highlights of the six-week festival will be a memorial performance of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" this Friday night, August 5, to honor the late Serge Koussevitzsky, former musical director of the orchestra. This evening-long orchestral and choral work will be given in the huge Music Shed, starting at 8:30.

The choral sections of the Beethoven work will be sung by the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students of the chorus, opera and study group departments, trained by Hugh Ross. The soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Eunise Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor, ad Mac Morgan, bass, Leonard Bernstein, who began his long association with the Berkshire Music School in 1942 as assistant to Mr. Koussevitzsky will conduct the memorial performance.

Hugh Ross

Concerts this Saturday evening at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30, will also feature the works of Beethoven. With Charles Munch, musical director, on the podium, the orchestra will assist a group of soloists in the first Tanglewood performance of Act II of "Fidelio" on Saturday, and will give excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung", in the second half. The Sunday concert will give the Beethoven Symphony No. 8, in F major; Piano Concerto No. 4, in G major, with Eugene Istomin the soloist, and Symphony No. 5, in C minor.

The final week at Tanglewood will open on Wednesday night, with the last six chamber music concerts in the Theatre Concert Hall at 8.30. Six principals of the Boston Symphony with David Lloyd, tenor, and Ralph Berkowitz, piano, will give a program of Beethoven trios, quintets, cello sonatas and songs.

Next Thursday evening, August 11,, will be the annual, festive "Tanglewood on Parade" program, starting at 6 o'clock with student concerts, followed by picnic supper on the lawn at 7 o'clock. The evening program will include the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Mr Bernstein on the podium, playing Mr Bernstein's suite, "On the Waterfront", and Copeland's "A Lincoln Portrait. The Boston Pops Orchestra with Arthur Fiedler conducting, will follow, with a varied program, including Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue", in which Mr Bernstein will play the piano solo.

Next Friday night, August 12, Mr Munch will conduct the orchestra in a program of music of Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel. On Saturday night, August 13, Pierre Monteux will be conductor of a program of music of Wagner, Brahms, Debussy and Strauss. The final Tanglewood concert of the season will offer Beethoven's memorable Symphony No. 9, in D minor, with Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor, and Doald Gramm, bass, and the combined chorus of Berkshire Music Center students and chorus of the Springfield, Mass., Symphony Orchestra. Mr Munch will conduct.

The complete programs of Tanglewood concerts are given in the Weekly Calendar.

20 Concerts Draw 111,835 At Festival

Rain Curtails Friday Crowd; 9,715 on Sunday

TANGLEWOOD — Attendance at 20 of the 24 Festival concerts here this season totals 111,835 and indications are that last year's figure of 135,775 will be exceeded before the final concerts over the weekend.

Despite threatening weather before yesterday afternoon's concert and rain during the last part of the program, 9,715 attended and the night before a crowd of 9,422 showed up. Friday night's concert drew only 6,400, due in part to the heavy rain that fell just before concert time. Wednesday night's chamber concert, featuring Rudolph Serkin, attracted 2,456 music lovers to the Theater-Concert Hall, marking the biggest attendance of the season for the chamber series.

Chamber Music

The sixth and final week of Festival concerts opens with the concluding event of the series of Beethoven chamber music, Wednesday in the Theater-Concert Hall. Six principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (Gino Cioffi, clarinet; Samuel Mayes, cello; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; James Stagliano, French horn), will be assisted by David Lloyd, tenor, and Ralph Berkowitz, piano, in a program of trios, songs, a quintet and a cello sonata.

Charles Munch will conduct an all-French orchestral program, music of Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel, on the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Shed concert Friday evening and an all-Beethoven program including the ninth symphony with soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; and augmented chorus on Sunday afternoon. Pierre Monteux will conduct the Saturday evening program, comprising Wagner, Brahms, Debussy and Strauss.

Mr. Munch's concluding concert will be his fifth all-Beethoven program of the summer. With guest conductors Monteux and Leonard Bernstein also performing Beethoven on their concerts, Tanglewood in 1955 will have been largely devoted to the music of the German composer. All nine symphonies, the "Missa Solemnis," "Fidelio," Act II, two piano concertos, the violin concerto, a number of overtures, and a great body of chamber music has been performed.

Bernstein in Triple Capacity At Benefit Concert Thursday

TANGLEWOOD—Leonard Bernstein, one of the Berkshire Music Center's most illustrious graduates, will appear in a triple capacity at Tanglewood on Parade Thursday night in the Music Shed, as a conductor, composer and concert pianist.

The advance sale of tickets for the benefit event indicates that last year's attendance of 10,050 will be passed. Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, head of the sale of boxes for the major concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra, reported today there are just a few boxes left for sale.

Mr. Bernstein will open the gala evening concert in the huge shed conducting the 104 Boston Symphony Orchestra. His portion of the program will consist of a first performance anywhere of a suite Mr. Bernstein has arranged from music he composed for the film, "On the Waterfront," which won the Academy Award in 1955, and also won Oscars for its director, Elia Kazan, and its star, Marlon Brando.

37 on Aug. 25

Mr. Bernstein will also pay tribute to the noted American composer Aaron Copland, at present on leave of absence from his duties as assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, with a performance of "A Lincoln Portrait," which will have the stage, screen, radio and television star, Claude Rains, as narrator. During Arthur Fiedler's tenure of the podium, with the Boston Pops Orchestra, Mr. Bernstein will be piano soloist in George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

Mr. Bernstein, who will observe his 37th birthday a week after Tanglewood closes, on Aug. 25, was born in Lawrence, Mass., in 1918, attended the Boston Latin School and then Harvard College, graduating in 1939. He was at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia for two years, where he studied conducting with Fritz Reiner, orchestration with Randall Thompson, and piano with Isabella Vengerova.

At the first two sessions of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, in 1940 and 1941, Bernstein studied conducting with Serge Koussevitzky, the late conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The following summer he returned as Mr. Koussevitzky's assistant in conducting, and joined the faculty of the school in 1946. He is head of its orchestra and conducting departments and trains the symphony orchestra of 100 scholarship students from all over the U.S., Canada and foreign lands for the weekly concerts which attract audiences of upwards of 3,000 during the Tanglewood season.

As a composer, Mr. Bernstein has written two symphonies, the "Jeremiah" and "The Age of Anxiety"; the ballets "Fancy Free" and "Facsimile"; the violin concerto "Serenade" which Isaac Stern performed for its premiere by the Boston Symphony last season; the opera "Trouble in Tahiti," done by Tanglewood's opera department in 1952, later by NBC television, last season on Broadway; the scores of the Broadway musicals "On the Town" and "Wonderful Town"; and songs for the Jean Arthur-Boris Karloff 1951 Broadway revival of "Peter Pan." His newest work is a full-length opera from Voltaire's "Candide," which, with Tyrone Guthrie directing, will be produced on Broadway in the autumn of 1956.

In 1951 Bernstein married television actress Felicia Montealegre, and the Bernsteins have a three-year-old daughter, Jamie, and a six-week-old son, Alexander Serge, named after his patron, Serge Alexander Koussevitzky. It is to his son that the suite from "On the Waterfront" is dedicated.

Order Changed For Two Operas At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD — Berkshire Music Center officials announced this morning a change in the order of the two operas to be given tonight and tomorrow night in the Theater Concert Hall, beginning at 8:30.

The world premiere of Louis Menini's one-act opera, "The Rope," will be given first instead of last to permit drama critics to send their reviews to newspapers in time to meet morning deadlines.

"The Rope," which runs for 55 minutes, is being presented by the opera students of the Music Center under the direction of Boris Goldovsky. Mozart's unfinished two-act opera "Zaide," will be given at the last half of the program tonight and tomorrow with different casts.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

AUG 5 1955

Program on TV to Tell Aims of Satellite Moon

A special report on the mechanics and significance of the government's program to launch a "satellite moon" into space will be presented on NBC-WBZ-TV's "The First Step Into Space" Saturday at 8 p.m.

Dr. Athelstan F. Spilhaus, named by President Eisenhower as one of the men who will design the satellite, known as the Bird, will explain to WBZ-TV-viewers just what information natural scientists hope to obtain from the flight and the importance of the whole program as an example of the free international exchange of scientific data.

Part of the program will be a special film on just how rockets work and another segment of the program will be devoted to a study of how the human mind might react to the stresses of space flights.

♪ ♪ ♪

Another recorded concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, from Tanglewood, will be broadcast over WGBH-FM Saturday night at 8:30. Under the direction of Pierre Monteux, the orchestra will be heard in a program of music by Bach-Respighi, Beethoven, Strauss, and Sessions.

♪ ♪ ♪

Richard L. Kaye, WCRB's program director, will be heard in an interview with the young American conductor, Izler Solomon, Saturday afternoon at 5:05 on WCRB-AM and FM. Included in this program will be two recent recordings of music by Kurt Weill and K.P.E. Bach, conducted by Mr. Solomon.

♪ ♪ ♪

Paul Whiteman, emcee of "America's Greatest Bands," will introduce Vincent Lopez, Emilio Reyes, Buddy Morrow, and Mitch Miller and their orchestras Saturday at 8 p.m. on CBS-WNAC-TV.

Another hour-long Stratford (Ontario) Festival Concert will be broadcast over WNAC Saturday at 10 p.m., with guest soloist Elisabeth Schwarzkopf, soprano, and the Hart House Orchestra under the direction of Boyd Neel.

Radio, TV-FM listings will be found on page 18

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUL 31 1955

MISS CARDILLO OF NORTH ADAMS SINGS SATURDAY

To Appear With Boston Symphony at Tanglewood

Lenox, July 30—Christina Cardillo, talented young soprano from North Adams, has been given two important roles at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. On Saturday night, Aug. 6, she will be a soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed. At that time she will sing the role of "Marcellina" in Beethoven's Fidelio, Act II. This will be her first appearance as a soloist with the full BSO in a major concert at Tanglewood.

Also In Premiere

Two nights later, on Monday and Tuesday, Aug. 8 and 9, she will be having the leading role in Mozart's opera "Zaide" at the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood. This will be the American premiere of the opera. The English version which will be presented was prepared by Boris Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell of the Berkshire Music Center's Opera Department.

With the close of the season at Tanglewood, Miss Cardillo will return to New York City where sing in NBC-TV's premiere presentation of the opera based on "Cain and Abel" with music by Alfred Weidman. Previous to the Festival Season she sang on a series of CBS-TV programs in New York City.

Winner of the Metropolitan Opera Company's Auditions of the Air a year ago, Miss Cardillo spent last summer at the Central City Opera in Colorado. Previously, she was featured in opera presentations at Tanglewood.

She has studied voice in Milan, Italy, on a scholarship as has she at the Katherine T. Long School which is affiliated with the Metropolitan in New York.

This past week she was featured in the gala "Celebrity Night" benefit program at the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield. There she was accompanied by Paul Ulanowsky who for 14 years was accompanist for Lotte Lehmann.

She has also been a featured soloist at the Auditorium in Springfield and was soloist at the National Republican Club's annual Lincoln Day Dinner in New York City last February.

When appearing as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday, Aug. 6, she will make for a complete Cardillo family night. Her brother, Pasquale, is a veteran E flat clarinetist with the BSO.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUL 31 1955

ONE-MAN SHOW BY TURE BENGTZ AT TANGLEWOOD

Paintings, Drawings and Prints On View This Week

Lenox, July 30—An exhibition of paintings, drawings and prints by Ture Bengtz, Berkshire resident and head of the Bengtz School of Art at Lenox School here, will be on display during the coming week, starting today in the glassed exhibition hall, main gate, at Tanglewood, in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Bengtz show, as well as all the others in the weekly displays of painting, sculpture and photographs at Tanglewood, has been arranged through the courtesy of the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, and its director, Stuart C. Henry.

When he came to the United States in 1927 from his native Finland, Ture Bengtz studied at the Boston Museum School, where he is head of the department of drawing and graphic arts. His awards have included the Paige traveling scholarship for European study; first prize in the New England competition sponsored by the Stewart Gallery, Boston, in 1946; the Palmer Memorial prize at the National Academy of Design in New York; as well as an honorable mention from the Society of American Etchers.

Examples of his work can be seen at the National Academy, the Art Institute in Chicago, Washington's Library of Congress and at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and the Boston Library, Wiggings collection. Mr. Bengtz has recently exhibited at the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, and the Otis, Library and Museum. Since his last showing at Tanglewood a year ago, he visited his family in Finland in the autumn of 1954, did portrait commissions, and had a one-man show at Marieham.

Big Tanglewood exhibit includes such recent work as "Olive Bank," oil painting abstract of a Swedish sailing vessel; "Horses resting," oil; "The Fiddler," oil; "Girl Blowing a Horn," oil; and "Children in the Countryside," oil.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

AUG 1 1955

More Than 15,000 Cheer Munch, Serkin In Festival Event

What a beautiful night; tall pines silhouetted against the sky by a clearly shining moon all around made a perfect setting for another evening of Beethoven at Tanglewood.

The star of the program was pianist, Rudolph Serkin, but the high point of the evening came with Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony, No. 3 in E-flat major. Charles Munch ably directed the members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra through the change of pace and dynamics in his eminently satisfying way. This symphony is an exultant one, assertive and even jubilant. In the second movement, marked Marcia Funebre, there is no feeling of doleful sorrow usually associated with death, only a new life force, almost a phoenix rising from the ashes.

Mr. Serkin who played in the Emperor Concerto, for piano and orchestra, No. 5 in E-flat major, did not seem at his best last night. Although he is a masterful artist, a decisive and forceful pianist, there was some discrepancy between what he wanted and what Mr. Munch seemed to be trying to instruct the orchestra to do. There was also disagreement among the audience as to exactly where the fault lay. The effort of all concerned was quite exciting though especially when the brasses lent their particular brand of excitement to the proceedings. Mr. Serkin's playing was both brilliant and subtly subdued as the music demanded, revealing a thoughtful musicianship. The concerto itself is one of differing moods, from the dreamy Adagio to the impetuous third movement with the tantalizing way you have to wait for the Allegro theme. The "Egmont" Overture which opened the program was reportedly very well done. We much regret that we arrived too late to hear anything but the last few phrases.

In 1951 at the first concert that Charles Munch conducted there was an all high record crowd of 15,800. Last night's attendance of 15,500 was the largest since then. The press bureau said it had not anticipated such throngs and the traffic problem was impressive.—F. M. R.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 55,423

JUL 30 1955

Tanglewood Weekend Concerts Set

LENOX — The second weekend of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in this Summer's Berkshire Festival will open tonight at 8.30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. Another concert will be presented Sunday afternoon at 2.30.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct tonight's all-Beethoven program which will include the overture to "Egmont," the Piano Concerto No. 5 in E Flat Major (the "Emperor") with Rudolf Serkin making his Tanglewood debut as soloist, and the Symphony No. 3 in E Flat, the 'Eroica."

Ever since his American debut in 1935 with Arturo Toscanini conducting the Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra of New York, Serkin has been one of the most popular and distinguished artists in the United States. In recent years he has journeyed annually to the small French village of Prades to participate in festival performance with the great cellist, Pablo Casals. He is especially renowned as a Beethoven interpreter. A Berkshire neighbor in the Summer, he lives on a Vermont farm.

Sunday afternoon, Pierre Monteux will conduct an all-Brahms concert with Issac Stern as soloist in the Violin Concerto in D. Major, Opus 77. In addition, the program will include the "Academic Festival" overture and the Symphony No. 1 in C Minor. This will be Stern's final appearance of the season at Tanglewood.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUL 31 1955

Soloists This Week at Tanglewood

MARGARET HARSHAW

ADELE ADDISON

EUNICE ALBERTS

MAC MORGAN

DAVID LLOYD

These five vocalists will be heard at Tanglewood this week as soloists in major choral works by Beethoven. Miss Addison of this city, Miss Alberts, Lloyd and Morgan are to take part in the "Missa Solemnis" Friday night, while Miss Harshaw, Lloyd and Morgan will appear in Act II of the opera "Fidelio."

Tanglewood Topics

By WALTER ALFORD

Lenox, July 30—There will be a dividend for opera fans on the program of short operas and choral music announced by the Berkshire Music Center for Monday evening. In addition to Boris Blacher's chamber opera, "Romeo and Juliet," and Darius Milhaud's "L'Abandon d'Ariane," and choral selections by students of Hugh Ross' chorus department, Boris Goldovsky's opera department will give "Comedy on the Bridge," a short comic opera by Bohuslav Martinu, who was Tanglewood's guest composer in 1946.

It will be staged by Sarah Caldwell, stage director of the opera department, and Mr. Goldovsky will provide piano accompaniment. This program, as well as the succeeding ones on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 8 and 9, requires reserved seat tickets, and patrons should apply to the Friends' office at Tanglewood for reservations.

Student Leaders

Students who will sing leading roles in "Romeo and Juliet" are Naomi Farr (New York City), Juliet; Harold Johnson (Chicago, Romeo; Gwendolyn Belle (St. Louis), Lady Capulet; Regina Sarfaty (New York City), the nurse; Lynn Detwiler (Altoona, Pa.), Tybalt; Robert Kerns (Utica, Mich.), Benvolio; Peyton Higgison (Mobile, Ala.), Capulet.

Principal singers in the short Milhaud opera are: Claire Watson (Rochester, N. Y.), Ariane; Lee Goebel (San Diego, Cal.), Phaedra; McHenry Boatwright (Boston), Dionysius; Peter Roberts (Westbrook, Conn.), Theseus. Igor Chichagov, of Baltimore, will conduct for "Ariane," Kalman Novak, of Cambridge, for "Romeo."

* * *

Mrs. Lucy Putnam, chairman of the society of Friends, through membership in which the public may attend student concerts at Tanglewood, their contributions going to the support of the Berkshire Music Center, announces that contributions so far this season have reached a total of $26,000, toward a summer goal of $40,000. Gifts from Friends are considerably ahead of 1954, when the Boston Symphony's summer music school benefited by $23,545 at the end of the season. The drive for increased contributions has been considerably sparked by the generous grant from the Rockefeller Foundation, which has announced that it will match, dollar for dollar, all monies over $15,000 raised by the school, over a five-year period.

* * *

Adele Addison Soloist

Leonard Bernstein, who got his start in conducting as a student of the late Serge Koussevitzky at the Berkshire Music Center during its first two summers, in 1940 and 1941, is directing preparation of the impressive full-evening "Missa Solemnis" by Beethoven, which will be given on a Berkshire Festival concert program, Friday, Aug 4, in memory of the late conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The four soloists with the orchestra are all former Berkshire Music Center students. Soprano Adele Addison, who sang a solo role earlier this summer in Bach's B minor Mass, was a student in the opera department in 1947, 1948, again in 1950.

Eunice Alberts, the contralto, studied at Tanglewood in the music school's second session, in 1941, and for four more succeeding summers: Miss Alberts is flying to the Berkshires for this engagement from Aspen, Colo., where she is on the faculty of the Aspen International Institute. David Lloyd, the tenor, sang in the opera department's American premiere performances, in 1947, of Benjamin Britten's "Albert Herring" and Rossini's "The Turk In Italy."

Bass-baritone Mac Morgan, popular concert singer who summers in Stockbridge, was a student of opera dramatics in 1953. The violin solo in the "Missa Solemnis" will be performed by BSO concertmaster Richard Burgin, the organ will be played by William Frank.

* * *

Word From Barber

Samuel Barber writes from Italy to Tanglewood friends (the young American composer with a former teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center) that he is summering at Capri with opera composer Gian-Carlo Menotti, at work on a new opera with score by Barber and libretto by Menotti. Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," which had its Tanglewood premiere Friday evening, with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony, was recently given at the Singakacemie in Vienna, with Hilda Gueden as soloist, and with Zino Francescatti, the noted violinist who summers in Monterey, Mass., in the audience. The Barber choral work was also heard in London, by the Philharmonia Choir, and is planned for performances soon in Rome and Berlin.

* * *

Tanglewood audiences are looking forward to the return of Metropolitan Opera soprano, Margaret Harshaw, who will repeat, this time with Charles Munch, the performance of the Immolation Scene from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung" she did in the Tanglewood Music Shed in 1952, under Pierre Monteux' baton. That summer Miss Harshaw sang vocal numbers also from Act III, scene 2 of "Siegfried."

On Saturday evening, Aug. 6, with a supporting cast of soloists of past and present Berkshire Music Center students, [illegible] for the first time [illegible] program [illegible] Be[illegible] toyama, of Tokyo, violin, and Tossi Imyanago, of Tokyo, piano; a piece for string bass and piano, by Alan Daniels, of New York City, performed by John Vincent Carbone, of Providence, R. I., strung bass, and Robert Miller, Mount Vernon, N. Y., piano; and a monument from a String Quartet by William J. Sydeman, of Sarnia, Ont.

The Aaug. 1 forum will also give music lovers an opportunity to hear a work by Eino Rautavaara, 26-year-old Finnish composer especially chosen by Jean Sibelius to study this summer at Tanglewood, on a Koussevitzky Music Foundation scholarship. Mr. Rautavaara will accompany Gabriel de los Rios, Chilean baritone, in several German lieder he has composed.

* * *

At "Tanglewood on Parade," when simultaneous demonstrations are given to the public from 6 to 7 p. m. by various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, there will be a symphony program by the student orchestra in the Music Shed, opera by the opera department in the Theater-Concert Hall, chamber music by students of Dept. I in the Chamber Music Hall, and during the serving of box lunches, a concert by the choral department from the steps of the administration building of the Boston Symphony's summer music school.

* * *

Ingolf Dahl, who heads the popular Dept. V (Tanglewood Study Group) at the Berkshire Music Center, and who is associate professor of music at the University of Southern California, where he directs both the Collegium Musicum and the University Orchestra, will conduct one of his own compositions at the final concert of the student symphony orchestra at Tanglewood, on Saturday, Aug. 13. (Music Shed, 3 p. m.). It is a symphonic legend in four parts, entitled "The Tower of St. Barbara," about a saint of medieval times; and it was commissioned and recorded by the Louisville, Ky. Orchestra under a Carnegie Foundation grant and performed four times last season. Simultaneously, the New York Woodwind Quintet will be performing Mr. Dahl's Woodwind Quintet at the South Mountain Chamber Music Concert, Pittsfield.

* * *

Women's Chorus

Hugh Ross' assistant in the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, Miss Iva D. Hiatt, director of the Smith College Choral Society, is training the women members of the Festival Chorus (composed of members of the Berkshire Music Center's choral, opera and Study Group departments) for participation in the Debussy "Sirenes," one of the three Nocturnes which Pierre Monteux will conduct on his final Berkshire Festival concert, Saturday evening, Aug. 13 in the Music Shed. The "Sirenes" has not been given at Tanglewood since the early days of the Festival.

* * *

Tanglewood's student composers will have two forums during the coming week. Tomorrow evening at 8.30 in the Chamber Music Hall, the program will include four works, "Septet for Woodwinds and Strings," by Edward S. Miller, of Miami Beach, Fla.; "String Trio" by Robert Paige Cely, of Williamstown,; "String Quartet" by Susan MacAdam, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and a work for 14 brass instruments by Paul Glass, of Los Angeles, Cal., which will be conducted by George Mester, of Mexico City.

An unscheduled forum Monday afternoon at 4 in the Chamber Music Hall, will [illegible] Rhythmbulistic Ballad," [illegible] for chorus by Claire Polin, of Philadelphia, which Barth Bernard, of Miami, Fla. will conduct; a tone poem about Israel for piano by Victor Zinskin, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., with the composer at the piano; a piece for violin and piano by Paul Glass, performed by Hiroshi Ha

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 130,826

JUL 31 1955

Tanglewood Bills Beethoven And Wagner Music

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., is now in its semi-final week of summer symphonic music.

Beethoven and Wagner provide the fare for the three weekend concerts in the Music Shed. Charles Munch conducts two of the three concerts, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon, and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the department of orchestra and conducting of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, The Berkshire Music Center, takes the podium Friday evening.

Mr. Bernstein will conduct Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" as a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky.

Mr. Munch's Saturday evening program will commence with a first Tanglewood performance of Beethoven's opera "Fidelio," Act II, with the Festival Chorus trained by John Krueger of the Youngstown, Ohio, Philharmonic and Chorus. Soloists are Margaret Harshaw, of the Metropolitan Opera, soprano; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; Arthur Schoep, tenors. The second half of the program is devoted to excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung," with Miss Harshaw soloist in the Immolation Scene.

The Sunday afternoon concert Mr. Munch will devote to Beethoven, whose music is a feature of the 1955 Berkshire Festival, with Eugene Istomin, pianist, making his debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra as soloist in the Concerto No. 4.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30, the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUL 31 1955

From North Adams

North Adams brother and sister, Pasquale and Christina Cardillo, in concerts at Tanglewood. Christina will sing a solo role in Beethoven's "Fidelio" Saturday night and will also be heard in an opera premiere in the Concert-Theater on Aug. 8 and 9. Brother Pasquale is a clarinetist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUL 31 1955

Climax at Tanglewood

The annual Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood is approaching its climax. After today's all-Brahms program, only six more Music Shed concerts remain, and only two more programs of chamber music in the Theater-Concert Hall. The best part of a year is required to complete preparations for the six-week summer season at Lenox.

Friday night will be marked by the presentation of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, with chorus, soloists, and the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of the brilliant young conductor, Leonard Bernstein. Of the other remaining Shed concerts one will be conducted by the venerable Pierre Monteux, the other four by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, including a performance Saturday night of the second act of Beethoven's only opera, "Fidelio," and excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdamerung," and as the culmination of the Festival, Sunday afternoon, Aug. 14, Beethoven's massive ninth, or choral, symphony.

Among the soloists in both the "Missa Solemnis" and the Symphony No. 9 is Springfield's own Adele Addison. Once in Vienna, in 1824, when both these works were presented on the same program, Beethoven, who was on the platform, had to be turned toward the audience to "see" the overwhelming applause, which he had grown too deaf to hear.

An added feature, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade," also is still ahead, on Thursday, Aug. 11, when the Boston "Pops" Orchestra, led by Arthur Fiedler, will add zest and color to the festivities.

Tanglewood now is one of the great summer music centers of the world, along with Salzburg, Edinburgh and Glyndbourne. Tanglewood has the quality and the setting, and year by year is accumulating tradition, as well as building for the future with its many student activities. Rarely do the dreams and aspirations of the founders of any cultural enterprise reach so rich a fulfillment.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUL 31 1955

Soloists This Week at Tanglewood.

MARGARET HARSHAW

ADELE ADDISON

EUNICE ALBERTS

These five vocalists will be heard at Tanglewood this week as soloists in major choral works by Beethoven. Miss Addison of this city, Miss Alberts, Lloyd and Morgan are to take part in the "Missa Solemnis" Friday night, while Miss Harshaw, Lloyd and Morgan will appear in Act II of the opera "Fidelio."

MAC MORGAN

DAVID LLOYD

Tanglewood Topics

By WALTER ALFORD

Lenox, July 30—There will be a dividend for opera fans on the program of short operas and choral music announced by the Berkshire Music Center for Monday evening. In addition to Boris Blacher's chamber opera, "Romeo and Juliet," and Darius Milhaud's "L'Abandon d'Ariane," and choral selections by students of Hugh Ross' chorus department, Boris Goldovsky's opera department will give "Comedy on the Bridge," a short comic opera by Bohuslav Martinu, who was Tanglewood's guest composer in 1946.

It will be staged by Sarah Caldwell, stage director of the opera department, and Mr. Goldovsky will provide piano accompaniment. This program, as well as the succeeding ones on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 8 and 9, requires reserved seat tickets, and patrons should apply to the Friends' office at Tanglewood for reservations.

Student Leaders

Students who will sing leading roles in "Romeo and Juliet" are Naomi Farr (New York City), Juliet; Harold Johnson (Chicago, Romeo; Gwendolyn Belle (St. Louis), Lady Capulet; Regina Sarfaty (New York City), the nurse; Lynn Detwiler (Altoona, Pa.), Tybalt; Robert Kerns (Utica, Mich.), Benvolio; Peyton Higgison (Mobile, Ala.), Capulet.

Principal singers in the short Milhaud opera are: Claire Watson (Rochester, N. Y.), Ariane; Lee Goebel (San Diego, Cal.), Phaedra; McHenry Boatwright (Boston), Dionysius; Peter Roberts (Westbrook, Conn.), Theseus. Igor Chichagov, of Baltimore, will conduct for "Ariane," Kalman Novak, of Cambridge, for "Romeo."

* * *

Mrs. Lucy Putnam, chairman of the society of Friends, through membership in which the public may attend student concerts at Tanglewood, their contributions going to the support of the Berkshire Music Center, announces that contributions so far this season have reached a total of $26,000, toward a summer goal of $40,000. Gifts from Friends are considerably ahead of 1954, when the Boston Symphony's summer music school benefited by $23,545 at the end of the season. The drive for increased contributions has been considerably sparked by the generous grant from the Rockefeller Foundation, which has announced that it will match, dollar for dollar, all monies over $15,000 raised by the school, over a five-year period.

* * *

Adele Addison Soloist

Leonard Bernstein, who got his start in conducting as a student of the late Serge Koussevitzky at the Berkshire Music Center during its first two summers, in 1940 and 1941, is directing preparation of the impressive full-evening "Missa Solemnis" by Beethoven, which will be given on a Berkshire Festival concert program, Friday, Aug 4, in memory of the late conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The four soloists with the orchestra are all former Berkshire Music Center students. Soprano Adele Addison, who sang a solo role earlier this summer in Bach's B minor Mass, was a student in the opera department in 1947, 1948, again in 1950.

Eunice Alberts, the contralto, studied at Tanglewood in the music school's second session, in 1941, and for four more succeeding summers: Miss Alberts is flying to the Berkshires for this engagement from Aspen, Colo., where she is on the faculty of the Aspen International Institute. David Lloyd, the tenor, sang in the opera department's American premiere performances, in 1947, of Benjamin Britten's "Albert Herring" and Rossini's "The Turk In Italy."

Bass-baritone Mac Morgan, popular concert singer who summers in Stockbridge, was a student of opera dramatics in 1953. The violin solo in the "Missa Solemnis" will be performed by BSO concertmaster Richard Burgin, the organ will be played by William Frank.

* * *

Word From Barber

Samuel Barber writes from Italy to Tanglewood friends (the young American composer with a former teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center) that he is summering at Capri with opera composer Gian-Carlo Menotti, at work on a new opera with score by Barber and libretto by Menotti. Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," which had its Tanglewood premiere Friday evening, with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony, was recently given at the Singakacemie in Vienna, with Hilda Gueden as soloist, and with Zino Francescatti, the noted violinist who summers in Monterey, Mass., in the audience. The Barber choral work was also heard in London, by the Philharmonia Choir, and is planned for performances soon in Rome and Berlin.

* * *

Tanglewood audiences are looking forward to the return of Metropolitan Opera soprano, Margaret Harshaw, who will repeat, this time with Charles Munch, the performance of the Immolation Scene from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung" she did in the Tanglewood Music Shed in 1952, under Pierre Monteux' baton. That summer Miss Harshaw sang vocal numbers also from Act III, scene 2 of "Siegfried."

On Saturday evening, Aug. 6, with a supporting cast of soloists of past and present Berkshire Music Center students, she will give, for the first time on a Tanglewood program, the complete Act II of Beethoven's only opera, "Fidelio."

* * *

At "Tanglewood on Parade," when simultaneous demonstrations are given to the public, from 6 to 7 p. m. by various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, there will be a symphony program by the student orchestra in the Music Shed, opera by the opera department in the Theater-Concert Hall, chamber music by students of Dept. I in the Chamber Music Hall, and during the serving of box lunches, a concert by the choral department from the steps of the administration building of the Boston Symphony's summer music school.

* * *

Ingolf Dahl, who heads the popular Dept. V (Tanglewood Study Group) at the Berkshire Music Center, and who is associate professor of music at the University of Southern California, where he directs both the Collegium Musicum and the University Orchestra, will conduct one of his own compositions at the final concert of the student symphony orchestra at Tanglewood, on Saturday, Aug. 13. (Music Shed, 3 p. m.). It is a symphonic legend in four parts, entitled "The Tower of St. Barbara," about a saint of medieval times; and it was commissioned and recorded by the Louisville, Ky. Orchestra under a Carnegie Foundation grant and performed four times last season. Simultaneously, the New York Woodwind Quintet will be performing Mr. Dahl's Woodwind Quintet at the South Mountain Chamber Music Concert, Pittsfield.

* * *

Women's Chorus

Hugh Ross' assistant in the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, Miss Iva D. Hiatt, director of the Smith College Choral Society, is training the women members of the Festival Chorus (composed of members of the Berkshire Music Center's choral, opera and Study Group departments) for participation in the Debussy "Sirenes," one of the three Nocturnes which Pierre Monteux will conduct on his final Berkshire Festival concert, Saturday evening, Aug. 13 in the Music Shed. The "Sirenes" has not been given at Tanglewood since the early days of the Festival.

* * *

Tanglewood's student composers will have two forums during the coming week. Tomorrow evening at 8.30 in the Chamber Music Hall, the program will include four works, "Septet for Woodwinds and Strings," by Edward S. Miller, of Miami Beach, Fla.; "String Trio" by Robert Paige Cecly, of Williamstown,; "String Quartet" by Susan MacAdam, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and a work for 11 brass instruments by Paul Glass, of Los Angeles, Cal., which will be conducted by George Mester, of Mexico City.

An unscheduled concert Monday afternoon at 4 in the Chamber Music Hall, will present [illegible] Ballad," [illegible] for chorus by Claire Polin, of Philadelphia, which Barth Bennett, of Miami, Fla., will conduct; a tone poem about Israel for piano by Victor Zinskin, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., with the composer at the piano; a piece for violin and piano by Paul Glass, performed by Hiroshi Hatoyama, of Tokyo, violin, and Tossi Imyanago, of Tokyo, piano; a piece for string bass and piano, by Alan Daniels, of New York City, performed by John Vincent Carbone, of Providence, R. I., strung bass, and Robert Miller, Mount Vernon, N. Y., piano; and a monument from a String Quartet by William J. Sydeman, of Sarnia, Ont.

The Aaug. 1 forum will also give music lovers an opportunity to hear a work by Eino Rautavaara, 26-year-old Finnish composer especially chosen by Jean Sibelius to study this summer at Tanglewood, on a Koussevitzky Music Foundation scholarship. Mr. Rautavaara will accompany Gabriel de los Rios, Chilean baritone, in several German lieder he has composed.

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 130,826

JUL 31 1955

Tanglewood Bills Beethoven And Wagner Music

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., is now in its semi-final week of summer symphonic music.

Beethoven and Wagner provide the fare for the three weekend concerts in the Music Shed. Charles Munch conducts two of the three concerts, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon, and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the department of orchestra and conducting of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, The Berkshire Music Center, takes the podium Friday evening.

Mr. Bernstein will conduct Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" as a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky.

Mr. Munch's Saturday evening program will commence with a first Tanglewood performance of Beethoven's opera "Fidelio," Act II, with the Festival Chorus trained by John Krueger of the Youngstown, Ohio, Philharmonic and Chorus. Soloists are Margaret Harshaw, of the Metropolitan Opera, soprano; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; Arthur Schoep, tenors. The second half of the program is devoted to excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung," with Miss Harshaw soloist in the Immolation Scene.

The Sunday afternoon concert Mr. Munch will devote to Beethoven, whose music is a feature of the 1955 Berkshire Festival, with Eugene Istomin, pianist, making his debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra as soloist in the Concerto No. 4.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30, the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUL 31 1955

Climax at Tanglewood

The annual Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood is approaching its climax. After today's all-Brahms program, only six more Music Shed concerts remain, and only two more programs of chamber music in the Theater-Concert Hall. The best part of a year is required to complete preparations for the six-week summer season at Lenox.

Friday night will be marked by the presentation of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, with chorus, soloists, and the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of the brilliant young conductor, Leonard Bernstein. Of the other remaining Shed concerts, one will be conducted by the venerable Pierre Monteux, the other four by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, including a performance Saturday night of the second act of Beethoven's only opera, "Fidelio," and excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdamerung," and as the culmination of the Festival, Sunday afternoon, Aug. 14, Beethoven's massive ninth, or choral, symphony.

Among the soloists in both the "Missa Solemnis" and the Symphony No. 9 is Springfield's own Adele Addison. Once in Vienna, in 1824, when both these works were presented on the same program, Beethoven, who was on the platform, had to be turned toward the audience to "see" the overwhelming applause, which he had grown too deaf to hear.

An added feature, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade," also is still ahead, on Thursday, Aug. 11, when the Boston "Pops" Orchestra, led by Arthur Fiedler, will add zest and color to the festivities.

Tanglewood now is one of the great summer music centers of the world, along with Salzburg, Edinburgh and Glyndbourne. Tanglewood has the quality and the setting, and year by year is accumulating tradition, as well as building for the future with its many student activities. Rarely do the dreams and aspirations of the founders of any cultural enterprise reach so rich a fulfillment.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUL 31 1955

From North Adams

North Adams brother and sister, Pasquale and Christina Cardillo, in concerts at Tanglewood. Christina will sing a solo role in Beethoven's "Fidelio" Saturday night and will also be heard in an opera premiere in the Concert-Theater on Aug. 8 and 9. Brother Pasquale is a clarinetist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Transcript (e)
RTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

AUG 1 1955

Berkshire Music Festival Draws 35,000 Over Week-End

The Berkshire Music festival, with the second largest crowd in its history on Saturday night, drew over 35,000 persons to Tanglewood in Lenox over the week-end.

Traffic Tie-up

Many of the persons headed for Saturday night's all-Beethoven concert arrived late and some even missed the entire program due to the mammoth traffic tie-up which the large crowd produced. At one point before the concert cars were lined up more than two miles from the main gates of the festival entrance. All four free parking areas were filled and cars had to be directed to private parking areas.

Charles Munch conducted the full Boston Symphony in the Beethoven program, which opened with the Overture to "Egmont." Rudolph Serkin was the piano soloist for the Piano Concert No. 5, while the concert concluded with a performance of the Symphony No. 3 in E-flat Major, known as the "Eroica."

Yesterday afternoon, with Pierre Monteux on the podium, the orchestra played a concert devoted to the music of Brahms. The "Academic Festival" overture opened the program, after which Isaac Stern was the soloist in the Violin Concerto. The final work was the Symphony No. 1.

Sunday Concert

The Sunday concert attracted 12,000 persons, but no traffic tie-ups were reported, except for the inevitable waits at the entrance gates. The Friday night attendance was 7,600.

The festival now moves into its semi-final week, opening with the fifth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music concerts of Beethoven, a program of three piano sonatas by Mr. Serkin. That will be at the theater-concert hall.

Beethoven and Wagner provide the musical fare for the three week-end concerts in the big shed. Mr. Munch conducts two of the three concerts, on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon, and Leonard Bernstein takes the podium on Friday evening.

Koussevitzky Memorial

The Friday concert will be devoted to Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis," to be played in memory of Serge Koussevitzy, late Boston symphony conductor. The orchestra and the Festival chorus both will perform, along with soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor, and Mac Morgan, bass.

Saturday night for the first time at Tanglewood the second act of Beethoven's only opera, "Fidelio," will be sung. Margaret Harshaw will appear in this work and also in the "Immolation" scene from "Gotterdammerung" by Wagner. Other soloists will be Mr. Lloyd and Mr. Morgan.

On Sunday the series will end with Beethoven's Symphony No. 8, the Piano Concerto No. 4 and the Symphony No. 5. Eugene Istomin will be the piano soloist.

Enterprise & Times (e)
BROCKTON, Mass.
Non-Partisan
Circ. 40,923

JUL 29 1955

The Heights

HILLTOP ECHOES

Mrs. Peter Godlove, 903 Pleasant street, has returned from the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, where she enjoyed the three Beethoven concerts featured at that annual event. For the five days of her visit, Mrs. Godlove and her sister, Mrs. Louise C. Ledoux of Woonsocket, who accompanied her, stayed at a hotel in Pittsfield.

Mercury (e)
MEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 6,624

AUG 1 1955

BYSTANDING

. . . Do Medford Women Shy From Tossing Hats Into Political Ring? . . .

A local political candidate got nationwide publicity the other day when a friend mentioned his name on a television show. John J. Cirigliano, 4 Golden court, plumbing and heating contractor, got a plug from his friend, Frank Fontaine, when the comedian appeared as a guest star on the Steve Allen TV show . . . Cirigliano is a candidate for City Council . . . His friendship with Fontaine, who formerly lived on Winthrop street here before moving to Winchester, dates back many years . . . Number of women seeking political office is comparatively small. Some shy from entering a political contest because they feel voters prefer men in office. However, the fact that some women have made the grade should give other aspirants courage . . . Patrolman Benjamin T. Filamond back from a vacation which included a trip to Niagra Falls, with views from the American and Canadian sides . . . He visited with former Medford resident James Carroll, now living in Warsaw, N. Y.

Pony League playoffs start tonight, with four teams finally competing for the city championship . . . Station WGBH-TV, Boston educational station, will broadcast concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra from Tanglewood in the Berkshires beginning Aug. 16. The orchestra is one of 11 members of the Lowell Institute Cooperative Broadcasting Council which directs the station's program . . . Miss Helen Mejan, 344 Boston avenue, an attorney, is praised in the current edition of "The Mentor," publication by the prisoners at Charlestown State Prison, for her work to bring about penal reforms. Miss Mejan, voluntary legal advisor for the so-called inmate council, has filed bills in the Legislature toward effecting penal improvements . . . The inmate council, in its magazine, expresses "most sincere gratitude" to the Medford lawyer.

Decision by school administrators to house the Lincoln elementary school pupils at the Lincoln Junior High would seem the most feasible move for all concerned, while the elementary school will undergo repairs for about two and a half months. Both buildings are located on Harvard street, so pupils will be within the same walking or riding distances . . . Next school in line for major repairs might possibly be Roberts Junior High or one of the older parts of the high school . . . There are buildings in greater need of repairs, in the elementary level, but these have been classified by officials as possibly due for consolidation within districts . . . Let's hope that if a building is renovated every year, the move won't be preceded by months of argument and consequent delay as was the case both with the Lincoln this year and the Franklin, last year.

Citizen (e)
WINSTED, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 3,445

AUG 2 1955

Berkshire Center Pupil Enrollment Higher This Year

With 38 states and 18 foreign countries represented in its enrollment of 405 music students, an increase of 30 over last year, the 13th session of the Berkshire music center is in operation at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The summer school of music maintained by the Boston symphony orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire festival, the only school in the world sponsored by a major symphony orchestra, will operate through the end of the festival concerts Aug. 14. The student body was chosen from more than 650 applications, which resulted from some 1,500 inquiries, of which 927 were new this year. Forty per cent of the student body comprises students returning to Tanglewood.

The Berkshire music center was established in 1940 by the Boston symphony to provide a campus where young musicians could add to their professional training and artistic experience under the guidance of eminent musicians and teachers. Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston symphony orchestra, is director of the center. While the eminent American composer, Aaron Copland, is abroad this summer enjoying his first leave of absence since the school was founded, his duties as assistant director are being assumed by Richard Burgin, the Boston symphony's associate conductor and concert master. Ralph Berkowitz is dean and Gail W. Rector is executive secretary.

7,500 Hear Varied Tanglewood Concert

By EVANS CLINCHY

Lenox, Mass.—Although Beethoven is the composer signally honored by this year's festival at Tanglewood, not all of Summer's programs are devoted to him.

Last night Charles Munch led his Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Handel, Schuman, Brahms and Samuel Barber's almost brand new choral work, "Prayers of Kierkegaard." More than 7,500 people seated themselves in the music shed and on the lawn. It was a perfect night acoustically and atmospherically and quite chill.

The Handel work was the Harty suite drawn from "The Water Music," a fine opener, and it was followed by the Schumann Fourth Symphony, spendidly played.

* * *

MR. BARBER'S new piece, for mixed chorus, orchestra and soprano solo, is most impressive. The texts he uses are drawn from prayers scattered through the writings of the great Danish theologian. The prayers are simple and direct in their expression of religious feeling, even though they have to be read from the program. Mr. Barber's writing does not allow the words to become clear when sung, at least not in last night's performance with a large chorus.

He has set the prayers in a moderately astringent, modern style, not so harsh that there is no sense of tonal melody but angular enough so it is obvious that Mozart did not write the piece. The writing for the solo soprano is a bit more lush, falling more gently on the ear, and these portions were most richly and persuatively sung by Leontyne Price, a truly talented and enormously endowed singer.

The over-all effect of Mr. Barbers piece is somber and stirring. It seems a just musical interpretation of Kierkegaard's powerful, thrilling philosophy, and I suspect that the music improves with each hearing.

* * *

THE EVENING CLOSED with an utterly luminous performance of the Brahms' Fourth. Mr. Munch lavished all his care on this reading. No possible fault could be found with it.

The performance had plenty of bravura, a singing romanticism when necessary and all the crispness and technical perfection that could be asked for. It was, I think, just about the best Brahms' Fourth I have ever heard.

Nor do I think that Mr. Munch and his orchestra have ever played more glowingly throughout one entire evening. Every note was in its proper place, and each was given the perfect color, nuance and emphasis.

A grand evening all around.

THIS AIR CONDITIONED

I CAN EVEN feel the perspiration on my brow when on the porch at Heaton Hall I was waited upon by a committee from the orchestra who presented a very serious complaint, namely, that the hot water system had completely broken down at the Maplewood Hotel in Pittsfield, despite the fact that the orchestra held a contract that there would be provided "desirable hotel accommodations."

Another warm occasion occurred on the evening of the first Festival concert which the Boston Symphony played. The year before the concert had been delayed because of the late arrival of the governor of the commonwealth. This time the beginning of the concert was delayed even longer because of the late arrival of John Q. Public who came in such numbers that their automobiles could not pass through the one and only gate which had been left open for their entrance to Holmwood.

It is just as well that Mr. Mahanna omitted these two recollections as well as the mention of many other occasions when the management found its role of liaison officer not too comfortable. There are many, many other things covered by Mr. Mahanna which are so much more important and bear directly on the growth and development of the Berkshire Festival and Berkshire Music Center as known today.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

JUL 30 1955

Books

Festival Story: A Study in Art Of Leadership

MUSIC UNDER THE MOON. By John G. W. Mahanna. Eagle Printing & Binding Co., Pittsfield, Mass. 123 pp. $2.50.

Reviewed by GEORGE E. JUDD

JOHN MAHANNA'S book is not primarily about the moon or about music, but as the subtitle indicates it is a history of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Inc. The story of the Berkshire Festival itself is, however, told in pictures.

Those interested in the persons and personalities who launched the Berkshire Festival will read this account with interest and profit. Others will find their reward chiefly in the selection of a remarkably representative series of well captioned illustrations.

Ten years ago Mr. M. A. DeWolfe Howe wrote the "Tales of Tanglewood" covering much of the same period now reviewed by Mr. Mahanna. But the two books are complementary. Taken together they give an excellent sense of the setting and of many of the stages through which the development of the festival has passed to its present comprehensive contribution to music in both performance and education.

* * *

MR. MAHANNA most appropriately chooses for his chief figure the president of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival. His access to its records and the assistance which he must have had bring together in proper sequence the steps which led from a local musical effort whose ambition it was to attract people within a radius of 40 miles to a national or international undertaking which now attracts the musical world from a radius 100 times greater than when first proposed. This has enabled him to perform a real service by recording these events within the easy memory of man.

Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith brought enthusiasm and energy to this enterprise, but she already had wide experience in matters of organization. I cherish a program of an event which took place in the Metropolitan Opera House in 1917 when Miss Robinson Smith presented at a benefit performance for the suffers of the Halifax disaster the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Dr. Karl Muck with the assistance of Mme. Melba, Mr. Kreisler and Mr. Paderewski.

* * *

WHAT A RASH of festivals have sprung up since 1934, many of which have disappeared and many others are now no doubt going through some of the same growing pains which were experienced here.

Mr. Mahanna's book discloses what is not likely to be duplicated elsewhere: Both support and capacity for the experiment with the willingness to ultimately make every decision on an unselfish basis in the interest of the enterprise itself.

From the facts given one cannot escape the conclusion that from time to time the two boards, one in the Berkshires and one in Boston, took turns at being a bit inflexible. But it is equally clear that neither board in the last analysis failed to sense that its chief responsibility was toward the promotion of the best musical art.

* * *

HARRY ASKIN, who was the manager for many years of Sousa's Band, used to say that the best time to promote a concert in a mill town was during a strike. It is certainly equally true that the best time to start a festival is in the time of depression, since we can take the Berkshire experience as a shining example.

Readers will be impressed with the resourcefulness of the originators of this festival, the real meaning of leadership, high standards, coupled with perseverence and local pride. The one omission in the hierarchy of this success is the credit due the music-loving public of Berkshire County and environs. It is doubtful if there would have been another area as ready and as receptive.

For this review the early illustrations and much of the book are reminders of the time "when we were very young" and something of a tug at the heartstrings.

* * *

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

AUG 2 1955

One-Act Operas, Some Choral Works At Music Center

Three contemporary one act operas were presented Monday evening at the theatre concert hall at Tanglewod, along with some choral works by the Berkshire Festival Chorus, under the auspices of the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Considering the fact that the whole program was in rehearsal not more than two or three weeks, and perhaps less, and that a potpourri of individuals was necessary for the varied productions, the evening was interesting and enjoyable, if not exciting.

As Mr. Goldovsky said, someone must suffer if music is to survive, so we should consider it our duty to strive for an understanding of the many languages spoken in the music of various contemporary and less well-known composers. Thus our grandchildren will enjoy that which we consider worthy of repetition.

One opera, "Romeo and Juliet," by Boris Blacher, composer in residence at Tanglewood, was well-sung, but with few emotional overtones. The orchestral music, with the breathless and repetitive tones of the violins and the pulsating plucking of the cellos, the charming dance theme first heard by the flute and clarinet, was a perfect background for the atonal themes of the singers. The scenery and lighting by David Hayes when co-ordinated, reflected well the moods of this tragic story.

"Ariana Abandoned," by Darius Milhaud, with a text by Hoppenot, and the English version by Ludwig Zirner of the Opera department, is a satire on Greek mythology. The music tells its story amusingly and briefly, that of Theseus stranded on an island with two sisters, Phedre, who loves him madly, and Ariana whom he loves madly, but who does not return his love. Dionysius, disguised as a begger takes pity on the sisters, and gives Theseus a potion which makes his see double. He takes Phedre, and supposedly Ariana and sails away. Ariana is then granted her dearest wish by Dionysius, that of becoming a constellation, and everybody is happy once again. Artfully costumed by Anna Aubin and suggestively staged by Boris Goldovsky the singers enhanced their parts with the proper tongue-in-cheek effects.

Undoubtedly the most ambitious opera of the evening was Bohuslav Martinu's "Comedy On the Bridge." Sung to a piano accompaniment with occasional percussion it was a delight to see and hear. Characterizations were well-chosen, timing a little laggard in spots, but on the whole fresh and witty.

The choral part of the program included works by Chajes and Ross Lee Finney, the latter smoothly sung by the chorus, and conducted by Willis Becket. Also "Three Songs of Spring" by the Chilean composer Domingo Santa Cruz, modern and harmonic. Three songs, a capella, two by William Billings, "Lamentation over Boston and Modern Music were humorous as to words but quite serious in the harmonic modulations of the music. The third song, "The Stars, by Taneyef, Russian composer and teacher of Rachmaninoff, started smoothly, and proceeded to a rather unrehearsed finish. In all the songs the diction was excellent.

All whose names are too numerous to mention can be congratulated on their efforts in making the evenig a provocative one for their many followers.—M. deB. B.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

AUG 2 1955

Monteux Conducts Music Of Brahms; Stern Is Soloist

The Academic Festival Overture was a sturdy beginning for a Sunday afternoon of Brahms' music at Tanglewood in the Berkshires. With Pierre Monteux guest conducting the program, one could almost hear the relaxed and comfortable settling back of the 12,000 listeners as the overture was introduced. A mixture of student songs overlaid with a dignified but happy development, Mr. Monteux drew the Boston Symphony Orchestra through its many stages with the proper amount of authority and indulgence, never allowing the music to become boisterous or out-of-hand, which sounded very much like a group of well-behaved students on a holiday with the younger ones now and then giving way to a bit of jollying, and ending with the grandiose strains of the "gaudeamus igitur."

Isaac Stern once again appeared at Tanglewood, playing this time the D major concerto for violin and orchestra. Unlike Joachim, the great violin virtuoso who played this concerto at its premiere, and of whom one critic suggested that he had not sufficiently studied it, Mr. Stern imparted a feeling of tender and thoughtful devotion to the composer's only violin concerto. A long and reflective first movement with a tedious cadenza, it was artfully played by Mr. Stern, each voice given its proper emphasis, with each theme presented in a manner so delicate and revealing one almost resented the inability to encompass and retain the whole. A romantic second movement had its beginning melody supposedly an old Bohemian folk-song, introduced by the oboe, and then taken up by the violin, with modifications. That one violinist can produce such a warm and resonant tone, to be heard piannissimo against a background of strings, and without stidency, is a constant source of wonder and of course, great pleasure. The lilting third movement, strongly reminiscent of Hungarian folk-tunes, with its brilliant and intricate passages, was a perfect toil for Mr. Stern's virtuoso ability. The audience recalled Mr. Stern innumerable times. He graciously shared the acclaim with Mr. Monteux, Mr. Gomberg, the oboeist, and the orchestra.

After an intermission Mr. Monteux and the orchestra presented the first symphony, Op. 68, in C minor. A work of great proportions in its harmonic and rhythmic ingenuity, Mr. Monteux developed the whole, enlarging and expanding the tone color to a new beauty; music suited to his personality, stately and enduring, with a compelling personal warmth extended through the music to the whole audience. Only at one time did orchestra and conductor seem at odds, the first violins in unexpected syncopated opposition to the woodwinds, but Mr. Monteux soon collected them and the symphony proceeded to its stupendous finale. The audience, except for the inevitable and obtrusive early leave-takers, were loath to relinquish Mr Monteux, without whom the Berkshire Festival series would be incomplete. -- M. deB. B.

Tribune (e)
LAWRENCE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 34,905

AUG 2 1955

Y. W. C. A. Offers August Trips

On Sunday, August 14, the Young Adult Department of the Y.W.C.A. will sponsor a trip to the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood near Stockbridge. The group will leave the "Y" at 6:30 a. m. and attend the afternoon concert of the Boston Symphony orchestra. The orchestra will present a Beethoven program with Charles Munch conducting. Reservations for the concert must be in by Saturday so that seats in the Music Shed may be secured.

There are some reservations left for the trip to Lake Sunapee on Saturday. The group will leave the Y at 10 a. m. to spend the day at Sunapee Lake State Park.

Beethoven's only opera, "Fidelio."

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 179,065

JUL 31 1955

Revisions at Tanglewood

Because cellist Gregor Piatigorsky had to cancel his engagements at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood on account of a shoulder ailment, three programs, including the one scheduled for this afternoon by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed, have been revised.

Instead of the Concerto for Violin and Cello by Piatigorsky and Isaac Stern, scheduled for this afternoon's all-Brahms bill, Stern will play the Concerto for Violin in D Major. Pierre Monteux will conduct and the other Brahms numbers are the First Symphony and the "Academic Overture."

Piatigorsky also was to have been soloist at the chamber music concert Aug. 10 in the Theater-Concert Hall, in the three Beethoven cello sonatas, with Ralph Berkowitz, and again with the full orchestra, Aug. 12, in Bach's "Schelomo." The chamber music program now features six of the orchestra's principals in Beethoven music, Gino Cioffi, clarinet; Samuel Mayes, cello; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and James Stagliano, French horn, also David Lloyd, tenor, and Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

At the Aug. 12 concert Charles Munch will replace the Bloch work and the announced Brahms' Variations on a Theme by Haydn with Berlioz's "Symphonie Fantastique" which was played at the festival last year in observance of the 150th anniversary of the birth of the composer. The all-French program will be rounded out by Debussy's "La Mer" and Ravel's Second "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite.

On this week's schedule are a chamber music program Wednesday night of three Beethoven piano sonatas by Rudolf Serkin, and concerts by the full orchestra Friday and Saturday nights. Friday Leonard Bernstein will conduct Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, the soloist being Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; Richard Burgin, violin, and William Frank, organ.

Saturday night Munch will conduct Act II of Beethoven's "Fidelio," with Margaret Harshaw as Leonore, and excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung," also with Harshaw. Next Sunday afternoon there will be an all-Beethoven program consisting of the fifth and eighth symphonies and Piano Concerto No. 4, Eugene Istomin, soloist. Munch will conduct.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 74,966

AUG 3 1955

Boston Symphony, Museum To Share in Large Estate

Dedham, Aug. 2 (AP)—Under the will of Mrs. Marcia King Chamberlain of Brookline filed today in Norfolk Probate Court, the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and the Boston Symphony Orchestra will share approximately half of her $500,000 estate. Mrs. Chamberlain, a native of Lamoine, Me., died May 29.

Specific bequests included $5000 each to the Lamoine Baptist Church, Lamoine; Radcliffe College and the Radcliffe College Alumni Association; and $10,000 each to Mrs. Myrtle B. Ross, Exeter, N. H.; Marianne C. Moore, Brooklyn, N. Y.; and Katherine R. Knight, Montgomery, Ala.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-0068

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,995

JUL 28 1955

Berkshire Festival Enters Fourth Week

Varied Program Offered by Munch Friday Evening

Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" to Have Tanglewood Premiere. — All-Beethoven Concert Scheduled Saturday.—Pierre Monteux to Conduct Sunday.

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in Lenox moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music this week-end.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the week-end's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Pierre Monteux takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon for the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

Mr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Händel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," which had its first performances last winter by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Leontyne Price, soprano, a student in 1951 at the orchestra's Tanglewood music school, the Berkshire Music Center, has the principal solo role. Supporting solos will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, of New York, assistant technical director in Boris Goldovsky's Tanglewood opera department; and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano, also of New York, a student of opera dramatics at Tanglewood. The Tanglewood Choir, which will assist, has been trained by Hugh Ross, and comprises 60 voices from Mr. Ross' choral department and from the associate division of the opera department.

Charles Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, which is largely devoted to the music of the German composer, on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist and Tanglewood neighbor in Vermont, makes his first appearance in the Music Shed, as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program of Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p. m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p. m.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

AUG 1 1955

Christina Cardillo Is Given 2 Major Roles at Tanglewood

Christina Cardillo, talented young soprano from North Adams, has been given two important roles at the Berkshire festival at Tanglewood.

First Appearance

On Saturday night she will be a soloist with the Boston Symphony orchestra in the music shed. At that time she will sing the role of "Marcellina" in Beethoven's Fidelio, Act 2. This will be her first appearance as a soloist with the full Boston orchestra in a major concert at Tanglewood.

Two nights later, on Monday and Tuesday of next week she will have the leading role in Mozart's opera "Zaide" at the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood. This will be the American premiere of the opera. The English version which will be presented was prepared by Boris Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell of the Berkshire Music center's opera department.

With the close of the season at Tanglewood, Miss Cardillo, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Cardillo of 149 Pleasant street, will return to New York city where she will sing in NBC-TV's premiere presentation of the opera based on "Cain and Abel" with music by Alfred Weidman. Previous to the festival season she sang on a series of CBS-TV programs in New city.

Auditions Winner

Winner of the Metropolitan Opera Auditions of the Air a year ago, Miss Cardillo spent last summer at the Central City opera in Colorado. Previously, she was featured in opera presentations at Tanglewood.

She has studied voice in Milan, Italy, on a scholarship as has she at the Katherine T. Long school which is affiliated with the Metropolitan in New York.

Last week she was featured in the gala "Celebrity Night" benefit program at the Berkshire museum in Pittsfield. There she was accompanied by Paul Ulanowsky who for 14 years was accompanist for Lotte Lehmann.

Featured Soloist

She has also been a featured soloist at the auditorium in Springfield and was soloist at the National Republican club's annual Lincoln day dinner in New York city last February.

When appearing as soloist with the Boston Symphony orchestra on Saturday, Aug. 6, she will make it a sort of Cardillo family night for her brother, Pasquale, is a veteran E flat clarinetist with the Boston Symphony.

CHRISTINA CARDILLO

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,995

JUL 28 1955

True Beethoven Spirit Prevails at Lenox As Violinist Stern Captivates Audience

By George E. Membrino

The full impact of the Berkshire Music Festival was felt this past week-end as the complete 105-member Boston Symphony Orchestra mounted the stage of the Tanglewood Music Shed at Lenox. Charles Munch shared the podium honors this week-end with Pierre Monteux, who conducted Saturday night's program. Some 25,000 paid admissions were rewarded by hearing four of the most exciting and enjoyable concerts yet presented at this summer "Salzburg of America."

Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin teamed up on violin and piano, respectively, last week Wednesday evening to present three of the Beethoven Violin Sonatas. Heard were No. 2 in A major, No. 5 in F major, and No. 7 in C minor.

The true spirit of Beethoven prevailed throughout. Violinist Stern's true sense of feeling and exactness proved, beyond a doubt his right to be considered one of the world's greatest. This raving about Mr. Stern must of necessity be carried over to Friday night's concert where he acted as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the renditon of Beethoven's "Violin Concerto." The first movement was so exquisitely played that the audience and the orchestra both broke into spontaneous applause at the end of the first movement. The final two movements were equally well executed, as shown in the many calls provided for soloists, conductor and orchestra.

Also heard on the same program were Beethoven's "Overture to Coriolan" and his Symphony No. 7 in A major. The true immensity and proportions of Beethoven were expounded to musical limits in his Seventh Symphony. Mr. Munch conducted as if he were apart from the audience and orchestra. It provided us with as great an experience as ever had been felt in a single symphony. The slow introduction to the first movement acted as a spark for what was to follow. In the second movement the slow theme and its many variations and counter themes were presented with ease and gave much listening pleasure.

The third movement, "Presto," which is in reality a scherzo, had all the nonsensical humor associated with such. The finale, "Allegro," carried the entire force of this magnificent symphony to a close. A more memorable performance of this symphony seems hardly possible.

Sunday afternoon another all-Beethoven program was heard. Symphonies No. 1, 4,, and 6 were performed. With all due credit to the orchestra for the delightful presentation of No. 1 and 4 the highlight of the program was the No. 6 "Pastoral."

Membrino Turn to Twelfth page

Membrino

(Continued from first page)

The "Pastoral" was Beethoven's real attempt at writing program music. Depicting the awakening of serene impressions on arriving in the country, scenes by the brookside, gathering of country folk, thunderstorm, tempest, shepherd's song, and the gladsome thankful feeling after the storm were picturesquely portrayed by Mr. Munch and the orchestra.

The only non-all-Beethoven program was heard Saturday evening when as guest conductor Pierre Monteux appeared. When the 80-year-old conductor mounted the podium the orchestra joined in the hearty applause—a tribute to one of music's outstanding personalities.. With remarkable ease Mr. Monteux conducted music of Bach, Beethoven, Strauss, and Sessions.

It remains a grave task for any conductor to be able to offer such varied music of four historical musical periods with the freshness of approach in each that was heard last Saturday evening. Many comments about Pierre Monteux were overheard, but the most fitting of all was the one spoken by an old Boston Symphony Orchestra supporter who said, "Mr. Monteux has grown younger since he was conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra from 1919 to 1924."

The student orchestra program presented Thursday night affords us a highly interesting program as well as growth and development. Three short weeks ago the orchestra was formed under such capable leadership as Leonard Bernstein and Seymour Lipkin. After having presented three concerts some excellent conclusions can be drawn.

Most important of all is the continual delight of players concerned in the progress made toward better orchestral sound. Their ability to organize and play under many different conductors is astonishing. Truly this student orchestra is worthy of the name "professional" and lives up to it at all times.

As violin soloist for the orchestra Paul Gurevich was heard. This former winner of Arthur Godfrey's "Talent Scouts" program, performed the first two movements of Prokofiev's Second Violin Concerto. Most noteworthy of the entire program was Dvorak's "Symphony No. 2 in D minor" with Leonard Bernstein as conductor.

Clifford Street Festival Route Eases Traffic Jam

LENOX — With last night's threatening weather cutting Tanglewood attendance down to 6,800, problems of traffic control and tourist accommodations, which last weekend swamped this town, this weekend assume manageable proportions.

The use of Cliffwood Street to divert south bound concert goers from Pittsfield away from the Monument intersection last night relieved the usual traffic congestion in the center of town.

Mrs. John M. O'Brien, in charge of the Kiwanis Information Center, this morning reported that all registered rooms are filled for the weekend. Tourists seeking rooms today will be sent to Lee and Pittsfield.

Bulletin (e)
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 145,400

AUG 2 1955

Orchestra, Museum To Share $250,000

Dedham, Mass.—(AP)—Under the will of Mrs. Marcia King Chamberlain of Brookline filed today in Norfolk Probate Court, the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and the Boston Symphony Orchestra will share approximately half of her $500,000 estate. Mrs. Chamberlain, a native of Lamoine, Maine, died May 29.

Specific bequests included: $5,000 each to the Lamoine Baptist Church, Radcliffe College and the Radcliffe College Alumni Association; and $10,000 each to Mrs. Myrtle B. Ross, Exeter, N.H.; Marianne C. Moore, Brooklyn, N.Y., and Katherine R. Knight, Montgomery, Ala.

After some other bequests the remainder of the estate will be divided equally between the Boston Symphony and the museum.

SUNDAY REPUBLICAN, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., AUGUST 7, 1955

In Opera at Tanglewood

Holly McLennan, 12-year-old Tyringham girl, shown here with Boris Goldovsky, center, and her father, John S. McLennan, takes part in the world premiere of Louis Mennini's opera, "The Rope" in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Monday and Tuesday, Aug. 8 and 9.

Eagle (m)
LAWRENCE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 3,056

AUG 3 19--

Y.W.C.A. Offers August Trips

On Sunday, August 14, the Young Adult Department of the Y.W.C.A. will sponsor a trip to the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood near Stockbridge. The group will leave the "Y" at 6:30 a. m. and attend the afternoon concert of the Boston Symphony orchestra. The orchestra will present a Beethoven program with Charles Munch conducting. Reservations for the concert must be in by Saturday so that seats in the Music Shed may be secured.

There are some reservations left for the trip to Lake Sunapee on Saturday. The group will leave the Y at 10 a. m. to spend the day at Sunapee Lake State Park.

What's Going On?

TONIGHT:

8:30—Tanglewood. Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Soloist: Margaret Harshaw.

8:40—Williamstown Summer Theater. Final performance, "Tovarich."

8:45—Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge. Final performance, "Edward, My Son."

8:45—Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse. "The Caine Mutiny Court-martial."

9:00—Jacob's Pillow. Mia Slavenska and Adreano Vitale; Birgit Akesson; Dance Drama Company.

For complete schedule of outstanding cultural events in Berkshire for the next five weeks, see the Berkshire Summer Calendar in the second section of today's Eagle.

Berkshire Week

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 185,401

AUG 3 1955

Maestros

Among the 48 students from Massachusetts studying at Tanglewood under Charles Munch, music director of Boston Symphony Orchestra, are these Greater Bostonians chatting with Thomas J. Perry, Jr. (left), manager of Boston Symphony. In group are seated, (l. to r.), Lila Charney, Newton; Edith Kefauver, Brookline, and Jean Bernstock, Cambridge. Others (back row, l. to r.) are: Morton Gold, James Brown, both of Roxbury, and McHenry Boatwright of Boston.

Beethoven, Wagner, Featured Music At Tanglewood Weekend Concerts

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, moves into its semi-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with the fifth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three piano sonatas performed by Rudolf Serkin, on August 3 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Beethoven and Wagner provide the fare for the three weekend concerts in the huge Music Shed. Charles Munch conducts two of the three concerts, on Saturday evening August 6 and Sunday afternoon August 7, and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the department of orchestra and conducting of the summer mu school, The Berkshire Music C ter, takes the podium on Frid August 5.

Mr. Bernstein, who came t Tanglewood as a student conduc tor in 1940 and 1941, then began his long association with the Berkshire music school in 1942 as assistant to the orchestra's late conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will conduct Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" on Friday evening as a memorial to his patron. The evening-long orchestral and choral work was similarly performed at Tanglewood under Mr. Bernstein's baton two summers ago. Soloists on this occasion will be Adele Addison, soprano, Eunice Alberts, contralto, David Lloyd, tenor, Mac Morgan, bass.

Mr. Munch's Saturday program will commence with a first Tanglewood performance of Beethoven's opera "Fidelio", Act II with the Festival Chorus trained by John Krueger of the Youngstown, Ohio, Philharmonic and Chorus. Soloists are Margaret Harshaw, of the Metropolitan Opera, soprano; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; Arthur Schoep, tenor; and from the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, students Christina Cardillo of (North Adams), soprano, and Malcolm Bernstein (Baltimore, Md.), bass. The second half of the program is devoted to excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung", with Miss Harshaw soloist in the Immolation Scene.

The Sunday afternoon concert Mr. Munch will devote to Beethoven, whose music is a feature of the 1955 Berkshire Festival, with Eugene Istomin, pianist, making his debut with the Boston Symphony orchestra as soloist in the Concerto No. 4.

A bonus for Festival patrons is the Sunday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10:00 a.m. (Aug. 6,) for which a nominal charge is made of $1.00, for the benefit of the Orchestra's pension fund.

The complete programs are:

Wed. Aug. 3

Beethoven: Piano Sonatas—F major, Op. 10, No. 2
D major, Op. 10, No. 3
B flat, Op 106 ("Hammerklavier") — Rudolf Serkin.

Fri. Aug. 5

Beethoven: Missa Solemnis (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky). Soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass. Violin solo: Richard Burgin, organist: Willem Frank Festival chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Hugh Ross. — Leonard Bernstein, conductor.

Sat. Aug. 6

Beethoven: "Fidelio", Act II (First performance at Tanglewood) Leonore . . . Margaret Harshaw; Rocco . . . Mac Morgan; Pizzaro and Fernando . . . Malcolm Bernstein; Florestan . . . David Lloyd; Marzelline . . . Christina Cardillo; Jaquino . . . Arthur Schoep.

Wagner: Excerpts from "Gotterdammerung": Siegfried's Rhine Journey; Siegfried's Death Music; Immolation scene-soloist, Margaret Harshaw, soprano. — Charles Munch, conductor.

Sun. Aug. 7

Beethoven: Symphony No. 8, in F major; Piano Concerto No. 4, in G major; Soloist: Eugene Istomin; Symphony No. 5, in C minor. — Charles Munch, conductor.

This weekend's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra are: Sat. evening, July 30 — Charles Munch conducting an all-Beethoven program: Overture to "Egmont"; Piano Concerto No. 5 (Emperor")-Rudolf Serkin, soloist; Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica"). Sunday afternoon, July 31 — Pierre Monteux conducting an all-Brahms concert; Academic Festival Overture; Concerto for Violin and Cello—Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky, soloists; Symphony No. 1 in C minor.

8/7

Springfield

SUNDAY REPUBLICAN,

SOLOISTS DO WELL WITH MUSIC FROM BEETHOVEN OPERA

Margaret Hardshaw Outstanding in Second Portion Of Tanglewood Program

WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 6—The Berkshire Music Festival paid its respects tonight to Beethoven, the opera composer, performing the second act of his only opera "Fidelio."

Fine Soloists

Charles Munch gathered together a fine group of soloists including several from the Berkshire Music School. Resplendent in a crimson gown, Margaret Harshaw sang the title role of Leonora. The versatile David Lloyd sang Florestan; Mac Morgan sang Rocco; Christina Cardillo sang Marzelline; Malcolm Bernstein sang both Pizarro and Fernando and Arthur Shoep sang Jauino. The festival chorus was prepared by Hugh Ross and John Krueger.

Beethoven's opera of wifely virtue and fidelity is a grim tale which needs the settings to make it really effective. The second act discloses Florestan in his dungeon where the action takes place. Mr. Lloyd seems to be aiming toward the robust tenor realm, but at the expense of tone quality. He projected well tonight and sang his big aria effectively.

Miss Harshaw's opulent tones vitalized the ensemble numbers. She communicated the stress and strain of the heroine through a nice contrast of utterance. There was also much to admire in the big voice of Malcolm Bernstein. In the few measures allotted her, Christina Cardillo's lovely soprano was effective. Mr. Morgan and Mr. Shoep were adequate.

Mr. Munch conducted vigorously but did not succeed in overpowering the soloists. The chorus sang rhythmically and injected a note of happiness into this otherwise grim story.

Margaret Harshaw Shines

Margaret Harshaw was the particular star of the second half of the program. She repeated again her wonderous performance of the immolation scene from "Gotterdamerung" which she sang here a couple of seasons ago. The opening phrases were sung with stunning effect, for hers is a voice of power and beauty. She has gained greatly in her characterization of the "Gotterdammerung". Brunhilda and there was a constant play of color in the voice and a sure awareness of mood. It was a magnificent performance aided by the superb orchestral collaboration.

The immolation scene was prefaced by fine readings of the "Day Break" and Siegfried's death music. These two Wagnerian tone poems embrace some of the master's greatest music. There was a constant flow of exquisite tone colors, reflective and at times overpowering in intensity. Mr. Munch was at his conductorial best in these excerpts and he received full support and response from the orchestra.

This afternoon Eugene Istomin will be the soloist in an all Beethoven program. He will play the "Piano Concerto No. 4 in G. Major." Surrounding the concerto will be "Symphony No. 8 in F Major" and "Symphony No. 5 in C Minor."

Beethoven's only opera, "Fidelio"

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

AUG 1 1955

Tanglewood Had Huge Crowds Over Weekend

There were more than 15,000 people at Tanglewood in Lenox Saturday night, and a good many more outside the grounds, tied up in a traffic jam that brought some arrivals to the gates as the early leavers were beginning to come out. In this crowd there were thousands of musicians and serious music lovers and also thousands who would not cross the street to hear the Boston Symphony in Symphony Hall, Boston.

For two hours, however, they were a silent brotherhood all temporarily captured by the power of the world's best music performed by superlative musicians in a setting of comfort and natural grandeur. There were some empty seats in the huge Music Shed, but few open spaces on the lawn near it. Perfect acoustics make the lawn and sky at Tanglewood preferred seats for many.

On a mild summer night, with a moon riding over the great trees of Tanglewood, to hear the Boston Symphony do Beethoven is an experience that makes the crowds no mystery. Saturday evening there was the added excitement of a stunning performance by pianist Rudolf Serkins, making his first appearance at the Berkshire Festival.

The Egmont Overture opened the Saturday night concert, its handsome construction finely illuminated by the orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch Then Mr. Serkin played the Emperor Concerto with the orchestra, more emotional in demeanor than we have ever seen him and and as always breathtaking in his technique. Piano and orchestra dovetailed beautifully, and the whole great work was done with grace and strength by both soloist and orchestra. It brought an ovation from the audience. The Eroica Symphony took up the rest of the program, gripping in its sweep toward triumph and played with a good deal of warmth.

Friday night the orchestra played Hendel's "Suite for Orchestra," the Schumann Fourth Symphony, Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegarrad" with chorus, and Brahms' Fourth Symphony. Soloists were Leontyne Price, Regina Sarfaty, and Arthur Schoep. On Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux led the orchestra in a Brahms program in which Isaac Stern, violinist, enthralled the audience in the Violin Concerto. The Academic Festival Overture and the First Symphony completed the program.

Attendance on Saturday night almost broke all records, the total of 15,500 almost reaching the record of 15,800. There were 12,000 in Sunday audience.

Wednesday evening Mr. Serkin will give a piano concert in the theatre-concert hall.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

AUG 4 1955

Tanglewood On Parade To Feature Claude Rains August 11 At Lenox

Distinguished stage, screen, radio and television star Claude Rains will narrate Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," which will be a highlight of the gala evening concert next Thursday (August 11), in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., during "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school.

The Broadway star of Sidney Kingsley's dramatic "Darkness At Noon" and of T. S. Eliot's comedy-drama "The Confidential Clerk" will make his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting, and his debut at Tanglewood in the stirring musical portrait of the Great Emancipator which was composed during the war by Mr. Copland, the noted American composer who is assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center (on leave of absence in 1955) and which was first performed by the Boston Symphony on April 9, 1943. Mr. Rains made three appearances in "A Lincoln Portrait" with the Philadelphia Orchestra, Eugene Ormandy conducting, twice in Philadelphia and once at Carnegie Hall, New York, in April, 1949.

Claude Rains, familiar to motion picture fans for featured roles in half a hundred films, including "The Invisible Man," "Anthony Adverse," "Juarez," "Here Comes Mr. Jordan", "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington", "Caesar and Cleopatra" (he was Barnard Shaw's personal choice for the Roman dictator) "Casablanca" and "Notorious," was born in London and has been an actor since childhood. He came to the U. S. first in 1914 with the late Harley Granville-Barker to act in Shaw's "Androcles and the Lion", then after service in World War I and a dozen West End productions, returned to Broadway for a notable group of plays produced by the Theatre Guild, including "Volpone," "Marco Millions," "The Moon in the Yellow River," "The Apple Cart" and "Too True to be Good." Before he went to Hollywood and stardom in 1935 he acted the dynamic counsel for the defense in "They Shall Not Die." He made a concert tour under the title "Words and Music" this spring, and currently can be heard over the N. B. C. network Monday through Friday afternoons in a program of dramatic readings. The noted actor is coming to Tanglewood next week directly from Stock Grange, the 400-acre farm he owns and operates near Philadelphia.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

AUG 4 1955

Serkin, Pianist Thrills Audience At Tanglewood

Rudolph Serkin, pianist, has a wonderful way with Beethoven sonatas, and the how, why and wherefore of this way was demonstrated to more than 2,500 enthusiastic persons who heard his Theatre-Concert Hall recital at Tanglewood last night.

Mr. Serkin is one of the most distinguished artists of our time. His playing of three Beethoven sonatas was in the finest tradition and could only serve to enhance his already brilliant reputation.

The sonatas included on the program proved an excellent illustration of the composer's development. First was the sonata in F. Major, Op. 10, No. 2, built along the more rigid lines of the classical period, with its formal following in the allegro of the sonata-allegro form, and with its three movement plan. Mr. Serkin captured the gayety inherent in the work, especially the lilt and the flow of the first movement. While it was breathless and free, it was also a careful study.

The second programmed work was the Waldstein sonata. Here the composer's bridge from classicism to romanticism is apparent, especially in the powerful first and third movements. Mr. Serkin played cleanly and lovingly, more than equal to the torturous demands of the Allegretto.

The Hammerklavier sonata which closed the program is clearly romantic, the last phase of the composer's maturation. It is a horrifyingly difficult work, especially the final movement.

Mr. Serkin was more successful with the first three; in the last there were moments when the tone was simply loud. In spite of this minor complaint, the performance was a triumph.

Unfortunately, Mr. Serkin has accumulated mannerisms which serve only to distract. He smiles, sighs, sings (in a monotone) and stamps, even rising from his seat occasionally to emphasize a particularly forceful phrase.

But with eyes closed, one can only bask in the beauty of delicate and finely molded phrases, sweeping, gradual and powerful crescendos, soft and melting pianissimos, and ringing and singing tone. Mr. Serkin's coupling of magnificent technical proficiency with profound artistry marks him as one of the musical "greats." His superb playing of a difficult but dazzling program last night illustrated this to an eminently satisfying degree.—B. D.

Beethoven, Wagner, Featured Music At Tanglewood Weekend Concerts

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, moves into its semi-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with the fifth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three piano sonatas performed by Rudolf Serkin, on August 3 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Beethoven and Wagner provide the fare for the three weekend concerts in the huge Music Shed. Charles Munch conducts two of the three concerts, on Saturday evening August 6 and Sunday afternoon August 7, and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the department of orchestra and conducting of the summer music school, The Berkshire Music Center, takes the podium on Friday August 5.

Mr. Bernstein, who came to Tanglewood as a student conductor in 1940 and 1941, then began his long association with the Berkshire music school in 1942 as assistant to the orchestra's late conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will conduct Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" on Friday evening as a memorial to his patron. The evening-long orchestral and choral work was similarly performed at Tanglewood under Mr. Bernstein's baton two summers ago. Soloists on this occasion will be Adele Addison, soprano, Eunice Alberts, contralto, David Lloyd, tenor, Mac Morgan, bass.

Mr. Munch's Saturday program will commence with a first Tanglewood performance of Beethoven's opera "Fidelio", Act II with the Festival Chorus trained by John Krueger of the Youngstown, Ohio, Philharmonic and Chorus. Soloists are Margaret Harshaw, of the Metropolitan Opera, soprano; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; Arthur Schoep, tenor; and from the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, students Christina Cardillo of (North Adams), soprano, and Malcolm Bernstein (Baltimore, Md.), bass. The second half of the program is devoted to excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung", with Miss Harshaw soloist in the Immolation Scene.

The Sunday afternoon concert Mr. Munch will devote to Beethoven, whose music is a feature of the 1955 Berkshire Festival, with Eugene Istomin, pianist, making his debut with the Boston Symphony orchestra as soloist in the Concerto No. 4.

A bonus for Festival patrons is the Sunday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10:00 a.m. (Aug. 6,) for which a nominal charge is made of $1.00, for the benefit of the Orchestra's pension fund.

The complete programs are:

Wed. Aug. 3

Beethoven: Piano Sonatas—F major, Op. 10, No. 2
D major, Op. 10, No. 3
B flat, Op 106 ("Hammerklavier") — Rudolf Serkin.

Fri. Aug. 5

Beethoven: Missa Solemnis (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky). Soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass. Violin solo: Richard Burgin, organist: Willem Frank Festival chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Hugh Ross. — Leonard Bernstein, conductor.

Sat. Aug. 6

Beethoven: "Fidelio", Act II (First performance at Tanglewood) Leonore . . . Margaret Harshaw; Rocco . . . Mac Morgan; Pizzaro and Fernando . . . Malcolm Bernstein; Florestan . . . David Lloyd; Marzelline . . . Christina Cardillo; Jaquino . . . Arthur Schoep.

Wagner: Excerpts from "Gotterdammerung": Siegfried's Rhine Journey; Siegfried's Death Music; Immolation scene-soloist, Margaret Harshaw, soprano. — Charles Munch, conductor.

Sun. Aug. 7

Beethoven: Symphony No. 8, in F major; Piano Concerto No. 4, in G major; Soloist: Eugene Istomin; Symphony No. 5, in C minor. — Charles Munch, conductor.

This weekend's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra are: Sat. evening, July 30 — Charles Munch conducting an all-Beethoven program: Overture to "Egmont"; Piano Concerto No. 5 (Emperor")-Rudolf Serkin, soloist; Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica"). Sunday afternoon, July 31 — Pierre Monteux conducting an all-Brahms concert; Academic Festival Overture; Concerto for Violin and Cello—Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky, soloists; Symphony No. 1 in C minor.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

AUG 1 1955

Tanglewood Had Huge Crowds Over Weekend

There were more than 15,000 people at Tanglewood in Lenox Saturday night, and a good many more outside the grounds, tied up in a traffic jam that brought some arrivals to the gates as the early leavers were beginning to come out. In this crowd there were thousands of musicians and serious music lovers and also thousands who would not cross the street to hear the Boston Symphony in Symphony Hall, Boston.

For two hours, however, they were a silent brotherhood all temporarily captured by the power of the world's best music performed by superlative musicians in a setting of comfort and natural grandeur. There were some empty seats in the huge Music Shed, but few open spaces on the lawn near it. Perfect acoustics make the lawn and sky at Tanglewood preferred seats for many.

On a mild summer night, with a moon riding over the great trees of Tanglewood, to hear the Boston Symphony do Beethoven is an experience that makes the crowds no mystery. Saturday evening there was the added excitement of a stunning performance by pianist Rudolf Serkins, making his first appearance at the Berkshire Festival.

The Egmont Overture opened the Saturday night concert, its handsome construction finely illuminated by the orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch Then Mr. Serkin played the Emperor Concerto with the orchestra, more emotional in demeanor than we have ever seen him and and as always breathtaking in his technique. Piano and orchestra dovetailed beautifully, and the whole great work was done with grace and strength by both soloist and orchestra. It brought an ovation from the audience. The Eroica Symphony took up the rest of the program, gripping in its sweep toward triumph and played with a good deal of warmth.

Friday night the orchestra played Hendel's "Suite for Orchestra," the Schumann Fourth Symphony, Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegarrad" with chorus, and Brahms' Fourth Symphony. Soloists were Leontyne Price, Regina Sarfaty, and Arthur Schoep. On Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux led the orchestra in a Brahms program in which Isaac Stern, violinist, enthralled the audience in the Violin Concerto. The Academic Festival Overture and the First Symphony completed the program.

Attendance on Saturday night almost broke all records, the total of 15,500 almost reaching the record of 15,800. There were 12,000 in Sunday audience.

Wednesday evening Mr. Serkin will give a piano concert in the theatre-concert hall.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

AUG 4 1955

Tanglewood On Parade To Feature Claude Rains August 11 At Lenox

Distinguished stage, screen, radio and television star Claude Rains will narrate Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," which will be a highlight of the gala evening concert next Thursday (August 11), in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., during "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school.

The Broadway star of Sidney Kingsley's dramatic "Darkness At Noon" and of T. S. Eliot's comedy-drama "The Confidential Clerk" will make his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting, and his debut at Tanglewood in the stirring musical portrait of the Great Emancipator which was composed during the war by Mr. Copland, the noted American composer who is assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center (on leave of absence in 1955) and which was first performed by the Boston Symphony on April 9, 1943. Mr. Rains made three appearances in "A Lincoln Portrait" with the Philadelphia Orchestra, Eugene Ormandy conducting, twice in Philadelphia and once at Carnegie Hall, New York, in April, 1949.

Claude Rains, familiar to motion picture fans for featured roles in half a hundred films, including "The Invisible Man," "Anthony Adverse," "Juarez," "Here Comes Mr. Jordan", "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington", "Caesar and Cleopatra" (he was Barnard Shaw's personal choice for the Roman dictator) "Casablanca" and "Notorious," was born in London and has been an actor since childhood. He came to the U. S. first in 1914 with the late Harley Granville-Barker to act in Shaw's "Androcles and the Lion", then after service in World War I and a dozen West End productions, returned to Broadway for a notable group of plays produced by the Theatre Guild, including "Volpone," "Marco Millions," "The Moon in the Yellow River," "The Apple Cart" and "Too True to be Good." Before he went to Hollywood and stardom in 1935 he acted the dynamic counsel for the defense in "They Shall Not Die." He made a concert tour under the title "Words and Music" this spring, and currently can be heard over the N. B. C. network Monday through Friday afternoons in a program of dramatic readings. The noted actor is coming to Tanglewood next week directly from Stock Grange, the 400-acre farm he owns and operates near Philadelphia.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

AUG 4 1955

Serkin, Pianist Thrills Audience At Tanglewood

Rudolph Serkin, pianist, has a wonderful way with Beethoven sonatas, and the how, why and wherefore of this way was demonstrated to more than 2,500 enthusiastic persons who heard his Theatre-Concert Hall recital at Tanglewood last night.

Mr. Serkin is one of the most distinguished artists of our time. His playing of three Beethoven sonatas was in the finest tradition and could only serve to enhance his already brilliant reputation.

The sonatas included on the program proved an excellent illustration of the composer's development. First was the sonata in F. Major, Op. 10, No. 2, built along the more rigid lines of the classical period, with its formal following in the allegro of the sonata-allegro form, and with its three movement plan. Mr. Serkin captured the gayety inherent in the work, especially the lilt and the flow of the first movement. While it was breathless and free, it was also a careful study.

The second programmed work was the Waldstein sonata. Here the composer's bridge from classicism to romanticism is apparent, especially in the powerful first and third movements. Mr. Serkin played cleanly and lovingly, more than equal to the torturous demands of the Allegretto.

The Hammerklavier sonata which closed the program is clearly romantic, the last phase of the composer's maturation. It is a horrifyingly difficult work, especially the final movement.

Mr. Serkin was more successful with the first three; in the last there were moments when the tone was simply loud. In spite of this minor complaint, the performance was a triumph.

Unfortunately, Mr. Serkin has accumulated mannerisms which serve only to distract. He smiles, sighs, sings (in a monotone) and stamps, even rising from his seat occasionally to emphasize a particularly forceful phrase.

But with eyes closed, one can only bask in the beauty of delicate and finely molded phrases, sweeping, gradual and powerful crescendos, soft and melting pianissimos, and ringing and singing tone. Mr. Serkin's coupling of magnificent technical proficiency with profound artistry marks him as one of the musical "greats." His superb playing of a difficult but dazzling program last night illustrated this to an eminently satisfying degree.—B. D.

...PUBLICAN, ASS., ...TS DO WELL ...ITH MUSIC FROM BEETHOVEN OPERA

Margaret Hardshaw Outstanding in Second Portion Of Tanglewood Program

WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 6—The Berkshire Music Festival paid its respects tonight to Beethoven, the opera composer, performing the second act of his only opera "Fidelio."

Fine Soloists

Charles Munch gathered together a fine group of soloists including several from the Berkshire Music School. Resplendent in a crimson gown, Margaret Harshaw sang the title role of Leonora. The versatile David Lloyd sang Florestan; Mac Morgan sang Rocco; Christina Cardillo sang Marzelline; Malcolm Bernstein sang both Pizarro and Fernando and Arthur Shoep sang Jauino. The festival chorus was prepared by Hugh Ross and John Krueger.

Beethoven's opera of wifely virtue and fidelity is a grim tale which needs the settings to make it really effective. The second act discloses Florestan in his dungeon where the action takes place. Mr. Lloyd seems to be aiming toward the robust tenor realm, but at the expense of tone quality. He projected well tonight and sang his big aria effectively.

Miss Harshaw's opulent tones vitalized the ensemble numbers. She communicated the stress and strain of the heroine through a nice contrast of utterance. There was also much to admire in the big voice of Malcolm Bernstein. In the few measures allotted her, Christina Cardillo's lovely soprano was effective. Mr. Morgan and Mr. Shoep were adequate.

Mr. Munch conducted vigorously but did not succeed in overpowering the soloists. The chorus sang rhythmically and injected a note of happiness into this otherwise grim story.

Margaret Harshaw Shines

Margaret Harshaw was the particular star of the second half of the program. She repeated again her wonderous performance of the immolation scene from "Gotterdamerung" which she sang here a couple of seasons ago. The opening phrases were sung with stunning effect, for hers is a voice of power and beauty. She has gained greatly in her characterization of the "Gotterdammerung"- Brunhilda and there was a constant play of color in the voice and a sure awareness of mood. It was a magnificent performance aided by the superb orchestral collaboration.

The immolation scene was prefaced by fine readings of the "Day Break" and Siegfried's death music. These two Wagnerian tone poems embrace some of the master's greatest music. There was a constant flow of exquisite tone colors, reflective and at times overpowering in intensity. Mr. Munch was at his conductorial best in these excerpts and he received full support and response from the orchestra.

This afternoon Eugene Istomin will be the soloist in an all Beethoven program. He will play the "Piano Concerto No. 4 in G. Major." Surrounding the concerto will be "Symphony No. 8 in F Major" and "Symphony No. 5 in C Minor."

Beethoven's only opera, "Fidelio"

P. Globe 8/7

Boston Sunday Globe

242 Washington St. Boston 7, Mass.
Published by GLOBE NEWSPAPER COMPANY
(Established March 4, 1872. Evening edition first issued March 7, 1878. Sunday edition first issued Oct. 14, 1877.)

SUNDAY, AUGUST 7, 1955

MINIATURE ALMANAC.....AUG 7
Eastern Daylight Saving Time

Sun Rises	5:42	High Tide	2:03 a m
Sun Sets	7:57		2:27 p m
Length of Day	14.15	Moon Rises	9:30 p m
Height of Tide	10.2 ft a m, 10 ft p m
Turn on Headlights at			8:27 pm

Moon's Changes
Last Quarter, Aug. 10, 10.33 p. m.
New Moon, Aug. 17, 3:58 p. m.
First Quarter, Aug. 25, 4.51 a. m.
Full Moon, Sept. 2, 3:59 a. m.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

	Daily Only Per Mo.	Daily Only Per Yr.	Sunday Per Mo.	Sunday Per Yr.
Boston Postal Zone	1.25	15.00	1.00	12.00
New England States	1.00	12.00	.95	11.40
Elsewhere in United States & Possessions	1.35	15.00	1.15	13.80
Canada	1.35	16.20	1.20	14.40
Other Foreign Countries	2.50	30.00	1.90	22.00

(Please do not send cash. Use money orders or checks.)

Back numbers (per copy): 1 week, or older, 5c daily; 20c Sundays; over 3 months old, out of print.

Entered as second class mail matter at Boston, Mass., under the act of March 3, 1879—242 Washington St.

The Associated Press is entitled exclusively to the use for republication of all the local news printed in this newspaper.

Globe Man's Daily Story

The late Alexander Woolcott was seldom at a loss for words. One day he was haggling with the female proprietor of a fish market over the price of fresh lobster. When, at last she assailed him in a language unbecoming a lady, he promptly routed her with language her hurt look implied was unbecoming a gentleman: "You, madam, are an adverb, an ampersand, and interjection and an unmitigated double negative."

MIDSUMMER HARVEST

As you go west in Massachusetts from the sea to the Berkshires, something happens which everyone must feel but no one mentions. Is there another spot in North America where this could be duplicated within an area equivalent?—Atlantic coast, Connecticut Valley and Berkshire Hills, within four hours' driving one is in three distinct regional cultures.

In first settlement the Valley trod upon the heels of the coastal towns, for the river was the road; but although the Indians did not like the mountains, the Berkshires came under cultivation almost a century later. Berkshire County, however, has made up bravely since, and especially in the past two decades, for it is now our Summer capital of music, the dance, and to some extent, drama. From Nathaniel Hawthorne's modest volume of stories for children written in a red cottage on a slope of the scenic Stockbridge Bowl, to the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Tanglewood is by now such a thrice-told tale that its deeper and more abiding fertilization of our soil may be overlooked amid the very abundance of its yearly harvests, for when the sounding billows of its orchestral and choral music subside, and its multitudinous audiences depart,

"Still do thy sleepless ministers move on,
"Their glorious tasks in silence perfecting."

*
* *

It was Tanglewood which first proved on a grand scale that our people are eager to go to Summer music festivals on a small and intimate scale as well as a large one; that concerts of chamber music in poetical settings can be as enchanting a Midsummer Night's Dream as can a symphonic performance. Does anyone suppose the Summer festival at Aspen, Colorado, would have come into existence but for Tanglewood, or indeed, this benign inundation of our lives and our landscapes with music, dance, and theatre, as well as exhibitions of the visual and plastic arts in Summer?

Facts and figures cease to be dull and may even turn exciting when it is understood what they mean,

"For Greece and its foundations are
"Laid beneath the tides of war,
"Based on the crystaline sea
"Of thought and its eternity."

Beneath the dazzling programs and brilliant performances in the Music Shed, the Theatre-Concert Hall, and the Chamber Music hall at Tanglewood move the currents and rising tide of a human sea of talent, for our American social system is more and more performing that prime function of any civilized society—release of the widest possible spread of potential talents among its people.

And among other peoples, for these talents now come to the Music School at Tanglewood not only from all quarters of these United States, but from Europe, Asia and South America, to be sent out again from here as seed-carriers, the Appleseed Johnnies of golden orchards.

Thus the facts can now be seen for what they mean: more than ten percent of the membership in all the major symphony orchestras in the United States are by this time former students at Tanglewood; fledgling instrumental virtuosi take off from this Berkshire hilltop on the eagle flights of their touring careers; young singers walk off its platforms and out on the stages of opera house and concert hall; composers work both in and for Tanglewood, teaching, producing commissioned scores, and sending finished works here from abroad for first performance. The happy idea of a study group for amateur musicians to come and spend from two to six weeks making music to hearts' content has fished up from the deep sea soundings of our common life students as various as [illegible], housewives, officers from the armed services, medical doctors, a priest, a manufacturer of macaroni, salesmen, teachers . . . their ages ranging from eighteen to seventy-one.

*
* *

A city grows complacent. Even though we may be on our guard against such stupidity, a notion tends to get abroad that nothing much of importance happens outside the metropolitan area. How all too easily do our minds and lives yield to the little tract within fifteen miles of the gilded State House dome, that domain where twenty-cent fare is King, when all the while this is no more than a postage stamp on a continent.

No sooner does one's car roll into the beautiful Worcester County hills than the human climate changes, the old rustic New England reasserts its identity, and the delightful twang of Yankee speech, the twang of a bowstring that launches shafts of wit, makes glad the ear and heart. By the time you reach the River Gods of the Connecticut Valley, Boston has ceased to cut much ice; they can cut their own, thank you—what with three famous old colleges, Amherst, Mt. Holyoke, Smith, and now a Massachusetts University, two colleges in Springfield, and the academies at Deerfield, Northfield and Mt. Hermon which are by now almost equally famous. The very doorways of the colonial houses in Deerfield and the Hadleys are distinctive to the Valley.

*
* *

In Berkshire County, our third regional culture, the planting of a century ago which then drew thither Hawthorne, Melville, Longfellow, and Holmes, is now in full flower. Pittsfield is a city to which the United States Government conducts touring officials from abroad, as an example of a self-contained metropolis of moderate size and distinguished quality; the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield is a notable art collection admirably managed, and to this add the two art museums in Williamstown, that of the College and the handsome new building for the Clark collections. Both the Berkshire Playhouse at Stockbridge and the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival at Lee were in being before Tanglewood, and Jacob's Pillow is most unique in that the art of dance is relatively new in this country and therefore in its excitingly formative state of fluidity and experimentation.

The boundary lines of Massachusetts, artificial because political, run east and west; the natural lines, those of our mountains, hills and biggest river, run north and south; while the Berkshires, paralleling the Hudson, are tributary to New York. One sees this in the very audiences at Tanglewood, thronged though the place is with New Englanders: the Orchestra is Boston's, the people are from everywhere, not only New York, as well as New England, but from the West, South and points beyond, even to overseas.

Toynbee was not the first to notice that although the French, Dutch and Spanish had equally good chances to dominate the settlement and cultural development of North America, still it was the English who walked off with the prize, and, of the English, it was the New Englanders who most impregnated the young nation with their basic ideas, and this largely because of the stern discipline they drew from their scrawny land. And now these our New England pastures the Summer through nourish seed-pods of the arts, which burst in Autumn and strew their winged insemination far and wide.

UNCLE DUDLEY.

41

Boston Herald

PAGE TEN 8/7 ▲ SEC

"The Rainmaker"

18th Berkshire Festival Classical and Prosperous

By ELINOR HUGHES

There is surely no law that says that the Berkshire Festival must automatically be devoted to new works, and the very substantial prosperity enjoyed by the Festival in its 18th season, which will end a week from today with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony and Overture, Leonore No. 3, certainly justifies the expressed faith of Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, that it is important, even vital, that we concentrate from time to time upon established greatness, if only to refresh our spirits and renew our communion with the enernal verities.

Parenthetically, no one is scolded for reviving Shekespeare, as anyone who has been scanning this summer's drama pages can testify—if the revivals are bad, that, of course, is another matter—so why Mr. Munch should have to explain his decision to concentrate upon Beethoven and Brahms at Tanglewood this year is a little hard to figure. Of course, it's necessary to encourage new composers and hear new music, and a careful examination of the complete Berkshire Festival will indicate that new works were by no means entirely neglected, but how pleasant to renew long-established friendships and bask in the joys of hearing soloists of first rank pit their skill against the exalting demands of musical giants.

This is a personal opinion, of course, and not that of a professional musician or music critic. But I can testify that the July 29-31 concerts I was fortunate enough to hear at Tanglewood were not only memorable in quality of performance but attracted crowds of staggering size and matching enthusiasm. If 15,500 persons were willing to pay to hear Rudolf Serkin, Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony play Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto," Egmont" overture and Third Symphony; and 12,000 music lovers braved the staggering heat the following afternoon to hear Isaac Stern, Pierre Monteux and the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms program, then it's a bit difficult to think up valid objections to such a choice of programs.

It could be argued — though Mr. Munch and Mr. Monteaux are not weather prophets — that it's easier to listen to familiar than unfamiliar programs when the thermometer starts soaring, but in rebuttal, couldn't it be said that excessive heat makes it hard to concentrate upon musical experiments?

The arguments need not be pursued futher at the point, but let's do some careful investigating into what actually has been and will be presented at Tanglewood by the time the season closes on Aug. 14.

BEETHOVEN SEASON

During the four weeks of the Shed Concerts, which began on July 22, all nine of the Beethoven symphonies will have been played; the Missa Solemnis was sung two nights ago, Act II from "Fidelio" was heard last night, the "Egmont," "Coriolan" and Leonore No. 3 overtures were given; the concerto's No. 4 and 5 were played with Serkin and Istomin as soloists; and five chamber concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall were devoted to the trios, violin sonatas, piano sonatas and quartets.

Brahms also had his innings, three of his symphonies being presented, plus his violin concerto, and Academic Festival Overture! Bach's B Minor Mass was sung by the Radcliffe and Harvard Choruses, and the works of Wagner, Mozart, Haydn, Shuman, Handel, Beethoven and Vivaldi joined forces with compositions by Reger, Schoenberg, Strauss, Fauré, Honegger and Samuel Barber.

Mr. Barber's "Prayers of Kirkegaard," premiered in Boston last winter, was the only novelty heard in the Shed concerts, and despite the not inconsiderable competition of Handel's Water Music, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 and Brahms' Symphony No. 4, it held its own admirably. What wonderful acoustics the Shed has, to be sure: every season it seems more miraculous that this pie-shaped structure can project music so beautifully and so far.

"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"

This week will see considerable concentration on novelties. Tomorrow and Tuesday evenings, for example, Dept. IV (Opera) will present the world premiere performances of Mennini's opera, "The Rope," based on a one-act play by Eugene O'Neill, and last Monday and Tuesday nights the same department presented the Tanglewood premiers of Bernard Blacher's chamber opera, "Romeo and Juliet;" and of Milhaud's chamber opera, "L'Abandon d'Ariane."

But the musical novelty that is liable to attract most attention will be the premier on Thursday, (which is "Tanglewood On Parade," an all-day fiesta of music and dance) of Leonard Bernstein's conducting of a suite he arranged from his "On the Waterfront" film score. The gifted Mr. Bernstein will also be soloist with Arthur Fielder and the Pops Orchestra in "Rhapsody in Blue," and will conduct Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," which will have Claude Rains as narrator.

LAURINDA BARRETT, appearing as Mrs. Frail in Congreve's comedy, "Love For Love," at the Theater on the Green in Wellesley through Sunday night, Aug. 14.

When the facts and figures are all assembled, the attendance records added up, the gate receipts totalled and the final comments written down, it will be time for philosophical and financial post mortems. But I do believe, out of my own experience and the delight expressed by those attendance at the Festival was far more extended than mine, that this year's concert afforded great delight and satisfaction. True, we were not provoked, nor jarred, nor roused to frenzy over the merits of new and experimentals works, but we had a chance to drink deep of musical magnificence and renew acquaintance with past glories that are unlikely ever to be passe.

Now if the Berkshire Festival will get to work on the parking and traffic problems, the millenium would certainly be at hand. But shall not go into that thorny problem here: this was intended as an article of appreciation, not contention.

IN THE HEART OF MAINE'S VACATIONLAND

Tanglewood Soloists Tonight

David Lloyd — Margaret Harshaw — Mac Morgan

TANGLEWOOD — With concerts tonight and tomorrow afternoon, the 1955 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra moves into the next to the last weekend of the season. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony will conduct both weekend concerts.

Tonight's program will be devoted to excerpts from two great operas, Beethoven's "Fidelio" and Wagner's "Die Gotterdammerung." Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd and Mac Morgan will be the principal soloists with the Berkshire Festival chorus trained by John Krueger, in the first half of the program consisting of a concert presentation of the second act of "Fidelio," a first performance at Tanglewood. After the intermission, three excerpts from "Die Gotterdammerung" will be heard: Siegfried's Rhine Journey, Siegfried's Death Music and the Immolation Scene in which Miss Harshaw will sing Brunnhilde.

Joined Met in 1942

Miss Harshaw joined the Metropolitan Opera Company as a contralto in the 1942 season and made her debut in the role of Gudrune. After singing contralto roles to great acclaim for a decade, she sang the soprano role of Senta in the Metropolitan's new production of Wagner's "The Flying Dutchman" in 1951. Ever since, she has been recognized as one of the outstanding Wagnerian sopranos of our time and is especially famous for her portrayal of Brunnhilde in "Die Gotterdammerung." She sang the Immolation Scene with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Mr. Munch in Boston last winter and the season before, and also at Tanglewood under Pierre Monteux during the 1952 Berkshire Festival.

Both Mr. Lloyd and Mr. Morgan are former students at the Berkshire Music Center, and both have gone on to distinguished careers in concert and opera. Each also was a soloist last night in the Koussevitzky Memorial presentation of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis," conducted by Leonard Bernstein.

Three assisting "Fidelio" soloists have been chosen by Charles Munch from Tanglewood's opera departments: Malcolm Bernstein of Baltimore, bass, who has the dual role of Pizzaro and Fernando; Christina Cardillo, soprano, North Adams, who sings Marzelline; and Arthur Schoep, New York, who is Jaquino.

Tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 Mr. Munch will conduct two Beethoven symphonies, the Eighth and Fifth. Eugene Istomin will play the Fourth Piano Concerto.

Mr. Istomin, who will be making his debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is a 29-year-old native of New York City. He has appeared with every major orchestra in this country and abroad, scoring probably his greatest success at the Prades and Perpignan Festivals in association with the great cellist, Pablo Casals. Later this summer he will play trios at the Ravinia concerts in Chicago with Isaac Stern, violin, and Leonard Rose, cello. He has also been engaged as a soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra next season in Boston.

Bernstein Dominates Memorial Concert

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

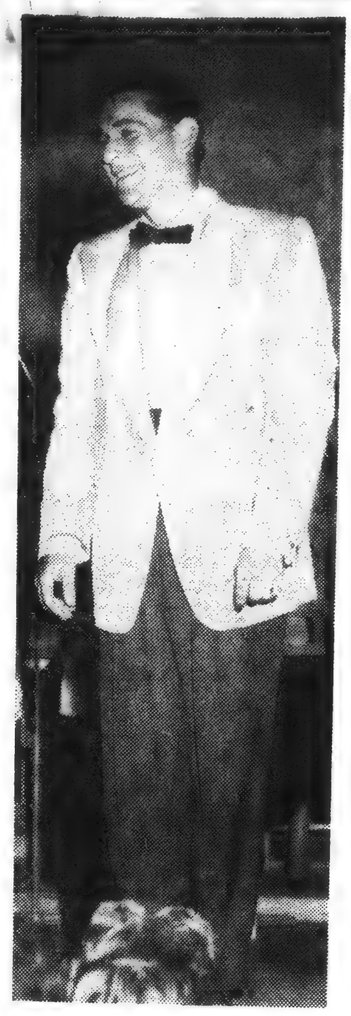
LAST NIGHT'S program of the Berkshire Festival was dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky, whose vision and inspiration were responsible for the establishment of the Berkshire Music Center and, to such a major degree, the construction of the buildings and the institution of the concerts at Tanglewood.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of Leonard Bernstein, and with the Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, gave a stirring performance of the Beethoven "Missa Solemnis," his Opus 123. The soloists were Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Mac Morgan, bass, the same quartet, with the exception of the bass, which sang at the 1951 performance, also conducted by Bernstein, and also in memory of his mentor and the great musician who had passed away a few weeks before. Koussevitzky himself had conducted the "Missa" in 1941 at Tanglewood.

* * *

TO BERNSTEIN is due a full measure of the credit for the impressive performance last night. His broad conception of the work was conveyed to the chorus with calm confidence and they, in turn, responded with secure conviction, achieving the wide and often vehement dynamic effects Bernstein asked, sometimes possibly in excess of Beethoven's expectations. The sudden drops to quiet and soft tone during a more strenuous movement was in true Beethoven style.

The orchestra played with consistently beautiful tone and, on several occasions, such as the lovely duet in the viola section, was really outstanding. Bernstein's contrasts were clear and distinct; his tempi in the slower sections were beautifully serene; the faster ones left discretion to the rear a few times, but his spirit was infectious, both toward the chorus and the huge audience, and he carried all with him with his vitality and intensity.



Manos

Leonard Bernstein

* * *

THE SOLOISTS took full advantage of the many opportunities the "Missa" affords, both as individuals and in ensemble. The initial full-throated utterance of the chorus was beautifully shaped by Bernstein to allow the tenor soloist to emerge easily in his first phrase. Lloyd was reluctant, with some justification possibly, to let such a graceful turn end as Beethoven indicated and so held it beyond the necessary requirement. Soprano Addison's first phrase, here, revealed a voice and a majestic vocal manner of unsurpassed ease and power. Her round tone was emitted without apparent effort and she used a classic style eminently appropriate in the sacred setting. Her development as an artist is an especial gratification to all who have watched her progress since her student days at the Berkshire Music Center only a few years ago.

* * *

EUNICE ALBERTS has never performed so beautifully. Her "in nomine Domine" in the Sanctus was conspicuously beautiful in a section which the quartet sang with exceptional splendor. Mac Morgan's resonant bass had one of its best moments, among many, in this same Sanctus and another in the "qui tollis" of the Gloria where his ample capacities fitted Beethoven's requirements perfectly.

After the intermission following the Credo, the chorus sang with decisive force. The Sanctus was most impressive in its variety from the opening "mit Andacht" ("with devotion") through the changes of tempo in the small prelude, arriving at the distinguished violin solo of Concertmaster Richard Burgin. Here Bernstein restrained his chorus and made some of his most telling effects. This was, as Beethoven wrote at the beginning, "from the heart."

World Premiere of 'The Rope' At Festival Monday, Tuesday

TANGLEWOOD — "The Rope," an opera in one act by Louis Mennini, commissioned for production by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, will have its world premiere by students of Boris Goldovky's opera department at the Theater Concert Hall Monday and Tuesday evenings at 8:30.

On the same program will be "Zaide," an unfinished two-act opera by Mozart. So far as can be learned, the Tanglewood performances will be the first in the U.S. The performances are open to those who support the summer music school by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. All seats are reserved, but some are still available for Monday and Tuesday. Reservations may be made at the Friends' office at Tanglewood.

"The Rope" was composed by Mr. Mennini, of the faculty of the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N.Y., who spent the summer of 1953 at Tanglewood on commission by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation and prepared his work from the beginning in consultation with Mr. Goldovsky and his staff. The opera is based on Eugene O'Neill's one-act play of the same name, which was originally performed by the Provincetown (Mass.) Players, April 26, 1917.

Louis Mennini

Goldovsky Comments

"The composer has worked in close consultation with our staff at Tanglewood," says Mr. Goldovsky, through all stages of operatic composition, beginning with the choice of text and initial arrangement of the libretto and continuing through to the final matters of orchestral scoring, scenic and costume investiture. Mr. Mennini has supervised casting and attended vocal and instrumental rehearsals. By providing an opportunity for a young composer to live with the musical theater, the Koussevitzky commission is enabling him to steep himself in the problems peculiar to it."

Mr. Mennini, 34, was born in Erie, Pa., in 1920, attended String Vincent High School there, studied music at Oberlin College, Ohio. After three years' service in the U.S. Army Air Force in England, he enrolled in 1945 in the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, and studied composition under Howard Hanson and Bernard Rogers. He was graduated in 1947 as both a bachelor and a master in music. Following a season of teaching at the University of Texas, Austin, he returned to Rochester, and has been on the Eastman faculty since 1949. He won the National Institute of Arts and Letters Award in 1949.

Among his compositions are the one-act opera, "The Well," performed in 1950 at the Eastman School of Music and also at the University of Kansas, Lawrence, Kansas, and in 1955 at the College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, Va; "Arioso for Strings," which has been recorded; "Overture Breve," commissioned by the Springfield, Ohio, Symphony Orchestra; "Andante and Allegro for Orchestra"; "Cantilena for Orchestra"; "Sonatina for Cello and Piano," commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation; and for the 100th anniversary of Christ Episcopal Church, Rochester, "The Proper of the Mass."

Of "The Rope," Mr. Mennini says: "Eugene O'Neill knew of my project before his death in 1953. I never got to meet him, but I have a contract signed by the Pulitzer Prize playwright to adapt his play. I formed the idea of setting 'The Rope' to music after reading it; I have never seen it on the stage. I have used the O'Neill play as is, except for certain changes of words, sections of conversations which seemed unnecessary to the continuity of the drama, a few additions of my own that seemed advisable for musical extension, such as the duet of Annie and Pat and also a rearrangement of words for Luke's aria."

"The Rope" has five characters, Abraham Bentley; Annie, his daughter; Pat Sweeney, her husband; Mary, their child; and Luke Bentley, Abraham's son by a second marriage. It is in one act and one scene, the setting an old barn situated on top of a high headland of the seacoast.

The Mozart opera, "Zaide," which will precede "The Rope," was written at Salzburg in 1779 to a libretto by Johann Andreas Schachtner. The Tanglewood version, in English, has been prepared by Sarah Caldwell, who will stage the work.

Boris Goldovsky will stage "The Rope." Scenery and lighting for both operas is by David Hays, costumes and make-up by Leo Van Witsen. Miss Aviva Einhorn, Israeli student studying in Paris, will conduct an orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center's Department I (Orchestra) students for "Zaide," and Henry Janiec is in the pit for the performances of "The Rope."

Manos

'THE ROPE,' a one act opera by Louis Mennini based on Eugene O'Neill's one act play (1917) will have its world premiere by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood Monday and Tuesday nights. This opera is the first opera to be commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, especially for production at Tanglewood. Rehearsing a scene is this cast which will appear at Monday night's performance, left to right, Mary McKenzie as Annie; Holly McLennan of Tyringham, as Mary, her child; Lynn Detwiler as Pat Sweeney, her brother; Robert Kirkham as Luke, her half brother; Malcolm Bernstein as Abraham Bentley, her father.

Tanglewood Tales

Voice of America To Record Concerts

The Voice of America will record the Tanglewood concerts and opera this week to be used for the overseas broadcasts.

The interviews and commentaries of the concert will be in three languages in addition to English. Representing the foreign sections will be Ivon Shidlof of the French service; Konrad Maril of the Austrian service; Henry Imbach of the German service and Sarah Newman for the Far East.

Harold Boxer, musical director for the Voice of America is coordinator of the project. Lawrence E. Selkowitz, music producer, formerly of Pittsfield and Joseph Petraglia, engineer, round out the group from Washington, D.C., the home of the Voice of America.

42

Berkshire Eagle 8/6

43

Public Events

Tonight

8:30—Berkshire Festival concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, with chorus and soloists. Tanglewood Music Shed, Lenox.

8:40—"Tovarich." Williamstown summer theater.

8:45—"Edward, My Son." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

8:45—"The Caine Mutiny Court Martial." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

9:00—Jacob's Pillow dance festival, East of Lee.

Tomorrow

10:00 a.m.—Student chamber music. Tanglewood chamber music hall. (BMC Friends)

2:30 p.m.—Berkshire Festival concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting Beethoven program, with Eugene Istomin, piano soloist. Tanglewood Music Shed.

4:00 p.m.—Berkshire Quartet. Music Mountain, Falls Village, Conn.

4:00 p.m.—Chamber music concert. Cummington School of the Arts.

7:00 p.m.—"The Caine Mutiny Court Martial." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

8:30 p.m.—Modern Jazz Quartet. Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox.

Tanglewood Sculpture

Manos

FAMILY group by Peter Abate of Brookline is a feature of Tanglewood's summer sculpture show. The 10-foot-high piece titled "Gli Stateli," the people of the state, was started in Italy last year and was completed in Brookline recently.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

AUG 1 1955

BSO Trustees At Festival Concerts

Among weekend notables at the Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood were Edward A. Taft and his nieces, Mrs. Houghton P. Metcalf and Mrs. George S. Mumford, and Mr. and Mrs. Jacob J. Kaplan of Boston. Mr. Taft and Mr. Kaplan are trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Others in the audience included Ralph Black, manager of the National Symphony Orchestra, Washington, D.C., and Mrs. Black; and Ramsi Tick, associate manager of the Buffalo (N.Y.) Philharmonic Orchestra.

along with two iron lungs for Pittsfield General Hospital. . . . On the second big Tanglewood weekend of the 1955 season, near-record crowds overloaded Lenox - area lodging places so badly that many visitors slept in their cars. Complaints were even more numerous about the Saturday night traffic jam, which tied up Tanglewood's approaches so that many of the 15,500 concert-goers couldn't get into the grounds until after the intermission.

Manos

OLDEST AND YOUNGEST students at Berkshire Music Center this summer [illegible] from New York City and Pittsfield. At left is 71-year-old violinist Morton Lachenbruch, a retired businessman. Flutist is Jayn Rosenfeld, 16, daughter of Eagle music critic Jay C. Rosenfeld, of South Mountain Road.

NY Herald Tribune

E, SUNDAY, AUGUST 7, 1955

quence; the yearning for peace and the fear of war in the Agnus Dei have a particular present-day significance.

The performance was admirable in many respects, and particularly in the interpretation of the chorus trained by Hugh Ross after a necessarily limited time for preparation. The tone was full and well balanced; dynamic contrasts were imposingly presented, and the singers also had a notable command of fine dynamic shadings. The orchestra observed its customary high standard, and Mr. Bernstein's devotion to the music was reflected in the performance in general.

Some Elements Missing

Certain intangible elements kept the interpretation out of the exceptional category. Much of the score has an inwardness, a deep and sometimes almost mystic musical mediation which is essential but hard to realize. This was sometimes missing, although reverence was present; now and then there was an impression of musical depths which were not fathomed. The measures beginning Et Incarnatus Est were among those in which Beethoven's intentions were most fully brought out.

Occasionaly there seemed to be a need for a more flowing and musical line and continuous rise of musical tension, as in the splended sweeping role and waxing momentum of the closing sections of the Gloria. Here and in other passages of a similar nature there were emotional excitement and conviction, notable force and brilliance, but not all of the necessary sense of rising to an ultimate climax. But these icompletions should not detract from the laudable features of the choral singing in general, with their revelation of most if not all details of the vocal score.

The Music Is Exacting

The four solosits in this work generally figure as a quartet, sometimes contrasted and sometimes intermingled with the choral music. All sang devotedly, with expressive persuasiveness, but sometimes the music itself seemed difficult. It is, indeed, exacting, but sometimes in the Missa Solemnis and in the Ninth Symphony the soloists seem slightly too conscious of this fact, and Miss Alberts and Mr. Lloyd, with quite a little unsteadniess of tone, were not at their best.

Miss Addison's top notes often had a well phrased fluent and convincing brightness as they soared over the rest of the ensemble, although a sense of effort was not always absent. Mr. Morgan sang his longest solo in the Agnus Dei with commendable firmness of tone. In the Credo and Gloria, the choral singing was somewhat a little heavy, sometimes calling for more flexibility. But the performance as a whole merited great respect, if not always unalloyed praise.

Tanglewood Concert Given To Honor Koussevitzky

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 6.—The Boston Symphony Orchestra and Berkshire Festival Chorus joined last night at Tanglewood in the annual concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, presenting Beethoven's Missa Solemnis in D major before an audience of 6,800.

A short but severe late afternoon storm in Pittsfield and a shower in Lenox just before the performance discouraged a larger attendance for a work which is in a class by itself in the literature of music on religious subjects. Leonard Bernstein conducted with Adele Addison, soprao; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor, and Mac Morgan, bass, as the soloists and Willem Friso Frank as the organist.

3d Performance at Shed

This was the third performance of the Missa Solemnis in Tanglewood's Misic Shed. Mr. Koussevitzky had conducted the first one, and had planned to conduct the second in 1951, but he died that June, and Mr. Bernstein conducted it ten, as yesterday, as a memorial for the great musician who had played such a large part in giving Tanglewood its present preeminence in the country's summer music.

Yesterday's audience was again reminded of the works time-defying stature and elo-

Social Briefs

Mr. and Mrs. Julius Fleischman of Cincinnati, Ohio, have as their guests for the Berkshire Festival weekend, at the Lenox home of Mrs. Charles R. Whipple: Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Smith of Houston, Tex., and Southampton, L.I., Mrs. Robert Bing and Mrs. J. C. Stevenson of Cincinnati; Dr. Henry Betts of Coconut Grove, Fla., and Princess Marya Troubetskoi of New York.

Dr. Lewis Perry, headmaster emeritus of Phillips Academy, Exeter, N.H., and trustee emeritus of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Mrs. Perry, of Boston and West Chop, Martha's Vineyard, are staying at the Gateway, Lenox, for the remainder of the Berkshire Festival season.

Tanglewood Tales

Informal Party At Wheatleigh

Following the premiere performance of "Zaide" and "The Rope" at Tanglewood Monday evening students, faculty and staff are invited to an informal party at Wheatleigh, the male students' dormitory, for the benefit of the Student Council Fund, an emergency fund to help needy students complete their studies at the Berkshire Music Center. Florence Dunn, of the Tanglewood Study Group, is faculty administrator. Entertainment will include a Fanfare written by Donald Harris, St. Paul, Minn., a composition student of Boris Blacher, who is an officer of the Students' Council. The film of Tanglewood made by the U.S. State Department several years ago will be shown.

* * *

Ralph Berkowitz To Welcome Paraders

Three previously unannounced celebrities will assist in Tanglewood on parade doings Aug. 11. The festive events open with a "Fanfare" for brass and percussion at 5:45 p.m. Thursday, on the lawns outside the Music Shed, composed by Karl Kohn, of Pomona College, Claremont, Calif., and assistant to Ingolf Dahl in the Tanglewood Study Group. It calls for three trumpets, three trombones, two horns, a tuba and percussion (bass drum and cymbals), which will be performed by students of Department I of the Berkshire Music Center, led by Roger Voisin, first horn player of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the summer music school, will deliver the address of welcome. Immediately following intermission at the gala evening concert by the Boston Symphony and the Boston Pops in the Music Shed, Boris Goldovsky, head of the BMC's opera department, will draw the names of winners of door prizes.

* * *

Festival Visitors

Crew members of Dave Garroway's TV show, "Today," including its producer, Maurice Robinson, and Tom Priestley, cameraman, were at last weekend's concerts. Others noted on the grounds were Lee Manson and Frank Hogan of WHC-TV, New Haven; Hope Stoddard, associate editor of International Musician, monthly magazine of the A. F. of M. Musicians' Union; Dario Soria and his wife, Dorle Jarmel, of Angel Records, New York; [illegible] Mertens of Columbia Artists Management, New York; and [illegible] Ortiz of the Baldwin Piano Co., New York, and Robert Cosgrove, the company's Boston representative.

* * *

Chamber Music Program Tomorrow

The fifth concert of chamber music by members of Department I of the Berkshire Music Center will be held in the Chamber Music Hall tomorrow morning at 10. The program follows:

Trio No. 4 in C major for Piano, Violin and Violoncello — Mozart
Allegro
Andante cantabile
Allegro
Eleanor Siranossian, violin
Bruce Klimchell, violoncello
Annette Guay, piano

Divertimento for Flute, Oboe, Clarinet and Bassoon, Opus 36 — Blacher Allegro
Moderato
Karen Peterson, flute
Nicholas Apostle, oboe
Harold Themmen, clarinet
Nelson Dayton, bassoon

Quartet No. 1 in G minor, for Piano and Strings, Opus 25 — Brahms
Allegro
Intermezzo: Allegro ma non troppo
Andante con moto
Rondo alla Zingarese
Stanley Dombrowski, violin
Jean Comstock, viola
Alice Ober, violoncello
Jerome Lowenthal, piano

Artistry in PLOUFFE
29 FENN ST.

New Records: Bach by Harms, Cello Music From Samuel Mayes

By CYRUS DURGIN

A brace of attractive discs has arrived from two firms located in this city. One is a collection of Bach Chorale Preludes and other organ music, performed by John Harms, from Unicorn. The second is a variety of music for cello, played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, with three collaborators, from the firm of Boston.

Mr. Harms, a young American organist, cannot be said to have chosen for his record debut displayful Bach music. The half-dozen chorale preludes which he played upon an organ in the Community Church, New York city, are on the quiet, meditative side, and the registration he used suitably emphasizes that quality. He plays them substantially and well; so, too, the somewhat brighter but mostly not showy pieces by Karg-Elert, Reger, Flor Peeters, Raasted, Weinberger and Vierne, which are on the second side. Perhaps one may gather that Mr. Harms is a modest musician rather than a virtuoso of his instrument. The engineering of the disc is excellent.

Breval Sonata

Among the four works from Mr. Mayes is a G major Sonata for cello and piano by the relatively obscure French Jean-Baptiste Breval, who was born in the same year with Mozart and lived almost as long as Beethoven. It is a nice piece though not of great personal distinction. Pianist Susan Pearlman plays ably in the Breval Sonata and in Haydn's major Sonata; Joseph De Pasquale, first viola of the Boston Symphony, joins Mr. Mayes in Beethoven's little-known, so-called "Eyeglass" Duet, and Sherman Walt participated in the Mozart B-flat Sonata (K. 292) for bassoon and cello. It is hardly necessary to specify that Mr. Mayes' work is a superb blend of musicianship and virtuosity, or, for that matter, that Messrs. De Pasquale and Walt succeeded as brilliantly. Excellent recording.

London has a real novelty in the Third Symphony, "The Four Ages of Man" by the Swedish contemporary, Hilding Rosenberg, who now is 63. This Symphony, composed in 1939, is a peculiar assembling of cliches from Sibelius and others, music in my belief of very little originality, but skillfully written. Tor Mann conducted the Stockholm Symphony. Fair recording.

More from the Louisville, Ky., series of commissioned scores. Dallapiccola's Variations for Orchestra, muscular and bright; Moncayo's "Cumbres," of Mexican origin; Ulysses Kay's Serenade for Orchestra, also bright and vigorous, and Milhaud's Mediterranean Overture, which sounds both like Milhaud and a piece written for an occasion, though it may prove more than that. In all four cases, interesting music at the least, and, of course, performed by the Louisville Symphony, Robert Whitney conducting.

I think you could call the Allegro Royale disc of Grieg's Piano Concerto, able and pleasing without any exceptional qualities of performance or reproduction. It was done by Robert Riefling and the Oslo Philharmonic under Odd Gruner-Hegge.

From the Pops

"Music for a Summer Night," with a lush jacket in color whose nightgowned lady holding a rose suggests an illustrative hint from the paper-backed book trade, is a likely Arthur Fiedler—Boston Pops Orchestra best-seller. Naturally, the music from Liszt and Kreisler to Waldteufel and Rubinstein by way of Gounod and Beethoven is very juicy [illegible] RCA-Victor.

Alfred Deller, the counter-tenor of the very high and very white voice, is heard again, in music of Henry Purcell and other 17th century composers, along with harpsichordist Gustav Leonhardt and a consort of viols. Interesting for the baroque specialist. Bach Guild—Vanguard.

Soprano Magda Laszlo, with pianist Franz Holetschek, has made a satisfactory disc of Italian airs of the late 17th and early 18th centuries. Westminster.

Brilliance and vigor unlimited characterize Respighi's "Roman Festivals" and "Church Windows", and also the performance of them by the Minneapolis Symphony under Antal Dorati. Quite imposing. Mercury.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUL 31 1955

EVA MARIE SAINT

Her Broadway show was Horton Foote's "The Trip to the Bountiful" which led to her appearance opposite Brando on Elia Kazan's recommendation.

Previous to her Broadway debut, Miss Saint had established herself as a TV and radio favorite on such programs as "One Man's Family," "Young Dr. Malone," "Robert Montgomery Presents," "Philco Playhouse," "The Web" and "The ABC Album."

In her role with Lillian Gish in "Trip to the Bountiful" (which she achieved from her performance in the earlier, shorter TV version of the play) the young actress won the critics' nod.

A native of the New York area Eva Marie celebrates July 4th not only as Independence Day but also as her birthday. In Ohio at Bowling Green University she was acclaimed "Dream Girl of the Freshman Class," "Sweater Queen" and "May Queen." Getting a job at N. B. C. in New York, producers and directors got so used to seeing her on the premises that they concluded she must be an actress. And so she was!

REHEARSAL ON THE BEACH—Greta Gray reads her lines on the beach at Cohasset for "Wish You Were Here," the musical opening tomorrow night at the South Shore Music Circus.

Esplanade Concerts to Resume Aug. 15

The Berkshire Festival, which took the Boston Symphony to Tanglewood, and Arthur Fiedler's guest-conducting stints in and around the country this Summer, caused a hiatus in the Esplanade Concerts.

But these will be resumed on Monday evening, Aug. 15, at 8:30 at the Hatch Shell, and will continue for the week through Saturday, Aug. 20. Mr. Fiedler will conduct. There will be a children's concert on Wednesday morning at 10:15.

Berkshire Festival Comes to a Close With Beethoven Ninth Next Sunday

The sixth and final week of the Berkshire Festival concerts opens with the concluding event of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, on Aug. 10 in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Six principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be assisted by David Lloyd, tenor, and Ralph Berkowitz, piano, in a program of trios, songs, a quintet and a cello sonata.

Charles Munch will conduct an all-French orchestra program on the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Shed concert of Friday evening, and an all-Beethoven program including the Ninth Symphony with soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; and augmented chorus on Sunday afternoon. Pierre Monteux will conduct the Saturday evening (Aug. 13) program, comprising Wagner, Brahms, Debussy and Strauss.

"Tanglewood on Parade"

"Tanglewood on Parade" from 6 to 11 p. m., Thursday, the annual benefit for the orchestra's music school, will commence with demonstrations by all departments: student symphony orchestra, chamber music, chorus and opera, followed by a gala concert in the Music Shed and concluding with the drawing of door prizes and waltzing on the lawn.

Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the premiere performance of a suite he has arranged from his score for the Academy Award-winning film, "On the Waterfront," and Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait." Arthur Fiedler will lead the Boston Pops Orchestra in a typical program of light music by Rimsky-Korsakov, Johann Strauss and George Gershwin, with Mr. Bernstein soloist in the "Rhapsody in Blue."

The complete programs are:

Wednesday, Aug. 10, 8:30 p. m., Theatre-Concert Hall (Chamber Music)—Beethoven: Trio in B flat, Opus 11, for Clarinet, Cello and Piano; "An die Ferne Geliebte," Six songs for Tenor and Piano; Sonata in A, Opus 69, for Cello and Piano; Trio in G, for Flute, Bassoon and Piano; Quintet in E flat, for Oboe, Clarinet, Bassoon, Horn and Piano.

Thursday, Aug. 11, "Tanglewood on Parade"—4 p. m., special performance of opera, to be announced. 6 p. m., student symphony orchestra, Music Shed; student opera, Theatre-Concert Hall; student chamber music, Chamber Music Hall. 7 p. m., picnic supper. student chorus. 8:15 p. m., Music Shed Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein, conductor: Suite from "On the Waterfront," Bernstein (first performance); "A Lincoln Portrait," Copland (narrator: Claude Rains, Boston "Pops" Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, conductor; Capriee Espagnole, Rimsky-Korsakov; Rhapsody in Blue, Gershwin (soloist, Leonard Bernstein); Suite from the ballet "Graduation Ball," Strauss-Dorati. 10:30 p. m., drawing for door prizes, Music Shed. 11:00 p. m., waltzing on the lawn.

Friday, Aug. 12, 8:30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra—Berlioz, "Symphonie Fantastique"; Debussy, "La Mer"; Ravel, "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite No. 2 (conductor, Charles Munch).

Saturday, Aug. 13, 8:30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra—Wagner, Overture to "The Flying Dutchman"; Brahms, Symphony No. 3, in F major; Debussy, three nocturnes; Strauss, Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" (conductor, Pierre Monteux).

Sunday, Aug. 14, 2:30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra—Beethoven, Overture, "Leonore," No. 3; Symphony No. 9, in D minor.

"The Virgin Queen"

"The Virgin Queen," which marks the return to the screen of Bette Davis, in a recreation of her famous characterization of Queen Elizabeth, opens in Boston, Wednesday, Aug. 17, at the Mayflower Theatre.

Lavishly produced in Cinemascope and deluxe color, the new film boasts a noteworthy cast that includes Richard Todd, as Sir Walter Raleigh, Joan Collins, Jay Robinson, Herbert Marshall, Dan O'Herlihy, Robert Douglas and Romney Brent.

New Hi-Fi Magazine

Charles Fowler, publisher of High Fidelity Magazine, announces the publication of a new monthly magazine called Audiocraft, a how-to-do-it magazine for the experimenter in home sound reproduction. First issue will be date-lined November, to be distributed immediately after Oct. 10.

Sculptures, Photographs, Paintings at Tanglewood

Carvings by Peter Abate and Canvasses by Ralph Berkowitz Seen at Lenox; Janet Appleton's Water Colors, Albert Kiesling's Oils at Mt. Park

By WAYNE C. SMITH

The principal art events of the past week at Western Massachusetts centers were the current exhibitions presented at Tanglewood, in Lenox, and at the Mountain Park Casino, Holyoke, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Valley Players as part of their contributions to the artists in other fields in the area.

Both of these two organizations have been generous and considerae in providing show windows for the work of the artists in their respective areas an din bringing to the attention of their large audiences through regular programs of exhibitions.

Paintings and Sculpture

Presented this past week in the lobby of the Casino were groups of water colors and enamels by Janet Appleton of Springfield and oils by Albert G. Kiesling of Easthampton. A group of small sculptures by Peter Abate of Brookline and photographs of music and musicians in the Berkshires by Clemens Kalischer of Stockbridge were displayed in the reception hall at the main gate of Tanglewood.

Elsewhere around Tanglewood, a group of large sculptures by Abate are placed to advangtage in the formal gardens and available to few visitors is the group of paintings by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the school, which are hung in his office in the administration building.

Three of the paintings by Berkowitz are abstract impressions or views of Venice, Italy, which he completed after returning to this country from his European tour as accompanist for Gregor Piatigorsky. From his musical training and background Berkowitz brings to his painting a commendable regard for abstract creation. The present group, however, lacks the ingenuity, vitality and freshness of vision which marked those of his paintings seen last year.

Work Familiar

Abate's work is familiar to Western Massachusetts through exhibitions of the work of Boston sculptors at the Museum of Fine Arts in Springfield and previous exhibitions at Tanglewood and the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield. Then, too, he was the creator of the memorial for Serge Koussevitzky, which is on the conductor's grave at the Church-on-the-hill in Lenox, and the life-size Vermont marble altar piece, "The Holy Family," which was installed in the new octagonal Church of the Blessed Sacrament in Holyoke last Christmas.

He will be probaby even more familiar here in the future, as he plans to open a school of sculpture at the Berkshire Museum next summer, joining in the Berkshires Ture Bengtz, a fellow teacher at the school of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, who has a school during the summer at Lenox.

Abate is a native of Salem and the son of a monument carver. He first won a scholarship to the Boston Museum School and then a scholarship which took him for three years to Mexico. He had also studied in Rome on a Prix-de-Rome and a Fulbright grant and exhibited there a number of times. Lately his works have been shown at the Metropolitan Museum in New York, the exhibition of ecclesiastical sculpture in New York, the DeCordova and Dana Museum at Lincoln and Addison Gallery, Andover.

Abate Scultures

The sculpture by Abate being displayed in the gardens includes "Gli Stateli," a family group some feet high which the artist started Italy and finished at his Brooklyn studio this year; another family group nearly as tall entitled "Architecture;" "Mankind," representing a chained man, from driftwood; and "Life," a life-size group of a man, wife and child in marble, which was shown at Tanglewood last year but has since been remodeled.

Abate's works shown this past week in the reception hall are all small pieces and includes a group of portraits of famous musicians as well as compositional works in a venturesome vein. Many of the latter are lineraly abstracted while the influence of, Rodin, through Epstein, is notable among the portraits.

At Mountain Park

Miss Appleton, who is curator of the children's department at the George Walter Vincent Smith Museum of Art, is one of the finest artists in this area and has won a number of the major prizes offered in local shows. Included in her group of water colors at the Mountain Park Casino were examples of that style of painting, which as brought her considerable recognition, in which she pictures the activities of children in a style developed from the characteristic style of children's interpretation and with a harmonious, mature representation of nature and treatment of composition.

In this style were "Shallow Pool," "Getting the Cows" and "Croquet," among the water colors, and "Stage of Childhood No. 2" and "Welsh Legend No. 2" among the enamels. Also notable in the show were "Three Gulls," which is dynamically and expertly painted, and "The Yellow Wall."

Kiesling's paintings are along more conventional lines, both as to technique and subject selection. Most favored of his oils were "Early Winter" and "Cow Resting."

Col. 4
Address: The Wall Street Journal, 44 Broad St., New York 4, New York.

INCORRECT PAGINATION

Second Thoughts in Music

Serkin and the 'Emperor' Among Tanglewood 'Best'

Fourth Week's Programs at Lenox Outstanding, 'Prayers of Kierkegaard' Introduced, Two Brahms Symphonies, His Violin Concerto Heard

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, Aug. 6—Rudolf Serkin's transcendent performance of the "Emperor" Concerto, No. 5, with the Boston Symphony orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch was the outstanding feature of the fourth week of the Berkshire Music Festival here at Tanglewood. It was a performance which drew a spontaneous ovation from a record audience of 15,500 people. No single performance since 1950, when 15,800 were in attendance, has drawn so large an audience.

Mr. Serkin was relaxed, happy and, in perfect control of his instrument. He had magnificent collaboration from Mr. Munch and the orchestra. The all-Beethoven program opened with an impressive performance of the overture to "Egmont" and concluded with a third symphony, the "Eroica."

New Music Quartet

The fourth week opened auspiciously with a recital in the Theater-Concert Hall by the New Music Quartet. They were heard in three Beethoven quartets, the Quartet in G major, Nor 2, Op. 18, Quartet in E flat major, Op. 127 and Quartet in A minor, Op. 132. While this quartet has made its name for its playing of the contemporary quartet music, it provided some very fine performances during the evening.

There was grace and lightness in the Op. 18 and impressive tone and intelligence were revealed in the Op. 127. The final quartet, a summation of the creative powers of the composer, was given a performance both cerebral and flexible. There is not yet a perfect balance of instruments, nor does it seem that there is an all out unity of thought, but the over all consensus of the performances auguers well for the future.

Mr. Munch provided a variety program for the opening concert of the week end. It featured the first Tanglewood performance of Samuel Barber's setting of "Prayers of Kierkegaard" with Leontyne Price as soprano soloist. The work is written for soprano solo, chorus and orchestra. The Festival chorus sang fluently and was at its best in the lyrical passages where words could be understood. Philosopher Kierkegaard wrote notable sentiments, and Barber's music is worthy of them. The too short soprano solo was beautifully sung by Miss Price, whose voice is one of the finest.

Two Symphonies

The concert opened with the Harty setting of Handel's "Water Music." Mr. Munch read it with rare charm and feeling. Schumann's happy fourth symphony and Brahms' equally sunny fourth symphony completed the program. The orchestra was in its best estate. On a hot day, this music made for pleasant listening.

The illness of cellist Piatagorsky necessitated several changes of programs. Instead of the Brahams' Concerto for Violin and Cello, Isaac Stern stepped in and played the Brahms concerto for violin. Stern had scored heavily when he played the Beethoven concerto for violin and he repeated his success in his illuminating performance of the Brahms. The slow movement was particularly felicitous.

Pierre Montuex was the conductor. He provided a rousing performance of Brahms' "Academic Festival Overture" and a scholarly, but very human reading of Brahms' first symphony. One hears from Mr. Monteux these days the fruits of his years of experjence and it is to be hoped that the young conductors in the audience take heed.

South Mountain Festival

For 38 summers the little Temple of Music erected by the late Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, atop South Mountain, near Pittsfield, has been the Mecca of devotees of Chamber Music. The current season opened with a concert by the New Music Quartet. New music has always featured the South Mountain concerts. Many were commissioned by Mrs. Coolidge and later by the Coolidge Foundation. Fromm Foundation and others.

The quartet was in its element. The program opened with a set of three pieces by Alfredo Casella. I think he wrote them with his tongue in his cheek. The prelude is a catastrophic wounding piece, quite devoid of melodic content. The "Notturno" is sweet and could induce sleep. The final piece is as silly as its title, "Valse Ridicule."

The worst was yet to come-and in quantities. The Fromm Music Foundation had commissioned a Quartet from Jerome Rosen. It was his first. It had all the charm of clicking, fleshless bones. It could have stopped anywhere and no one would have been the wiser. Then came a Quartet by Anton Webern which at least had the virtue of brevity. It was stark, angular and wholly unpleasant.

The New Music Quartet played these works presumably as the composers intended them to be played. They used up an enormous amount of energy. For their trouble they got what may be termed "polite" response from the audience.

Whether to point up the contrast, or to emphasize the new, the final offering was Mozart's Quartet in D major, K. 575. It fell sweetly upon the ear after what had gone before. Perhaps the emotions of the first quartets was still with the players, but they did not enhance the grace and elegance of the Mozart music. It was a routine performance.

'TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE' FEATURE THURSDAY NIGHT

Claude Rains Narrator in 'A Lincoln Portrait' By Copland

Lenox, Aug. 6—Distinguished stage, screen, radio and television Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," which will be a highlight of the gala evening concert next Thursday, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, during "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school.

The Broadway star of Sidney Kingsley's dramatic "Darkness at Noon" and of T. S. Eliot's comedy-drama "The Confidential Clerk" will make his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting, and his debut at Tanglewood in the stirring musical portrait of the Great Emancipator which was composed during the war by the noted American composer who is assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center (on leave of absence in 1955) and which was first performed by the Boston Symphony on April 9, 1943.

CLAUDE RAINS

Familiar Figure

Rains made three appearances in "A Lincoln Portrait" with the Philadelphia Orchestra, Eugene Ormandy conducting, twice in Philadelphia and once at Carnegie Hall, New York, in April, 1949. Rains is familiar to motion picture fans for featured roles in half a hundred films.

Bernstein also will include on his portion of the "Tanglewood on Parade" concert the first performance anywhere of a suite he has arranged from the music he composed for the Academy Award-winning film "On the Waterfront."

Arthur Fiedler and the celebrated Boston "Pops" Orchestra, in a program of Rimsky-Korsakov, Johann Strauss and George Gershwin, with Mr. Bernstein soloist in the "Rhapsody in Blue," will conclude the gala concert, a dividend to pratons being some of Fiedler's encores in his own inmitable style.

During the early part of "Tanglewood on Parade," patrons are invited to simultaneous demonstrations from 6-8 p. m. by all five departments—student orchestra, chorus, composition, opera and study group—of the Berkshire Music Center, and as a dividend to holders of box seats and reserved ticket patrons, there is a performance in the formal gardens by the opera department of Puccini's chort comic opera, "Gianni Schicchi."

END OF THE LINE

Minneapolis (AP) — A car roared around a corner at the edge of downtown Minneapolis, hit a curb, hurtled end over end and then skidded 200 feet on its roof. The three teen-age occupants stepped out with only minor injuries.

Moods, Emotions On Display as Maestro Monteux Rehearses

Pierre Monteux, distinguished former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, (1919-1924), who is guest conducting for his fourth consecutive summer at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, is shown rehearsing for his third and final concert of the present season. On Saturday evening he will conduct a program of Wagner (overture to "The Flying Dutchman"), Brahms (Symphony No. 3, in F minor), Debussy (Three Nocturnes), and Strauss (Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier"). Monteux, who recently celebrated his 80th birthday, will return to his conducting classes, Hancock, Maine, at the close of the Tanglewood season.

Tanglewood Topics

By WALTER ALFORD

Lenox, Aug. 6—Two young Tanglewood neighbors will be making their operatic debuts in Berkshire Music Center productions on Aug. 8 and 9, or, more accurately their debuts in opera, for their roles are non-singing. Holly McLennan, 12-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John S. McLennan, of Tyringham, plays Mary, a New England child in Louis Mennini's new opera, "The Rope," adapted from a 1917 short play by Eugene O'Neill, and George Lussier, Jr., aged 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Lussier of West St., Lenox, will appear for the first time on any stage in the two-act Mozart opera, "Zaide," which will have its American premiere, playing Osmin, son of the Sultan of Turkey.

Holly McLennan finished seventh grade in Lee public school last spring and will enter St. Agnes School in Albany in the autumn. She has been in ballet productions in the Pittsfield Community Music School staged by Nina Fonaroff, and in school performances. Her interests are pretty equally divided between horses, music and acting. Holly got the job through a recommendation to Boris Goldovsky, head of Tanglewood's opera department from her piano teacher, Helen Morgan of Stockbridge, wife of concert bass-baritone Mac Morgan.

Young George Lussier, whose parents work at Tanglewood under the supervision of grounds superintendent Ward Gaston, starts his fifth grade in Lenox School this fall, and is keen on baseball and swimming.

* * *

Student Conduction

Monday's Aug. 1 combined chorus-opera program at Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall, witnessed the debuts on the podium of two student conductors. Kalman Novak, 31, of Cambridge, who is a B. S. from Harvard (1941), conducted the orchestra of Department I (orchestra) students and chorus in the pit of students from Department II (chorus) in the Tanglewood premiere of Boris Blacher's chamber opera, "Romeo and Juliet." Mr. Novak is a graduate in piano studies from the New England Conservatory of Music, is now conductor of the Philharmonic Choir of Arlington, and teaches music at the Longy School of Music in Cambridge.

Igor Chichagov, 31, of Baltimore, Md., directed a student orchestra for Darius Milhaud's short opera "Ariana Abandoned" on the same evening. A native of Leningrad, Russia, he attended high school there until 1941, and simultaneously the Leningrad Music Conservatory. Upon coming to this country in 1951 he studied conducting and opera at the Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore, and is now conductor and music director of the Baltimore Civic Opera Company. When the famous diva Rosa Ponselle recently made new recordings ("Rosa Ponselle Sings Today"), Mr. Chichagov was her accompanist on the piano. He teaches voice privately.

Recording Contract

An important ceremony will take place at Tanglewood during the afternoon and evening festivities of "Tanglewood on Parade" on Thursday. The Boston Symphony Orchestra will sign a five-year renewal of its contract to record exclusively for RCA-Victor Records in the Berkshire Music Center's administration building. The contract will be signed jointly by Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, and Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Boston "Pops" Orchestra, with important executives of the Victor company, to be followed by a press reception and dinner at the Lenox Club.

* * *

Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and acting assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center this summer, led the student symphony orchestra in Moussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition" at the student symphony concert in the Tanglewood Music Shed on Thursday. Kenneth Schermerhorn of Schenectady conducted the orchestra in the first movement of Bruckner's seventh symphony. George Mester, of Mexico City, conducted the second and third movements of Bartok's Piano Concerto No. 3, with Susan Pearlman, of New York City, as soloist.

At "Tanglewood on Parade" the student symphony will perform in the Music Shed, from 6-7 p. m., while simultaneous performances of opera are taking place in the Theater-Concert Hall and of chamber music in the chamber music hall. The symphony program for this occasion will be Aaron Copland's "Outdoor Overture" conducted by James Yannatos, of New York City; Brahms' "Tragic Overture" conducted by Kenneth Schermerhorn; Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun," conducted by George Mester; and will conclude with the "Roman Carnival Overture" of Berlioz, conducted by Henry Janiec, Passaic, N. J.

* * *

One-Act Opera

Boris Goldovsky's Tanglewood opera department is preparing a production of Puccini's comic one-act opera, "Gianni Schicci," in English, for "Tanglewood on Parade," which will be given in the formal gardens at 4 p. m., a dividend for purchasers of boxes and reserved seats at the gala annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center.

* * *

His many friends in the Berkshires will learn with regret of the death in Boston late in July of George Fourel, viola player for many years with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who retired at the end of the 1953 season.

* * *

Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, has substituted a program of Beethoven trios, quintets, cellos sonatas and songs by six principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, tenor David Lloyd and his own piano assistance for the scheduled program of five cello sonatas he was to play with Gregor Piatigorsky for the concluding event on the Wednesday evening chamber music series at Tanglewood, Wednesday.

The six BSO first chair members are Gino Cioffi, clarinet; Samuel Mayes, cello; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; Ralph Gomberg oboe; James Stagliano, French horn. The program consists of Trio in B flat, Opus 11, for clarinet, cello and piano; "An die Ferne Geliebte" (To the distant beloved), six songs for tenor and piano; Sonata in A, Opus 69; for cello and piano; Trio in G for flute, bassoon and piano; and the Quintet in E flat for oboe, clarinet, bassoon, horn and piano.

* * *

There will be two final composers' forums before the Berkshire Music Center's activities fold for the season on Aug. 14. Normally scheduled for Sunday evenings in the Chamber Music Hall at Tanglewood, the final composers' sessions will be held on Saturday afternoon, August 6, at 3 p. m., and on Monday, Aug. 8, at 4.30 p. m.

* * *

The Tanglewood Study Group will give a demonstration for patrons of "Tanglewood on Parade", at 4 p. m. in the Barn, on Thursday, Aug. 11. The first portion of the program, baroque music, will consist of Francesco Barsanti: Concerto Grosso in D; Antonio Caldara: "Stabat Master"; P. Peuerl; "Oh Musica" H. Isaak; "Innsbruck." The feature work is the cantata by Caldara, an Italian contemporary of Bach.

The concert's secon d half is devoted to contemporary works, including Hindemith's Frau Musica, and two sections, "The Shepherd" and "Spring," from the cantata "Little Boy Lost" by Allen Sapp, who on a Samuel Wechsler commission wrote this piece especially for performance by the Tanglewood Study Group. In its entirety the Sapp cantata had its premiere at "Tanglewood on Parade" in 1953.

* * *

In the first week since the N. Y. Times, in an exclusive interview with Henry B. Cabot, president of the Board of Trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, announced the orchestra's willingness and eagerness to be the first American syamphony to perform in Moscow, there have been four editorials highly commending the proposal. Since the Howard Taubman story, also, violinist Yehudi Menuhin has stated he proposes to concertize in Russia, and Carleton Smith, of the National Music Foundation has declared it willing to sponsor exchange of artists between the Soviet Union and the U. S.

* * *

The final count for the enormous crowd which attended the Berkshire Festival concert of Saturday, July 30, a careful checking of admission stubs reveals, stands at 15,624. Only once has as audience of anything like the same proportions stormed on Tanglewood, on the final Saturday night of the 1951 season, when Charles Munch was on the podium for his first summer concerts with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the attendance was 15,800.

The program on that occasion consisted of Beethoven's Symphony No. 1, Honegger's Fifth Symphony, and the Tchaikowsky "Pathetique", with no soloist. The three Festival concerts of that 1951 weekend totaled 36,050 persons, as against the 35,301 last July 29-3-31.

* * *

John N. Burk, program annotator for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is flying to Amsterdam Thursday with his wife, for a six-week holiday, which will include the Rhineland, Paris, Heidelberg, Munich, Salzburg, Vienna, Rome, Florence, Venice, Switzerland, London. The Burks will be joined in Paris, after the Boston Symphony's Berkshire Festival closes, by their daughter Margaret, who is secretary to orchestra personnel manager Rosario Mazzeo.

* * *

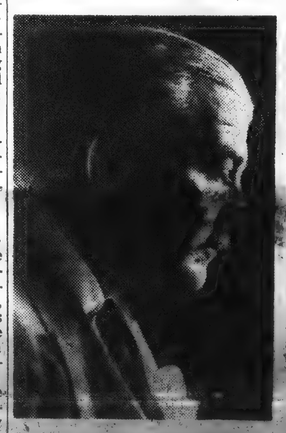
When the Boston "Pops" Orchestra comes to "Tanglewood on Parade" Thursday, it will include three players who are not regularly with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. They are pianist Leo Litwin, of Boston, a piano teacher; third trumpet Robert Mogilnicki, of New Bedford, Mass.; and Joseph Lutatsky, English horn player, of Springfield. Mogilnicki and Lutatsky, in the winter play in the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra.

Wide Variety of Programs In Final Tanglewood Week

All-Beethoven Concert Today, Chamber Music Wednesday, 'Tanglewood On Parade' Thursday With Climax of Season Next Week End

Lenox, Aug. 6—With an anticipated attendance of 130,000 at its 24 concerts—six chamber music programs by noted soloists and visiting ensembles; six chamber orchestra concerts by principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, 12 concerts by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony in the 6000-seat Music Shed—the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, concludes its 1955 schedule during the next week.

Added to the above will be an expected 10,000 at "Tanglewood on Parade", the gala annual benefit for the orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center,



ARTHUR FIEDLER

Thursday; 9000 at four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony, in aid of the orchestra's pension fund; and a predictable 40,000 at the 30-odd concerts and demonstrations by the five departments of the Berkshire Music Center, and it may be estimated that attendance records again will be shattered.

Final Concerts

The sixth and final week of Festival concerts opens with the concluding event of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, in the Theater-Concert Hall. Six principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (Gino Cioffi, clarinet; Samuel Mayes, cello; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; James Stagliano, French horn, will be assisted by David Lloyd, tenor; and Ralph Berkowitz, piano, in a program of trios, songs, a quintet and a cello sonata.

Charles Munch will conduct an all-French orchestral program, music of Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel, on the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Shed concert of Friday evening and an all-Beethoven program including the ninth symphony with soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; and augmented chorus on Sunday afternoon (Aug. 14). Pierre Monteux will conduct the Saturday evening program, comprising Wagner, Brahms, Debussy and Strauss.

Mr. Munch's concluding concert will be his fifth all-Beethoven program of the summer. With guest conductors Monteux and Leonard Bernstein also performing Beethoven on their concerts, Tanglewood in 1955 will have been largely devoted to the music of the German composer. All nine symphonies, the "Missa Solemnis", "Fidelio", Act II, two piano concertos, the violin concerto, a number of overtures, and a great body of chamber music has been performed.

"Tanglewood On Parade

Weekending music lovers are invited to subscribe to "Tanglewood on Parade" on Thursday. The annual benefit for the orchestra's music school, now completing its 13th session, which provides opportunity for ensemble performance and musical instruction under expert musicians for some 400 students from 38 states and 18 foreign countries, is from 6 to 11 p. m.

It will commence with demonstrations by all departments: student symphony orchestra, chamber music, chorus and opera, followed by a gala concert in the Music Shed and concluding with the drawing of door prizes and waltzing on the lawn. Leonard Bernstein, who heads the school's department of orchestra and conducting, and himself a student in the Berkshire Music Center's first years (1940 and 1941), will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the premiere performance of a suite he has arranged from his score for the Academy Award-winning film, "On the Waterfront", also Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait".

Arthur Fiedler will lead the Boston "Pops" Orchestra in a typical program of light music by Rimsky-Korsakov, Johann Strauss and George Gershwin, with Mr. Bernstein soloist in the "Rhapsody in Blue".

The complete programs are:

Wed., Aug. 10, 8.30 p. m., Theater-Concert Hall — Chamber Music: Program of Beethoven trios, quintets, cello sonatas and songs by 6 principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with David Lloyd, tenor; Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

Thurs., Aug. 11, "Tanglewood on Parade": 4.00 p. m., Special performance of opera, to be announced, formal gardens for reserved seat and box patrons only. 6.00 p. m., Student symphony orchestra, Music Shed, Student opera, Theater - Concert Hall, Student chamber music, Chamber Music Hall; 7.00 p. m., Picnic Supper, Student Chorus—Porch Administration Bldg. 8.15 p. m., Music Shed: Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein, Conductor: Suite from "On the Waterfront", Bernstein (First performance) "A Lincoln Portrait", Copland (Narrator to be announced). Boston "Pops" Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, Conductor: Caprice Espagnole, Rimsky Korsakov, Rhapsody in Blue, Gershwin, Soloist: Leonard Bernstein; Suite from the ballet "Graduation Ball", Strauss-Dorati, 10.30 p. m., Drawing for Door Prizes, Music Shed; 11.00 p. m., Waltzing on the Lawn—by the Administration Bldg.

Fri., Aug. 12, 8.30 p. m., Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra: Berlioz: "Symphonie Fantastique", Debussy: "La Mer", Ravel: "Daphnis and Chloe", Suite No. 2, Conductor, Charles Munch.

Sat., Aug. 13, 8.30 p. m., Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra: Wagner: Overture to "The Flying Dutchman", Brahms: Symphony No. 3, in F major, Debussy: Three nocturnes; Clouds, Festivals, Sirens (with female voices of the Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center, trained by Iva D. Hiatt) Strauss: Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier", Conductor: Pierre Monteux.

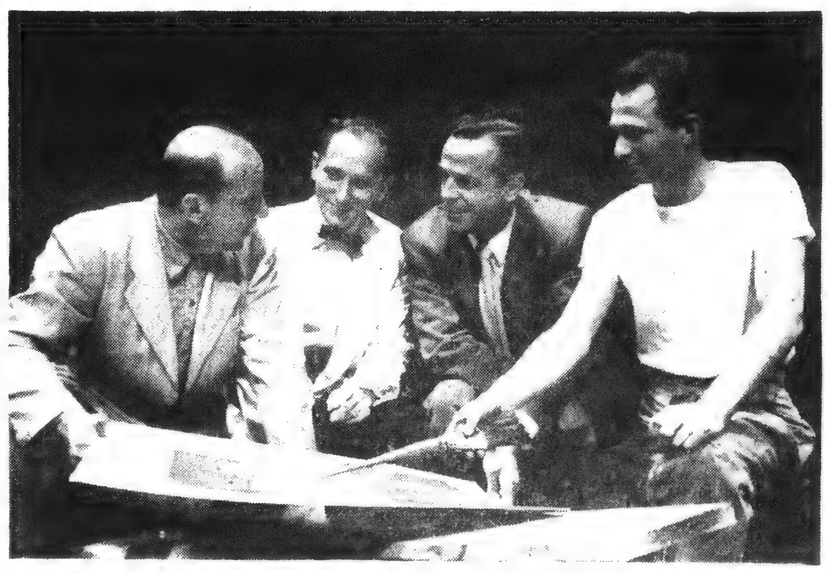
Sun., Aug. 14, 2.30 p. m., Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra: Beethoven: Overture, "Leonore", No. 3, Symphony No. 9, in D minor, Soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass. Combined chorus of Berkshire Music Center students and Chorus of Springfield Symphony Orchestra, trained by Hugh Ross and John Krueger. Conductor, Charles Munch.

Tomorrow afternoon, Charles Munch will conduct another all-Beethoven program: Symphony No. 8 in F major: Piano Concerto No. 4, in G major, Eugene Istomin, soloist: Symphony No. 5 in C minor.

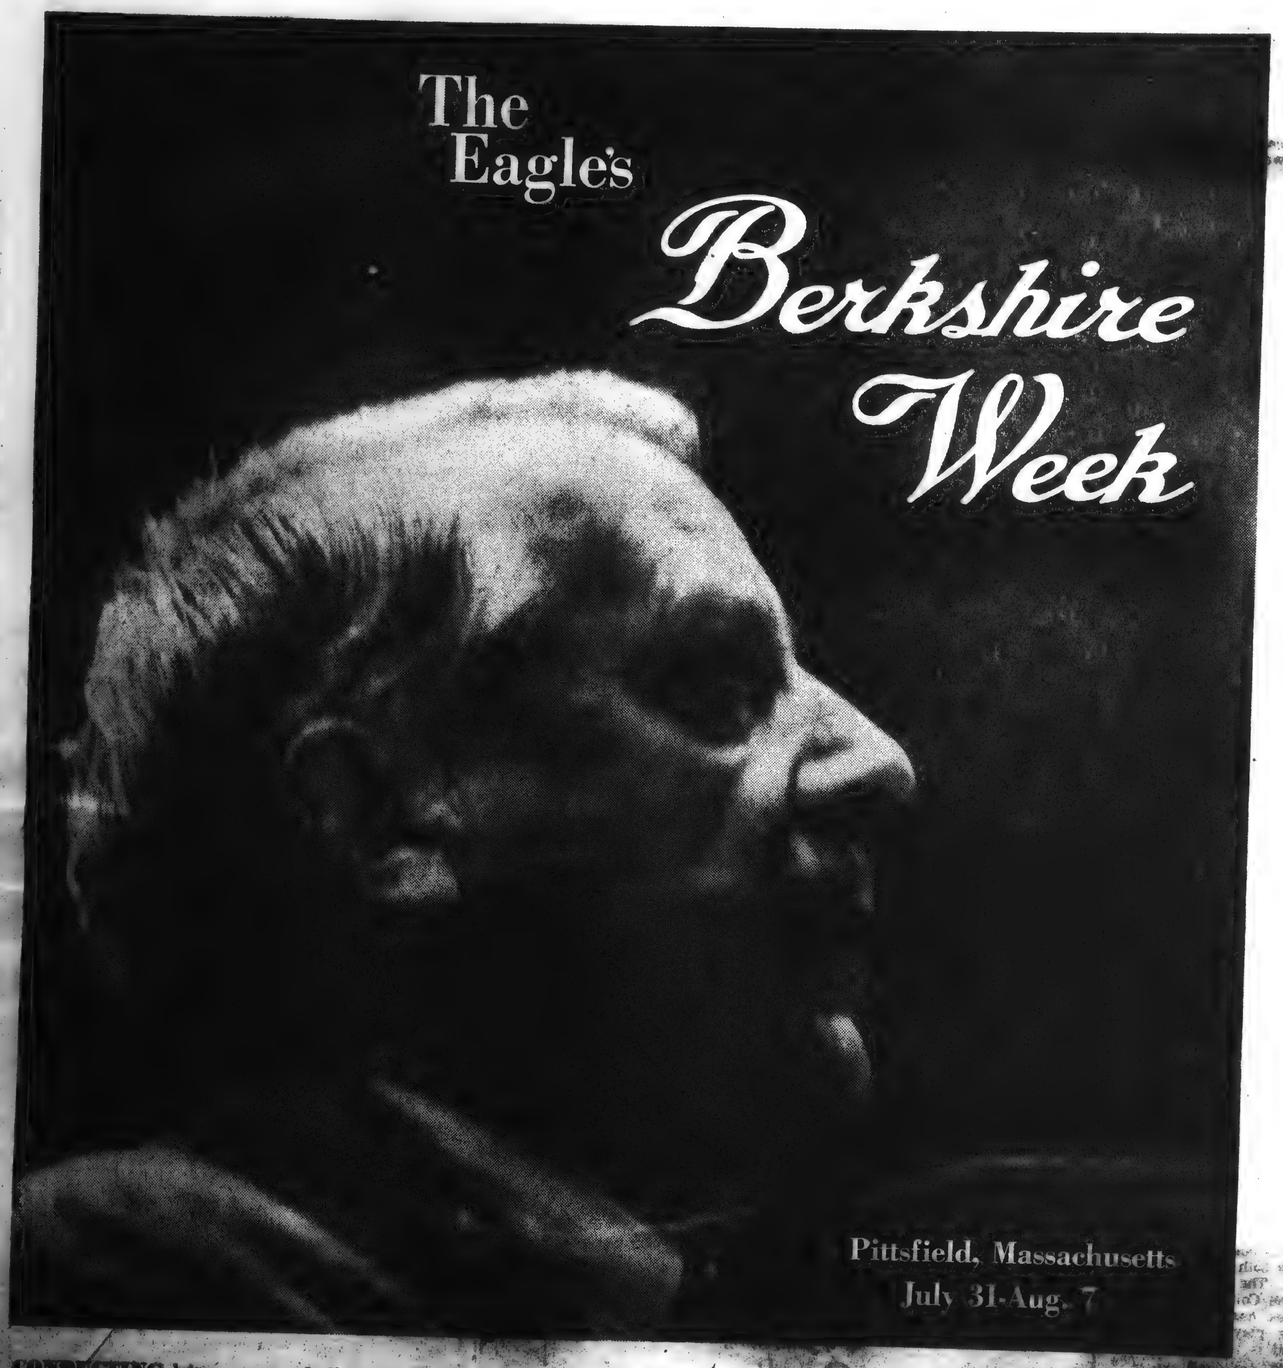
WORLD CONVENTION

Toronto, July 3- (AP) The fifth world convention of the Churches of Christ here Aug. 16-21 is expected to bring nearly 12,000 church and state dignitaries from 32 countries. The theme is "Our Commitment - a Christian world."

Prepare for New Opera at Tanglewood

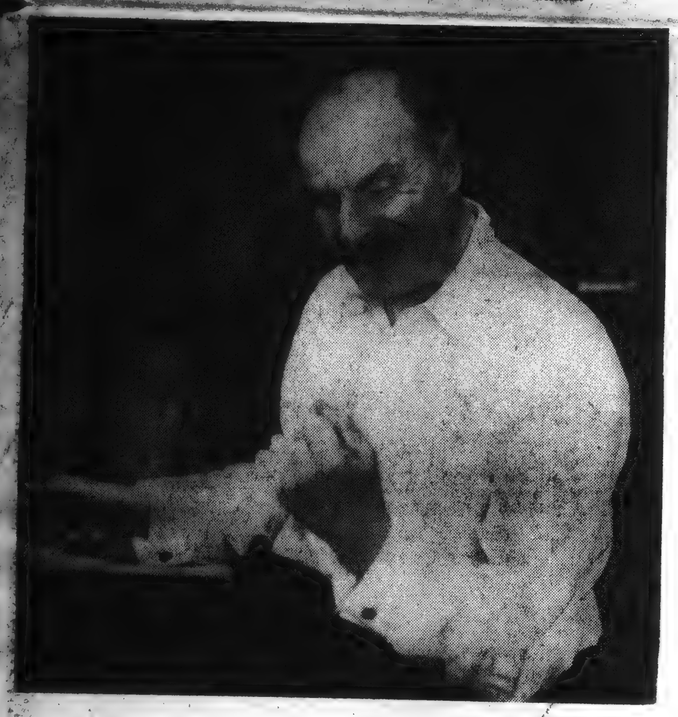


"The Rope," a one-act opera by Louis Mennini, of the Eastman School of Music faculty, will be given its world premiere by students of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, tomorrow and Tuesday nights, in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood. Left to right, Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department, who staged "The Rope;" Henry Janiec, who will conduct the student orchestra; Louis Mennini, composer, and David Hays, who designed the sets and lighted the production. "The Rope" is based on Eugene O'Neill's one-act play of the same name.



TEACHING at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, employs the high talents of first-chair men of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Richard Burgin (above), concertmaster, leads a string quartet in a chamber-music class. Gino Cioffi (below), first clarinetist, discusses intricate fingering.

CONDUCTING brings moments both prayerful and dynamic in rehearsal as well as at concert time. Charles Munch (above) turns his eyes upward in a Boston Symphony Orchestra rehearsal. Hugh Ross (below) leading the Music Festival chorus in a rehearsal of Beethoven's Missa Solemnis, gestures violently to create a staccato attack.



MUSICIANS
At Work

Photos and Text by Gus Manos

A MUSICIAN AT WORK is a wonderful thing to see, for he is at once a man devoted and engrossed. In the dressing room he is alone and meditative. On the podium he is dynamic and inspiring. In the classroom he is demanding and patient.

When the music begins, the musician loses all his inhibitions. For him there is nothing else in the world but the music. He can pour himself into the beautiful sounds and forget that the world is watching him, but his face reflects his feeling. Because of his devotion to the art he practices daily, he is also a ready teacher to those who come to learn.

At Tanglewood, where these photographs were made in classes and at rehearsals, the musicians have settled down into the second half of their rigorous summer schedule. For those who work close to Tanglewood daily there is high inspiration in seeing these devoted men at work.

SHUSHING the student orchestra at Tanglewood, conductor Leonard Bernstein gestures up a pianissimo with both his hands.

RESTING after a BSO performance, Pierre Monteux sits alone in the dressing room with fan, ice, Coke to help cool off.

Verner

PHOTOGRAPHER Gus Manos at 20 is the youngest full-time photographer ever employed by the Tanglewood publicity department. A senior at the University of South Carolina, he is spending his second summer at Tanglewood. Photographing musicians comes naturally to him since he is a flute player both at college and with the Columbia Symphony Orchestra in his home town. His free-lance camera career began at the age of 16 at the Brevard Music Festival in North Carolina, where he spent three summers taking publicity pictures. A 35 mm specialist, he has four Leicas, the only type of camera which he uses.

PLAYING the piano for young composers who surround him, Roger Sessions runs through one of his recent scores during a class at the Berkshire Music Center.

'46

Music: 'Missa Solemnis'

Vigorous Performance Is Led by Bernstein

By ROSS PARMENTER
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 5—Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis," which Serge Koussevitzky was to have conducted at the Berkshire Festival in 1951, was performed in his memory here tonight. It was led by Leonard Bernstein, one of the most gifted of the young musicians who studied under Koussevitzky during the years that the conductor was the leading spirit of the festival.

This was the second "Missa Solemnis" that Mr. Bernstein has led at Tanglewood; he took over the 1951 performance when Koussevitzky's death in the spring of that year ended his career before the festival opened. That earlier performance, too, was a memorial for the conductor.

•

Mr. Bernstein led the work tonight in a manner that was a fitting tribute to such a fiery conductor. He did not approach the occasion as one on which to be piously sedate. Instead, he led the monumental work with all the force and intensity of his being, and the performance was a vigorous, tingling one that also was often very sweetly expressive.

The concert was in the shed, and besides the full Boston Symphony Orchestra and an organ, played by Willem Friso Frank, there were four soloists and a chorus of 150 young men and women who were ranged in five tiers across the width of the stage.

The soloists were Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor, and Mac Morgan, bass. They are all capable singers with voices of sufficient power for such a work, and they sustained the good impressions they have made in other Tanglewood appearances.

As in the 1951 performance, the soloists were unconventionally placed at the back of the chorus, but because of the sound reflector at their backs their voices carried through the great girder-supported enclosure that fanned out in front of them. The voice of Miss Addison floated out with especial clarity and purity.

•

Beethoven's major setting of the Roman Catholic mass is one that some believe is overly dramatic for a liturgical work. At his performance four years ago, Mr. Bernstein conducted the closing pages with a fine feeling for their beatific quality. But there was a tendency on his part to overdo the theatrics of the Kyrie, Gloria and Credo.

•

What struck one tonight was that, although he still conducted dramatically, he managed to infuse everything with a bigness of spirit that swept away all such reservations. This performance had more depth and grandeur.

The chorus gave him all he asked for in masses of sonority, but it also sang etherealjy when need be. The Boston orchestra gave the singers wonderful support.

A rainfall that dampened the lawns for an hour before the concert kept down the number of peripheral listeners. Even so, there was an audience of 6,800, which meant that nearly all the seats were taken; and there was an overflow on the grass.

Leonard Bernstein

—Sat., Aug. 6, 1955 ★ New York Journal-American

At Tanglewood:

Bernstein Hails Koussevitzky

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS., Aug. 6.—In memory of Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the Berkshire music center, Leonard Bernstein conducted the performance of Beethoven's "Missa Solemniz" given by the Boston Symphony in the music shed last night.

It was most fitting that he do this as Koussevitzky's most noted disciple, and he did honor to his master's memory through the fervor of his presentation as he did four years ago in similar observance.

That this most difficult work of Beethoven eludes Bernstein became apparent early in the performance. He is admirable in controlling the forces at his command and injecting vitality into the music but in growing too energetic and not sustaining the slower movements, he did not make the performance mesh as a whole.

It sounded peculiarly detached even though he did the "Benedictus" and "Agnus Die" reverently. Some reservations amounted to a matter of tempo, others of just not penetrating to the true meaning of the work.

What he asked of the chorus, soloists, and orchestra they gave ardently. The festival chorus, splendidly prepared by Hugh Ross, gave an exceptional account of itself. It was almost too responsive to Bernstein's direction.

Of the soloists, Adele Addison distinguished herself for purity and accuracy of note where the demands on a soprano are beyond reason. Few singers on this part have equaled her performance. Eunice Alberts, contralto, and Mac Morgan, bass, came through notably in the "Agnus Dei." David Lloyd, tenor, held his own well in this company. Incidentally, these soloists had all attended the Berkshire music center at Tanglewood.

Rain before the concert kept attendance down to 6,800 people.

Boston S. Post 8/7

Donald Gramm, bass, will sing as soloist with the Boston Symphony next Sunday, Aug. 14, at the Berkshire Festival.

Boston Sun. Post 8/7

Music Notes

An all star cast will be heard in "Tanglewood on Parade" this Thursday at the Berkshire Festival in Lenox, Mass. Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Boston Symphony in the first performance of his suite from "On the Waterfront" and Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait" with Claude Rains as narrator. Arthur Fiedler and the Boston "Pops" will have Mr. Bernstein as soloist in Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." Another feature is the performance, under Boris Goldovsky's direction, of Puccini's comic opera "Gianni Schicchi." "Tanglewood on Parade" is an annual event for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Centre.

World Premiere of "The Rope"

"The Rope," an opera in one act based on the play by Eugene O'Neill, will receive its world premiere tomorrow night in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Louis Mennini, of the faculty of the Eastman School of Music, is the composer.

THEATRE ON THE GREEN
New England's Outdoor Theatre
GROUP 20 PLAYERS
NOW THROUGH AUGUST 14th
"Extraordinarily good performance of a rare comedy."—Post
LOVE FOR LOVE
Indoor Theatre in Case of Rain
Curtain 8:40 Res. WE 5-6630
Tickets: $2.75, 2.20, 1.90, 1.65, 1.10, 90c
Wellesley, Mass., just off Worcester Pike

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett [illegible]

'Missa Solemnis' at Tanglewood

Tanglewood Lenox, Mass., Aug. 6—Beethoven's solemn "Missa Solemnis," which hasn't been performed here in the music shed at Tanglewood since the 1951 season, opened the Berkshire Festival's week-end of orchestral concerts Friday night. Leonard Bernstein was on the podium.

Given in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, who had scheduled it prior to his death in June of '51, the "intense," devotional score, big in dimensions, was a fitting choice for such a commemorative program. Unfortunately, several aspects of Bernstein's approach in projecting the inspirational and spiritual aspects of the music left much to be desired.

The gifted young conductor was obviously sincere, and determined in his wish to amalgamate the Boston Symphony, the Berkshire Festival Chorus and the soloists into a vital unit of re-creation.

At times he seemed to be almost frantic in his efforts. The result was that his jitterbugging motions, combined with his whipped up tempi in such sections as the "Peni Sunt Coeli" of the "Sanctus," made it appear that he was leading a jazz concert.

Misguided In Conception

Though he has conducted the work before, and must know it thoroughly, Bernstein is, in my opinion, misguided in his conception of the music. The inner vitality of this great score cannot be projected through an internal drive that combines tension with lack of comprehension.

To push the fast sections so fast that the rhythmic content is blurred and the words impossible to sing clearly is to miss the point completely of the purpose of a "Missa Solemnis," whether it is sung in concert or in church.

With his tremendous gifts and extended experience, Bernstein, it would seem, should live more quietly and more contemplatively with this music. The result, I would predict, would be a performance exhibiting more control and depth of perception.

The chorus, under the direction of Hugh Ross, had been excellently prepared, and sang with beauty of tone and fervor. Of the soloists, Adele Addison, soprano, was outstanding in her achieving ease and a continuous purity of tone in the difficult portion assigned to her. She sang the soprano solo part, which lies so high it is almost never sung as she did it, as if it were a pleasure to stay so long on a precipice. Though Eunice Alberts, contralto, had much less of importance to sing, she negotiated her role well and was vocally impressive in the Agnus Dei. David Lloyd was the tenor, and Mac Morgan the bass. In the Benedictus, Richard Burgin, concertmaster, who played the instrumental solo, was only adequate to his task.

Heat-suffering music lovers should note that Tanglewood was cool Friday night, and that Charles Munch conducts an all-Beethoven program Sunday at 2:30.

33 NEW YORK POST, SUNDAY, AUGUST 7, 1955

CLAUDE RAINS AT TANGLEWOOD DURING NEXT WEEK

The distinguished stage, screen, radio and television star, Claude Rains, will narrate Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," which will be a highlight of the gala evening concert Thursday, Aug. 11, in the music shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., during "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire music center, the Boston symphony orchestra's summer

The Broadway star of Sidney Kingsley's dramatic "Darkness At Noon" and of T. S. Eliot's comedy drama "The Confidential Clerk" will make his first appearance with the Boston symphony orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting, and his debut at Tanglewood in the stirring musical portrait of the Great Emancipator, which was composed during the war by Mr. Copland, the noted American composer who is assistant director of the Berkshire music center (on leave of absence in 1955) and which was first performed by the Boston symphony April 9, 1942. Mr. Rains made three appearances in "A Lincoln Portrait" with the Philadelphia orchestra, Eugene Ormandy conducting, twice in Philadelphia and once at Carnegie hall, New York in April, 1949.

FINE EXHIBIT BEING ARRANGED AT TANGLEWOOD

An exhibition of sculpture and drawing by Miss Franc Epping of Lenox, Mass., arranged through the courtesy of the Berkshire museum, Pittsfield, and its director, Stuart C. Henry, and photographs of Tanglewood and the American south by Gus Manos, official photographer at Tanglewood, are on display during the coming week, from Saturday through the conclusion of the Berkshire festival, Sunday, Aug. 14, in the glassed reception room at the main gate at Tanglewood, in conjunction with the concerts of the Boston symphony orchestra at Lenox.

A private teacher in Lenox, and director of the sculpture workshop, Miss Epping is responsible for the annual outdoor exhibit of Berkshire sculpture in the Lenox library garden, having its fifth annual showing. This is Miss Epping's second Tanglewood showing.

Miss Epping's sculpture at Tanglewood include "The Musician," in walnut; "The Swimmer," in walnut; "Bereft," in mahogany; "Young David," in walnut; "The [illegible]," in bronze; three [illegible] a composite photo [illegible] piece entitled "Profile," modeled from soapstone, recently shown at the Sculptors' guild outdoor show in New York city.

World Premiere Of Famous Opera At Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 5 — An opera by an Erie, Pa., born composer will receive its world premier at Berkshire festival Monday, it was announced today.

Louis Mennini's "The Rope," based on the one-act play by Eugene O'Neil, will be given two performances.

Mennini, 34, now is a member of the faculty of the Eastman school of music in Rochester, N. Y.

BOSTON SYMPHONY PLANS PROGRAM OF HIGH ORDER

With concerts tonight at 8:30 o'clock and tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, the Berkshire festival by the Boston symphony orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its final weekend but one. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston symphony orchestra, will conduct both concerts.

The program this evening will be devoted to excerpts from two of the greatest operas in the literature, Beethoven's "Fidelio" and Wagner's "Die Gotterdammerung." With Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd and Mac Morgan as the principal soloists, and the Berkshire festival chorus trained by John Krueger, the first half of the program will consist of a concert presentation of the second act of "Fidelio," a Tanglewood first performance. After the intermission, three excerpts from "Die Gotterdammerung" will be heard: Siegfried's "Rhine Journey," Siegfried's "Death Music," and the immolation scene in which Miss Harshaw will sing "Brunnhilde."

Miss Harshaw joined the Metropolitan Opera Co. as a contralto in the 1942 season and made her debut in the role of Gudrune. After singing contralto roles to great acclaim for a decade, she sang the soprano role of "Senta" in the Metropolitan's new production of Wagner's "The Flying Dutchman" in 1951. Ever since she has been recognized as one of the outstanding Wagnerian sopranos of the time and is especially famous for her portrayal of Brunnhilde in "Die Gotterdammerung." She sang the immolation scene with the Boston symphony orchestra under Mr. Munch in Boston last winter and the season before, and also at Tanglewood under Pierre Monteux during the 1952 Berkshire festival.

FIFTH CONCERT OF CHAMBER MUSIC AT TANGLEWOOD

Tonight at 8:30 o'clock the fifth concert in this season's series of Wednesday evening chamber music programs will be given in the Theater-Concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., as part of the 1955 Berkshire festival. Rudolph Serkin, the eminent painist who made his Tanglewood debut earlier this season, will play three piano sonatas by Beethoven, the Sonata in F Major, Opus 10, No. 2; the Sonata in C Major, Opus 53, called the "Waldstein" Sonata; and the Sonata in B Flat, Opus 106, the "Hammerklavier" Sonata.

Mr. Serkin made his American debut 29 years ago with Arturo Toscanini and the Philharmonic Symphony orchestra of New York. Ever since he has been one of the most popular and distinguished concert artists in the United States. He has played with all the major orchestras in the world and in recent years has made an annual journey to the small French village of Prades to participate in festival performances with the great 'cellist, Pablo Casals. He is especially renowned as a Beethoven interpreter.

Remaining tickets for tonight's concert, as well as the six remaining ones by the Boston Symphony orchestra in the 1955 Berkshire festival, which ends Aug. 14, are on sale at the Tanglewood box office.

WIFE OF WINSTED MAN SINGING AT TANGLEWOOD

Talented Mrs. Scimonelli Has Performed In Four Major Roles At Famed Music Center

Natalie Scimonelli, wife of Frank Scimonelli, cornet and English post horn soloist of the United States navy band, and daughter-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Scimonelli of 10 Thibault avenue, this city, is a student at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. Mrs. Scimonelli is one of the 60 students in the opera department who were chosen from over 400 auditionists from every part of the country, South America, Europe, Japan, Puerto Rico and the Hawaiian islands. Since her arrival July 1, she has performed in four major roles, and she was also one of the 20 students of the opera department to be chosen to appear with the festival chorus under High Ross of the scholar cantorum of New York city for the Vivaldi "Gloria," under Charles Munch and the Boston symphony orchestra in "The Prayers of Kierkegaard," which was performed last Friday night. Friday night, this week, she will perform under Leonard Bernstein and the symphony in Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis."

Mrs. Scimonelli is one of Washington, D. C.'s most active singers. She has appeared in recitals, operas and as soloist for many of the top activities in Washington. She is also a full-time music student at the Catholic university of America, and is teacher of Gregorian chant for the chapel choirs of the marine and naval corps in Washington and Arlington, Va. After leaving Tanglewood within the next week, Mrs. Scimonelli hopes to fill a singing engagement with the United States air force band at the Watergate in Washington, D. C., and then join her four sons who have been with their maternal grandparents in Cape Cod, Mass. Frank Scimonelli will be flying to Toronto, Ontario, with the navy band to be soloist at the Canadian national exhibition.

Millbrook Round Table

Berkshire Soloist

EUGENE ISTOMIN, the celebrated pianist, will be soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, in a performance of Beethoven's Concerto No. 4, in G major, at the Berkshire Festival concert of Sun. afternoon August 7 (Music Shed, Tanglewood, 2:30 p.m.)

Fiedler, Bernstein in 'Tanglewood' Parade

During the coming week the 1955 season at Tanglewood, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be concluded. This, the 15th and final season of the Berkshire Music Festival, consists of concerts this afternoon in the Shed by the Boston Symphony under direction of Charles Munch and all Beethoven program. Eugene Istomin, pianist, will [illegible] with orchestra in the Fourth concerto in G Major. Symphonic selections the Symphony No. 8 in F Major and the Symphony No. 5 in C Minor. Last night there was a first performance, in "Tanglewood" of the second act of Beethoven's "Fidelio" with Margaret Harshaw, Mac Morgan, David Lloyd, Christina

This date in music: 1829. Mendelssohn visited Fingal's Cave in the Hebrides Islands and wrote 20 bars of the music for his "Fingal's Cave" overture.

Cardullo, Malcolm Bernstein and Arthur Scopp in the cast. The program, Charles Munch conducting, also included excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung," with Miss Harshaw, soloist.

Next [illegible] will be "Tanglewood on Parade," that [illegible] has attracted many [illegible] the late afternoon and evening music and attendant festivities, including [illegible] on the lawn. The occasion is the benefit for Berkshire Music Center, with the "Center in Operation"—simultaneous sessions of each department. The Orchestra will play in the Shed and there will be opera in the Theater-Concert Hall. All are invited to bring a picnic supper and to make use of the buffet and refreshment carts. A concert is scheduled by The Chorus at 7 p.m. on the Porch of the Main House.

The Gala Concert in The Shed comprises selections by both the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting, and the Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler conducting. This marks the second season on which the "Pops" has played in "Tanglewood." The Symphonic selections: Bernstein's Suite, "On the Waterfront" (a first performance) and Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait." The "Pops" concert, a typical Fiedler program will have Leonard Bernstein as pianist in the Gershwin "Rhapsody in Blue" with orchestra. The Rimsky-Korsakov "Caprice Espagnole" and Antal Dorati's arrangement of the Suite from Strauss' Ballet "Graduation Ball," also are included.

The Wednesday Night Series of Chamber [illegible] the Theater-Concert [illegible] Aug. 10 when six principals of the Boston Symphony will be assisted by David Lloyd, tenor, and Ralph Berkowitz, piano, in Beethoven compositions. An all-French symphonic concert; music of Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel, is announced for next Friday night, and an all-Beethoven program next Sunday afternoon, Aug. 14, Charles Munch conducting. Next Saturday night, Pierre Monteux will conduct the Orchestra in Wagner, Brahms, Debussy and Strauss works. The Beethoven Ninth, to be performed with soloists, and an augmented chorus Aug. 14 will be Conductor Munch's fifth all-Beethoven concert of the summer. The soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

Fiedler, Boston "Pops" in "Tanglewood on Parade" Thursday, August 11th

Tanglewood will be on Parade Thursday, August 11. The gala day's activities, from 6:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, an evening concert, followed by drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn. This is the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center.

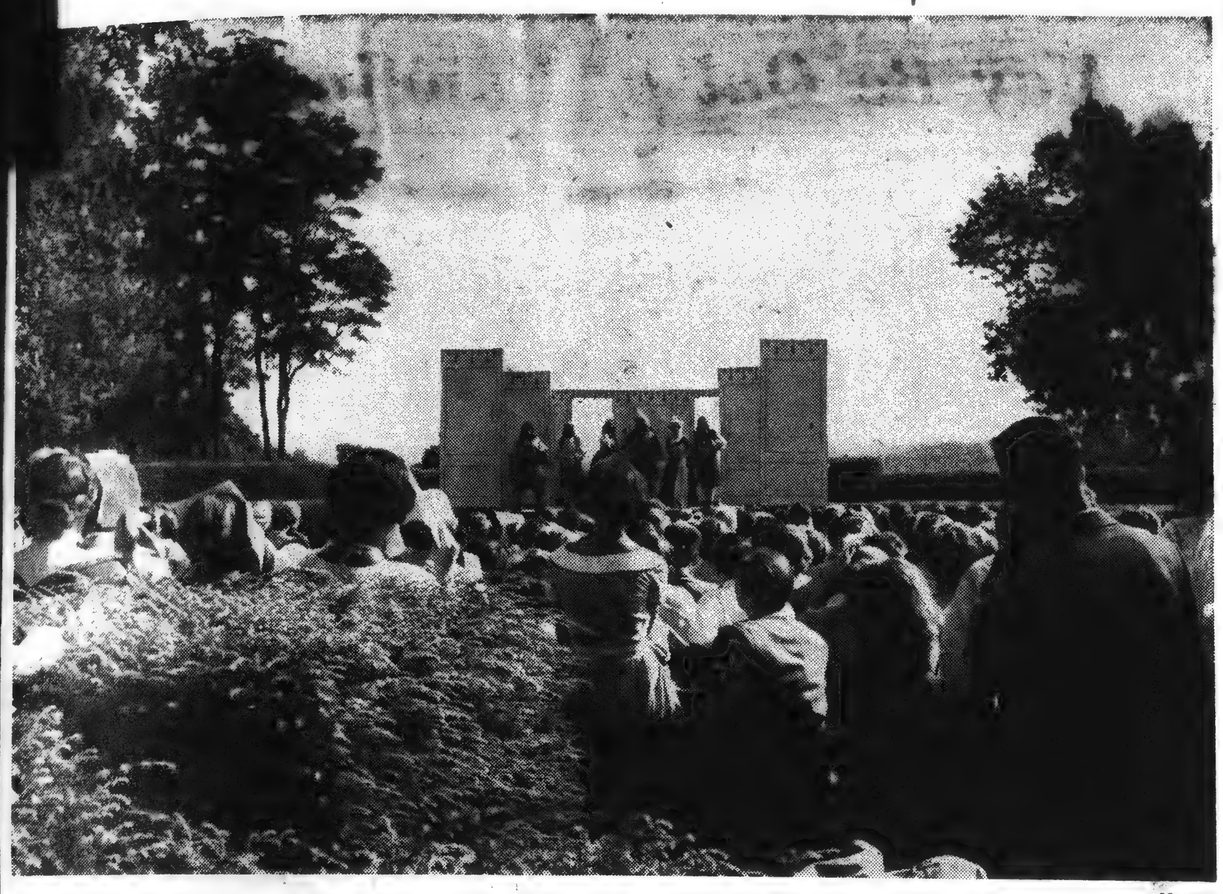
The Boston "Pops" Orchestra, with Arthur Fielder, its celebrated conductor for 26 years, on the podium, will perform a typical "Pops" program, as it did in 1954 when it made its first appearance in Tanglewood's 6,000-seat Music Shed. Through its annual seasons in Symphony Hall and at the Esplanade concerts on the Charles River mall in Boston, its extensive tours, and the mediums of recordings, radio and television, probably more people have heard the "Pops" and Arthur Fielder than any other orchestra or conductor in history.

The first half of the concert program in the Shed will be given at 8:15 p.m. by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's orchestra and conducting departments. Mr. Bernstein will conduct the first performance anywhere of a suite he has arranged from the music he composed for the film, "On the Waterfront," which won the 1955 Academy Award. Also on this portion of the program will be "A Lincoln Portrait" by Aaron Copland, the distinguished American composer who is assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center.

Leonard Bernstein, noted equally as composer, conductor and concert pianist, will be soloist with the Boston "Pops" in George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." Mr. Fielder's program will also include the "Caprice Espagnole" of Rimsky-Korsakov and the suite of Johann Strauss dances from the ballet "Graduation Ball" as arranged by Antal Dorati. A number of encores in typical light popular "Pops" vein will follow.

Seats for "Tanglewood On Parade" are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office, and may be reserved by telephone to Lenox (Mass.) 600. A special added attraction for purchasers of box seats, and front sections (reserved) of the great Music Shed, is a performance of opera at 4:00 p.m. in the formal gardens. General admission tickets, will entitle the holders to seats in the Shed's rear sections. All ticket-holders are invited to attend the demonstrations, at 6:00 p.m., by the Berkshire Music Centers symphony orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera departments and by the Tanglewood Study Group.

Berkshire Eagle 8/5



Mattos

PUCCINI'S ONE ACT OPERA, "Gianni Schicchi," is being prepared in the formal gardens at Tanglewood by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, under the direction of Boris Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell, with scenery and costumes by Laura Zirner. The comic opera will be given Aug. 11 at 4 p.m. in the gardens as a dividend for purchasers of box seats and reserved seats for Tanglewood on Parade.

Public Events

Tonight

8:30—Berkshire Festival concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra. Leonard Bernstein conducting Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, with soloists. Tanglewood Music Shed, Lenox.

8:40—"Tovarich." Williamstown summer theater.

8:45—"Edward, My Son." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

8:45—"The Caine Mutiny Court Martial." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

9:00—City observatory open. Springside Park.

9:00—Jacob's Pillow dance festival, featuring Mia Slavenska and Andreano Vitale, Birgit Akesson, Josefina Garcia, the Dance Drama Co. and Emily Frankel and Mark Ryder. East of Lee.

Tomorrow

9:30 a.m.—Opening of fifth annual horse show, sponsored by Kiwanis Club and Pittsfield Riding & Polo Assn., benefit Camp Witawentin. Polo Asst. grounds, Holmes Road.

10:00 a.m.—Public rehearsal of Boston Symphony Orchestra for benefit of BSO pension fund. Tanglewood Music Shed.

2:30 p.m.—"Edward, My Son." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

2:30 p.m.—"The Caine Mutiny Court Martial." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

2:40 p.m.—"Tovarich." Williamstown summer theater.

3:00 p.m.—Composers' forum. Tanglewood chamber music hall, Lenox.

Fifth Week of Berkshire Concerts

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its semi-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with the fifth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three piano sonatas performed by Rudolph Serkin, on August 3 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Beethoven and Wagner provide the fare for the three weekend concerts in the huge Music Shed. Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the three concerts, on Saturday evening (August 6) and Sunday afternoon (August 7,) and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the department of orchestra and conducting of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, The Berkshire Music Center, takes the podium on Friday evening (August 5.)

Mr. Bernstein, who came to Tanglewood as a student conductor in 1940 and 1941, then began his long association with the Berkshire music school in 1942 as assistant to the orchestra's late conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will conduct Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" on Friday evening as a memorial to his patron. The evening-long orchestral and choral work was similarly performed at Tanglewood under Mr. Bernstein's baton two summers ago.

Mr. Munch's Saturday evening program will commence with a first Tanglewood performance of Beethoven's opera "Fidelio," Act II, with the Festival Chorus trained by John Krueger of the Youngstown, Ohio, Philharmonic and Chorus, a Berkshire Music Center chorus faculty member this summer.

The Sunday afternoon concert Mr. Munch will devote to Beethoven, whose music is a feature of the 1955 Berkshire Festival, with Eugene Istomin, pianist, making his debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra as soloist in the Concerto No. 4.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

Tanglewood Tales

The program for the composers' forum, under the supervision of Department III of the Berkshire Music Center tomorrow at 3 p.m. in the Chamber Music Hall was announced today. It follows:

String Quartet ... George Sicilianos
Hisashi Hatoyama, violin
Elizabeth Roche, violin
Jean Comstock, viola
Albert Battila, violoncello

Sonata for Violin and Piano ... George Wilson
Joseph Petronaolo, viola,
George Gramas, piano

INTERMISSION

String Quartet ... William Sydeman
Edward Pilzanowicz, violin
Pandora Hopkins, violin
Midhat Serbagi, viola
Mary Ann McClelland, violoncello

Five Songs for Soprano, Flute, Clarinet, Bassoon and Violoncello ... Michiko Toyama
Mary Jane Paul, soprano
Pollee Slimm, flute
Janet Sillars, flute
John Pandolfi, clarinet
Beatrice Messina, bassoon
David Spinks, violoncello

Istomin Plays at Berkshire Festival

By HARRIETT JOHNSON

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 8—Accompanied by rain and thunder in addition to the Boston Symphony, Eugene Istomin played a performance of the Beethoven Fourth Piano Concerto yesterday afternoon at Tanglewood that was the high point of the week-end's concerts.

From a standpoint of sympathetic mood, the Fourth is the least suited of the five piano concertos to the dynamism of the elements. There were times when the downpour and the roar were far louder than the beauty of Istomin's tone as he played with searching thoughtfulness the contemplative score.

His power of projection, however, was too penetrating to lose its vitality despite the competition. A contributing factor to the success of the performance was his fluid tone linked with a sensitivity of phrasing that never for an instant relinquished its intensity of communication to mere virtuosity.

Though the Baldwin Piano is the official instrument of the Boston Symphony, Istomin played a Steinway, a fact which should be noted inasmuch as no credit was given in the program.

The young artist played the opening theme, which begins minus the orchestra and starts off the concerto, with such poise and introspection he might have been Laurence Olivier in the midst of the poetry of "Hamlet."

Though the rain sent those of the 9,800 audience who had chosen to sit outside on blankets scurrying to cover, as Charles Munch began the joyous strains of Beethoven's Eighth Symphony the audience was still cheerful at intermission.

The lawn of the Tanglewood Estate, home of the concerts, has been parched for weeks due to the summer's consistently high temperatures. Rain appeared to be welcome to everybody and people outside found cover under trees or at the back of the hall if they wanted it. One wet enthusiast told me at intermission that he got soaked and enjoyed the novelty of the sensation as much as the music. The all-Beethoven program closed with the Fifth Symphony.

Music Tonight . . .

American Chamber Orchestra, Robert Schulz conducting. Washington Square Park, 9:15.

Guggenheim Memorial Concert by Goldman Band, Edwin Franko Goldman conducting. On The Mall, Central Park, 8:30.

Week-end Crowd at 25,537

A crowd of 25,537 attended the three week-end orchestral concerts in the huge music shed, with Munch also on the podium for Saturday's program. The first half of this event was a concert version of the second act of Beethoven's "Fidelio" with soloists and festival chorus collaborating. The chorus under the direction of Hugh Ross proved the outstanding contribution of the production. Neither the soloists, which included Margaret Tynes, Shaw, Metropolitan Opera soprano, as Leonore, and David Lloyd, tenor, as Florestan, nor orchestra, nor conductor, rose to the demands of the different scores. They should be commended, however, for a valiant effort.

Fiedler Conducts For 'Tanglewood On Parade' Aug. 11

Lenox, Aug. 8—So popular was the Boston "Pops" Orchestra on its first appearance in the Tanglewood Music Shed during "Tanglewood on Parade" in 1954, when its popular and energetic maestro, Arthur Fiedler, put it through a program of light classical music that it has been invited to return for the annual benefit for the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, on Thursday. The concert last summer overflowed the 6000-seat shed for a record attendance of 10,050 persons.

The program for "Tanglewood on Parade" will consist of Rimsky-Korsakov's "Cappriccio Espag-Korsakov's "Cappriccio Espagnole"; Gershwin's "Rhapsody in piano soloist; and a suite from the ballet, "Graduation Ball," with music by Johann Strauss arranged by Antal Dorati. A number of encores in typical "Pops" style may be expected.

Besides the "Pops" section of the evening concert, Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," with distinguished stage and screen star Claude Rains as narrator, and in a suite of music Bernstein composed for the Academy Award-winning motion picture "On the Waterfront."

Preceding the evening concert "Tanglewood on Parade" begins at 4 p. m. with a demonstration in the Barn by the Study Group of Berkshire Music Center students, and simultaneously with a performance for those who purchase box seats and reserved seats in the Shed, of the short Puccini opera, "Gianni Schicchi" by Tanglewood's Opera Department, in the formal gardens. From 6-7 p. m., the Berkshire Music Center will have simultaneous sessions of each department orchestra, opera and chamber music, with a concert by members of the choral department on the steps of the Main House at 7. During intermission in the shed concert, Boris Goldovsky will draw the names of winners of door prizes. Festivities conclude with waltzing on the lawn.

TV OUTPUT INCREASES

Washington, Aug. 8 (AP)—Television set production during the first six months of 1955 was 35 per cent higher than during the same period last year, Radio-Electronics-Television Manufacturers Association reports.

It said radio production increased more than 44 per cent during the same period. The industry turned out 7,058,889 sets the first half of this year, compared to 4,886,559 radios in the first six months of 1954.

TV set output was 3,828,793 sets compared to 2,845,147 produced in the first six months last year.

Concerts of The Week

(AUGUST 7-14)

TODAY

Music Shed, Tanglewood. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Beethoven—Symphony No. 8, Fourth Piano Concerto (Eugene Istomin, soloist), and Symphony No. 5. 2:30 p. m.

MONDAY

Theatre-Concert Hall, Tanglewood. Mozart—"Zaide" (first American performance) and "The Rope" by Louis Mennini. Opera Department, Boris Goldovsky conducting. 8:30 p. m. Repeated Tuesday night.

WEDNESDAY

Playhouse, Rock Centre, [illegible]. Mass. "The Unmusical Impresario," by Catherine Davis. Nightly through Saturday at 8:30 p. m.

THURSDAY

Music Shed, Tanglewood. "Tanglewood on Parade." A potpourri of opera, chorus, and orchestral music featuring student groups and the Boston Symphony, Boston "Pops," Charles Munch, Arthur Fiedler, and Leonard Bernstein. Begins at 4:00 p. m. and lasts until midnight.

FRIDAY

Castle Hill, Ipswich, Mass. Chamber Orchestra from New York Philharmonic. Soloists include Carleton Sprague [illegible], flutist; Ariel Hall, harpist, and Stanley Drucker, clarinetist. 8:30 p. m. Program will be repeated Saturday night.

Music Shed, Tanglewood. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Brahms—Variations on a theme by Haydn; Berlioz—Symphonie Fantastique, Debussy, "La Mer," Ravel—"Daphnis and Chloe" No. 2. 8:30 p. m.

SATURDAY

Meetinghouse, Old Sturbridge Village. program of 18th century music. 7:00 "Old Sturbridge Village Players" in p. m.

Music Shed, Tanglewood. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting. Wagner—"The Flying Dutchman" Overture, Brahms—Symphony No. 3, Debussy—Three Nocturnes, Strauss—Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier." 8:30 p. m.

SUNDAY

Music Shed, Tanglewood. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Beethoven—"Lenore" No. 3 and 9th Symphony with Adele Addison, soprano; David Lloyd, tenor; Catherine Akos, alto; Donald Gramm, bass, and Festival Chorus. 2:30 p. m.

Week End Foul-Up Hurts Tanglewood

Boston Sunday Post 8/7

By TUCKER KEISER

One more week end like the last and the Boston Symphony will be hard pressed to restore its Berkshire Festival to popular favor. After wrenching their way through a traffic snarl that made the name Tanglewood seem a bitter jest, thousands of maddened motorists may well be resolved to attend summer musical events elsewhere, if at all.

The Boston Symphony concerts at Tanglewood undoubtedly constitute the most important summer music festival in the western hemisphere; the range of programs is extremely wide and the level of performance is extremely high.

Every major newspaper here and in Europe carries accounts of the performances. The NBC radio network broadcasts parts of the program each week. The publicity is so universal that cars can be seen from every State in the Union, from Canada and from Mexico.

It becomes increasingly evident, however, that Lenox and Pittsfield cannot cope with the crowds, particularly when other events in the area attract additional visitors.

Last Saturday night's concert dramatically pointed up the problem.

Concert Half Over

Thousands of listeners did not reach Tanglewood until the concert was half over. Tickets were still being sold as the musicians began to play the "Eroica," the last work on the program, and as the final chords were sounded people were still entering the gates. Some of the musicians, as a matter of fact, arrived only after intermission.

The huge turnout was predictable. Mr. Munch had planned a very popular Beethoven program, with Rudolf Serkin playing the "Emperor" Concerto. The weather was ideal—cool and moonlit—and this always means big crowds. It was the height of the vacation season.

The State police and local police had foreseen trouble and despatched every available officer to the area; both groups handled an impossible situation with commendable efficiency.

But the parking facilities were inadequate for the flood of automobiles. By 7:45 p. m. cars were backed up two or three miles and were three abreast on the eastern approaches to Tanglewood, and I assume the western roads were equally clogged.

No plan had been made for handling such a foreseeable emergency. Many cars were abandoned in ditches or in backroad areas. One farm just across from the main gate picked up a tidy bit of change by accommodating over 1000 cars in a hayfield at 50 cents apiece, it is reported.

Some Obligation

Tanglewood assumes certain responsibilities when it sells tickets. Among these is the responsibility to provide adequate facilities. A ticket entitles the purchaser to hear a concert, not simply hear about it.

Surely the Boston Symphony could plan for emergency parking areas, either in hayfields like those organized that night on a personal enterprise basis, or in the large sweep of land between the lake and the Tanglewood grounds.

Passing through the lobby of my hotel Sunday morning, I overheard what might be described as an emotionally disturbed lady summing up in what might be called emphatic tones:

Aug. 5th Berkshire Eagle

Six Members Are Retiring From the Boston Symphony

TANGLEWOOD — Six members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra who will retire at the end of the Festival season on Aug. 14, were honored by their colleagues here yesterday and received gold watches, presented by Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra.

The retiring members of the orchestra are: Jacob Raichman, principal trombone; first violinists Carlos Pinfield and Paul Fedorovsky; second violinist Ralph del Sordo; Louis Artieres, viola; and Walter G. MacDonald, French horn. Neither Mr. Pinfield, who came from Boston for the ceremony, nor Mr. MacDonald have been performing in the 1955 Festival concerts at Tanglewood.

The orchestra principal retiring is the well-known trombonist Jacob Raichman, a native of Vitebsk, Russia, and a member of the orchestra since 1927. Mr. Raichman studied at the St. Petersburg Conservatory, received a scholarship and the diploma of "Free Artist."

With BSO Since 1912

Carlos Pinfield is the oldest of the retiring BSO members in point of service, having joined the orchestra in 1912. A native Bostonian, he studied at the Royal Academy in Berlin under Willy Hess, served in World War I, and has conducted ensemble groups from the Boston Symphony. He has been guest conductor of the Boston Pops at Symphony Hall, teaches violin and conducts an amateur orchestra, doing gardening and woodwork in his spare time. His instrument is a Joseph Rocca, dated 1837.

Paul Fedorovsky attended the Academy of Music in Vienna, high school in Russia and for two years was at the University of Zurich, Switzerland. After earning a diploma at the Russian Conservatory he took a concert tour through Siberia, China and Japan, and joined the Boston Symphony in 1925. He teaches at the New England Conservatory in Boston, and plays pardessus de viol as a member of the Society of Ancient Instruments. He has a fine violin made by Carlo Antonio Testore.

Louis Artieres and Ralph del Sordo have both been with the Boston Symphony for 35 years. Del Sordo is a native of Flumeri, Italy, and studied with Winternitz, Noack, Loeffler and Witek. His violin is one made by Postiglione in 1868. He teaches, in his spare time builds houses, and has played the mandolin or guitar when one is needed by the orchestra. Mr. Artieres is a native of Lyon, France, and won the Paris Conservatory first prize in 1920. He went through World War I and received a Croix de Guerre at Verdun.

Walter MacDonald, an orchestra member since 1932, is a New Englander. He was born in Watertown, attended Boston University and the New England Conservatory, and switched to the horn from trumpet study.

New Orchestra Members

Incoming members are cellists Richard A. Kapuscinski, of Cincinnati, and Robert Ripley, of Cleveland Heights; violinists Noah Bielski, of Queens Village, N.Y., Alfred Schneider, of St. Louis, and Joseph Silverstein, of Detroit; and trombonist William M. Gibson, of Pittsburgh. Mr. Ripley was a student at the Berkshire Music Center in 1942, when Artur Rodzinski, then conductor in Cleveland, took him for his orchestra.

Mr. Kapuscinski has been a member of the Cleveland and Baltimore Symphony orchestras, head of the cello departments at the Peabody Conservatory of Music in Baltimore and the Cincinnati College of Music. Noah Bielski comes to the Boston Symphony from recitals in Carnegie Hall, solo appearances with the Philadelphia Orchestra, and concertmaster assignments with the Philadelphia Opera Co. and CBS. Alfred Schneider formerly played with the Rochester Philharmonic and the St. Louis Symphony, and has been a member of a number of string quartets. Mr. Silverman has played first violin in the Philadelphia Orchestra and has been concertmaster for the Denver Symphony. Mr. Gibson was in the Philadelphia Orchestra for two seasons, and has played first trombone in the Washington, Indianapolis, Robin Hood Dell, New York City and Pittsburgh Symphonies, and for the past eight years has been a teacher at the Carnegie Institute of Technology.

Berkshire Eagle 8/5

Music

Tanglewood Student Concert

By A. D. HORNE

TWO OF THE great B's of music, neglected this year in Tanglewood's emphasis on Beethoven and Brahms, had their say last night in the Music Shed. One movement of Bruckner's seventh symphony and two of Bartok's third piano concerto were performed — and performed extremely well — by the orchestra of the Music Center's Department I.

If the playing of the Bartok concerto left anything to be desired, it was the first movement, which for time reasons was not performed last night. Soloist Susan Pearlman was brilliantly precise, her technique as apt as her interpretation. George Mester's direction was similarly impeccable, and the orchestra responded with a thoroughly professional performance.

* * *

THIS CONCERTO of Bartok's was the last work he completed (the viola concerto was only in sketch form at his death) and it has gained a popularity as remarkable as that of its creator. The great Hungarian died in New York 10 years ago in rather uncomfortable circumstances, largely unknown to mass audiences. The power and originality of his music have combined with the power of the long-playing record to bring Bartok rapid—though belated — recognition.

The third concerto was written for performance by Bartok's widow, and perhaps its solo role is inherently feminine. Miss Pearlman's handling of it last night gains in comparison with at least one recorded performance by a male virtuoso, who made of it a superficially brilliant, brittle show piece.

The second movement — the first played last night—is marked adagio religioso, and opens and closes with a deeply felt slow theme. The allegro vivace final movement is vital throughout, and full of the marvelous Hungarian folk tunes which Bartok had made his life's study. Drums lead into lovely dances, the piano part echoed by strings and winds and treasures of orchestral color shining from a generally lean score. If this were Beethoven, volumes could be written on the philosophical significance of this conclusion to the composer's life and work. They may yet be written.

* * *

THE READING given by Kenneth Schermerhorn to the opening movement of the Bruckner symphony was relaxed and lyrical, and the performance was marred only by the brass, which left the fairways on several occasions. Stanley Dombrowski, in his fourth year as a Tanglewood student, moved up one chair last night to serve as concertmaster for the program.

Miss Pearlman, 26, has studied with William Kroll at the Mannes School in New York and with pianist Beveridge Webster. A student at Tanglewood in 1952 and 1953, she teaches and is active with her own chamber group. Her appearance in the Bartok concerto last night has one unusual aspect. The other soloists with the student orchestra this season were assigned concerti after auditioning in others; Miss Pearlman auditioned in the Bartok, and its programming was the consequence.

Koussevitzky Memorial

Berkshire Eagle

Bernstein To Conduct Concert With Festival Chorus Tonight

TANGLEWOOD — Leonard Bernstein will conduct Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" in D Major with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Festival Chorus tonight at 8:30 in the Music Shed. The program will be in memory of the late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, former conductor of the BSO, and director of the Berkshire Music Center until his death in the spring of 1951.

The vocal soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Mac Morgan, of Stockbridge, bass. Richard Burgin has a violin solo, and the organ solo is by William Frank.

Former Students

All four soloists are former students at the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its concerts in the Berkshire Festival. Miss Addison, who has already appeared at this summer's Festival in Bach's Mass in B Minor, was a student in the opera department during the summers of 1947, 1948, and 1950; Miss Alberts, who is flying to Tanglewood especially for this performance from her duties on the faculty of the Aspen International Institute in Aspen, Colo., was a student here in the second session of the Berkshire Music Center in 1941, as well as in four subsequent summers. Mr. Lloyd was a member of the opera department in 1947 and sang in its American premiere production of Britten's "Albert Herring" and Rossini's "The Turk in Italy;" and Mac Morgan was enrolled in opera dramatics in the 1953 session.

Tomorrow evening at 8:30, Charles Munch will return to the Music Shed podium to conduct a concert of operatic excerpts — the second act of Beethoven's "Fidelio" in which Margaret Harshaw of the Metropolitan Opera Company will be heard as Leonore, with Messrs Lloyd and Morgan, also Arthur Schoep, tenor, Malcolm Bernstein, bass, and Christina Cardillo, soprano, all of Tanglewood's opera department; excerps from Wagner's "Die Gotterdamerrung," including Siegfried's Rhine Journey and Siegfried's Death Music, and the Immolation Scene with Miss Harshaw.

Sunday afternoon at 2:30 the fifth all-Beethoven program of this season's Festival will be given when Mr. Munch will conduct two symphonies, the Eighth and Fifth, and Eugine Istomin will play the Fourth Piano Concerto.

Exhibit by Miss Epping, Manos Opens Tomorrow at Tanglewood

An exhibition of sculpture and drawing by Miss Franc Epping of Lenox and photographs of Tanglewood and the American South by Gus Manos, official Tanglewood photographer, will go on display tomorrow at Tanglewood. They will be in the glassed reception room at the main gate until the close of the Berkshire Festival, Sunday, Aug. 14.

A private teacher in Lenox, and director of the Sculpture Workshop, Miss Epping is responsible for the annual outdoor exhibit of Berkshire sculptors in the Lenox Library gardens, currently (until Aug. 10) having its fifth annual display. This is Miss Epping's third Tanglewood showing, and has been arranged through the Berkshire Museum and its director, Stuart C. Henry.

Miss Epping's sculptures at Tanglewood include, "The Musician," in walnut; "The Swimmer," in walnut; "Bereft," in mahogany; "Young David," in walnut; "The Seated Girl," in bronze; three drawings; and a composite photo of a new piece entitled "Profile," modeled from soapstone, recently shown at the Sculptors' Guild outdoor show in New York.

Studied in Europe

Miss Epping received her training at the Otis Art Institute, Los Angeles, and the Corcoran Art Gallery in Washington, D.C. Included in her European studies has been work with both Bernard Bleeker and Joseph Wackerle in Munich, Germany. Several public buildings in the U.S. contain examples of her work, including the Post Office at Oakmont, Pa., Alexandria, City Hall, and the Institute of Science, Jackson Park, Chicago. She has exhibited at the Metropolitan Museum in New York; the Pennsylvania Academy, Philadelphia; the New York World's Fair, the Museum of Modern Art and the Whitney Museum in New York.

Gus Manos came to Tanglewood in 1954, to photograph conductors, musicians, the faculty and students of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Music Center. His Tanglewood work has appeared in national magazines and in leading newspapers. A senior at the University of South Carolina, Columbia, Mr. Manos plays flute in Columbia's symphony orchestra. His current display shows Tanglewood personalities at rehearsal and in performance, and includes photographs of the American South.

THE BOSTON HERALD, TUESDAY, AUGUST 9, 1955

Mabel Daniels Work In Berkshire Fete

One of the highlights of "Tanglewood on Parade"—this annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, Lenox, to be held Thursday night—will be a performance of Mabel Daniels' "Psalm of Praise," under the direction of Hugh Ross. Miss Daniels, a Boston composer, was acclaimed for the choral work at t he75th anniversary concert of Radcliffe College last fall.

Other attractions at the interesting program include Leonard Bernstein conducting the Boston Symphony in a first performance of his suite from "On the Waterfront," and of "A Lincoln Portrait," by Aaron Copland, with Claude Rains as narrator. Arthur Fiedler and th e Boston Pops will appear in the other part of the program, and again, Mr. Bernstein, this time as piano soloist in Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

New York Journal-American Mon., Aug. 8, 1955

Berkshire Festival:

Long Cheers For Wagner

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS., AUG. 8.—Beethoven's music again dominated the weekend programs of the Berkshire Festival, but the performance of familiar excerpts from Wagner's "Goetterdaemmerung" captured the imagination.

Some 19,100 people attended the concerts Saturday and yesterday. A heavy rain falling through the first half of yesterday's program dampened the brilliance of the orchestra, but not the ardor of the audience.

A presentation of Act 2 of Beethoven's "Fidelio" aroused considerable anticipation of Saturday's program. Unfortunately, the performance did little justice to this intensely dramatic part of Beethoven's only opera. Neither Charles Munch nor the soloists dug into the music. Only the Festival chorus sang with the requisite intensity and brilliance. It was good.

Munch, who is usually aware of dramatic accent, fell into understatement, so much so that the throbbing drama of the prison scene sounded strangely hollow and pale. David Lloyd appeared to have neither the temperament nor the weightiness of voice to depict the hapless Florestan. Margaret Harshaw sang acceptably as Leonore but without conviction.

Others taking part were Malcolm Bernstein, Mac Morgan, Christina Cardillo and Arthur Sharv.

Top Wagner

Whatever disappointment developed during the Beethoven vanished as soon as "Daybreak" came and Siegfried began his Rhine journey. Munch emerged a different man after the intermission, conducted with inspiration and fire, and created a truly magnificent account of this powerful music.

Siegfried died a great hero. Margaret Harshaw singing Bruennhilde pronounced the last rites with feeling, beauty of voice and grandeur. The audience cheered and cheered, as it should have. This was wonderfully-performed Wagner.

The Beethoven program yesterday listed the Eighth Symphony, the Fourth Piano Concerto and the Fifth Symphony. Munch presented most of the music dutifully. The performances were clean-cut and well proportioned, but hardly alive. The joyousness of Beethoven's Eighth emerged luke-warm. Even the Fifth Symphony did not jell until the finale. This was just not Munch's day to excel himself as he has done on other occasions this season.

Eugene Istomin gave a beautifully integrated account of the concerto. His artistic growth grows more and more interesting. He conveyed the intimate aspect of the score more successfully than its forceful measures. Pianistically, this was superior playing. It brought the whole concert into focus.

NEW YORK TIMES, MONDAY, AUGUST 8, 1955.

24 L

Music: Lenox Week-End

Theme Is Beethoven—'Fidelio' Act Sung

By ROSS PARMENTER
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 7 — Beethoven is the theme composer of this year's Berkshire Festival. The claims of comprehensiveness therefore dictated that there should be representation of "Fidelio," his one essay in the operatic field. Those claims were satisfied Saturday night when Charles Munch conducted a concert version of most of the opera's second act.

Only the spoken dialogue was omitted, which meant that the 9,400 listeners heard thirty minutes of the prison scene and the thirteen-minute finale, which depicts the release of the prisoners. Not one of the opera's four overtures was given though. Mr. Munch is saving the "Leonore" No. 3 for the festival's closing program next Sunday.

•

Margaret Harshaw, making her Tanglewood debut, was the Leonora of the opera. She proved the shining light of its cast. Always her voice could be heard over the orchestra. She sang with finely shaded emotional expressiveness and she colored her tones in such a way that, despite the fact that she was standing before the listeners like a Roman goddess in deep red robes, her sounds conveyed the illusion of a young wife who might convincingly be mistaken for a youth.

The casting of the male parts was less happy. David Lloyd, who sang the Florestan, is a tenor whose voice has a particularly fine lyric quality. To sing the heroic measures of this role with the requisite volume, he had to thicken his tones to such an extend that one felt a sense of strain at the same time one missed the old quality.

•

Malcolm Bernstein had not enough menace in his pleasant-sounding voice for the villainous Pizarro, and Mac Morgan was a somewhat colorless Rocco. These drawbacks, added to the lack of scenery and stage action and the decidedly rough choral singing, meant the performance was not stirring dramatically. But it had its musical values, and the Haydnesque trio between the three main singers emerged as its particular delight.

The remainder of the program contained excerpts from Wagner's "Goetterdaemmerung." The orchestra began with the "Daybreak" music and Siegfriend's Rhine Journey, continued with Siegfried's Death Music and ended with the "Immolation" scene. Miss Harshaw sang the scene brilliantly, earning thereby an ovation.

Margaret Harshaw

This afternoon's program, which closed the festival's fifth week, was all-Beethoven. Mr. Munch led the Boston Symphony in the Eighth and Fifth symphonies and Eugene Istomin was the soloist in the Fourth Piano Concerto. This was Mr. Istomin's Tanglewood debut and also his first appearance with the Boston Symphony.

•

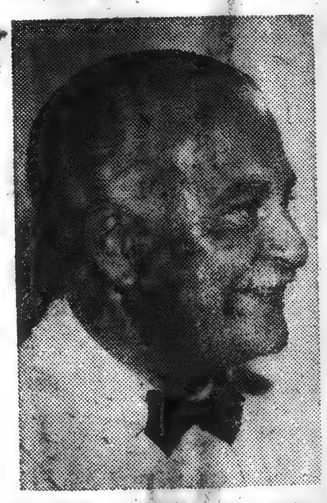
Mr. Istomin's playing of the first movement was technically fluent, but the tone was a little hard and the reading was external. In the second movement, he had bad luck with the weather. Just as he began its melting opening in a way that gave promise of more inwardness, the rain, which had begun earlier, began to drum heavily on the roof and there was intermittent thunder. The poetic effect of the movement was lost and the finale seemed swiftly routine. The audience, though, gave him a great hand.

Mr. Munch's conducting of the two symphonies was vigorous and rough-hewn. This particular approach was more suitable for the Fifth than for the lighter Eighth. But both performances had vitality and he, too, was roundly applauded.

The afternoon's audience totaled 9,715. Many of those who listened from the lawns were drenched, but it did not seem to dampen their enthusiasm and good spirits.

Berkshire Festival Concerts End With Week's Program

The sixth and final week of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood opens with the concluding event of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, tomorrow evening in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Six principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (Gino Cioffi, clarinet; Samuel Mayes, cello; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; James Stagliano, French Horn), will be assisted by David Lloyd, tenor; and Ralph Berkowitz, piano, in a program of trios, songs, a quintet and a cello sonata.



ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor of the world-famed Boston "Pops" Orchestra, which will play a typical "Pops" program of light classics and popular music at "Tanglewood on Parade" at the gala evening concert Thursday, August 11 to benefit the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood.

Charles Munch will conduct an all-French orchestral program, music of Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel, on the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Shed concert of Friday evening (August 12), and an all-Beethoven program including the Ninth Symphony with soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; and augmented chorus on Sunday afternoon (August 14). Pierre Monteux will conduct the Saturday evening (August 13) program, comprising Wagner, Brahms, Debussy and Strauss.

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 10, 1955

FINAL CHAMBER MUSIC CONCERT SLATED TONIGHT

All-Beethoven Program at Festival; 'Tanglewood on Parade' Tomorrow

Lenox, Aug. 9—Wednesday at 8.30 p. m. the final concert in this season's series of Wednesday evening chamber music programs will be given in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood. The all-Beethoven concert will be given by six principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Samuel Mayes, cello; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; and Ralph Gomberg, oboe. Also appearing on the program will be David Lloyd, tenor, and Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

The program will be devoted to the Trio for Clarinet, Cello and Piano, Opus 11, performed by Cioffi, Mayes and Berkowitz; the song cycle "An, Die ferne Geliebte," sung by Mr. Lloyd with Mr. Berkowitz at the piano; the Cello Sonata in A Major, Opus 69, played by Mayes and Berkowitz; the Trio in C Major for Flute, Bassoon and Cello with Mrs. Dwyer and Walt and Mayes; and the Quintet in E Flat, Opus 16, performed by Berkowitz, Cioffi, Gomberg, Walt and Stagliano.

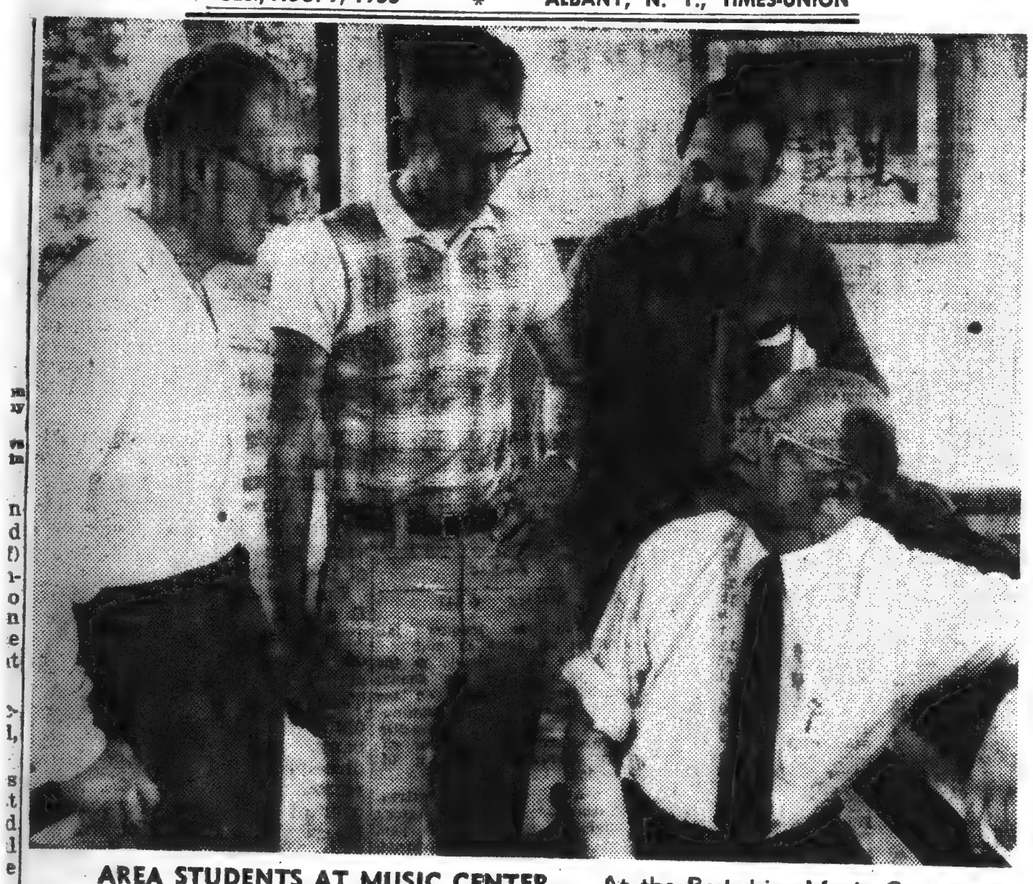
The climax of Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade" will be a gala concert in the Music Shed at 8.15 p. m. The Boston Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Leonard Bernstein on the first half of the concert, with Claude Rains, distinguished actor of stage, screen, radio and television, as narrator in Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait." Mr. Bernstein will begin the program with the first performance anywhere of a suite he has fashioned from his score for the Academy Award-winning film "On the Waterfront." After the intermission Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston "Pops" Orchestra in a typical "Pops" concert, including Rimsky-Korsakov's "Capriccio Espagnole," the "Rhapsody in Blue" by George Gershwin with Mr. Bernstein as piano soloist, and a suite from the Ballet "Graduation Ball," arranged by Antal Dorati from music by Johann Strauss. As is customary at Boston "Pops" concerts, encores may be expected on this portion of the program.

"Tanglewood on Parade" marks the third and final guest conducting engagement of Leonard Bernstein at this summer's Berkshire Festival.

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky is chairman of the "Tanglewood on Parade" committee; Mrs. Bruce Sanborn of Lenox is vice-chairman, and Miss Margo Miller of Pittsfield is secretary. Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, of Glendale, is chairman of the committee for sale of boxes, with Mrs. Thomas D. Perry, Jr., as vice-chairman. Mrs. Sanborn also heads the committee for door prizes, which will be awarded to ticketholders by Boris Goldovsky during the evening concert's intermission.

THE NEW YORK TIMES, TUESDAY, AUGUST 9, 1955.

TUES., AUG. 9, 1955 * ALBANY, N. Y., TIMES-UNION



AREA STUDENTS AT MUSIC CENTER — At the Berkshire Music Center where they are studying, are three Albany Area youths. From left to right: Lewis Rubinstein, of Brookline Ave., studying French horn; Bruce Edwin Paine, of Canajoharie, trombone, and Richard E. Krause, Delmar, opera. Seated at piano is Roger Sessions, American composer and member of the faculty.

this year, 5.14; deficiency this month, .59.

were: 58 80 / 37 74

TUES., AUG. 9, 1955  ALBANY, N. Y., TIMES-UNION

Around the Town:

Tanglewood to Stage Benefit on Thursday

By EDGAR S. VAN OLINDA

Right in the backyard of the Albany Metropolitan Area is one of the finest music festivals in the whole world, drawing to a close Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock when Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra and a large mixed chorus with outstanding soloists in a performance of Beethoven's heroic 9th (or Choral) symphony. This should be classical music in its most austere form.

However, on Thursday, from 6 to 11 P. M., the trustees of Tanglewood take down their hair and stage the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" which is a personally conducted tour of the magnificent estate and an opportunity to see and hear every phase of the Summer activities in actual operation. Box seats are priced at $5 each; the front section of the large shed (all seats reserved) at $4 and $3, with unreserved sections at $2.50. The gala event is for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center and will be given rain or shine.

THURSDAY SCHEDULE

Let us give you a quick run-down of what is scheduled for Thursday:

At 5:45 is the fanfare and welcome. At six o'clock there will be orchestral music in the big shed, opera in the Theatre-Concert Hall and chamber music in the Chamber Music Hall. At seven o'clock is the lawn party in which all are invited to bring a picnic lunch or avail themselves of the restaurant on the grounds. At the same time, Hugh Ross will conduct a group of mixed choral works on the steps of the old manor house. Music with your meals.

At 8:15, Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the large Concert Shed, playing his own suite from "On the Waterfront" and Aaron Copland's "Portrait of Lincoln" with Claude Rains (in person) acting as narrator.

BOSTON POP

Following that, the Boston Pops Orchestra, with Arthur Fiedler on the podium, will regale the less esthetic with his inimitable musical fun and frolic, plus a bonus thrown in when Leonard Bernstein plays Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" with the Pops Orchestra. And it is a foregone conclusion that Mr. Fiedler will come through with some of his famous encores.

If that were not enough, there will be very valuable door prizes and waltzing on the lawns. And if that isn't the greatest package deal in classic and popular music this year, then we are slightly off our rocker. This is one day in the year when the Lowells and the Cabots actually speak to the Smiths and the Browns.

Music: Premiere of 'Rope' at Lenox

Opera by Mennini Gets Polished Performance

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 8—"The Rope," an opera made for Tanglewood and with Tanglewood's help, achieved the right happy ending here tonight — a première at Tanglewood.

The composer is Louis Mennini, 34-year-old American, and he used as his libretto a one-act play that Eugene O'Neill penned almost forty years ago. Mr. Mennini wrote the opera on commission of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. Among the terms of his commission were the stipulations that he spend a summer at Tanglewood and consult with its Opera Department staff in the preparation of his work.

Mr. Mennini was here two summers ago, doing the preliminary work on his opera. He was here again tonight to receive the warm tribute of the audience.

One does not know where and how his Berkshire Music Center guides helped him during the writing or production. It is clear, however, that Mr. Mennini has a flair for the theatre. He had the wisdom to choose a good subject, and he knew how to write music that added fresh values to the theme.

•

"The Rope," as O'Neill conceived it, is a bitter vignette of brutish people living on the seacoast, presumably New England, in 1917. It does not have the depth of characterization that O'Neill's later plays strove for, but it does have some tension and an ironic conclusion.

Mr. Mennini made a few slight alterations in the play to provide himself with a workable libretto. Dramatically his version is effective, but the bare lines do not lend themselves easily to singing. The composer has not attempted to write extended arias, but occasionally he lets his characters have expansive phrases.

Louis Mennini

Mr. Mennini has given his orchestra most of the songfulness. He has resisted the temptation to be obvious—to write harsh dissonance for a harsh subject. He has sought to infuse it with warmth and poignancy. He has a lyrical gift, and he has turned out a piece that should have wide currency in the workshops, perhaps on television. One would like to see what he could do with a bigger subject filled with more poetry.

Work Is Based on Play by Eugene O'Neill

The performance was remarkably polished. Malcolm Bernstein, Mary MacKenzie, Lynn Detwiler and Stephen Harbachick sang well and played believably. Holly McLennan did well as a little girl. Henry Janiec, conducting student at Tanglewood, handled the orchestra and cast smoothly, and Boris Goldovsky's staging was atmospheric. David Hays' sets and lighting and Leo Van Witsen's costumes were valuable contributions to a strong mood piece.

•

For doing "The Rope" so well one can forgive the Tanglewood opera forces for being amateurish with Mozart's operatic fragment, "Zaide." Mr. Goldovsky, in one of his characteristic spoken program notes, prefaced the performance of "Zaide" with the promise that other Mozart fragments would be along in seasons to come just as Tanglewood has introduced on the American stage such pieces as "Idomeneo" and "Titus."

If these unproduced fragments are no better than "Zaide," Mr. Goldovsky and his Tanglewood Opera Department had better think again. There may be charming musical numbers in them, as there were in "Zaide," but it might be best to do such numbers in concert style, "Zaide," at least as done here tonight, was simply not stageworthy. And the young singers lacked the know-how of the Mozart style.

"Zaide" introduced something new to Tanglewood—a female conductor. She was Aviva Einhorn, who is here from her Paris home as a conducting auditor.

Manos

BSO MEMBERS who will play in tomorrow evening's concert at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall are, left to right: Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn. Concert will be devoted to Beethoven chamber music.

Opera

World Premiere Is Held Of Mennini's 'The Rope'

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

A WORLD premiere of an opera by Louis Mennini and an American premiere of a neglected Mozart opera was the bill in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood last night. This represented one of the two peak evenings prepared by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center.

Mennini's opera, "The Rope," is adapted from Eugene O'Neill's one-act play and is the first of the operas commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation under special arrangement requiring the collaboration of the opera department of the school.

* * *

IT CALLS for a cast of five of which one is a child, played last night with adorable charm and mature poise by Holly McLennan. The story concerns an interfamilial animosity over an aged father's money between a son and a married daughter. The setting is an old barn on a sea coast. The plot is sordid and bleak.

Mennini's problem, as he was quoted, was whether to make the music as dissonant and unpleasant as the characters or whether to add warmth to the starkness and gloom of the play. He has not solved it decisively, for above fragmentary phrases and interjections from the pit there keep arising promising rich orchestral introductions which reach nowhere but dissolve and stop short.

* * *

THE CURTAIN parts after a scant six bars from the orchestra, conducted by Henry Janiec, in which paucity of resources is strikingly apparent. The little child is singing a lullaby to her dolls when the daughter, Anne, sung by Mary MacKenzie, and her husband, sung by Lynn Detwiler, enter and unfold the family situation with a long narrative recitative in a free prosaic declaramation over an orchestra wandering with little purpose. Malcolm Bernstein as the father and Stephen Harbachick as the son give vivid portrayals of their parts and seemed to have the most meaty roles of Mennini's opera.

The Maupassant ending was dramatically very effective and made excellent theater. The music enhanced the play but it was still a "play by O'Neill with incidental music by Mennini." The whole production, staged by Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the school, moved forward with absorbing interest; the settings by David Hays were significant contributions to the illusion. Mennini was called to the stage from his seat in the audience to share with the singers the enthusiastic reception the large audience evinced.

"ZAIDE" IS a little two-act opera of Mozart which last night was telescoped by Sarah Caldwell and Marvin Schoefer into a short single act which still was too long. It did serve to bring forward several elements which were enjoyable and worthwhile even so.

In the title role of an incredibly ludicrous plot, fascinating Christina Cardillo distinguished herself by the pure lyric vocalism of the lovely music Mozart wrote for the part. Her tones were produced and supported with equal splendor in all registers and Mozart could not have found a voice in which the compass was better placed for the role than in Miss Cardillo's fresh liquid soprano. As the tutor of the Sultan's son, McHenry Boatwright's resonant voice was admirably suited to the part.

* * *

IT MAY BE apparent by now that the action takes place in a harem which therefore calls for guards, servants, and dancing girls. The individuals were all more than competent, but this part of the evening at times taxed the charity of a benevolent audience. The orchestra, conducted by Aviva Einham, was adequate only in spots.

The Mozart music, as might be expected, is thoroughly charming. There are solos and concerted numbers which are captivating as music, but it required no imagination to see why the opera has been neglected. Both operas will be repeated tonight with completely different casts except for Holly in "The Rope," and stalwart little George Lussier, who is the Sultan's son in "Zaide."

Notes and Footnotes

CLARINETIST Rosario Mazzeo and seven other Boston Orchestra players flew to Iceland for a series of concerts from June 13 to 22, which has been a refreshing memory to them at sweltering Tanglewood.

Mr. Mazzeo and organist E. Power Biggs arranged the unusual journey, and everyone was so pleased they hope to get back again. Although the country was "all cinders and lava," said Mr. M, "the Icelanders are a kindly and gentle people, full of hospitality. Everywhere we were met with the utmost courtesy."

Their trip was arranged by ANTA in cooperation with the U.S. State Department. Besides Mr. Mazzeo and Mr. and Mrs. Biggs, the company included violinists Emil Kornsand and Robert Brink, violist George Humphrey, cellist Alfred Zighera, oboe player Louis Speyer and trumpet player Roger Voisin. Mr. Mazzeo is also personnel manager of the Boston Orchestra.

As a hobby, Mr. M is an ornithologist. Iceland, despite its climate, is "an absolute bird-lover's paradise," said he. Between the seven concerts, Mr. Mazzeo took two trips into the remote parts of the islands and saw "magnificent colonies of breeding fulmars, razorbilled auks, murres, kittiwakes and puffins," all of which mean a lot to an ornithologist, you may be sure.

The flight was made in an Army plane, and one concert was at the military base at Keflavik. They played in an Army recreation hall "which we found filled with tables, smoke, jukebox and bar," said he. "Tables, jukebox and smoke cleared away, the bar closed down, and we played to a most attentive and responsive audience."

Temperature was 60 to 70 degrees, and on recent sweltering Berkshire nights, small wonder that these eight players dreamt of Iceland's air-cooled strand.

—o—

AFTER SO LONG a drought, it is pleasant to hear that Rains is coming Thursday, even if it is only Claude Rains, no disparagment intended. Mr. Rains will narrate Copeland's "A Lincoln Portrait," at Tanglewood on Parade. Rains came first to this area in 1932 when he starred at the Berkshire Playhouse season opener "The Queen's Husband." He was for a time a favorite Playhouse actor.

—o—

Public Events

Tonight

8:00—Bridge sponsored by Trinity College alumnae of Berkshire County. Berkshire Inn, Great Barrington.

8:30—Student performance of Mennini's opera, "The Rope," and Mozart's "Zaide." Tanglewood theater, Lenox. (For BSO Friends, with special tickets.)

8:30—Berkshire Folk-music Festival, featuring French and Chinese music. Sedgwick Hall, Lenox.

8:40—"The Late George Apley." Williamstown Summer Theater.

8:45—"The Tender Trap." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

8:45—"Here We Come Gathering." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

Tomorrow

2:45—"The Tender Trap." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

The Lively Arts

By Milton R. Bass

MUSIC PRODUCES a kind of pleasure which human nature cannot do without (Confucius). Such sweet compulsion doth in music lie (Milton). Music hath charms to soothe a savage breast, To soften rocks or bend a knotted oak (Congreve). Music has charms alone for peaceful minds (Pope). Music is a higher revelation than philosophy (Beethoven). Let me have music dying, and I seek no more delight (Keats). Music that gentlier on the spirit lies, Than tir'd eyelids upon tir'd eyes (Tennyson). Incitamentum amoris musica, Music is an incitement to love (Latin proverb).

* * *

MUSIC MAKES ME HUNGRY (BASS).

* * *

THERE IS something about a melodic line that increases my metabolism. The bells on Dancer and Prancer start visions of sugar plums whirling through my head. The inspiration engendered by the Hungarian Rhapsody necessitates huge bowls of goulash to assuage the demon. A hearing of the "Moonlight Sonata" develops a yearning for pimento cheese. If music be the food of love, play on and on and on. But make it real food.

Usually one has to sneak candy bars and sandwiches into concerts and operas and jam (now you see how the term was derived) sessions. But once a year the powers-that-be recognize the desperate situation for what it is and throw a whing-ding musical in which the two great arts are blended. They call it Tanglewood on Parade and it is the greatest musical and/or gastronomic event of the year.

* * *

THIS COLUMN is for the benefit of those poor souls who may be as naive as I was when I first attended Tanglewood on Parade some years ago. Fearful of the crowds and the possible chance of too-long chow lines at the snack bar, I brought a few sandwiches along. It brings tears of remorse and humiliation to my eyes to remember what a foolish child I was in those days. Imagine anyone bringing his own food and drink to Tanglewood on Parade. Wheat germ to Gaylord Hauser, my dear people, yogurt to Carleton Fredericks.

All your friends bring food and drink to Tanglewood on Parade. They bring enough for themselves and enough for anyone who just happens to drop by their picnic blanket. And if you don't have any friends or if the blackguards happen to be the type (gad, man, what a world) who bring only enough for themselves and know you well enough to tell you to get the devil away, then read closely and I shall instruct you how to cadge from strangers.

* * *

FIRST of all, stroll through the whole area and case (1) the portable bars, (2) the picnic hampers, (3) eating facilities — blankets, chairs, silver, napkins, niceties, and (4) the people. These are listed in descending importance and don't let boors or bores frighten you away from good liquor or food. You're there to eat, man, not to socialize.

A sufficiency of ice is of primary importance for the drinking phase of the evening. For some people this phase continues right on through the whole affair, but let their families worry about them. Look for a big Scotch cooler that is loaded with cubes, a wicker basket containing one of the better gins, a sachet of vermouth, cocktail glasses with stems (very important in hot weather) and attach yourself like a leech. Disregard dirty looks, scowls, pointed remarks and kicks on the shin. You're there to drink whether your host likes it or not.

* * *

AFTER YOUR thirst has been assuaged, walk with as little wobbling as possible to the picnic basket you have picked out and dig in. Repeat defensive tactics used during martini phase if necessary. You're there to eat.

After your hunger has been satisfied, it is time to drift from blanket to blanket, quaffing a few on the rocks to wash down the food and nibbling at choice tidbits which please the fancy. It is wise to say a few pleasantries at each setting so that everyone will understand you bear no hard feelings for their nasty remarks. This will indicate to them that you will also be around next year.

* * *

IN THE CASE of strangers, the approach is diffidently aggressive. If you see a group with a fine bar setup and a bulging picnic basket, saunter over to the edge and stand there a few moments until someone notices you. As soon as you get a politely questioning look, mutter "Some damm fine Beethoven being played around here" or "Have you seen the Bleehums (half way between a cough and a grunt) anywhere?" and at the same time reach for a drink or a canape. After that, only talk when you have something in your mouth so it is impossible for anyone to understand you. Keep edging toward the center of the group until you are the one mixing the drinks and passing out the food. By this time everyone should be jolly friends because of your largesse and you should invite them all to do the same thing next year.

Finally, as soon as it is time for the music to begin, get in your car and head for home. You definitely do not want to get caught in all that traffic. And it will be just time to eat supper.

NY Herald Tribune

Mennini Opera, 'The Rope,' Makes Debut at Tanglewood

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mas., Aug. 9.—Louis Mennini's "The Rope," the first opera to be commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation for production at Tanglewood, had a successful world premiere last night in the Theater-Concert Hall. For its companion in a double bill the Berkshire Music Center offered Mozart's "Zaide," a work older by 176 years but also new to American audiences.

Boris Goldovsky, who staged "The Rope," described its production as a milestone in the Center's history, and the one act novelty spoke well for the idea of giving a selected composer the co-operation of the Center's opera department and opportunity for close acquaintance with the various departments of the musical theater. Mr. Mennini has converted the Eugene O'Neill play of the same title into genuine music drama without a sense of transfer into a different and sometimes alien medium.

Uses O'Neill Text

For his libretto, Mr. Mennini has used O'Neill's text with a few cuts and adaptations. The music presents it flexibly and intelligibly. There are a few spoken passages, but in most of the score the singers are given a flexible lyric speech with occasional more fully defined melodic episodes and a few arias which in most cases arise spontaneously from the general musical texture. The instrumental score for a chamber orchestra is expertly written; there is color and expressive significance, a knowledge of how to use a particular timbre or combination of timbres to meet the dramatic requirements of the moment. It seems of equal importance with the voices, but does not submerge or quarrel with the vocal line.

The music's individual style has no unblended elements and no doctrinaire touches; pungent dissonance appears at times for an expressive purpose, but is not characteristic. One particular musical figure made frequent appearances in skilfully varying guises; this added to the sense of unity in the score.

Atmosphere Preserved

O'Neill's "The Rope" is a rather grim little play with three unsympathetic characters — the senile Abraham Bentley; Pat Sweeney, his son-in-law, and Abraham's son, Luke, who returns from his wanderings to plot with Pat to torture the old man and force him to reveal where he has hidden his money. Annie, Pat's hard-working wife, and their ten-year-old daughter Mary, who finds the hidden silver dollars and playfully tosses them into the sea, are more sympathetic, but the play's range of atmosphere is limited.

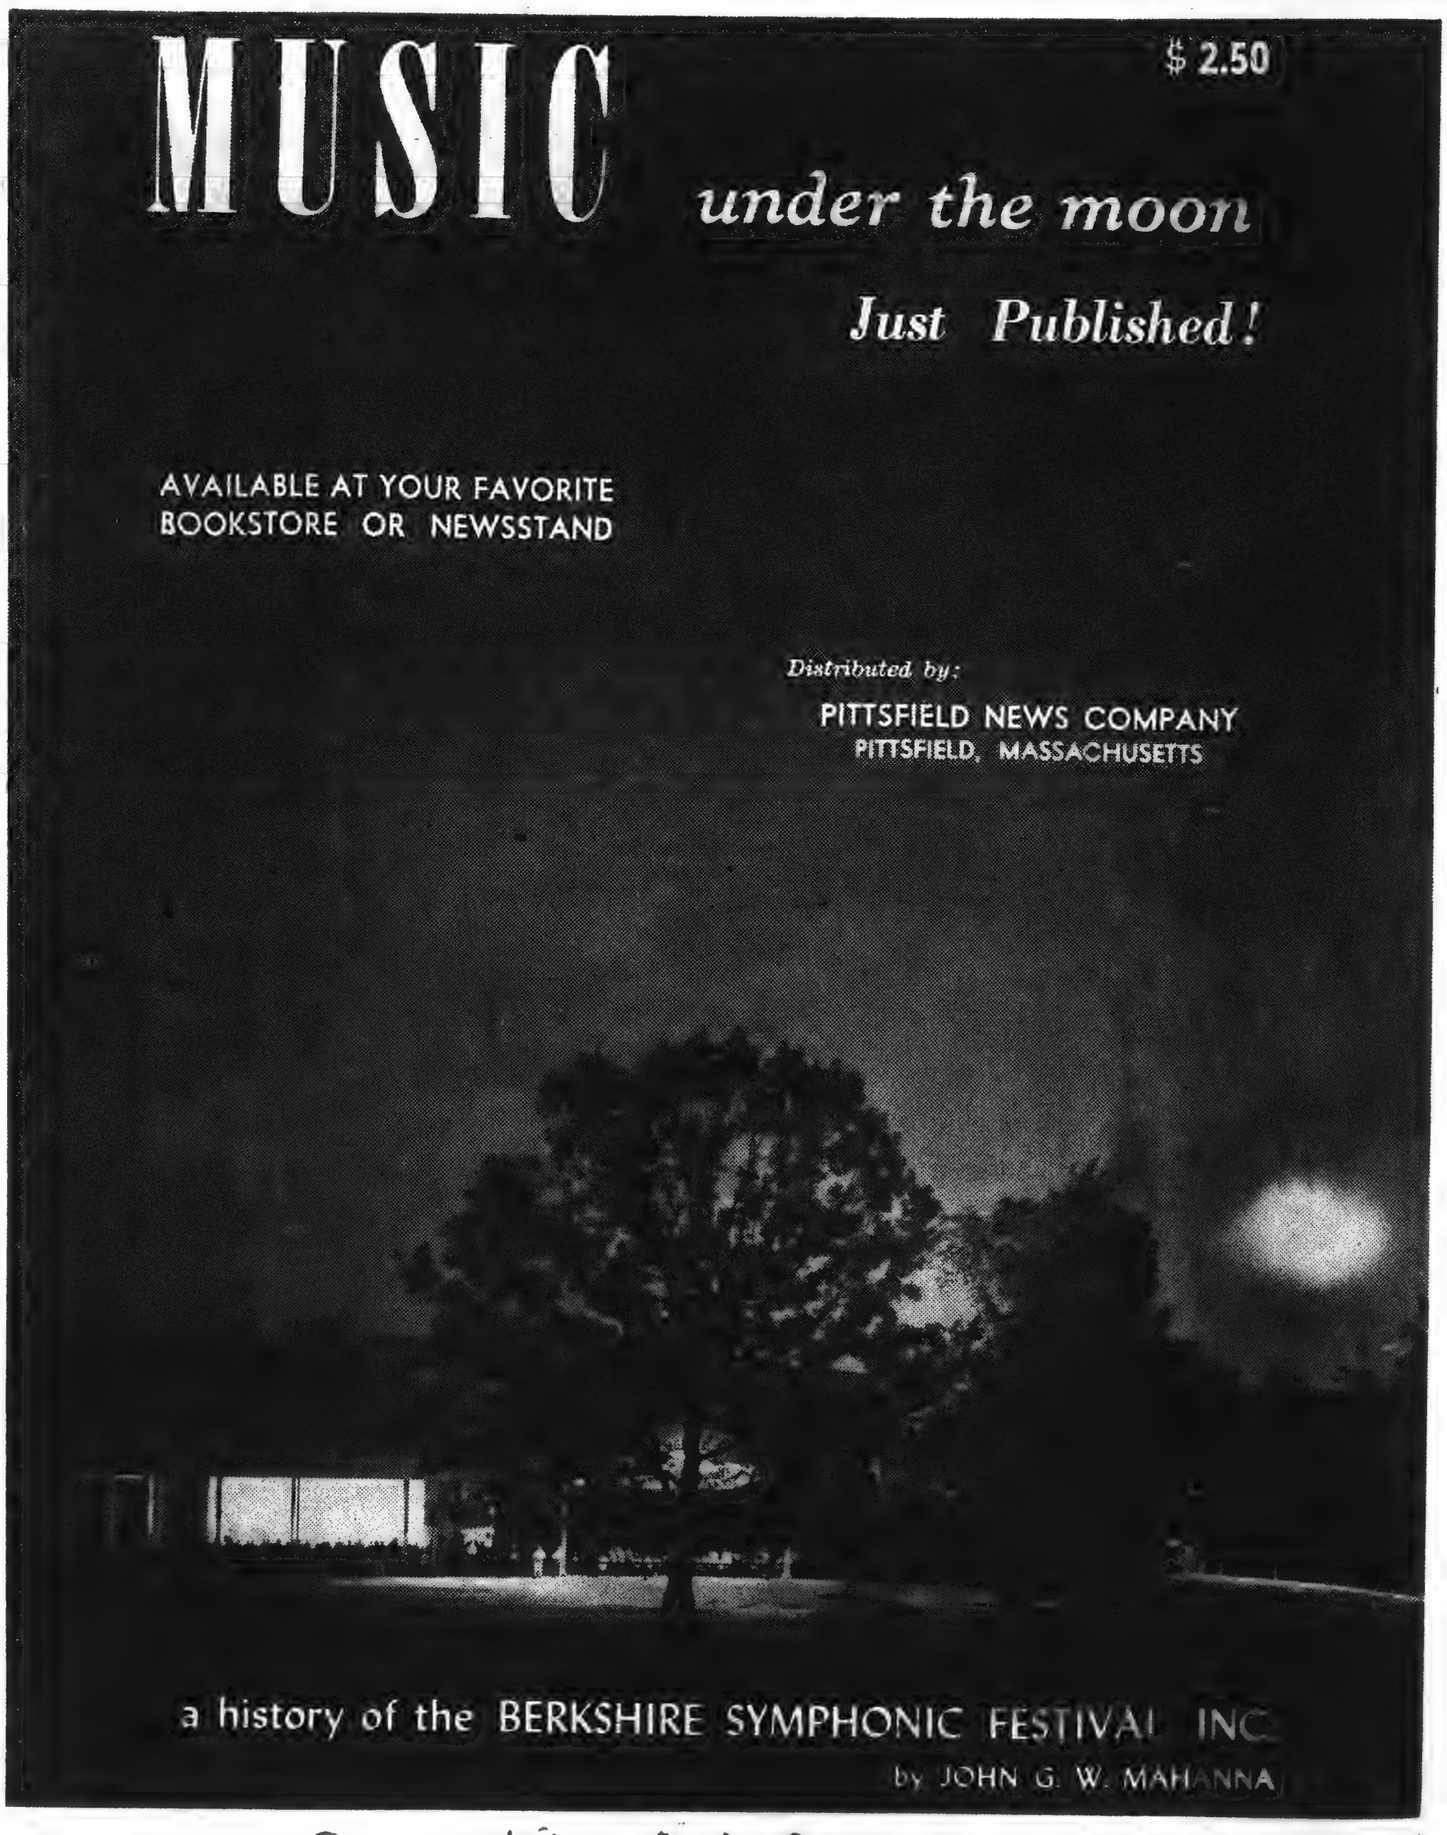
This is felt in the opera to some extent, although not to a marked degree, since the performance took only forty-five minutes. One might have asked for more building up of musical and dramatic tension while Pat and Luke are developing their plot, but Mr. Mennini has preserved the essential atmosphere of the play, while mitigating its grimness with a certain musical warmth, pensiveness and pathos.

Malcolm Bernstein, as Abraham; Mary MacKenzie as Annie, Lynn Detwiler as Pat and Stephen Harbach as Luke all individuality of their roles; voices and instruments were well balanced under the direction of a student conductor, Henry Janiec.

gave an impression of understanding of the music and the

The twelve-year-old Holly McLennan, of Tyringham, had notable poise as Mary; the same could be said of ten-year-old George Lussier of Lenox as Osmin in the Mozart work. "Zaide," sung in ably wrought English text by Sarah Caldwell and Marvin Schoefer, was condensed from two acts into one to save time. Mr. Goldovsky and Misss Caldwell had rounded out the unfinished score by re-using one of its arias.

a lab for coffee — and damages.



Berkshire Eagle 7/26

N-474

At Tanglewood:

O'Neill Play Set to Music

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS., Aug. 9.—Louis Mennini's "The Rope" had its world premiere along with an English version of Mozart's "Zaide" in what was probably its American premiere here last night. The productions were the work of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center under the leadership of Boris Goldovsky.

Composing on commission from the Kousevitzky Music Foundation, Mennini worked from the beginning in consultation with Goldovsky and his staff in accordance with the terms of the commission. He was thus able to meet the problems peculiar to the lyric theater at first hand. The result is an integrated product in which libretto, scoring, scenery, costuming, casting, and rehearsing have all been properly weighted.

Promising Talent

As an opera, "The Rope" introduces a most promising talent and a score of unmistakable quality.

Taking the grim play of Eugene O'Neill as his text, Mennini has written a musical commentary or musical extension of it. In proposing "to add warmth to the starkness and gloominess of the play," he has succeeded in accomplishing just that.

He has probably created about all the musical substance the play can take because the element of the theater is dominant. There is only a suggestion of musical characterization.

With a feeling for melody and a gift for evolving a musical work out of a single germinating idea, Mennini has written a simple, direct, and forceful score, unadorned by elaborate harmonies or instrumental complexities. He has thus complemented the directness of the play.

Operatic conventions are held to a minimum through the use of song-speech rather than set pieces. The movement is continuous, artfully conceived, and artistically shaped.

A student cast acquitted itself well under the musical direction of Henry Janiec. An admirable set and excellent lighting were created by David Hays with appropriate costuming by Leo Van Witsen.

Goldovsky's version of "Zaide" made for mildly pleasant entertainment. The charm of Mozart's music exerted itself sufficiently to overcome the high school quality of presentation that Goldovsky chose to offer and the amateur nature of the performance. It thus served only as a workshop experiment and a poor antidote to "The Rope."

5 4

Berkshire Eagle
Tues. Aug 9, 1955

North Adams Can Be Proud Of the Musical Cardillos

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

"Cardillo" in Italian may mean a goldfinch or sparrow or some sort of beautiful bird but in northern Berkshire Cardillo means the outstanding musical family of North Adams. The Cardillos, Papa Anthony and Mama Anna, will celebrate their 40th wedding anniversary in about a month and the five children with whom they have been blessed will no doubt serenade them in the fashion they know best: the art of music.

The parents were born in Italy but the children were all born in North Adams. Mama Cardillo and her sisters all had good voices and the gift has been transmitted to the next generation and concentrated in the younger daughter, Christina. Papa Cardillo taught his sons clarinet and, of the three, Pasquale has gone on now to occupy an important chair in the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Studied With Pelletier

Pat came to Pittsfield, after graduating from Drury High School in North Adams, to study with Alphonse Pelletier, the well-known French horn player, retired from the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra. Pat had been guided at Drury by music supervisor Jim Chambers and remembers with especial gratitude the encouragement he got from him. Pelletier sent young Pat to Louis Pagerey, also of Pittsfield, for concentrated study of the clarinet. From there he went on to the New England Conservatory in Boston on a high school scholarship award. There he came under the training of the late Victor Polatchek, at that time solo clarinet of the Boston orchestra. An emergency vacancy occurred in the summer of 1939. Pat was recommended. He filled the bill so well that, following the short term of the agreement, he was engaged for the regular season and has been a reliable fixture ever since.

Chris, while still at Drury, commuted once a week to Troy, N.Y., for vocal lessons. Then she, too, went on to the New England Conservatory. She had many small opportunities but her first real recognition came in 1950 when Charles Munch invited her to sing one of the solo roles in the "Missa Solemnis" and the Schubert Mass in C with the Boston Symphony.

Studied in Milan

The way of the vocalist is not easy, but handsome and vivacious Chris has been ascending the ladder consistently now for several years. After getting her B.M. at the New England, she went to Italy for further study in Milan. In 1954 and also 1955 she won the Metropolitan Auditions of the Air which entails, in addition to a cash award, the chance to study under the "Met" maestri at the Metropolitan school.

Chris represented Tanglewood a week ago at the Berkshire Museum Celebrity Night; she is singing "Zaide" of Mozart at the Berkshire Music Center under Boris Goldovsky; and she sang Marzelline in the performance of the second act of Beethoven's "Fidelio" with the Boston Orchestra under Munch this season.

The other members of the family retain an amateur standing in music but are no ordinary bystanders. Francis and Peter concede little if anything to other amateurs in the neighborhood on the clarinet; Angela, a nurse, applied herself to the violin for years but not professionally.

There will be a lot of gaiety at the wedding anniversary. The parents will be mighty proud of their children, and the way they, in turn, will wish "happy anniversary to you" won't be duplicated in many households.

MEET THE CARDILLOS. members of a North Adams fami soprano in Tanglewood's opera dep is a clarinetist with the Bos

Thursday AUG. 11 • Events from 6 to 11 P.M
RAIN OR SHINE
TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS.

"Tanglewood on Parade"

Berkshire Eagle 8/8

Including Shed Concert at 8:15 by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Conducted by LEONARD BERNSTEIN
Suite from "On the Waterfront" ..... Bernstein
(FIRST PERFORMANCE)
"A Lincoln Portrait" ..... Copland
Lincoln Impersonation by CLAUDE RAINS

BOSTON POPS ORCHESTRA
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
In a typical Pops program—
Spanish Caprice ..... Rimsky-Korsakov
Rhapsody in Blue, for Piano and Orchestra ..... Gershwin
Soloist—LEONARD BERNSTEIN
Suite from the Ballet "Graduation Ball" ..... Strauss-Dorati
(Encores may be expected!)

LAWN PARTY ☆ PICNIC SUPPER
WALTZING ON THE LAWN ☆ DOOR PRIZES
TICKETS: Box Seats—$5; Front Sections (All seats reserved) $4 and $3; Unreserved Section $2.50
All who purchase tickets will be invited to attend the activities of the Berkshire Music Center at 6 o'clock:—
SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA ☆ OPERA SCENES
THE CHORUS ☆ CHAMBER MUSIC
— REMAINING FESTIVAL CONCERTS —
Fri. and Sat. Eves., Sun. Afts., Aug. 5, 6, 7; Aug. 12, 13, 14
(CHAMBER CONCERT—WED. EVE. AUG. 10)
Wed. Eve. Chamber Concerts—$2, $3; Fri. Eve., Sat. Eve. and Sun. Aft. Shed Concerts—$2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Box Seats). Admission $2.00.
Write or phone TICKET OFFICE, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. (Lenox 600)
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

Music Notes

Schenectady Gazette 8/9

By D. E. RITZ

Hot weather is hot everywhere and there is no escaping it, as we found out Saturday. We decided we needed air—lots of air—and started out early in the morning for a day at Tanglewood and South Mountain.

We left some of heat behind as the car climbed the hills near the Massachusetts border and the nearer we got to Tanglewood the more comfortable it became.

Ten o'clock is the opening of the public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed and we joined several thousand others in listening.

Charles Munch directed. The air in the Shed was most comfortable (for the audience) but we suspected that the players were not so cool.

We were positive that Mr. Munch was not having a cool time of it either. He shed his suit coat early and the back of his pale blue shirt was drenched. Before intermission the whole shirt, back and front, was drenched. After intermission he came out in a white shirt with a scarf (or was it a towel) around his neck. It wasn't long before the towel (scarf) came off in one swift movement without a beat being missed.

Music being rehearsed included two of the Beethoven symphonies, number 8 and number 5, and the piano concerto number 4 in G major with Eugene Istomin as soloist. All were in preparation for the following day's program.

Calm in rehearsal but firm in knowledge of what he wants—and when he wants, he gets—Mr. Munch is painstaking. The left hand was lifted many times at first as he called for stops to get just the precise effect he was trying for. A typical Gallic gesture followed an exhortation and a chuckle came from the entire orchestra.

The men in the orchestra were in informal morning attire and many of the shirts were remarkable.

One noted the ease with which Mr. Munch cues in the instruments, the elbows close to the body in the quiet spots and the almost imperceptible beat then. But in vital spots where he hurries the group on, the stick raps the beat against the stand and if necessary his foot can slap the beat out smartly.

The soloist rehearsed with the orchestra following the morning rest period and gave a beautiful interpretation of the work.

It was hot and the rehearsal was over at 12:15 to everyone's satisfaction.

Orchestra, students and guests found refreshment and food at the cafeteria and wandered over the grounds before afternoon sessions of the summer school started.

A hot reporter decided on a wandering ride through the New England countryside before heading for South Mountain. We met a group of energetic cyclists with more ambition than we. But even they were reduced to pushing the bikes up a mountain and asking if we knew where the springs were. We didn't South Mountain smelled delightful, as it always does with its crushed aromatic herbs underfoot, but the music temple was warm. We were lucky though and found seats near a door where air was available.

Artists were Alexander Schneider, violinist; and George Schick, pianist, and the program was the second in the Saturday summer series. The program included two Mozart sonatas, a Schubert sonata and the difficult Schubert "Rondo in B minor." It was much too hot to play but the soloists presented remarkably fine effects when one considers that no violin could not be kept in tune in such weather.

As we headed off the mountains we could see storm clouds below but it was some time after arriving home before the truly lovely music of rain, RAIN, real rain on a roof, in the gutters and on thirsty leaves started.

Tanglewood Music Festival Offers Pleasant Weekend

Photographs by Stephen F. Ells and Robert M. O'Neil

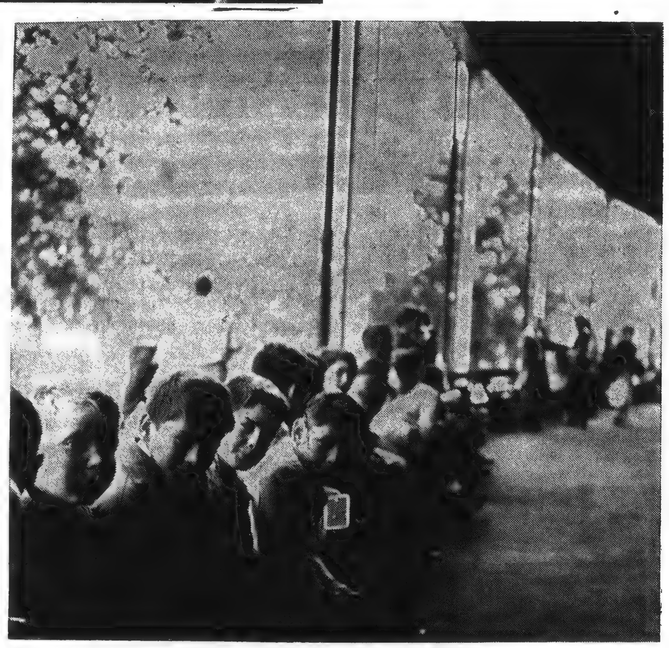
Summer School students, independently and on a tour sponsored by the Summer School, will join music lovers from New York and New England this weekend at the beautiful Tanglewood estate of the Berkshire Music Festival.

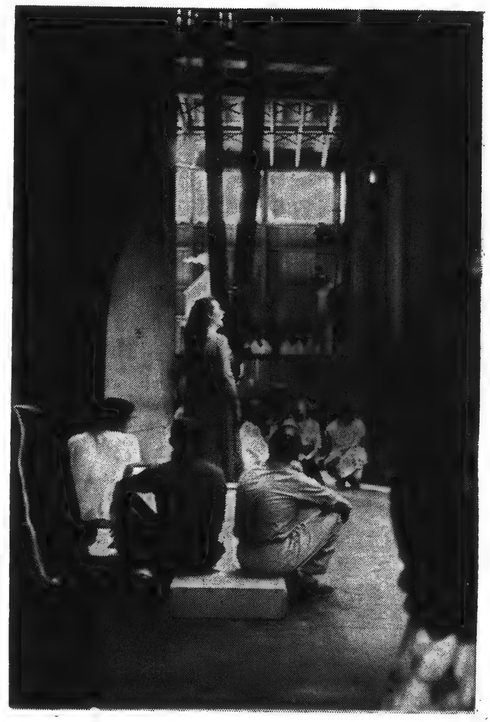
At Tanglewood, concert-goers lounge on blankets on the lawn or sit with more regard for decorum, but less concern with trees and stars, in the music shed. Festival participants listen to the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch or one of the visiting conductors, to soloists of the rank of Gregor Piatagorsky, Rudolph Serkin or Isaac Stern, to Chamber Music Concerts, to an open rehearsal, and to student orchestra and opera productions.

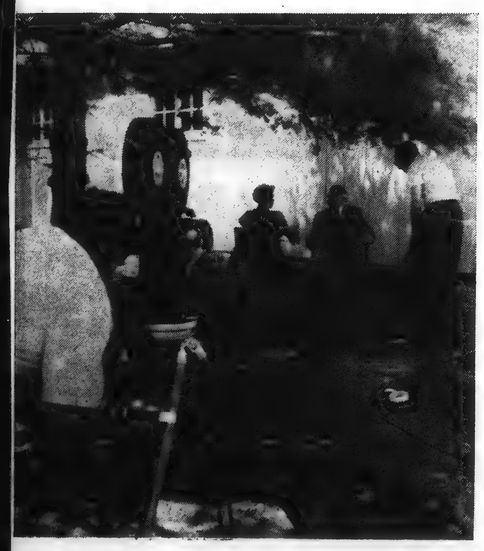
This weekend Leonard Bernstein (bottom center), a protege of Serge Koussevitzky, who conceived the idea of the festival, will conduct Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" in a memorial concert for the great conductor.

The estate in Lenox where the festival is held each summer was originally given to Koussevitzky through the efforts of the friends of the Boston Symphony. From Koussevitzky's original dream of a summer school of music in the inspiring setting of the Massachusetts hills, the Tanglewood center has develop into a music symposium where famous artists and conductors meet with students studying voice, an instrument, composing, opera or stage techniques. The Berkshires have been transformed into an area saturated with artists, musicians, dancers, and art followers from all over the country.

In addition to the "Missa Solemnis" the program this weekend will include Beethoven's "Fidelio," Act II and Excerpts from "Gotterdammerung" by Wagner. On Sunday Charles Munch will conduct an all Beethoven concert, the Symphony No. 8 in major, the Piano Concerto No. 4 in G major, and the Symphony No. 5 in C minor.

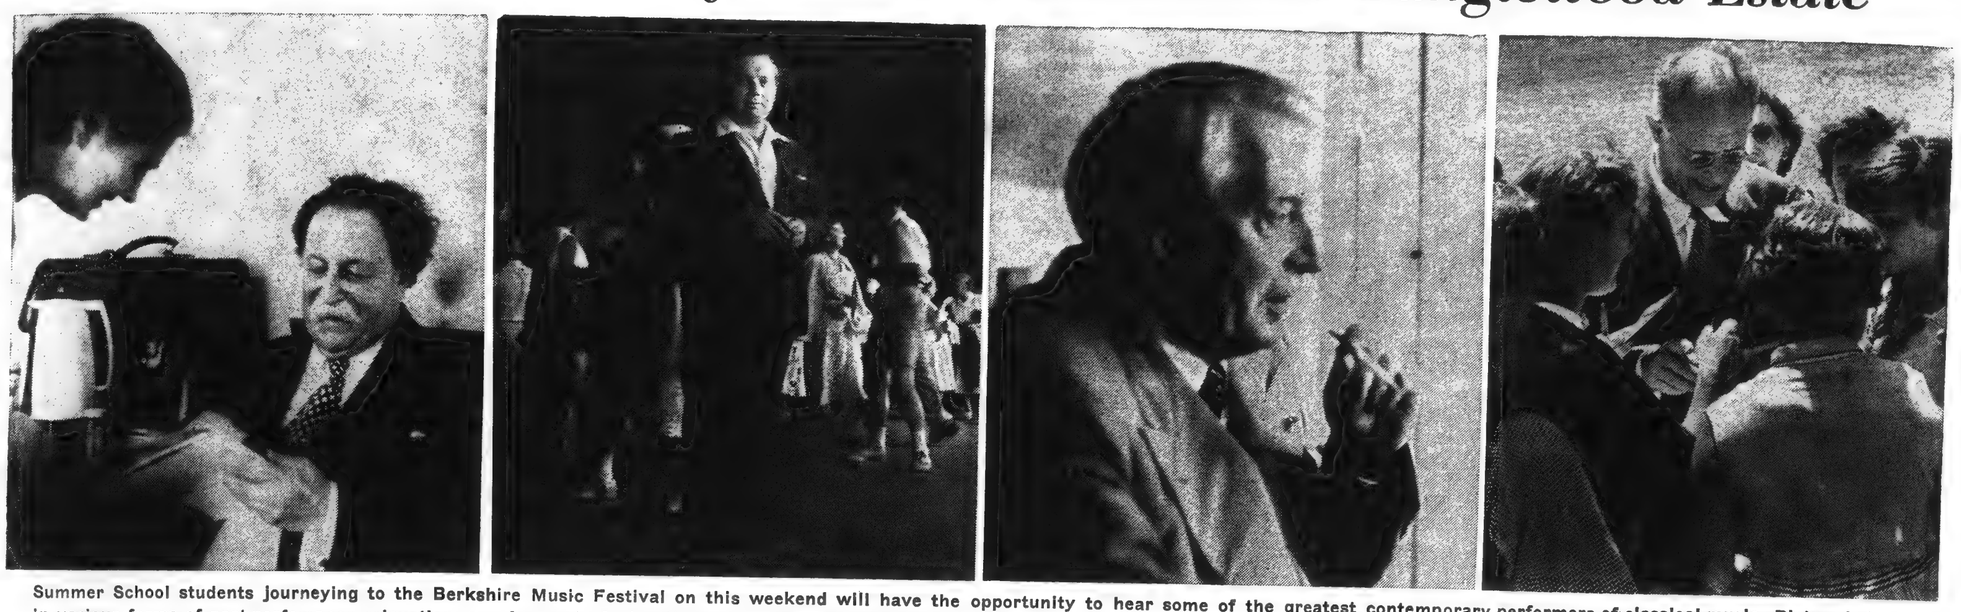






53

Musical Celebrities Perform and Relax at the Tanglewood Estate



Summer School students journeying to the Berkshire Music Festival on this weekend will have the opportunity to hear some of the greatest contemporary performers of classical music. Pictured above, in various forms of post-perfomance relaxation, are four principal artists of last week's Braham-Beethoven program. At left, conductor Pierre Monteux brightens the day for an autograph hunter; Isaac Stern, soloist in the Brahms Violin Concerto, comes to the Saturday open rehearsal in the shed. Atright, tired conductor Charles Munch reflects on his performance of Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto, in which pianist Rudolf Serkin, far right, was the soloist. Those travelling with the sponsored program this weekend will hear Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis," played in memory of Koussevitzky.

20 C M47 8/10 THE

Music: Premiere of 'Rope' at Lenox

Work by Mennini Gets Polished Performance

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 8—"The Rope," an opera made for Tanglewood and with Tanglewood's help, achieved the right happy ending here Monday night—a premiere at Tanglewood.

The composer is Louis Mennini, 31-year-old American, and he used as his libretto a one-act play that Eugene O'Neill penned almost forty years ago. Mr. Mennini wrote the opera on commission of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. Among the terms of his commission were the stipulations that he spend a summer at Tanglewood and consult with its Opera Department staff in the preparation of his work.

•

Mr. Mennini was here two summers ago, doing the preliminary work on his opera. He was here again Monday night to receive the warm tribute of the audience.

One does not know where and how his Berkshire Music Center guides helped him during the writing or production. It is clear, however, that Mr. Mennini has a flair for the theatre. He had the wisdom to choose a good subject, and he knew how to write music that added fresh values to the text.

"The Rope," as O'Neill conceived it, is a bitter vignette of brutish people living on the seacoast, presumably New England, in 1917. It does not have the depth of characterization that O'Neill's later plays strove for, but it does have some tension and an ironic conclusion.

Mr. Mennini made a few slight alterations in the play to provide himself with a workable libretto. Dramatically his version is effective, for the bare lines do not lend themselves easily to singing. The composer has not attempted to write extended arias, but occasionally he lets his characters have expansive phrases.

Louis Mennini

Work Is Based on Play by Eugene O'Neill

•

Mr. Mennini has given his orchestra most of the songfulness. He has resisted the temptation to be obvious—to write harsh dissonance for a harsh subject. He has sought to infuse it with warmth and poignancy. He has a lyrical gift, and he has turned out a piece that should have wide currency in the workshops, perhaps on television. One would like to see what he could do with a bigger subject filled with more poetry.

The performance was remarkably [illegible] Malcolm Bernstein, [illegible] Kenzie, Lynn Detwiler and Stephen Harbachick [illegible] and played believably. Molly McLennan did well by the little girl. Henry Janiec, conducting student at Tanglewood, handled the orchestra and cast smoothly, and Boris Goldovsky's staging was atmospheric. David Hays' sets and lighting and Leo Van Witsen's costumes were valuable contributions to a strong mood piece.

•

For doing "The Rope" so well one can forgive the Tanglewood opera forces for being amateurish with Mozart's operatic fragment, "Zaide." Mr. Goldovsky, in one of his characteristic spoken program notes, prefaced the performance of "Zaide" with the promise that other Mozart fragments would be along in seasons to come just as Tanglewood has introduced on the American stage such pieces as "Idomeneo" and "Titus."

•

If these unproduced fragments are no better than "Zaide," Mr. Goldovsky and his Tanglewood Opera Department had better think again. There may be charming musical numbers in them, as there were in "Zaide," but it might be best to do such numbers in concert style, "Zaide," at least as done here Monday night, was simply not stageworthy. And the young singers lacked the know-how of the Mozart style.

"Zaide" introduced something new to Tanglewood—a female conductor. She was Aviva Einhorn, who is here from her Paris home as a conducting auditor.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

AUG 9 1955

Festival Now in Final Week; Students Stage Two Operas

The final week of the 1955 Berkshire Music festival got underway last night as students of the summer music school staged two operas in the theater concert hall. A second performance is scheduled this evening at 8.30 o'clock.

Christina Cardillo, North Adams soprano, sang the lead role in one of the two operas, "Zaide," by Mozart. This was the American premiere of the opera, an English version of which was prepared by Boris Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell of the music center's opera department.

The other work was "The Rope," by Louis Mennini, which was being performed for the first time anywhere. Mr. Mennini, a member of the faculty of the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N. Y., wrote the opera under a commission from the Koussevitzky Music Foundation plan at Tanglewood.

There are musical events scheduled every night through Saturday, and the final concert of the season is scheduled on Sunday afternoon.

Tomorrow evening there will be the last of the chamber music programs in the theater-concert hall. On Thursday the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit concert will be held in the big shed, featuring the Boston Symphony and the Boston Pops orchestras. The final weekend series of concerts will get underway Friday evening. All the evening programs begin at 8.30 o'clock.

56

Musical Celebrities Perform and Relax at the Tanglewood Estate

Summer School students journeying to the Berkshire Music Festival on this weekend will have the opportunity to hear some of the greatest contemporary performers of classical music. Pictured above, in various forms of post-perfomance relaxation, are four principal artists of last week's Braham-Beethoven program. At left, conductor Pierre Monteux brightens the day for an autograph hunter; Isaac Stern, soloist in the Brahms Violin Concerto, comes to the Saturday open rehearsal in the shed. Atright, tired conductor Charles Munch reflects on his performance of Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto, in which pianist Rudolf Serkin, far right, was the soloist. Those travelling with the sponsored program this weekend will hear Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis," played in memory of Koussevitzky.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

AUG 9 1955

20 C M47 8/10 THE

Music: Premiere of 'Rope' at Lenox

Work by Mennini Gets Polished Performance

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 8—"The Rope," an opera made for Tanglewood and with Tanglewood's help, achieved the right happy ending here Monday night—a première at Tanglewood.

The composer is Louis Mennini, 34-year-old American, and he used as his libretto a one-act play that Eugene O'Neill penned almost forty years ago. Mr. Mennini wrote the opera on commission of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. Among the terms of his commission were the stipulations that he spend a summer at Tanglewood and consult with its Opera Department staff in the preparation of his work.

●

Mr. Mennini was here two summers ago, doing the preliminary work on his opera. He was here again Monday night to receive the warm tribute of the audience.

One does not know where and how his Berkshire Music Center guides helped him during the writing or production. It is clear, however, that Mr. Mennini has a flair for the theatre. He had the wisdom to choose a good subject, and he knew how to write music that added fresh values to the theme.

"The Rope," as O'Neill conceived it, is a bitter vignette of brutish people living on the seacoast, presumably New England, in 1917. It does not have the depth of characterization that O'Neill's later plays strove for, but it does have some tension and an ironic conclusion.

Mr. Mennini made a few slight alterations in the play to provide himself with a workable libretto. Dramatically his version is effective, but the bare lines do not lend themselves easily to singing. The composer has not attempted to write extended arias, but occasionally he lets his characters have expansive phrases.

Louis Mennini

Work Is Based on Play by Eugene O'Neill

●

Mr. Mennini has given his orchestra most of the songfulness. He has resisted the temptation to be obvious—to write harsh dissonance for a harsh subject. He has sought to infuse it with warmth and poignancy. He has a lyrical gift, and he has turned out a piece that should have wide currency in the workshops, perhaps on television. One would like to see what he could do with a bigger subject filled with more poetry.

The performance was remarkably [illegible] Malcolm Bernstein, [illegible] Kenzie, Lynn Det[illegible] Stephen Harbachick [illegible] and played believa[illegible] Molly McLennan did well [illegible] girl. Henry Janiec, conduct[illegible] student at Tanglewood, handled the orchestra and cast smoothly, and Boris Goldovsky's staging was atmospheric. David Hays' sets and lighting and Leo Van Witsen's costumes were valuable contributions to a strong mood piece.

●

For doing "The Rope" so well one can forgive the Tanglewood opera forces for being amateurish with Mozart's operatic fragment, "Zaide." Mr. Goldovsky, in one of his characteristic spoken program notes, prefaced the performance of "Zaide" with the promise that other Mozart fragments would be along in seasons to come just as Tanglewood has introduced on the American stage such pieces as "Idomeneo" and "Titus."

●

If these unproduced fragments are no better than "Zaide," Mr. Goldovsky and his Tanglewood Opera Department had better think again. There may be charming musical numbers in them, as there were in "Zaide," but it might be best to do such numbers in concert style, "Zaide," at least as done here Monday night, was simply not stageworthy. And the young singers lacked the know-how of the Mozart style.

"Zaide" introduced something new to Tanglewood—a female conductor. She was Aviva Einhorn, who is here from her Paris home as a conducting auditor.

Festival Now in Final Week; Students Stage Two Operas

The final week of the 1955 Berkshire Music festival got underway last night as students of the summer music school staged two operas in the theater concert hall. A second performance is scheduled this evening at 8.30 o'clock.

Christina Cardillo, North Adams soprano, sang the lead role in one of the two operas, "Zaide," by Mozart. This was the American premiere of the opera, an English version of which was prepared by Boris Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell of the music center's opera department.

The other work was "The Rope," by Louis Mennini, which was being performed for the first time anywhere. Mr. Mennini, a member of the faculty of the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N. Y., wrote the opera under a commission from the Koussevitzky Music Foundation plan at Tanglewood.

There are musical events scheduled every night through Saturday, and the final concert of the season is scheduled on Sunday afternoon.

Tomorrow evening there will be the last of the chamber music programs in the theater-concert hall. On Thursday the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit concert will be held in the big shed, featuring the Boston Symphony and the Boston Pops orchestras. The final weekend series of concerts will get underway Friday evening. All the evening programs begin at 8.30 o'clock.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

Berkshire Festival Expects To Break Attendance Records

With an anticipated attendance of 130,000 at its twenty-four concerts — six chamber music programs by noted soloists and visiting ensembles; six chamber orchestra concerts by principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; twelve concerts by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, concludes its 1955 schedule during the coming week.

Added to the above will be an expected 10,000 at "Tanglewood on Parade," the gala annual benefit for the orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, Thursday (Aug. 11); 9,000 at four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony, in aid of the orchestra's pension fund; and a predictable 40,000 at the 30-odd concerts and demonstrations by the five departments of the Berkshire Music Center, and it may be estimated that attendance records again will be shattered, proving the popularity of Music Director Charles Munch's decision in 1954 to enlarge the annual summer festival.

The sixth and final week of Festival concerts opens with the concluding event of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, on Aug. 10 in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Six principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (Gino Cioffi, clarinet; Samuel Mayes, cello; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; James Stagliano, French Horn), will be assisted by David Lloyd, tenor; and Ralph Berkowitz, piano, in a program of trios, songs, a quintet and a cello sonata.

Charles Munch will conduct an all-French orchestral program, music of Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel, on the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Shed concert of Friday evening (Aug. 12), and an all-Beethoven program including the Ninth Symphony with soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; and augmented chorus on Sunday afternoon (Aug. 14). Pierre Monteux will conduct the Saturday evening (Aug. 13) program, comprising Wagner, Brahms, Debussy and Strauss.

Mr. Munch's concluding concert will be his fifth all-Beethoven program of the summer. With guest conductors Monteux and Leonard Bernstein also performing Beethoven on their concerts, Tanglewood in 1955 will have been largely devoted to the music of the German composer.

The complete programs are:

Aug. 10—Program of Beethoven: Trio in B flat, Opus 11, for clarinet, cello and piano, Gino Cioffi, Samuel Mayes, Ralph Berkowitz; "An die Ferne Geliebte," six songs for tenor and piano, David Lloyd, Ralph Berkowitz; Sonata in A, Opus 69, for cello and piano, Samuel Mayes, Ralph Berkowitz; Trio in G, for flute, bassoon and piano, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Sherman Walt, Ralph Berkowitz; Quintet in E flat, for oboe, clarinet, bassoon, horn and piano, Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, Sherman Walt, James Stagliano, Ralph Berkowitz.

Aug. 11—"Tanglewood on Parade": 4:00 p. m., special performance of opera, to be announced, formal gardens for reserved seat and box patrons only; 6 p. m., student symphony orchestra, Music Shed Student opera, Theatre-Concert Hall Student chamber music, Chamber Music Hall; 7 p. m., picnic supper, student chorus, porch, administration building; 8:15 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein, conductor; Suite from "On the Waterfront," Bernstein (first performance); "A Lincoln Portrait," Copland (narrator to be announced); Boston "Pops" Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, conductor; Caprice Espagnole, Rimsky Korsakov; Rhapsody in Blue, Gershwin; soloist, Leonard Bernstein; Suite from the ballet "Graduation Ball," Strauss-Dorati.

10:30 p. m., drawing for door prizes, Music Shed; 11 p. m., waltzing on the lawn, by the administration building.

Aug. 12—Berlioz, "Symphonie Fantastique"; Debussy, "La Mer"; Ravel, "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite No. 2, conductor, Charles Munch.

Aug. 13—Wagner, Overture to "The Flying Dutchman"; Brahms, Symphony No. 3 in F major; Debussy, three nocturnes, Clouds-Festivals-Sirens (with female voices of the festival chorus of the Berkshire Music Center, trained by Iva D. Hiatt); Strauss, Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier," conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Aug. 14—Beethoven, Overture, "Leonore," No. 3; Symphony No. 9, in D minor. Soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass. Combined chorus of Berkshire Music Center students and chorus of Springfield, Mass., symphony orchestra, trained by Hugh Ross and John Krueger. Conductor, Charles Munch.

This weekend's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday evening: Charles Munch conducting Act II of Beethoven's "Fidelio," with soloists Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd, Mac Morgan, Christina Cardillo, Malcolm Bernstein and Arthur Schoep; also excerpts from "Gotterdammerung," with Miss Harshaw as soloist in the Immolation Scene.

Sunday afternoon: Charles Munch conducting an all-Beethoven program: Symphony No. 8 in F major. Piano Concerto No. 4, in G major, Eugene Istomin, soloist. Symphony No. 5 in C minor.

The final week of the Berkshire Music Center will see the school in almost continuous activity. Student concerts, open to the public through a voluntary contribution to the school's support, are as follows:

Aug. 7, 10 a. m., Chamber Music Hall: Concert of Chamber Music by students of Dept. I.

Aug. 8 and 9, 8:30 p. m., Theatre-Concert Hall: (alternating casts, students of Dept. IV).

"Zaide," opera in two acts, by Mozart (K. 344) Libretto by Johann Andreas Schachtner. English version by Sarah Caldwell and Marvin Schofer. Setting and lighting by David Hays. Costumes and make-up by Leo Van Witsen. Orchestra of Dept. I students conducted by Aviva Einhorn. (First performance in the U. S.) "The Rope," opera in one act, by Louis Mennini, commissioned 1953 by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. Adapted from Eugene O'Neill's one-act play, "The Rope" (1917). Libretto and music by Mr. Mennini. Costumes and make-up by Leo Van Witsen. Orchestra of Dept. I students conducted by Henry Janiec. (World-premiere).

Aug. 13, 3 p. m., Music Shed: Symphony orchestra concert by students of DepartmentI.

Aug. 15, 10 a. m., Chamber Music Hall: Chamber music concert by students of Department I.

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood box office for all Festival concerts, and reservations may be made by telephone to Lenox, Mass., 600. Programs and a calendar of the more than 25 events at the Berkshire Music Center, with information on how to join the Friends' Society, will be mailed on request. For the convenience of Festival patrons, the Berkshire Hills Conference, Pittsfield 26, Mass., will supply a list of hotel, motel, or guest house accommodations in the Berkshires, and, through the cooperation of local chambers of commerce and similar organizatisno, will endeavor to secure reservations.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 74,966

AUG 6 1955

Lenox, Aug. 5—With concerts on Saturday at 8:30 p. m. and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 p. m., the 1955 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, moves into its final week end but one. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct both concerts.

The program Saturday will be devoted to excerpts from two of the greatest operas in the literature — Beethovens "Fidelio" and Wagner's "Die Gotterdammerung." With Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd and Mac Morgan as the principal soloists, and the Berkshire Festival Chorus trained by John Krueger, the first half of the program will consist of a concert presentation of the second act of "Fidelio," a Tanglewood first performance. After the intermission, three excerpts from "Die Gotterdammerung" will be heard: Siegfried's Rhine Journey, Siegfried's Death Music, and the Immolation Scene in which Miss Harshaw will sing Brunnhilde.

Three assisting "Fidelio" soloists have been chosen by Charles Munch from Tanglewood's opera departments: Malcolm Bernstein of Baltimore, bass, who has the dual role of Pizzaro and Fernando; Christina Cardillo, soprano, North Adams, who sings Marzelline, and Arthur Schoep, New York, who is

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 74,966

AUG 6 1955

Boston Symphony Orchestra Members End Long Careers

Lenox, Aug. 5—Six members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will retire at the conclusion of the orchestra's Berkshire Festival on Aug. 14 are Jacob Raichman, principal trombone; first violinists Carlos Pinfield and Paul Fedorovsky; second violinist Ralph del Sordo; Louis Artieres, viola; and Walter G. MacDonald, French horn.

Mr. Raichman has been a member of the orchestra since 1927. Mr. Pinfield joined the orchestra in 1912; Fedorovsky in 1925; Artieres and Sordo have both been with the Boston Symphony for 35 years, MacDonald, since 1932.

Incoming members are cellists Richard A. Kapuscinski, of Cincinnati, and Robert Ripley, of Cleveland Heights; violinists Noah Bielski, of Queens Village, N. Y. Alfred Schneider, of St. Louis, and Joseph Silverstein, of Detroit; and trombonist William M. Gibson, of Pittsburgh.

FAR ROCKAWAY, N. Y.
JOURNAL
Circ. W. 3,875

JUL 26 1955

Mrs. Tess Brier of Central Avenue, and Mrs. Eleanor Krauss of Cedarhurst, spent the previous weekend at the Tanglewood Music Festival in Lenox, Mass., where they heard a number of leading artists perform.

Maureen Ellen Luce, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Luce of 1806 Greenport Road, celebrated her first birthday on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Reidy of 536 Beach 22nd Street, celebrate their 14th wedding anniversary this Tuesday by going out for dinner.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Standard-Times (e)
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 58,894

AUG 4 1955

Actor Due at Tanglewood

LENOX, Aug. 4 (UP)—Actor Claude Rains will make his debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra here next Thursday at the Berkshire Music Festival. Rains will be narrator in Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait." Leonard Bernstein will be the conductor.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-0068

News (e)
NAUGATUCK, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 4,840

AUG 5 1955

RAINS IN DEBUT

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 4 — (UP)— Actor Claude Rains will make his debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra here next Thursday during the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" program of the Berkshire Music Festival.

Rains will be narrator in a performance of Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait." Leonard Bernstein will be the conductor.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

AUG 5 1955

Claude Rains to Make Debut At Tanglewood Next Thursday

Claude Rains, noted star of stage, screen and television, will appear at Tanglewood next Thursday to narrate Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait." The performance will be one of the highlights of the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit concert for the Eerkshire Music center, the summer music school of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

Debut at Tanglewood

Mr. Rains has made three appearances in the Lincoln piece with the Philadelphia orchestra, but this will be his first time with the Boston Symphony and his debut at Tanglewood.

Mr. Copland's Lincoln study was inspired by Andre Kostelanetz, who, during the crucial weeks following the country's entry into the second World war, gave thought to a means by which music could be used to mirror the American spirit. Mr. Copland's text comes from the letters and speeches of Lincoln, and the music incorporates two songs of the period, the famous "Camptown Races" and a ballad of 1840 known today as "Springfield Mountain."

The composition is divided into three sections, the first suggesting the mysterious sense of fatality that surrounds Lincoln's personality, the middle one sketching the background of his era and the final one a simple but impressive frame about the words of Lincoln himself.

First Performance

Leonard Bernstein, who is conducting the Lincoln selection with the Boston Symphony, also will include on his portion of the program the first performance anywhere of a suite he has arranged from the music he composed for the Academy-award winning film "On the Waterfront."

Arthur Fiedler and the celebrated Boston "Pops" orchestra, in a program of Rimsky-Korsakov, Johann Strauss and Gershwin, will conclude the concert. Some of Mr. Fiedler's own special pieces will be played as encores.

During the early part of "Tanglewood on Parade," patrons are invited to simultaneous demonstrations from 6 to 8 o'clock by all five departments of the Berkshire Music center. Box and reserved seat ticket holdens may also attend a performance in the formal gardens of Puccini's short comic opera, "Gianni Schicchi," by the center's opera department.

165 Church Street - New York

TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE
Circ. D. 188,506 - S. 158,251

JUL 24 1955

New York Group Planning Summer Music Festival In Catskills

Symphony Of Air Signed Up; Van Beinum To Open Season.

By IRVING KOLODIN

NEW YORK, July 23—As everyone in-the-know of New York's musical life realizes, the world's greatest city sorely needs a suitable summer complement to its indoor music-making as London has Glyndebourne, Vienna has Salzburg, Chicago has Ravinia Park, and Boston has Tanglewood. None are exactly similar solutions of the problems, which is as it should be, since every problem is different.

Now a group of enterprising people headed by Metropolitan baritone John Brownlee has, in the spirit of Brigham Young, looked over the landscape and decided, on behalf of Ellenville in Ulster County, in the Catskills, that "this is the place." To implement their decision they have engaged the Symphony of the Air (former NBC — "Toscanini" orchestra) as the resident ensemble, and taken advantage of the presence in this country of Holland's celebrated Eduard van Beinum to appoint him for the ceremonial opening on Aug. 3, followed by concerts on Aug. 5 and 7.

★ ★ ★

ALREADY PROJECTED are two further series of Wednesday - Friday - Sunday orchestral concerts, to be led by Erich Leinsdorf and Alfred Wallenstein. On Thursday and Saturday evenings of each week operas will be presented under the direction of Emerson Buckley, recently associated with the New York City Center Opera Company. To judge from a not wholly dependable prospectus, "Boheme" will be the first attraction, followed by "Butterfly." Each work will be given twice, with casts made up of Metropolitan-City Center personnel.

There are, however, some local factors which cause one to wonder whether "this is the place" or "is this the place?" is the more suitable motto. Ellenville, as most people in this part of the world are aware, may have its roots in Ulster County, but its heart belongs to Sullivan County—which is to say, to that gaily disorganized vacation land containing within itself what is commonly called the Borscht Belt, as theatrically memorialized in the play "Having Wonderful Time" and musical "Wish You Were Here."

★ ★ ★

I WOULDN'T ATTEMPT to prophesy how far people will go to escape the heat of New York and/or to hear fine music well performed, but I permit myself some faint doubt that they will repair in large numbers to this particular terrain. It must strike others, as it strikes me, as luring more people into an area already over-crowded in summer time.

One of the attractions of Tanglewood is its isolation, leading in turn to the probability that most people who attend a concert there have come for the purpose rather than regarding it as a way to "kill an evening" incidental to a vacation.

However, no such venture can possibly be proved or disproved on speculation alone, and the Empire State Music Festival, as it is being called, has my hearty good wishes for success. I shall doubtless make the 2-hour, or so, drive myself in early August, for investigatory purposes. I only hope (a) that all overnight accommodations are not pre-empted by vacationers; (b) that it doesn't rain.

Arrangements have been made for sheltering half of the 4,000 seats by a tent, but lap room is likely to be at a premium if the skies open up and the other 2,000 start looking for shelter. Better bring your sou'wester, Mynheer van Beinum; August is a rough month in the Catskills.

MET BARITONE JOHN BROWNLEE
He heads group arranging festival at Ellenville

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 130,559

AUG 9 1955

Mabel Daniels Work In Berkshire Fete

One of the highlights of "Tanglewood on. Parade"—this annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, Lenox, to be held Thursday night—will be a performance of Mabel Daniels' "Psalm of Praise," under the direction of Hugh Ross. Miss Daniels, a Boston composer, was acclaimed for the choral work at t he75th anniversary concert of Radcliffe College last spring.

Other attractions of the interesting program include Leonard Bernstein conducting the Boston Symphony in a first performance of his suite from "On the Waterfront," and of "A Lincoln Portrait," by Aaron Copland, with Claude Rains as narrator. Arthur Fiedler and th eBoston Pops will appear in the other part of the program, and again, Mr. Bernstein, this time as piano soloist in Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

BUFFALO, N. Y.
COURIER EXPRESS
Circ. D. 154,344 - S. 293,773

JUL 25 1955

Radio and TV

COLORCAST

"The Fourposter," Jan de Hartog's romantic comedy which follows a couple through 35 years of married life, will be presented on the "Producer's Showcase" from 8 to 9:30 this evening on Ch. 2. Jessica Tandy and Hume Cronyn star in the roles they created on Broadway, where the play ran for 79 weeks. It will be shown in both color and black and white.

PREMIERE

"Sherlock Holmes" and his faithful friend, Dr. Watson, bow in with the "Case of the Cunningham Heritage" at 9:30 tonight on Ch. 4. Ronald Howard, son of the late Leslie Howard, stars as Sherlock, and Marion Crawford plays Dr. Watson.

MUSIC

Leontyne Price, soprano, and William Warfield, baritone, will be guest artists on the "Voice of Firestone" when it is simulcast over Ch. 17 and WKBW at 8:30 this evening. They will sing selections from "Porgy and Bess."

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the broadcast from the "Berkshire Festival" at Tanglewood at 8:10 this evening on WGR. The entire program will be devoted to Beethoven's "Symphony No. 7 in A Major."

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 516,590 - Sat. 176,542

JUL 29 1955

Symphony To Take To the Hills

Special to World-Telegram and Sun.

ELLENVILLE, N. Y., July 29. —Toscanini's orchestra will come to a mountainside farm, here in the Rip Van Winkle country, on Wednesday night and the Empire State Music Festival will be established as the state's outdoor, summer center for concerts, opera and ballet.

The 75-piece orchestra, now called the Symphony of the Air, will pay homage to their former conductor by playing the first concert at Ellenville in his honor. And just as the orchestra will long bear the sub-title of "Toscanini's orchestra," there is already evidence that the name of the festival will be "Ellenville." Similar centers of music are "Tanglewood" in Lenox, Mass., and Robin Hood Dell in Philadelphia. The festival's five weeks' season will be presented in a massive tent, especially constructed to seat 2000 persons with an additional 2000 outside. Permanent buildings are planned in the $300,000 venture into an annual music festival.

Ellenville is 85 miles from New York in the Shawangunk Mountain range and in the center of a vacation area which attracts more than a half million visitors each summer.

"Years ago I was on a bus which broke down near Ellenville," said Jascha Rushkin, one of the violinists. "Then I got the idea for a great festival of music in this beautiful country. I bought land in New Paltz and offered it as the site —but the business people of Ellenville invited the festival to come here, and have supported it generously."

"Ellenville" is the result of Mr. Rushkin's labors, assisted by John Brownlee of the Metropolitan Opera. They serve as co-directors of the festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

AUG 8 1955

Tanglewood Audience Hears All-Beethoven Program

By EVANS CLINCHY

Despite threatening clouds hat made their threats good in he form of bucketsful of rain, lmost 10,000 people turned up t Tanglewood Sunday for anther all-Beethoven program.

* * *

A LOT of those people surendered to the weather after orrents of rain had fallen upon hem. As many as possible noved in off the lawn to the mpty spaces along the edges of he Music Shed. But the rest f them picked up their blankets nd pillows and headed for home bout midway along in the ourth Piano Concerto.

For those lucky or agile nough to find shelter in the hed and for the ones with eats, the rain caused no real isturbance. There was no nunder to compete with the ettledrums of the Fifth Symhony and no lightning to draw he's attention away from the lympian fireworks scattered roughout any all-Beethoven ternoon.

The pelting of the rain, howver, may have had one dullg effect. It may have reduced e volume of Eugene Istomin's ano playing in the Fourth ncerto. At any rate, Charles unch and the Boston Symony seemed to somewhat overwer Mr. Istomin at times, hough his reading was always nodel of clarity and graced all ng the line with poetic inht.

MR. ISTOMIN, just to cavil bit, has one unfortunate fault. is one of those pianists who uld give more pleasure on ords than in person, for it is difficult to disassociate his skilled playing from his annoying keyboard histrionics.

Perhaps he is simply young and still self-conscious before an audience, but his superfilious posturings and his appearance of being just too, too carried away by all this earth-shaking music, these things are hard to take.

Along with giving sound, satisfying support to Mr. Istomin, Dr. Munch and his men presented dramatic, quite inspired performances of the Fifth and the Eighth Symphonies.

* * *

THE MAJOR problem in an all-Beethoven program is variety. True, the Eighth is far more playful than the Fifth, but even with this built in assistance, I'm not sure Dr. Munch completely solved his difficulty.

Perhaps he read both symphonies in too similar, too dramatic a way. The heavens shook Sunday with the proper degree of fear and trembling, all natural considerations of the rain aside, but Dr. Munch could possibly have lessened the effect of sameness by concentrating just a little more on simple grace and elegance in the more quiet, more purely musical moments.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

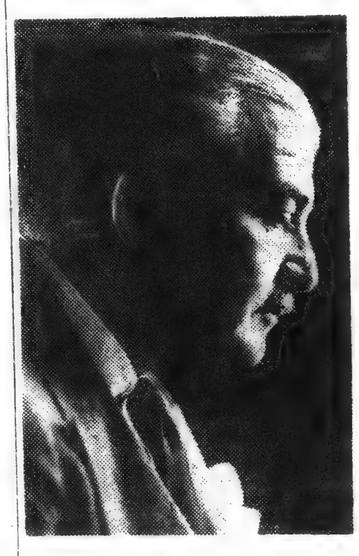
AUG 7 1955

Wide Variety of Programs In Final Tanglewood Week

All-Beethoven Concert Today, Chamber Music Wednesday, 'Tanglewood On Parade' Thursday With Climax of Season Next Week End

Lenox, Aug. 6—With an anticipated attendance of 130,000 at its 24 concerts—six chamber music programs by noted soloists and visiting ensembles; six chamber orchestra concerts by principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, 12 concerts by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony in the 6000-seat Music Shed—the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, concludes its 1955 schedule during the next week.

Added to the above will be an expected 10,000 at "Tanglewood on Parade", the gala annual benefit for the orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center,



ARTHUR FIEDLER

Thursday; 9000 at four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony, in aid of the orchestra's pension fund; and a predictable 40,000 at the 30-odd concerts and demonstrations by the five departments of the Berkshire Music Center, and it may be estimated that attendance records again will be shattered.

Final Concerts

The sixth and final week of Festival concerts opens with the concluding event of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, in the Theater-Concert Hall. Six principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (Gino Cioffi, clarinet; Samuel Mayes, cello; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; James Stagliano, French horn, will be assisted by David Lloyd, tenor; and Ralph Berkowitz, piano, in a program of trios, songs, a quintet and a cello sonata.

Charles Munch will conduct an all-French orchestral program, music of Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel, on the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Shed concert of Friday evening and an all-Beethoven program including the ninth symphony with soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; and augmented chorus on Sunday afternoon (Aug. 14). Pierre Monteux will conduct the Saturday evening program, comprising Wagner, Brahms, Debussy and Strauss.

Mr. Munch's concluding concert will be his fifth all-Beethoven program of the summer. With guest conductors Monteux and Leonard Bernstein also performing Beethoven on their concerts, Tanglewood in 1955 will have been largely devoted to the music of the German composer. All nine symphonies, the "Missa Solemnis", "Fidelio", Act II, two piano concertos, the violin concerto, a number of overtures, and a great body of chamber music has been performed.

"Tanglewood On Parade

Weekending music lovers are invited to subscribe to "Tanglewood on Parade" on Thursday. The annual benefit for the orchestra's music school, now completing its 13th session, which provides opportunity for ensemble performance and musical instruction under expert musicians for some 400 students from 38 states and 18 foreign countries, is from 6 to 11 p. m.

It will commence with demonstrations by all departments: student symphony orchestra, chamber music, chorus and opera, followed by a gala concert in the Music Shed and concluding with the drawing of door prizes and waltzing on the lawn. Leonard Bernstein, who heads the school's department of orchestra and conducting, and himself a student in the Berkshire Music Center's first years (1940 and 1941), will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the premiere performance of a suite he has arranged from his score for the Academy Award-winning film, "On the Waterfront", also Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait".

Arthur Fiedler will lead the Boston "Pops" Orchestra in a typical program of light music by Rimsky-Korsakov, Johann Strauss and George Gershwin, with Mr. Bernstein soloist in the "Rhapsody in Blue".

The complete programs are:

Wed., Aug. 10, 8.30 p. m., Theater-Concert Hall — Chamber Music: Program of Beethoven trios, quintets, cello sonatas and songs by 6 principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with David Lloyd, tenor; Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

Thurs., Aug. 11, "Tanglewood on Parade": 4.00 p. m., Special performance of opera, to be announced, formal gardens for reserved seat and box patrons only. 6.00 p. m., Student symphony orchestra, Music Shed, Student opera, Theater - Concert Hall, Student chamber music, Chamber Music Hall; 7.00 p. m., Picnic Supper, Student Chorus—Porch Administration Bldg. 8.15 p. m., Music Shed: Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein, Conductor: Suite from "On the Waterfront", Bernstein (First performance) "A Lincoln Portrait", Copland (Narrator to be announced), Boston "Pops" Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, Conductor: Caprice Espagnole, Rimsky Korsakov, Rhapsody in Blue. Gershwin, Soloist: Leonard Bernstein; Suite from the ballet "Graduation Ball". Strauss-Dorati. 10.30 p. m., Drawing for Door Prizes, Music Shed; 11.00 p. m., Waltzing on the Lawn—by the Administration Bldg.

Fri., Aug. 12, 8.30 p. m., Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra: Berlioz: "Symphonie Fantastique", Debussy: "La Mer", Ravel: "Daphnis and Chloe", Suite No. 2, Conductor, Charles Munch.

Sat., Aug. 13, 8.30 p. m., Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra: Wagner: Overture to "The Flying Dutchman", Brahms: Symphony No. 3, in F major, Debussy: Three nocturnes; Clouds, Festivals, Sirens (with female voices of the Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center, trained by Iva D. Hiatt) Strauss: Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier", Conductor: Pierre Monteux.

Sun., Aug. 14, 2.30 p. m., Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra: Beethoven: Overture, "Leonore", No. 3, Symphony No. 9, in D minor, Soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass. Combined chorus of Berkshire Music Center students and Chorus of Springfield Symphony Orchestra, trained by Hugh Ross and John Krueger. Conductor, Charles Munch.

Tomorrow afternoon, Charles Munch will conduct another all-Beethoven program: Symphony No. 8 in F major: Piano Concerto No. 4, in G major, Eugene Istomin, soloist: Symphony No. 5 in C minor.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 397,884

AUG 8 1955

Book Boosts Tanglewood

STOCKBRIDGE — Announcement has been made by the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Inc., of the publication of a new book, "Music Under the Moon" by John G. W. Mahanna, county editor of the Berkshire Evening Eagle in Pittsfield.

The book, which is on sale generally through New England, is a complete history of the famous Music Festival and its beginnings, drawn from official minutes of the corporation and other sources.

The 125-page book contains nearly 100 photographs, many of which are published for the first time. The volume also records the presentation of the $100,000 Music Shed at Tanglewood by the Berkshire Festival organization to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the retirement and death of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky and the engagement of Charles Munch as conductor of the orchestra.

Mahanna, who started his newspaper career in 1933 as correspondent for his home town of Lenox, site of the festival, has been associated with the news coverage of the Tanglewood concerts since their inception. He is Berkshire correspondent for many Boston and New York papers.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

AUG 2 1955

Whittier To Attend Tanglewood on Parade

Lt. Gov. Sumner G. Whittier will attend Tanglewood on Parade Thursday, Aug. 11, it was announced today by Albert W. Barris, chairman of the Republican City Committee.

Tanglewood on Parade is the annual benefit given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the Berkshire Music Center, its summer music school.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sun (e)
ATTLEBORO, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 9,613

AUG 4 1955

ALONG... THE WHITE WAY

Sheep shearing festivals of Old Nantucket was the subject of a talk given recently in the Friends Meeting House, Nantucket, by Paul Whitten, principal of Bliss school. Mr. Whitten was at one time principal of a school in Nantucket. His talk was the third in a series on the early history of the island. His talk was described in full in the Inquirer and Mirror, printed in Nantucket.

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony in Beethoven's Symphony No. 6 in F Major, subtitled the Pastorale, at the Berkshire Festival from Tanglewood, which will be broadcast over WBZ and WBZA Monday evening at 8:15 o'clock.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 285,839

AUG 6 1955

Festival History Book Published

A history of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Inc., is the subject of a book just off the presses entitled "Music Under the Moon," by John G. W. Mahana, county editor of Pittsfield's Berkshire Evening Eagle.

The Berkshire organization is the one which built the $100,000 music shed at Tanglewood and presented it to the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (e)
NEW BRITAIN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 26,853

AUG 4 1955

ductions.

The Music Circuit

Better hurry if you're planning a safari to Tanglewood this season to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra as the six final concerts will be presented this weekend and next. The Beethoven "Missa Solemnis" with chorus and soloists will be given tomorrow night, with a Beethoven and Wagner program scheduled for Saturday and an all Beethoven concert for Sunday afternoon. Also in a Beethoven mood, the Berkshire String Quartet will play selections entirely by that composer at Sunday's 4 p. m. concert in Falls Village; and tomorrow night the Connecticut Pops and soloists will present Bizet's "Carmen" in English at the Fairfield University Field. A week later, Victor Borge will be featured in a program there.

.05 Church Street - New York

ELMIRA, N. Y.
STAR-GAZETTE
Circ. D. 38,508

JUL 23 1955

Jazz Concerts Invade The Berkshires

By DOROTHY ROE
AP Women's Editor

If you feel an inferiority complex when people discuss long-hair music in hushed voices, try bringing the discussion around to jazz, advises Stephanie Barber, a young woman who has succeeded in converting a culture-conscious husband into a rabid jazz enthusiast.

Stephanie is a sultry blonde who worked as a fashion publicist in New York, married her boss, a good-looking city dweller named Phil Barber, and moved him to an old estate in the Berkshires which they converted into an establishment named Music Inn.

Stephanie, born and bred in New York City, took to country life like a kitten to cream, worked furiously at turning a group of ancient farm buildings into a modern inn, then set about the business of running it as a profitable enterprise while husband Phil carried on his business in New York.

Since the inn is situated near Lenox, Mass., home of the famous annual Berkshire music festival, Stephanie couldn't escape the atmosphere of highbrow muhic. She personally preferred jazz. Neighbors now remark thoughtfully that one really never should underestimate the power of a woman, for this year Phil and Stephanie are opening their music barn, where, deep in the longhair music country, they are offering a program of folk and jazz concerts, with appearances by such well-known downbeat artists as Count Basie, Richard Dyer-Bennet, Dizzy Gillespie and Coleman Hawkins.

Stephanie has been building up to this point for some time, having started an annual folk and jazz round table at the inn six years ago, and revelling in the arguments and performances of the jazz musicians who attend it.

Phil, though a little dazed by the changes wrought in his life by his wife, is filled with nothing but admiration for her. Having taught drama at Yale for six years, he likes having a country theater of his own.

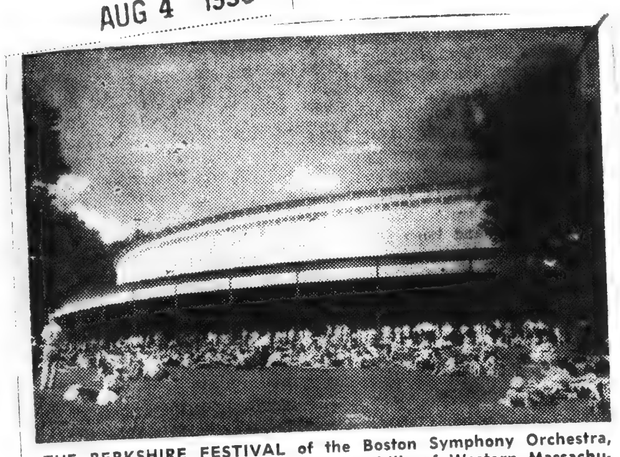
He also likes having an innkeeping wife, who can attract the country's top jazz artists to their little establishment. He likes best, perhaps, the fact that she is able to show a profit on her enterprises, and that despite her talent for hard work and business she continues to look like a glamour girl.

The Barber property in the Berkshires covers 100 acres and includes two lakes. The two Barber sons, Willson and Ben, both teen-agers, have grown husky and healthy on country air, fresh vegetables—and jazz.

Says Phil: "When you meet a city girl who looks like she belongs strictly in a Stork Club atmosphere, look out. She may have you milking cows before you know what's happening."

Hyde Park Tribune
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 9100

AUG 4 1955



THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the 16th season of 24 concerts in the hills of Western Massachusetts in which the orchestra has participated, runs for six weeks, July 6-August 14. Record-breaking attendance of 135,775 was recorded in 1954. The huge Music Shed (capacity 6,000) attracted an average of 9,197 persons.

Berkshire Festival Program Features Beethoven, Wagner

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in Lenox moves into its semi-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with the fifth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music by Beethoven, program of three piano sonatas performed by Rudolf Serkin, on August 3 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Beethoven and Wagner provide the fare for the three week end concerts in the huge Music Shed. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the three concerts, on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the department of orchestra and conducting of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, The Berkshire Music Center, takes the podium tomorrow night.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p.m. The Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

The complete programs are:

Wednesday, August 3 - 8:30 p.m. - Theatre-Concert Hall - Chamber Music. Beethoven: Piano Sonatas - F major, Op. 10, No. 2; D major, Op. 10, No. 3; B flat, Op. 106 ("Hammerklavier"). Rudolf Serkin.

Friday, August 5 - 8:30 p.m. - Music Shed - Boston Symphony Orchestra: Beethoven: Missa Solemnis (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky). Soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass. Violin solo: Richard Burgin, Organist: Willem Frank. Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Hugh Ross. Leonard Bernstein, Conductor.

Saturday, August 6 - 8:30 p.m. - Music Shed - Boston Symphony Orchestra: Beethoven: "Fidelio", Act II (First performance at Tanglewood). Leonore - Margaret Harshaw; Rocco - Mac Morgan; Pizzaro and Fernando - Malcolm Bernstein; Florestan - David Lloyd; Marzelline - Christina Cardillo; Jaquino - Arthur Schoep.

Wagner: Excerpts from "Gotterdammerung": Siegfried's Rhine Journey; Siegfried's Death Music; Immolation Scene - soloist, Margaret Harshaw, soprano. Charles Munch, Conductor.

Sunday, August 7 - 2:30 p.m. - Music Shed - Boston Symphony Orchestra: (All-Beethoven). Beethoven: Symphony No. 8, in F major; Piano Concerto No. 4, in G major; Soloist: Eugene Istomin. Symphony No. 5, in C minor. Charles Munch, Conductor.

Tonight and again on Saturday and Sunday concerts will be given by students of the Berkshire Music Center, now in its 13th season at Tanglewood. The following performances will be given:

Tonight - 8:30 p.m. - Music Shed: Symphony Orchestra Concert by students of Dept. I.

Saturday, August 6 - 3 p.m. - Chamber Music Hall: Composers Forum by students of Dept. III.

Sunday, August 7 - 10 a.m. - Chamber Music Hall: Concert of Chamber Music by students of Dept. I.

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood box office for all Festival concerts, and reservations may be made by telephoning Lenox 600.

MARGARET HARSHAW, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, will make her Tanglewood debut at the Berkshire Festival concert of Saturday evening, August 6, singing the Immolation Scene from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung" and Act II of Beethoven's "Fidelio", with David Lloyd, Mac Morgan and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students. Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

EUGENE ISTOMIN, the celebrated pianist, will be soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, in a performance of Beethoven's Concerto No. 4, in G major at the Berkshire Festival concert on Sunday afternoon August 7. (Music Shed, Tanglewood, 2:30 p.m.).

TACOMA, WASH.
NEWS TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 79,453 - S. 70,626

JUL 10 1955

Books And Arts

Musicians Watch Weather Closer Than Farmers In Summertime

By W. G. ROGERS
Associated Press Arts Editor

NEW YORK (AP) -Now that vegetables are ready to pick in the garden, now that fruit is taking shape and color in the orchard, now that the time for harvest is drawing nearer, who watches the weather every minute with an anxious eye?

The music lover.

The big halls in the big squares in the big cities have closed their doors, cut off the lights; the caretakers are all off on vacation. But not the artists! They are busy right this minute, have been for a month, will be for another two months, taking a busman's holiday at summer concerts in this country and Europe.

Many or most of our concerts are outdoors, in the park, at the Bowl, in the Stadium, at the river's edge. No farmer watches the sky with more concern, or reads weather forecasts with livelier hopes and fears, than the concert manager who may sell 10,000 tickets if it stays fair tonight, but lose his shirt if a single rain-bearing cloud blows up.

Patrons Cloud-Conscious, Too

After the managers and their performers, it's the countless patrons, like the thousands going to the two big outdoor attractions in this city, who are weather conscious right up to starting time. They don't forget about it, either, during the Beethoven and Brahms and so on, for a shower can call it all off in the middle and send them scurrying for cover.

But it's more fair than foul, and more scheduled concerts, by far, are presented than cancelled —in New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, the Berkshires, the Colorado mountains.

In this city Stadium concerts, with the Stadium Symphony orchestra conducted by Mitropoulos, Smallens, Monteux, Kurtz, among others, are held at Lewisohn Stadium, get their soloists from among the very best names: Serkin, Elman, Morini, Warfield, Peerce. The Guggenheim Memorial concerts, which besides their Central Park programs are given every week in Brooklyn's Prospect Park, feature Goldman's Band. Both series are now in their 38th seasons.

Cincinnati Zoo opera is under way with such stars as Herva Nelli and Roberta Peters. The Philadelphia orchestra, back from Europe, has now become, for this month, the Robin Hood Dell orchestra and plays at the Dell for summertime audiences.

The open-neck, shirt-sleeved, slack-wearing audiences gathered this week for the famed Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass. Main attraction will be the Boston Symphony; and principal composer will be Beethoven.

The Newport (R.I.) festival opens tomorrow. The Marlboro (Vt.) music festival runs to Aug. 25. There are, here, there and everywhere, pop concerts, bach festivals, jazz festivals, light opera series, folk singing, barbershop quartet sings.

Aspen Festival On

The Aspen (Colo.) music festival, which like the Berkshire has its own school, is in session to Aug. 27. Conducted this year under the management of participating musicians, it has a special attraction for students from the Universities of Colorado, Denver and Wyoming: they get academic credit for attendance. Among the artists performing there are Primrose, Vronsky and Babin, and Uninsky.

A newcomer to the summer-concert field is the Empire State Music festival planned for Ellenville, N.Y., on the edge of the mountain resort area, in August. It is hoped that members of the Symphony of the Air will take part.

There is also a newcomer abroad, the first annual Festival of Athens opening Aug. 27. Dino Yannapoulos, of New York's Metropolitan, is artistic director, and among the stars will be Mitropoulos and the singers Nikolaidi, Thebom, Stevens and Steber.

The Edinburgh Festival of Music and Drama opens Aug. 21 and continues to Sept. 20. The Salzburg festival runs from July 24 to Aug. 30. The fifth Festival of Berlin will open Sept. 17.

In France several popular events are scheduled. At the moment the Prades Festival, under the direction of Pablo Casals, is under way and will last another week. The Aix-en-Provence performances start tomorrow and continue through the month.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

AUG 6 1955

Tanglewood Hears Bernstein Conduct Beethoven's Mass

By GEORGE W. STOWE

Lenox, Mass. — For the Koussevitsky Memorial program at Tanglewood last night Leonard Bernstein conducted Beethoven's monumental "Missa Solemnis" with declamatory spirit and heartfelt dedication.

If Verdi's Requiem strikes many as more of the theater than of the church, Beethoven's Mass cannot fail to impress as music for the concert hall. Yet it is fallacious to deny the sincerity of either composer or to disparage the effectiveness of the means employed.

Beethoven may not have had the ritualistic associations to inspire him but he had the deep-rooted religiosity of a man who was valiant in the face of many adversities. His inscription, "From the heart, may it reach the heart," in itself expresses a profound faith in man and in God.

* * *

THIS THEN is far removed from the humble piety found in the Passions and the B Minor Mass of Bach and has even less in common with the stylized settings of Palestrina or Scarlatti. Its central characteristic is the heaven-storming spirit of someone who felt that man could partake of the divinity of his Creator as well as be humble before it.

Perhaps for this reason the Gloria and the Credo are usually considered its most effective sections. Certainly they have the vitality and imposing grandeur we associate with the Master of Bonn. And it was in these two portions that the conductor evoked the most stirring music last night.

Mr. Bernstein is an athletic figure on the podium, weaving and contorting his body to extract the utmost in nuance from his choral and instrumental forces. He cares little for time-beating or exact cues and that is probably all to the good with an orchestra of the caliber of the Boston Symphony, but it is debatable as far as the chorus goes.

* * *

FORTUNATELY, the large chorus had been wll-trained by Hugh Ross and performed most of the evening with commendable results. Nevertheless there were spots where a more incisive baton technique would have helped.

The soloists were Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor, and Mac Morgan, bass. They all proved equal to the stylistic requirements of this music. This was especially true of Mr. Lloyd, who was in prime vocal form last night. Richard Burgin handled the violin solo work with tonal warmth.

Due to preconcert showers there were few on the lawn but the Shed held an almost capacity audience.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 285,839
AUG 6 1955

Koussevitzky Memorial

Music in Review

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, Aug. 5 — The performance of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" was the Koussevitzky memorial concert of the season. Here in the Berkshires. It was a fortunate choice prepared lovingly by the late conductor's protegee Leonard Bernstein and presented with all the solemnity the occasion demanded.

Nearly 7000 persons attended to pay respect to the memory of Dr. Koussevitzky whose presence is still felt in every quarter at Tanglewood.

The "Missa" is one of those curious works, an undisputed masterpiece which, however, are rarely performed. It takes its place among the most profound works of the composer, but since it is comfortable neither in the cathedral nor the concert hall, conductors shy away from tackling so formidable a piece.

To bring it off with any degree of effectiveness a conductor must avoid striving for sublety yet, never fall into the trap of alternating thunderous fortissimo and whispered pianissimos, coloring only in black and white as it were. He must preserve the 16th century-like unity of its structure and at the same time take into account the dramaic setting of the text.

Mr. Bernstein tonight trod a path somewhere between the two extremes. There was considerable variety in his dynamic levels and he paid particular attention to the thematic development, the formal design of the work.

The music moved serenely from section to section without ever becoming sectionalized. There was no forcing of either orchestra or chorus for effect alone, yet there were moving and even thrilling passages along the way.

The soloists, Adele Addison, EuniceAlberts, David Llloyd and Mac Morgan, remained well within the spirit of the proceedings and the chorus, coached thoroughly by Mr. Bernstein, contributed some excellent singing.

In fact, it was the only choral work I have heard worthy of the Berkshire Festival all summer.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 130,559
AUG 6 1955

Opera Scenes at Tanglewood Tonight

With concerts tonight at 8:30 o'clock and tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 the 1955 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, moves into its final weekend but one. Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct both concerts.

The programs this evening will be devoted to excerpts from two of the greatest operas in the literature—Beethoven's "Fidelio" and Wagner's "Die Goetterdaemmerung." With Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd and Mac Morgan as the principal solists, and the Berkshire Festival Chorus trained by John Krueger, the first half of the program will consist of a concert presentation of the second act of "Fidelio" (a Tanglewood first performance). After the intermission, three excerpts from "Die Goetterdaemmerung" will be heard: Siegfried's Rhine Journey, Siegfried's Death Music, and the Immolation Scene in which Miss Harshaw will sing Bruennhilde.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326
AUG 8 1955

25,000 at Tanglewood Shed; Miss Cardillo in Solo Role

The fifth series of concerts in the Berkshire Music festival drew some 25,000 persons to Tanglewood in Lenox over the week-end.

In Solo Role

Miss Christina Cardillo, North Adams soprano, who is studying this summer at the Berkshire Music center, had one of the solo roles in Saturday night's concert. Miss Cardillo sang the role of Marzelline in a performance of the second act of Beethoven's only opera, "Fidelio."

The second half of Saturday night's concert, conducted by Charles Munch, was devoted to excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung."

Yesterday afternoon, with Mr. Munch again on the podium, the Boston Symphony orchestra played another all-Beethoven program. Works heard were the Symphonies No. 5 and No. 8 and the Piano Concerto No. 4, with Eugene Istomin as the piano soloist.

Storm Mars Concert

A thunder and lightning storm and a heavy downpour marred the concert and the audience of almost 10,000 persons crowded into the shed from all over the grounds.

The other concert in the series was a performance of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" on Friday evening, in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

Today marks the start of the final week of the 1955 festival, and there are musical events scheduled every evening through Saturday. The final concert of the season will be next Sunday afternoon.

Tonight and tomorrow evening at 8.30 the opera department of the Music center, the Boston symphony's summer music school, will present its feature program, with Miss Cardillo again appearing in a starring role.

Lead in "Zaide"

Miss Cardillo will have the lead in a performance of "Zaide," an unfinished two-act opera by Mozart, being performed for the first time in this country. The program will also include the world premiere of a one-act opera, "The Rope," written by Louis Mennini under sponsorship of the Koussevitzky Music foundation plan at Tanglewood. "The Rope" is based on Eugene O'Neill's one-act play of the same name.

On Wednesday evening there will be the last of the Beethoven chamber music programs. Six members of the Boston Symphony, Gino Cioffi, clarinet; Samuel Mayes, cello; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; Ralph Gombert, oboe, and James Stagliano, French horn, will be assisted by David Lloyd, tenor, and Ralph Berkowitz, piano, in a program of trios, songs, a quintet and a cello sonata.

The programs on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday will be in the theater concert hall. Those for the remainder of the week will be in the big shed.

"Tanglewood on Parade"

The Thursday night program will be the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" concert for the benefit of the Music center. It will be highlighted by selections by the Boston Pops orchestra under Arthur Fiedler and the appearance of Claude Rains, star of stage, screen and television, as narrator in Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait." Leonard Bernstein will conduct the first part of the program with the full Boston Symphony and also be piano soloist for a performance of Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

The final week-end series of concerts will get underway Friday evening, with Charles Munch conducting a program devoted to works of Brahms, Bloch, Debussy and Ravel.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,241
AUG 6 1955

6 Symphony Men Retire; 6 New Players Engaged

Their colleagues in the Boston Symphony Orchestra honored six retiring members at a luncheon at Tanglewood Thursday, and gold watches were presented to the instrumentalists by Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra. Gaston Dufresne, string bass, was chairman of the orchestral committee which initiated the ceremony.

Members of the orchestra whose retirement takes effect at the conclusion of the Berkshire Festival on Aug. 14 are Jacob Raichman, principal trombone; first violinists Carlos Pinfield and Paul Fedorovsky; second violinist, Ralph del Sordo; Louis Artieres, viola; and Walter G. MacDonald, French horn.

Incoming members are cellists Richard A. Kapuscinski of Cincinnati, and Robert Ripley of Cleveland Heights; violinists Noah Bielski of Queens Village, N. Y.; Alfred Schneider of St. Louis, and Joseph Silverstein of Detroit; and trombonist William M. Gibson of Pittsburgh.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 122,000
AUG 6 1955

6 Symphony Men Retire; 6 New Players Engaged

Their colleagues in the Boston Symphony Orchestra honored six retiring members at a luncheon at Tanglewood Thursday, and gold watches were presented to the instrumentalists by Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra. Gaston Dufresne, string bass, was chairman of the orchestral committee which initiated the ceremony.

Members of the orchestra whose retirement takes effect at the conclusion of the Berkshire Festival on Aug. 14 are Jacob Raichman, principal trombone; first violinists Carlos Pinfield and Paul Fedorovsky; second violinist Ralph de Sordo; Louis Artieres, viola; and Walter G. MacDonald, French horn.

Incoming members are cellists Richard A. Kapuscinski of Cincinnati, and Robert Ripley of Cleveland Heights; violinists Noah Bielski of Queens Village, N. Y. Alfred Schneider of St. Louis, and Joseph Silverstein of Detroit; and trombonist William M. Gibson of Pittsburgh.

Boston Post 8/9
10*

Berkshire Festival

Music in Review

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, Aug. 9—The new operatic commissioning policy of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation paid off handsomely tonight in the presentation of Louis Mennin's "The Rope." This was the first performance anywhere, and judging by the way it was received it is unlikely to be the last.

Based on the one-act play by Eugene O'Neill about three unsavory characters who try to hoodwink an old New England farmer out of his money, the opera remains remarkably faithful to the original. The ironical twist at the end has been heightened in this operatic treatment as the child, Mary, is throwing the gold into the sea; here the opening lyrical mood returns in the orchestra to add a greater sense of futility to the whole venture.

Mr. Mennini has written an opera that has a corking duet, coming as a dramatic relief after the quarreling of the daughter and husband, and a virogous aria, "I Want Gold," in which Luke, the wayward son, explains his return after five years of roaming.

The composer makes considerable use of the melodrama, spoken dialogue over musical accompaniment, a device much admired by both Mozart and Beethoven. In fact, all through the opera characters will begin to speak and then slip over into song almost imperceptibly.

The orchestra employs a form of leit motif technique, explaining the characters by development of identifying themes appearing in various guises.

Tonight's cast, Malcolm Bernstein (Abraham), Mary MacKenzie (Annie), Lynn Detwiler (Pat), Holly McLennan (Mary), and Stephen Harvachick (Luke)) were all uniformly good with special honors going to Mr. Harbachick for his swaggering singing and acting of Luke.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 130,559
AUG 8 1955

6 Symphony Players Retire in Lenox

Six prominent members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra were honored last week at Tanglewood on their retirement from the group. Conductor Charles Munch presented the instrumentalists with gold watches at a luncheon held under the direction of Gaston Dufresne, string bass.

The members retiring are Jacob Raichman, principal trombone; Carlos Pinfield, first violinist who has been with the Symphony since 1912; Paul Fedorovsky, first violinist; second violinist Ralph del Sordo; Louis Artieres, viola; Walter MacDonald, French horn.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS,
Independent
Circ. 13,326
AUG 3 1955

Lieut. Gov. Whittier At Tanglewood Aug. 11

Lieut. Gov. Sumner G. Whittier will attend Tanglewood on Parade Thursday, Aug. 11, it was announced last night by Albert W. Barris, chairman of the Pittsfield Republican city committee.

Tanglewood on Parade is the annual benefit given by the Boston Symphony orchestra for the Berkshire Music Center, its summer music school at Tanglewood, Lenox.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 509,171 - S. 1,117,392

AUG 2 1955

Boris Blacher's 'Romeo and Juliet' Presented at Lenox

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 1—Three one-act operas and several groups of choral works were presented here tonight in the theatre-concert hall. The presentations were a combined effort of the Berkshire Music Center, making use of the opera, chorus and orchestral departments.

Of the three one-acters, most attention was focused on Boris Blacher's "Romeo and Juliet," if only for the reason that Mr. Blacher is one of the composers-in-residence this summer at the music center.

•

His music is not well-known in this country, although "Romeo and Juliet" has been heard here at least twice since its composition in 1946. It received a concert performance by the New Friends of Music in 1951 and was staged by the University of Illinois Opera Workshop in 1953. Its actual world première took place at the Salzburg festival in 1950.

Mr. Blacher, the director of the Hochscule Fuer Musik in Berlin, has subtitled his opera as "After Shakespeare." He has not adhered strictly to the text: the opera, which has four scenes, runs about fifty minutes, and much of the action had to be cut. Essentially, however, the basic ingredients, as Shakespeare conceived them, are present. A sort of Greek chorus, dispersed about the orchestra pit, comments on the action and even serves as a motivating force (it hands Juliet the potion).

Listeners who have a preconceived notion about Shakespeare's play may have trouble adjusting to Mr. Blacher's expressionistic conception and treatment. Not much of the youthful, passionate and ardent character of the original lines comes through. Mr. Blacher's philosophy of opera, like that of so many other modern composers, encompasses melodic fragments that are mostly of a declamatory nature with the orchestra outlining the mood and commenting on the stage goings-on.

His harmonic and melodic writing is of a sparse, stripped-down nature, constantly understated. As far as it goes it is quite sensitive, and the first duet that Mr. Blacher has written for Romeo and Juliet has a restrained lyricism that comes right through the purposeful bleakness.

Mr. Blacher nowhere in his opera has written a vulgar phrase or a meretricious effect. This is the work of a disciplined composer. But, while "Romeo and Juliet" will be listened to with respect, and even admiration, the chances are that never will it command rapture.

This performance, conducted by Kalman Novak, had a student cast headed by Naomi Farr and Harold Johnson.

•

The other operas, which came too late in the long program for comment, were also composed by men who previously had been composers-in-residence here. Darius Milhaud, who was guest teacher of composition in 1948, was represented by his "L'Abandon d'Ariane," in an English translation by Ludwig Zerner. Bohuslav Martinu, who taught here in 1946, was represented by his "Comedy on the Bridge." Igor Chichagov conducted the Milhaud work and Boris Goldovsky played the piano accompaniment for the Martinu. All three operas were produced under Mr. Goldovsky's direction.

The choral section of the program, prepared by Hugh Russ, presented music by Chajes, Finney, Santa Cruz, Billings and Taneiev. Several conductors from the choral department shared the podium for this enterprise. H. C. S.

Jewish Civic Leader
July 28 1955

ISAAC STERN

TANGLEWOOD FEATURES ISAAC STERN SUNDAY

Isaac Stern, a former student of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in connection with its annual Berkshire Festival, will be soloist with Gregor Piatigorsky in Brahms Concerto for Violin and Cello, under Pierre Monteux's direction, on Sunday afternoon, July 31 (2:30 p.m.).

Second Week of Berkshire Festival Concerts

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., includes three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 15 and 16) and Sunday afternoon (July 17).

The Friday evening program marks the return to the Tanglewood podium of noted young American composer-conductor-pianist Leonard Bernstein. Mr. Bernstein has chosen an all-Mozart program, with Jennie Tourel, Mezzo-Soprano, singing three arias, two from "Idomeneo," with Mr. Bernstein doubling as soloist in the Piano Concerto in G major.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct both the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts. The July 16 program is 18th century Italian music of Vivaldi and Boccherini.

The third week of Berkshire Festival concerts will commence with Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin in three Beethoven violin sonatas (Wed. July 20 in the Theatre-Concert Hall). The entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate the season's concerts in the 6,000-seat Music Shed on Friday, July 22 when Charles Munch will give an all-Beethoven program, with Isaac Stern as soloist in the violin concerto. Pierre Monteux will conduct an orchestra program of Bach, Beethoven, Sessions and Richard Strauss on Sat. evening July 23, and Mr. Munch's Sunday afternoon concert July 24, will comprise Beethoven's first, fourth, and sixth symphonies.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 103,999

AUG 7 1955

Tanglewood Opera Concert Enthusiastically Received

By RAYMOND MORIN,
Telegram Music Critic

Lenox — The difficult task of projecting true drama with two exacting operas in concert form was brilliantly accomplished at Tanglewood Saturday night. Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony, Berkshire Music Center Chorus, and soloists before a highly enthusiastic audience of 9422.

Scores were the second act of Beethoven's "Fidelio" and excerpts from "Gotterdammerung" by Wagner. While our deadline caused us to forfeit most of the Wagner, the Beethoven afforded one of the most satisfying musical experiences we can recall at Tanglewood in many years.

Hopes and Dreams

The remarkable thing was that a large measure of the sinister mood of the act was powerfully presented. It takes place in the dungeon where Florestan is held prisoner for political reasons. He hopes and dreams where no hope is in sight.

Leonore appears in the disguise of a turn-key. She and Rocco are given the foul task of digging Florestan's grave. He is saved by the unexpected appearance of the minister.

Beethoven felt this story and music deeply. It was his way of vindicating the oppressed. And that was the spirit that prevailed throughout the performance. This is the first time that we have had occasion to write about Munch, the conductor. In sharp contrast to the prevailing school of exhibitionists, he stands dominant with a small group.

With Utmost Care

Time and again, the orchestra was made to take its rightful place in stature—this was no ordinary orchestral accompaniment. The opening, sombrous passages of the Beethoven were firmly poised and carried heavy implications of impending drama. Later on, instrumental interludes were presented with the utmost care and not as intermissions between vocal orations.

First vocal honors go to David Lloyd, tenor (Florestan), Margaret Harshaw, soprano (Leonore), and the chorus. Mr. Lloyd's opening aria was richly intoned and wrapt in controlled emotion. He gave persuasive meaning to Florestan's plight without exaggeration of style or visual methods.

Opulent Tones

Miss Harshaw's opening duet with Mac Morgan (Rocco) found both seemingly dependent upon their scores, giving a feeling of vocal technique rather than role enactment. But her subsequent work in solo and ensemble was accomplished in large, penetrating, pitch-center, opulent tones.

Mr. Morgan brought depth and reverberation to the role of Rocco—dependable in pitch and poised in style. Pizzaro was sung by Malcolm Bernstein, and while he occasionally was permitted to disclose a voice of warmth, there were more instances when he was all but drowned out by the orchestra.

Chorus

Secondary roles were competently sung by Christina Cardillo and Arthur Shoe[illegible].

A very special paragraph is due the chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross and John Krueger. They produced ensemble tone of great dimension and other of gentle richness. More important, however, was the enthusiasm and vitality that they spent upon a score of Rossini-like spontaneity.

This afternoon program, beginning at 2.30, is all-Beethoven. Charles Munch will conduct the fifth and eighth symphonies, and Eugene Istomin will be piano soloist in the Fourth Concerto.

Audience Forgets Request and Applauds As Bernstein Conducts "Missa-Solemnis"

By George E. Membrino

The full symphony orchestra, aided by chorus and soloists, was the delight of this past week-end concert series at Tanglewood, Lenox. Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis in D major" and "Fidelio," Act 2, far surpassed our greatest expectations.

In a memorial concert to Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, the latter's former pupil, Leonard Bernstein, conducted the "Missa Solemnis." Even though a program note was inserted requesting the audience not to applaud, the magnitude of a superb performance moved the audience into forgetting any request. The applause was most sustaining. Soloists for the evening were Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Mac Morgan, bass.

Soprano Addison aided to a great extent the excellent performance of this great work. Her voice, clear and warm, reached all nooks of the large shed. The three other soloists also added to the evening's delight. All four are former students at Tanglewood. Mr. Bernstein was his usual self, displaying a deep feeling for the work and treating all phases with excellent taste. The sensitive touch of the conductor was evident in all his motions.

The "Gloria," allegro vivace, larghetto, allegro brought to full light the qualities of the chorus. It remains for a few places such as Tanglewood with its Berkshire Music Center on campus to be able to provide such good chorus material in such quantities. A paid professional chorus of this size would make the undertaking a fifinancial fiasco. It was a delight to hear such a chorus of professionals rather than an inferior college group or the like. The chorus was prepared by Hugh Ross. Also noteworthy was Richard Burgin's violin solo in the "Sanctus."

Beethoven's "Fidelio," Act 2 was presented without operatic staging. It remained for the music to prove itself alone, as all reference to costume and action were forgotten. Using but a compliment of the full orchestra at most times, an extremely difficult task was achieved. Soloist Margaret Harshaw, singing the role of Leonore, provided the highlights of the evening's entertainment.

The finale was rousing and spirited with the 300 chorus entrance and contrasted in beautiful style by the slow vein of the soloists. The captivating syncopated rhythm of the last theme was greatly appreciated. After intermission several excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung" were offered, followed by Margaret Harshaw as soloist in the "Immolation" scene. She left little to be desired as she portrayed the role in a manner of fine Wagnerial taste with full carrying power.

Not yet heard this year, Wagner offered an interesting change.

As the 1955 Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood nears a close, a greater number of performing groups are participating. Monday evening, August 1, the joint efforts of the Berkshire Music Center's opera and choral department were displayed. Assistance from instrumentalists of the student orchestra also was heard.

The most important work performed by the Opera Department was Boris Blacher's "Romeo and Juliet." A definitely new approach to this much-worked-over play by Shakespeare, it demanded keen listening. Heading a long list of opera performers was Naomi Farr, singing the hole of Juliet. Her voice had a warm quality that provided most pleasant listening. Mr. Blacher demanded tremendous resources for the soprano role in both range and flexibility. Miss Farr fulfilled both equally well. Harold Johnson, as Romeo, showed exceptional poise and operatic stage presentation and possession of superior vocal aptitude.

Most fascinating of all was the role the small instrumental group played. Instead of the usual accompanying part assigned to pit orchestras, it dwelled far from the lyrical themes close at hand on stage. Developments of definitely new inovations were presented. More hearings would serve to develop great appreciation of this fine work.

Boris Blacher, composer of the one-act opera, is presently engaged as guest composer at Tanglewood. This fall he will return to his position as director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin, Germany. Responsible in a large part for the success of this American premiere were Sarah Caldwell's staging, setting by Jack Brown, and instrumental conducting by Kalman Novak.

The chorus part in the program provided light, sensitive and amazingly tasteful music. Using different student conductors for each selection, they sang well under each. The most intriging group offered was the "Three Songs of Spring" by the Chilean composer, Domingo Santa Cruz.

ROANOKE, VA.
TIMES
Circ. D. 43,917 - S. 79,504

JUL 10 1955

WSLS To Carry Music Festival

Boston Symphony To Give Concerts

The [illegible] Berkshire Festival of concerts [illegible] Boston Symphony Orchestra will be heard over WSLS Radio Monday at 8:15 p.m. Charles Munch, director of Berkshire Music Center will conduct the orchestra and Ben Grauer will be host-moderator.

Berkshire Courier
8/11/55

Tanglewood Closes Season on Sunday

Boston Symphony Concludes 16th Berkshire Festival

Pierre Monteux Will Conduct Orchestra Saturday Night and Charles Munch Will Be on Podium in 1955 Farewell Sunday Afternoon in All-Beethoven Program.

The sixteenth summer of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, will conclude this week-end with performances Saturday night at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox.

Saturday evening's concert will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux, a guest conductor annually since 1952 and conductor of the Boston Symphony from 1919 to 1924. The concluding concert Sunday will find Mr. Munch on the podium.

Saturday night Mr. Monteux will lead the 104-piece Boston Symphony in Wagner's Overture to "The Flying Dutchman"; Brahms' Symphony No. 3, in F major; Debussy's Three Nocturnes; and for the first time at Tanglewood the suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" of Richard Strauss. The Debussy nocturne "Sirenes" will include participation by the feminine members of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Miss Iva Dee Hiatt, director of choral music at Smith College, Northampton. She is assistant to Hugh Ross in the Tanglewood student choral department.

Sunday's final concert will be the sixth Il-Bethoven program in the 12-concert Shed series, Mr. Munch's fifth summer program devoted to the works of that composer. It includes the Overture "Leonore," No. 3, and the Symphony No. 9, in D minor, with Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass, as soloists. The first three are former members of the Berkshire Music Center. The enlarged chorus comprises the Festival Chorus of Tanglewood students and a chorus of 50 voices of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra, trained by Hugh Ross and John Krueger, director of the Youngstown, Ohio, Philharmonic and Chorus.

If attendance figures of last summer, when 21,650 persons attended the final two concerts, can be considered a gauge, and if fair weather prevails for the more than 12,000 persons who plan to hear the music on the spacious Tanglewood lawns outside the Music Shed, again all records will be shattered for the third consecutive year in this eighteenth summer of symphonic music in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the sixteenth since the Boston Symphony participated.

The seasonal activities of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, also conclude this week-end. The music school has presented some 40 concerts and demonstrations of its orchestra, chamber music, chorus, opera, composition division and amateur study group departments in this, its thirteenth six-week session.

At Saturday's final concert by the student symphony orchestra in the Music Shed at 3:00 p. m., Ralph Berkowitz, Dean of the B. M. C., will announce scholarships and prize awards. Sunday at 10:00 a. m., in the Chamber Music Hall, is the final program of chamber music by students of the school's Department I (orchestra). These two events are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who may attend through voluntary contributions to the school.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 369,241

AUG 7 1955

Esplanade Concerts to Resume Aug. 15

The Berkshire Festival, which took the Boston Symphony to Tanglewood, and Arthur Fiedler's guest-conducting stints in and around the country this Summer, caused a hiatus in the Esplanade Concerts.

But these will be resumed on Monday evening, Aug. 15, at 8:30 at the Hatch Shell, and will continue for the week through Saturday, Aug. 20 with Fiedler will conduct. There will be a children's concert on Wednesday morning at 10:15.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

AUG 6 1955

Contrast in Music Enjoyment Al Fresco

LISTENING is strictly informal at Berkshire Music Festival in Lenox, Mass. Outside music shed, overflow audience sprawls comfortably on grass to hear Boston Symphony Orchestra. [UP.

DOWN BEAT
CHICAGO, ILL.

AUG 10 1955

N.Y. Music Festival In August

New York—Ellenville, N. Y., will be the site of an Empire State Music Festival to be held from early August to Sept. 5. This festival—which will compete with those at Tanglewood, Mass., and Aspen, Colo.—will feature the Symphony of the Air.

Co-directors of the festival, John Brownlee and Jascha Rushkin, are scheduling two symphony concerts a week, two operas featuring stars of the Metropolitan Opera Association, and one pop concert or chamber music performance.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

AUG 9 1955

'The Rope' -- A Tanglewood Opera

Special to The Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass.—Louis Mennini's "The Rope" is the first opera commissioned for the Berkshire Music Center.

Boris Goldovsky, before the premiere here last night, explained how this came about. It was neither simple nor inevitable, for while the late Dr. Koussevitzky was a zealot for not only encouraging but engaging composers to produce new works, Goldovsky would have none of it these several years.

He was afraid the contracted-for result would not suit Tanglewood and that he would have to give it whether he liked it or not. But "The Rope," he said, suited; he liked it; they all liked everything about it, and they liked the composer, too.

The audience, when it was over, had Mennini up on the stage and demonstrated thunderously their liking for him and his works. He is a dark, tall and slender and, like all composers today, looks like a successful Jaycee.

* * *

THE QUESTION is scarcely whether this opera suits Tanglewood but whether Mennin's music suits Eugene O'Neill's brief drama. Judging from intermission comments not many had ever seen it done or even read it. Nor had I. So that for once, at least, gives the reviewer on audience perspective which, after all, is the only one that counts.

* * *

THERE IS A TENSION and inevitability about the play not felt by the music which, at best, is a mere obbligato. The score is mildly dissonant; the play is discordant, built, in fact, upon the inharmony of man and the soil. It seems to have been an article of creed with O'Neill that the land drew out that which most is mean and evil in man. "The Rope" has to do with miserliness, hate and retribution. The only sympathetic character in the piece is a half-witted girl who is the instrument of retribution.

This doesn't make a very fit musical subject. There isn't any singing at all; merely a strident declamation which is bad for the voice and often obscures the words, although the principals really put themselves out to b understood last night.

The single set is simple bu excellent. The musicianship o the stage and in the pit wa highly competent. There wa little of that straining eagerne which characterizes many oper workshop amateurs. An entir new cast takes over tonight.

One would expect that either to precede or to follow Mozart would be the most invidious situation in which any contemporary composer would parade his craft. After "The Rope," however, Mozart's "Zaide" sounded very puny indeed.

In the first place, it is only a fragment, as Mr. Goldovsky explained in a pre-curtain lecture. It is quite silly as far as the plot ever took shape and the music isn't very good Mozart, anyway. Mr. Goldovsky didn't say that but he might as well have done so because the perspective of the production seemed to be that the thing was hardly worth doing at all, so better play horse with it.

Mr. Goldovsky, who described himself as "an early settler — that is, of Tanglewood"—delivered an amusing homily on 18th century opera and operation methods at the Music Center. What he had to say was far more diverting that Mozart.—C. E. L.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 230,930

AUG 7 1955

Donald Gramm, bass, will sing as soloist with the Boston Symphony next Sunday, Aug. 14, at the Berkshire Festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Argus (e)
MONTPELIER, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 4,962

AUG 5 1955

Leave UVM Today For Music Festival

Twenty students and faculty members from the UVM Summer Session left Burlington this afternoon for Tanglewood in Lenox, Massachusetts, where the Annual Berkshire Music Festival is currently in progress.

Traveling by car, the group will stay in Pittsfield, Mass., tonight and Saturday night and return home on Sunday evening.

The Berkshire Festival trip is the final organized tour under the sponsorship of the University of Vermont Summer Session. Recreation Director Howard Delano made the arrangements for the trip.

On Friday evening, the Festival will feature Beethoven's Missa Solemnis, Leonard Bernstein, conducting.

Saturday's program will consist of Beethoven's Fidelio, Act II and Wagner's Excerpts from "Gotter dammerung", Charles Munch, conducting.

On Sunday, they will hear Beethoven's Symphony No. Eight, Piano Concerto No. Four, and Symphony No. Five. The Fifth Symphony will have Eugene Istomin as soloist and Charles Munch conducting.

The University of Vermont Summer Session heads into its final week on Monday.

NEW CANAAN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,669

AUG 4 1955

FINAL CONCERTS

With an anticipated attendance of 130,000 at its 24 concerts—six chamber music programs by noted soloists and visiting ensembles; six chamber orchestra concerts by principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; 12 concerts by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will conclude its 1955 schedule August 10 to 14.

Berkshire Courier
8/11/55

Tanglewood Closes Season on Sunday

Boston Symphony Concludes 16th Berkshire Festival

Pierre Monteux Will Conduct Orchestra Saturday Night and Charles Munch Will Be on Podium in 1955 Farewell Sunday Afternoon in All-Beethoven Program.

The sixteenth summer of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, will conclude this week-end with performances Saturday night at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox.

Saturday evening's concert will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux, a guest conductor annually since 1952 and conductor of the Boston Symphony from 1919 to 1924. The concluding concert Sunday will find Mr. Munch on the podium.

Saturday night Mr. Monteux will lead the 104-piece Boston Symphony in Wagner's Overture to "The Flying Dutchman"; Brahms' Symphony No. 3, in F major; Debussy's Three Nocturnes; and for the first time at Tanglewood the suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" of Richard Strauss. The Debussy nocturne "Sirenes" will include participation by the feminine members of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Miss Iva Dee Hiatt, director of choral music at Smith College, Northampton. She is assistant to Hugh Ross in the Tanglewood student choral department.

Sunday's final concert will be the sixth all-Bethoven program in the 12-concert Shed series, Mr. Munch's fifth summer program devoted to the works of that composer. It includes the Overture "Leonore," No. 3, and the Symphony No. 9, in D minor, with Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass, as soloists. The first three are former members of the Berkshire Music Center. The enlarged chorus comprises the Festival Chorus of Tanglewood students and a chorus of 50 voices of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra, trained by Hugh Ross and John Krueger, director of the Youngstown, Ohio, Philharmonic and Chorus.

If attendance figures of last summer, when 21,650 persons attended the final two concerts, can be considered a gauge, and if fair weather prevails for the more than 12,000 persons who plan to hear the music on the spacious Tanglewood lawns outside the Music Shed, again all records will be shattered for the third consecutive year in this eighteenth summer of symphonic music in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the sixteenth since the Boston Symphony participated.

The seasonal activities of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, also conclude this week-end. The music school has presented some 40 concerts and demonstrations of its orchestra, chamber music, chorus, opera, composition division and amateur study group departments in this, its thirteenth six-week session.

At Saturday's final concert by the student symphony orchestra in the Music Shed at 3:00 p. m., Ralph Berkowitz, Dean of the B. M. C., will announce scholarships and prize awards. Sunday at 10:00 a. m., in the Chamber Music Hall, is the final program of chamber music by students of the school's Department I, (orchestra). These two events are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who may attend through voluntary contributions to the school.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 369,241
AUG 7 1955

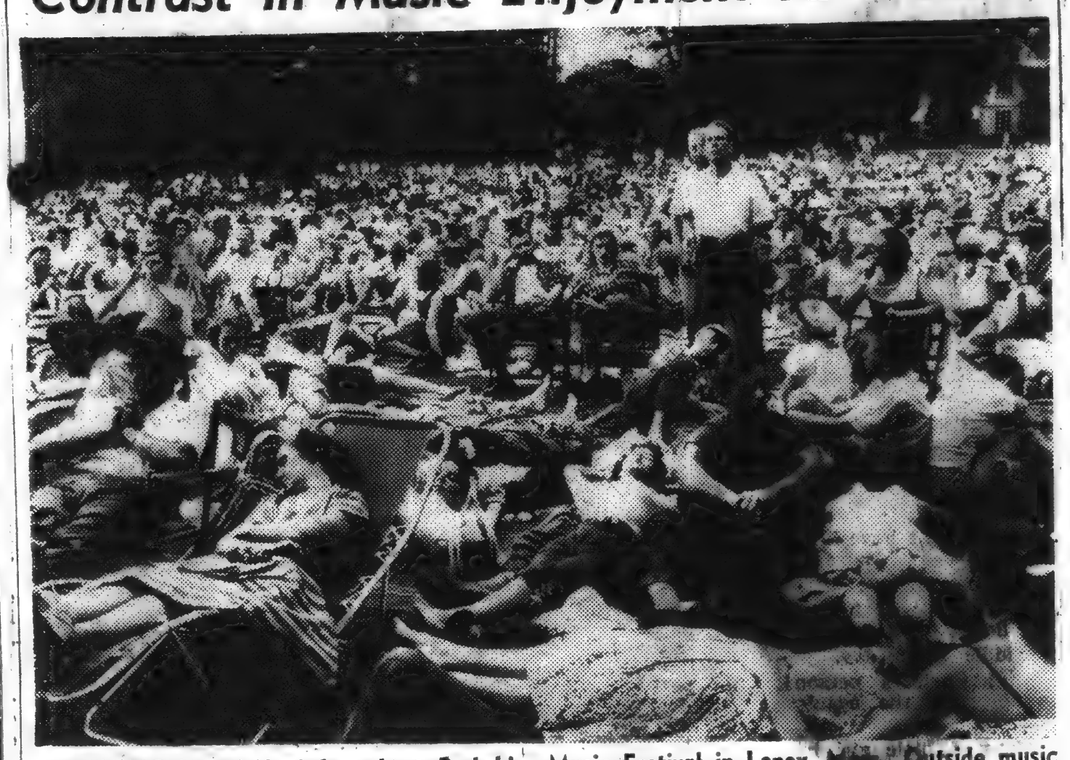
Esplanade Concerts to Resume Aug. 15

The Berkshire Festival, which took the Boston Symphony to Tanglewood, and Arthur Fiedler's guest-conducting stints in and around the country this Summer, caused a hiatus in the Esplanade Concerts.

But these will be resumed on Monday evening, Aug. 15, at 8:30 at the Hatch Shell, and will continue for the week through Saturday, Aug. 20, with Fiedler will conduct. There will be a children's concert on Wednesday morning at 10:15.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680
AUG 6 1955

Contrast in Music Enjoyment Al Fresco



LISTENING is strictly informal at Berkshire Music Festival in Lenox, Mass. Outside music shed, overflow audience sprawls comfortably on grass to hear Boston Symphony Orchestra. [UP.

DOWN BEAT
CHICAGO, ILL.
AUG 10 1955

N.Y. Music Festival In August

New York—Ellenville, N. Y., will be the site of an Empire State Music Festival to be held from early August to Sept. 5. This festival—which will compete with those at Tanglewood, Mass., and Aspen, Colo.—will feature the Symphony of the Air.

Co-directors of the festival, John Brownlee and Jascha Rushkin, are scheduling two symphony concerts a week, two operas featuring stars of the Metropolitan Opera Association, and one pop concert or chamber music performance.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680
AUG 9 1955

'The Rope' -- A Tanglewood Opera

Special to The Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass.—Louis Mennini's "The Rope" is the first opera commissioned for the Berkshire Music Center.

Boris Goldovsky, before the premiere here last night, explained how this came about. It was neither simple nor inevitable, for while the late Dr. Koussevitzky was a zealot for not only encouraging but engaging composers to produce new works, Goldovsky would have none of it these several years.

He was afraid the contracted-for result would not suit Tanglewood and that he would have to give it whether he liked it or not. But "The Rope," he said, suited; he liked it; they all liked everything about it, and they liked the composer, too.

The audience, when it was over, had Mennini up on the stage and demonstrated thunderously their liking for him and his works. He is a dark, tall and slender and, like all composers today, looks like a successful Jaycee.

* * *

THE QUESTION is scarcely whether this opera suits Tanglewood but whether Mennin's music suits Eugene O'Neill's brief drama. Judging from intermission comments not many had ever seen it done or even read it. Nor had I. So that for once, at least, gives the reviewer on audience perspective which, after all, is the only one that counts.

* * *

THERE IS A TENSION and inevitability about the play not felt by the music which, at best, is a mere obbligato. The score is mildly dissonant; the play is discordant, built, in fact, upon the inharmony of man and the soil. It seems to have been an article of creed with O'Neill that the land drew out that which most is mean and evil in man. "The Rope" has to do with miserliness, hate and retribution. The only sympathetic character in the piece is a half-witted girl who is the instrument of retribution.

This doesn't make a very fit musical subject. There isn't any singing at all; merely a strident declamation which is bad for the voice and often obscures the words, although the principals really put themselves out to be understood last night.

The single set is simple but excellent. The musicianship on the stage and in the pit was highly competent. There was little of that straining eagerness which characterizes many opera workshop amateurs. An entire new cast takes over tonight.

One would expect that either to precede or to follow Mozart would be the most invidious situation in which any contemporary composer would parade his craft. After "The Rope," however, Mozart's "Zaide" sounded very puny indeed.

In the first place, it is only a fragment, as Mr. Goldovsky explained in a pre-curtain lecture. It is quite silly as far as the plot ever took shape and the music isn't very good Mozart, anyway. Mr. Goldovsky didn't say that but he might as well have done so because the perspective of the production seemed to be that the thing was hardly worth doing at all, so better play horse with it.

Mr. Goldovsky, who described himself as "an early settler — that is, of Tanglewood"—delivered an amusing homily on 18th century opera and operation methods at the Music Center. What he had to say was far more diverting that Mozart.—R. E. L.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 230,930
AUG 7 1955

Donald Gramm, bass, will sing as soloist with the Boston Symphony next Sunday, Aug. 7, at the Berkshire Festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Argus (e)
MONTPELIER, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 4,962
AUG 5 1955

Leave UVM Today For Music Festival

Twenty students and faculty members from the UVM Summer Session left Burlington this afternoon for Tanglewood in Lenox, Massachusetts, where the Annual Berkshire Music Festival is currently in progress.

Traveling by car, the group will stay in Pittsfield, Mass., tonight and Saturday night and return home on Sunday evening.

The Berkshire Festival trip is vn. (about recognition), and I on't see how the United Nations as a choice of its own.

"There are other outstanding mplaints which I have outlined me and again, and I have no idea at under existing circumstances ere would be a chance . . . in our olicy."
On the question of disarmament, isenhower said he proposed to ulganin at Geneva that both a Western proposal for comprehen-

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Advertiser
NEW CANAAN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,669
AUG 4 1959

FINAL CONCERTS

With an anticipated attendance of 130,000 at its 24 concerts—six chamber music programs by noted soloists and visiting ensembles; six chamber orchestra concerts by principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; 12 concerts by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will conclude its 1955 schedule August 10 to 14.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 248,071

AUG 7 1955

18th Berkshire Festival Classical and Prosperous

By ELINOR HUGHES

There is surely no law that says that the Berkshire Festival must automatically be devoted to new works, and the very substantial prosperity enjoyed by the Festival in its 19th season which will end a week from today with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony and Overture, Leonore No. 3, certainly justifies the expressed faith of Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, that it is important, even vital, that we concentrate from time to time upon established greatness, if only to refresh our spirits and renew our communion with the enernal verities.

Parenthetically, no one is scolded for reviving Shekespeare, as anyone who has been scanning this summer's drama pages can testify—if the revivals are bad, that, of course, is another matter —so why Mr. Munch should have to explain his decision to concentrate upon Beethoven and Brahms at Tanglewood this year is a little hard to figure. Of course, it's necessary to encourage new composers and hear new music, and a careful examination of the complete Berkshire Festival will indicate that new works were by no means entirely neglected, but how pleasant to renew long-established friendships and bask in the joys of hearing soloists of first rank pit their skill against the exalting demands of musical giants.

This is a personal opinion, of course, and not that of a professional musician or music critic. But I can testify that the July 29-31 concerts I was fortunate enough to hear at Tanglewood were not only memorable in quality of performance but attracted crowds of staggering size and matching enthusiasm. If 15,500 persons were willing to pay to hear Rudolf Serkin, Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony play Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto, "Egmont" overture and Third Symphony; and 12,000 music lovers braved the staggering heat the following afternoon to hear Isaac Stern, Pierre Monteux and the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms program, then it's a bit difficult to think up valid objections to such a choice of programs.

It could be argued — though Mr. Munch and Mr. Monteaux are not weather prophets — that it's easier to listen to familiar than unfamiliar programs when the thermometer starts soaring, but in rebuttal, couldn't it be said that excessive heat makes it, hard to concentrate upon musical experiments?

The arguments need not be pursued futher at the point, but let's do some careful investigating into what actually has been and will be presented at Tanglewood by the time the season closes on Aug. 14.

BEETHOVEN SEASON

During the four weeks of the Shed Concerts, which began on July 22, all nine of the Beethoven symphonies will have been played; the Missa Solemnis was sung two nights ago, Act II from "Fidelio" was heard last night, the "Egmont," "Coriolan" and Leonore No. 3 overtures were given; the concerto's No. 4 and 5 were played with Serkin and Istomin as soloists; and five chamber concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall were devoted to the trios, violin sonatas, piano sonatas and quartets.

Brahms also had his innings, three of his symphonies being presented, plus his violin concerto, and Academic Festival Overture! Bach's B Minor Mass was sung by the Radcliffe and Harvard Choruses, and the works of Wagner, Mozart, Haydn, Shuman, Handel, Boccherini, and Vivaldi joined forces with compositions by Ravel, Hindemith, Strauss, Faure Honogger and Samuel Barber.

Mr. Barber's "Prayers of Kirkegaard," presented in Boston last winter, was the only novelty heard in the Shed concerts, and despite the not inconsiderable competition of Handel's Water Music, Schumann's Symphony No. 44 and Brahms' Symphony No. 4, it held its own admirably. What wonderful acoustics the Shed has, to be sure: every season it seems more miraculous that this pie-shaped structure can project music so beautifully and so far.

"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"

This week will see considerable concentration on novelties. Tomorrow and Tuesday evenings, for example, Dept. IV (Opera) will present the world premiere performances of Mennini's opera, "The Rope," based on a one-act play by Eugene O'Neill, and last Monday and Tuesday nights the same department presented the Tanglewood premiers of Bernard Blacher's chamber opera, "Romeo and Juliet," and of Milhaud's chamber opera, "L'Abandon d'Ariane."

But the musical novelty that is liable to attract most attention will be the premier on Thursday, (which is "Tanglewood On Parade," an all-day fiesta of music and dance) of Leonard Bernstein's conducting of a suite he arranged from his "On the Waterfront" film score. The gifted Mr. Bernstein will also be soloist with Arthur Fielder and the Pops Orchestra in "Rhapsody in Blue," and will conduct Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," which will have Claude Rains as narrator.

When the facts and figures are all assembled, the attendance records added up, the gate receipts totalled and the final comments written down, it will be time for philosophical and financial post mortems. But I do believe, out of my own experience and the delight expressed by those attendance at the Festival was far more extended than mine, that this year's concert afforded great delight and satisfaction. True, we were not provoked, nor jarred, nor roused to frenzy over the merits of new and experimentals works, but we had a chance to drink deep of musical magnificence and renew acquaintance with past glories that are unlikely ever to be passe.

Now if the Berkshire Festival will get to work on the parking and traffic problems, the millenium would certainly be at hand. But shall not go into that thorny problem here: this was intended article of appreciation, not tion.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 369,241

AUG 7 1955

Berkshire Festival Comes to a Close With Beethoven Ninth Next Sunday

The sixth and final week of the Berkshire Festival concerts opens with the concluding event of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, on Aug. 10 in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Six principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be assisted by David Lloyd, tenor, and Ralph Berkowitz, piano, in a program of trios, songs, a quintet and a cello sonata.

Charles Munch will conduct an all-French orchestra program on the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Shed concert of Friday evening, and an all-Beethoven program including the Ninth Symphony with soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; and augmented chorus on Sunday afternoon. Pierre Monteux will conduct the Saturday evening (Aug. 13) program comprising Wagner, Brahms, Debussy and Strauss.

"Tanglewood on Parade"

"Tanglewood on Parade" from 6 to 11 p. m., Thursday, the annual benefit for the orchestra's music school, will commence with demonstrations by all departments: student symphony orchestra, chamber music, chorus and opera, followed by a gala concert in the Music Shed and concluding with the drawing of door prizes and waltzing on the lawn.

Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the premiere performance of a suite he has arranged from his score for the Academy Award-winning film, "On the Waterfront," and Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait." Arthur Fiedler will lead the Boston Pops Orchestra in a typical program of light music by Rimsky-Korsakov, Johann Strauss and George Gershwin, with Mr. Bernstein soloist in the "Rhapsody in Blue."

The complete programs are:

Wednesday, Aug. 10, 8:30 p. m., Theatre-Concert Hall (Chamber Music)—Beethoven: Trio in B flat, Opus 11, for Clarinet, Cello and Piano; "An die Ferne Geliebte," Six songs for Tenor and Piano; Sonata in C, Opus 69, for Cello and Piano; Trio in G for Flute, Bassoon and Piano; Quintet in E flat, for Oboe, Clarinet, Bassoon, Horn and Piano.

Thursday, Aug. 11, "Tanglewood on Parade"—4 p. m., special performance of opera, to be announced, 6 p. m., student symphony orchestra, Music Shed; student opera, Theatre-Concert Hall; student chamber music, Chamber Music Hall. 7 p. m., picnic supper, student chorus, 8:15 p. m., Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein, conductor: Suite from "On the Waterfront," Bernstein (first performance); "A Lincoln Portrait," Copland (narrator: Claude Rains, Boston "Pops" Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, conductor; Caprice Espagnole, Rimsky-Korsakov; Rhapsody in Blue, Gershwin (soloist, Leonard Bernstein); Suite from the ballet "Graduation Ball," Strauss-Dorati. 10:30 p. m., drawing for door prizes, Music Shed. 11:00 p. m., waltzing on the lawn.

Friday, Aug. 12, 8:30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra—Berlioz, "Symphonie Fantastique"; Debussy, "Le Martyre de Saint Sebastien"; Ravel, "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite No. 2 (conductor, Charles Munch).

Saturday, Aug. 13, 8:30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra—Wagner, Overture to "The Flying Dutchman"; Brahms, Symphony No. 3, in F major; Debussy, three nocturnes; Strauss, Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" (conductor, Pierre Monteux).

Sunday, Aug. 14, 2:30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra—Beethoven, Overture, "Leonore," No. 3; Symphony No. 9, in D minor.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 230,930

AUG 7 1955

Music Notes

An all star cast will be heard in "Tanglewood on Parade" this Thursday at the Berkshire Festival in Lenox, Mass. Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Boston Symphony in the first performance of his suite from "On the Waterfront" and Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait" with Claude Rains as narrator. Arthur Fieldler and the Boston "Pops" will have Mr. Bernstein as soloist in Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." Another feature is the performance, under Boris Goldovsky's direction, of Puccini's comic opera "Gianni Schicchi." "Tanglewood on Parade" is an annual event for the benefit of the Beckshire Music Centre.

World Premiere of "The Rope"

"The Rope," an opera in one act based on the play by Eugene O'Neill, will receive its world premiere tomorrow night in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Louis Mennini, of the faculty of the Eastman School of Music, is the composer.

es was some years ago baby-sitter for is Joan, who was then a tot . . . It ve is no secret that the Tanglewood i- Festival is about the only opera-ue tion of the Boston Symphony that er shows a profit. It is our considered y opinion that some season soon, the g profits might well be spent right t- here, improving the wholly inadee quate plumbing system. A battery of modern restrooms to end waiting lines are needed, plus a few more drinking fountains . . . Rosario
Mazzeo, Boston Symphony clarinetist, has for 15 years been working on a new development of the clarinet. He tells us it now is being made by the Selmer Co. in Paris, and orders are coming in briskly. He has developed a new system of keys and acoustical system. Hopes it will succeed the Boehm clarinet, in use since about 1900.

Eagle 8/10

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
RUTLAND, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 20,336

AUG 1 1955

Norwich

Esther M. Nicholson
Telephone 399-J

Mrs. R. Z. Buzzi of Barre has been a guest at the Nicholson home while visiting her son, John McKernan, who is in Hanover (N. H.) Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Converse Colt and family of Closter, N. J., are at the Colt home for two months.

Senators and Mrs. Ralph E. Flanders were guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Ballard during the week-end.

The Misses Peggy and Polly O'Neill of West Lebanon, N. H. are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Lee Gilman.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Such and daughter, Alice, of Chicopee, Mass., who have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Johnson, returned Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Lawson of Newport were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cossingham.

Mrs. Helen Temple of New York City, a former resident of Norwich, is visiting relatives and friends in this vicinity while at Norwich Inn.

Miss Abbie Metcalf was in Lenox, Mass., over the week-end to attend the Berkshire festival at Tanglewood.

Miss Evelyn Fuller of Lyndonville, has been a guest of Miss Maude Austin.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 86,944

AUG 6 1955

UofC Names Manager For New Auditorium

STORRS, Aug. 5 (Special)—Willard M. Sistare, who has been affiliated with the Berkshire Music Festival at Lenox, Mass., in charge of festival personnel for the past two decades, has been appointed manager of the University of Connecticut's new auditorium, UofC President A, N. Jorgensen said today.

Sistare, who will join the university staff in September, will have charge of the operation of the new, imposing landmark on the main campus at Storrs, which will be the center of many of the large-scale University activities and functions. Among these events will be the annual exercises which were held in the new structure last month, as the initial event.

The auditorium, built on two levels, has on its first level a hall of approximately 4,200 movable seats, including balcony, with permanent seating. On a lower level will be the university museum where will be on display a number of collections heretofore not shown publicly or in their entirety, due to lack of adequate space. A little theater annex to the auditorium is under construction. It will seat 500 and will have its own entrance.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 91,975

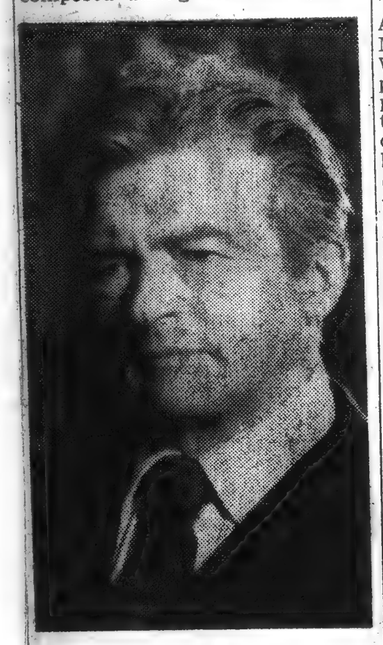
AUG 4 1955

CLAUDE RAINS TO NARRATE AT FESTIVAL

Noted Actor to Be Featured in 'Tanglewood On Parade' Next Thursday

Distinguished stage, screen, radio and television star Claude Rains will narrate Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," which will be a highlight of the gala evening concert next Thursday in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, during "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school.

The Broadway star of Sidney Kingsley's dramatic "Darkness At Noon" and of T. S. Eliot's comedy-drama "The Confidential Clerk" will make his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting, and his debut at Tanglewood in the stirring musical portrait of the Great Emancipator which was composed during the war by Mr.



CLAUDE RAINS

Copland, the noted American composer who is assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center (on leave of absence in 1955) and which was first performed by the Boston Symphony on April 9, 1943. Mr. Rains made three appearances in "A Lincoln Portrait" with the Philadelphia Orchestra, Eugene Ormandy conducting, twice in Philadelphia and once at Carnegie Hall, New York, in April, 1949.

Claude Rains, familiar to motion picture fans for featured roles in half a hundred films, including "The Invisible Man," "Anthony Adverse," "Juarez," "Here Comes Mr. Jordan," "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," "Caesar and Cleopatra" (he was Bernard Shaw's personal choice for the Roman dictator) "Casablanca" and "Notorious," was born in London and has been an actor since childhood. He came to the U. S. first in 1914 with the late Harley Granville-Barker to act in Shaw's "Androcles and the Lion." After service in World War I and a dozen West End productions, returned to Broadway for a notable group of plays produced by the Theatre Guild, including "Volpone," "Marco Millions," "The Moon in the Yellow River," "The Apple Cart" and "Too True to be Good." Before he went to Hollywood and stardom in 1935 he acted the dynamic counsel for the defense in "They Shall Not Die." He made a concert tour under the title "Words and Music" this spring, and currently can be heard over the N.B.C. network Monday through Friday afternoons in a program of dramatic readings. The noted actor is coming to Tanglewood next week directly from Stock Grange, the 400-acre farm he owns and operates near Philadelphia.

Mr. Copland's Lincoln study was inspired by Andre Kostelanetz, who, during the crucial weeks following the U. S.'s entry into the second world war gave thought to a means by which music could be used to mirror the magnificent spirit of our country. The result was a triptych of musical characterizations, Mr. Copland's, Jerome Kern's on Mark Twain, and Virgil Thompson's of the late Mayor LaGuardia of New York. Mr. Copland's text comes from the letters and speeches of Lincoln, and the music incorporates two songs of the period, the famous "Camptown Races" and a ballad of 1840 known today as "Springfield Mountain." The composition is divided into three sections, the first suggesting the mysterious sense of fatality that surrounds Lincoln's personality, including something of his gentleness and simplicity; the middle one sketching the background of his era; concluding with a simple but impressive frame about the words of Lincoln himself.

Leonard Bernstein, who is conducting "A Lincoln Portrait" with Mr. Rains as speaker, with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, also will include on his portion of the "Tanglewood on Parade" concert the first performance anywhere of a suite he has arranged from the music he composed for the Academy Award-winning film "On The Waterfront."

Arthur Fiedler and the celebrated Boston "Pops" Orchestra, in a program of Rimsky-Korsakov, Johann Strauss and Gershwin, with Mr. Bernstein soloist in the "Rhapsody in Blue," will conclude the gala concert, a dividend to patrons being some of Mr. Fiedler's encores in his own inimitable style.

During the early part of "Tanglewood on Parade," patrons are invited to simultaneous demonstrations from 6-8 p. m. by all five departments — student orchestra, chorus, composition, opera and study group—of the Berkshire Music Center, and as a dividend to holders of box seats and reserved ticket patrons, there is a performance in the formal gardens by the opera department of Puccini's short comic opera, "Gianni Schicchi."

Seats for "Tanglewood on Parade" are now on sale at the Tanglewood boxoffice, and telephone reservations are accepted, Lenox 600.

MR. TWEEDY By Ned Riddle

"My goodness! Maybe you'd better pay me in advance."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sentinal (e)
ANSONIA, Conn.
Ind. Republican
Circ. 12,663

AUG 2 1955

Six Symphony Artists Honored On Retirement

Six members of the Boston Symphony orchestra are retiring. They were honored recently at a Tanglewood luncheon and presented gold watches. Those retiring:

Jacob Raichman, principal trombone; Carlos Pinfield, first violinist since 1912; Paul Federovsky, first violinist; Ralph del Sordo, second violinist; Louis Artieres, viola; Walter MacDonald, French horn.

APPLETON, WIS.
POST CRESCENT
Circ. D. 32,179

JUL 20 1955

David Bethe Awarded Music Scholarship

David Bethe, 1036 W. Winnebago street, who will be a sophomore at the Lawrence conservatory of music next year, has won a scholarship for string bass study at the world famous Tanglewood music festival school in the Berkshire mountains. He will play in the student orchestra there. The festival is under the direction of Charles Muench, director of the Boston symphony orchestra.

Bethe has played in the Lawrence symphony during the last season under Kenneth Byler.

New England Newsclip Agency, In
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-42(

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

AUG 1 1955

Serkin Style Suits Beethoven Concerto

Special to The Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass. — Greater love for music hath no man than that he brave the Tanglewood traffic, awheel and afoot, on a weekend with Berkshire weather at its best.

Even one seasoned through all the Festival's years found the trek rather taxing. Withal there is probably nowhere else in the world where so many thousands can make their way with as much good humor and patience.

Although attendance has been somewhat below previous peaks, Saturday night set a new record if the eye is witness, the grounds being completely and pronely populated. By far the greater part of the audience listened under the stars.

It was the heroic Beethoven that was programed—the Symphony so-called, the E flat piano Concerto and the Egmont Overture. This is virile, dramatic, proclamative music. Doubtless stimulated by a rapt, mass audience Charles Munch gave his media brave and articulate voice.

* * *

CONQUEROR of the evening undoubtedly was Rudolf Serkin whom the audience stormed with one ovation after another when he had finished the Emperor Concerto.

The Serkin touch and style were admirably suit to scene and subject matter. He has a penetrative tone, not to be described as hard but consistently incisive. One does not expect from his slender frame the power that he puts behind his chords and octaves. His finger dexterity is infallible and juicy.

* * *

SERKIN'S TEMPOS have so strong a sense of movement that he reminds one of the jazz players who convey the impression of always being a twinkling ahead of the beat. He actually did arrive at the end of his cadenza an edge ahead of the orchestra.

At any rate he put dashing pianistic clothes on this grand inspiration of a man who had little patience with the mechanical limitations of the keyboard.

C. E. L.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH
DESERET NEWS
Circ. D. 79,589 - S. 78,294

JUL 25 1955

West Briefs

Casper Couple Attends East Music Center

LENOX, MASS. (UP) — The average age of students at the Berkshire Music Center is about 20 years but an enthusiastic couple in their 60s drove east from Wyoming to participate.

Kenneth D. Van Wagenen, 67, and his wife, 66, Casper, Wyo. are both musicians.

Van Wagenen plays the viola and his wife is soprano soloist with the Presbyterian Church Choir in Casper. She will sing in the festival chorus here.

Hampshire Gazette

JGUST 8, 1955.

Leonard Bernstein To Participate In Tanglewood Event

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the summer music school maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts, will have the participation of one of its most illustrious graduates, Leonard Bernstein, in the triple capacity in which the brilliant young American musician from Lawrence, Mass., has won international fame during his 36 years, as conductor, composer and concert pianist.

On Thursday, at Tanglewood Lenox, Mass., music lovers who from advance interest seem destined to surpass last summer's record turnout of 10,050 persons, will hear Leonard Bernstein open the gala evening concert in the huge 6,000-seat capacity Music Shed at 8:15 p.m., conducting the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra. His portion of the program — the concert will be shared by Arthur Fiedler conducting the celebrated Boston "Pops" Orchestra — will consist of a first performance anywhere of a suite Mr. Bernstein has arranged from music he composed for the film "On the Waterfront," which won the Academy Award in 1955, also "Oscars" for its director, Eliza Kazan, and its star, Marlon Brando. Mr. Bernstein will also pay tribute to the noted American composer Aaron Copland, at present on leave of absence from his duties as assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, with a performance of "A Lincoln Portrait," which will have the distinguished stage, screen, radio and television star, Claude Rains, as narrator. During Mr. Fiedler's tenure of the podium, Leonard Bernstein will be piano soloist in George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

Leonard Bernstein — he will observe his 37th birthday a week after Tanglewood closes, on Aug. 25 — was born in Lawrence, Mass., in 1918, attended the Boston Latin School and then Harvard College, graduating in 1939. He was at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia for two years, where he studied conducting with Fritz Reiner, orchestration with Randall Thompson, and piano with Isabella Vengerova.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,293

AUG 2 1955

Boston Orchestra Alters Air Time

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 1.—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, now playing here in the Berkshire Festival, will again be heard on the N. B. C. network this coming season, but on Thursday nights on tape instead of at the 8:30 Saturday night hour which it had in 1954-'55, it was learned yesterday.

N. B. C. began to broadcast the Boston Symphony's regular Saturday home concerts last season, replacing the series given in previous years by the N. B. C. Symphony under Arturo Toscanini and others. The proposed new tape-recording schedule is expected to be emore convenient for the Bostonians, since their Saturday schedule will not have to consider radio timing.

R. C. A. Victor executives will come to Tanglewood on Thursday, Aug. 11, when a five-year recording contract will be renewed with the Boston Symphony. Details will be announced at a reception on that day, when the annual Tanglewood on parade benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held.

CHAMBER MUSIC RECITAL PROVES FINE SUBSTITUTE

Connie Keeps Down Size of Audience at Program Replacing Piatagorsky

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 10 — Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music School, was the busiest person among those taking part in the seven chamber music recitals.

Scouted Around

Before Mr. Berkowitz is accompanying the ailing Piatagorsky, he was found the pianist was not to play tonight. Mr. Berkowitz scouted around and got six of the first desk players together with tenor David Lloyd, arranged the program given tonight and took part in each of the five works.

Presumably, many people have spent this day scanning the skies and testing the wind wondering if Connie was on her way. Radio news was indefinite. Anyway, Connie did not arrive and tonight it was balmy, though cloudy. The audience was not as large as usual and we blame Connie. For this program of works unfamiliar to many, was well worth hearing.

It opened with the enchanting Trio for Clarinet, Cello and Piano, Op. 11, played by Messers. Gina Cioffi, clarinet; Samuel Mayes, cello and Mr. Berkowitz. It was a performance of great charm, the three virtuosi forming an ensemble that might have been together for years. Mr. Berkowitz was a bit heavy handed at times. Particularly intriguing was the final allegretto con variazioni. These are rollicking variations, first for one, then for the other instrument and some for the ensemble. Everyone seemed to be having fun.

Beethoven's "Trio for Flute, Bassoon and Piano in G. Major" brought the lovely Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist, Sherman Walt, bassoonist, and Mr. Berkowitz together and the result was a sprightly, highly polished performance of this entertaining work. Beethoven was never happier than when writing his slow movements and his variations. The three instrumentalists played with perfect understanding and unity of thought. It was a performance rich in colors and intelligent in conception. They might be playing yet had the audience had its way.

Distinguished Performance

Samuel Mayes and Mr. Berkowitz joined to play the "Sonata for Cello and Piano in A Major, Op. 69," one of the sonatas Mr. Piatagorsky was scheduled to play. While the first movement seemed a bit casual, the overall performance was distinguished by the virtuosity of the two players and the interest of the subject matter. The performance won the two artists several [illegible]. Mr. Mayes draws a beautiful tone from his cello and his sensitivity and musicality combine to permit an interesting interpretation of whatever he plays.

Beethoven's song cycle "An Die Ferne Geliebte" is one of the finest works in this category. The six love songs are sung without pause and the musical line is not interrupted. David Lloyd, one of the most versatile of tenors, with Mr Berkowitz as his accompanist, sang these songs tonight. Mr. Lloyd did not offer a particularly illuminating or romantic performance, the voice is not particularly suave, nor has it much tonal beauty today. However, there is a keen intelligence back of all he does, so the sum total of the performance was musical, if not interesting.

The program concluded with a marvelous performance of the "Quintet for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn, Bassoon and Piano in E Flat, Op. 16." The players were Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; Sherman Walt, bassoon and the redoubtable Mr. Berkowitz at the piano. With such virtuosi is could not have failed to be the stunning performance it was.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,241

AUG 10 1955

N. E. Awarded 15 Rockefeller Study Grants

Fifteen grants, ranging from $1400 to $300,000, for New England colleges are included in the expenditures by the Rockefeller Foundation of $5,686,004 for the second quarter of 1955, announced today by Dean Rusk, president.

Largest in New England is $300,000 to Massachusetts Institute of Technology. It is an outright grant to aid in the development, in the next 10 years, of a new program in which a student may elect a major in the humanities or social sciences, along with one in a field of science or technology.

"The new course represents an experiment to encourage a more fruitful cooperation between scientific and humanistic education in ways which may be profitable to both," the foundation comments in its announcement.

The Rockefeller Foundation also appropriated $125,000 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra as a contribution to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, to make it possible for young musicians to study at Tanglewood, the Berkshire music center. The grant is payable in amounts equal to the sum in excess of $15,000 raised each year from other sources for the same purpose to stimulate an increase in the capital of the scholarship fund.

Other New England grants for the second quarter include:

DARTMOUTH COLLEGE: Program of research in cellular biology, $50,000.

HARVARD UNIVERSITY: Graduate School of Public Administration, Water Resources Seminar, $10,000; Laboratory of Social Relations, advanced research training, $10,000; toward appointment of Dr. Helen A. Rivlin as research fellow, Center for Middle Eastern studies, $4500; Wilbur J. Bender, study of college and university admission policies in Great Britain, $2400; studies in field of jurisprudence, members of Harvard Law Review staff, $1400.

FLETCHER SCHOOL OF LAW AND DIPLOMACY: To enable Sir William Ridsdale, former head Foreign Office News Department, London, to be visiting lecturer for a year, $8000.

YALE UNIVERSITY: Prof. Chitosi Yanase, $5000; Dr. Frank A. Beach, psychologist, $1000 for travel.

WESLEYAN UNIVERSITY: Prof. Sigmund Neumann, $5000.

SMITH COLLEGE: Research in genetics, $4200.

MASSACHUSETTS INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY: Research in X-ray crystallography under Prof. Martin Buerger, $4000; Journal to translate languages with aid of machines, $9000.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

AUG 5 1955

Symphony Honors Retiring Members

Special to The Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass. — Colleagues in the Boston Symphony Orchestra honored six retiring members at a luncheon at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Thursday. Gold watches were presented to the instrumentalists by Charles Munch, music director.

The players whose retirement takes effect at the close of the orchestra's Berkshire Festival Aug. 14 are Jacob Raichman, principal trombone, with 28 years service; first violinists, Carlos Pinfield, 43 years, and Paul ederovsky, 30 years; second violinist Ralph del Sordo, 35 years; Louis Arteries, viola, 35 years; and Walter G. MacDonald, French horn, 23 years.

Incoming members are cellists Richard A. Kapuscinski of Cincinnati, and Robert Ripley of Cleveland Heights; violinists Noab Bielski of Queens Village, N. Y., Alfred Schneider of St. Louis, and Joseph Silverstein of Detroit; and trombonist William M. Gibson of Pittsburgh.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

AUG 5 1955

Boston Symphony Fetes Six Retiring Members at Lunch

Their colleagues in the Boston Symphony orchestra honored six retiring members of the symphony at a luncheon at Tanglewood, Lenox, yesterday and gold watches were presented to the instrumentalists by Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra.

Members of the orchestra, whose retirement takes effect at the conclusion of the Boston Symphony orchestra's Berkshire festival on Aug. 14 are Jacob Raichman, principal trombone; first violinists, Carlos Pinfield and Paul Fedorovsky; second violinist Ralph del Sordo; Louis Artieres, viola; and Walter G. MacDonald, French horn. Neither Mr. Pinfield, who came from Boston for the ceremony, nor Mr. MacDonald had been performing in the 1955 festival concerts at Tanglewood.

The orchestra principal retiring is the well-known trombonist Jacob Raichman, a native of Vitebsk, Russia, and a member of the orchestra since 1927.

Carlos Pinfield is the oldest of the retiring BSO members from point of view of service, having joined the orchestra in 1912. Paul Federovsky became a member in 1925, Artieres and del Sordo have been with the Boston Symphony 35 years. Mr. MacDonald has been a member since 1932.

Tanglewood Busy Tuning Up For 'Parade' Tomorrow Night

TANGLEWOOD — Arthur Fiedler will arrive from Miami, Fla., this afternoon to conduct the popular Boston Pops Orchestra in the Music Shed tomorrow night at the Tanglewood on Parade program.

With good weather, the gala benefit is expected to draw an even larger crowd than last year because of the hit made by the Pops orchestra and Mr. Fiedler in a program of light music. Last year 10,050 attended.

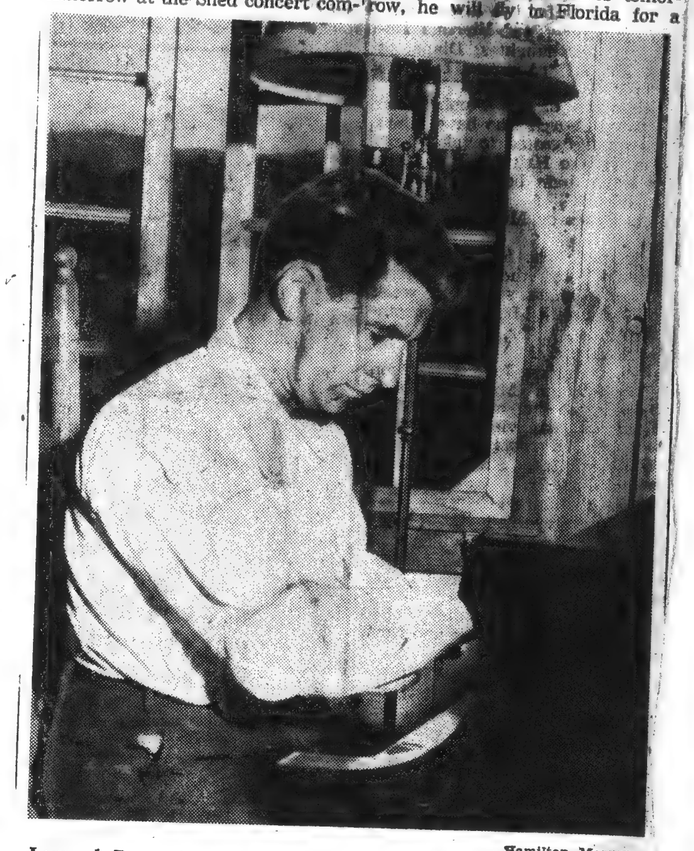
Leonard Bernstein will appear as conductor, composer and pianist tomorrow at the Shed concert commencing at 8:15. He will be the piano soloist with the Pops playing Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue," and also will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," with Claude Rains as narrator, and in a suite of music Bernstein composed for the Academy Award-winning motion picture, "On the Waterfront."

Besides "Rhapsody in Blue," the Pops program will consist of Rimsky-Korsakov's "Cappriccio Espagnole," and a suite from the ballet, "Graduation Ball," with music by Johann Strauss. It has been indicated Mr. Fiedler will provide as one of the encores, "The Ballad of Davy Crockett."

Drawing at Intermission

Preceding the evening concert, Tanglewood on Parade begins at 4 p.m. with a demonstration in the Barn by the Study Group of Berkshire Music Center students, and simultaneously with a performance for those who purchase box seats and reserved seats in the Shed, of the short Puccini opera, "Gianni Schicchi" by Tanglewood's Opera Department, in the formal gardens. From 6 to 7 p.m., the Berkshire Music Center will have simultaneous sessions of each department — orchestra, opera and chorus — music with a concert by members of the Choral Department on the steps of the Main House at 7 p.m. During intermission in the Shed concert, Boris Goldovsky will draw the names of winners of door prizes. Festivities conclude with waltzing on the lawn.

Mr. Fiedler has just completed his fifth consecutive guest conducting appearance with the Art Commission Pop Concerts in San Francisco's Civic Auditorium; last Sunday he conducted in Miami. After his visit to the Berkshires tomorrow, he will fly to Florida for a second concert; then return to Boston for the conclusion of the Esplanade series Aug. 15 to 20.



Hamilton Morgen

Leonard Bernstein will be tripling in brass at tomorrow night's Tanglewood on Parade program. He will be present as conductor, composer and pianist during the gala benefit concert in the Shed.

Conductor 26 Years

Mr. Fiedler has been conducting the famed Pops for 26 years. In 1924 he organized the Boston Sinfonietta. He founded the Esplanade Concerts in 1929, and has made more than 600 recordings. The Boston Pops tour orchestra which he organized in 1953 played 64 concerts in 68 days. A second six-week tour followed in 1954, and the third, last winter, played 58 concerts in 56 cities within 26 states, a distance of 10,000 miles.

In demand as a guest conductor, he has led the Montreal, Minneapolis, Seattle, Portland (Ore.), Dallas, Corpjus Christi and San Antonio Symphony Orchestras, as well as the Louisville Philharmonic, the Grant Park Concerts in Chicago, the NBC Symphony Orchestra and New Haven's Pops.

Mr. Rains is coming to Tanglewood for tomorrow's performance direct from his Pennsylvania farm, Stock Grange, located about 40 miles west of Philadelphia. London-born, he first came to the United States in 1914 with the late Harley Granville-Barker. This will mark his first appearance at Tanglewood.

Orchestra Air Time

the Herald Tribune

Aug. 1.—The [illegible] Orchestra, [illegible] will again be [illegible] N. B. C. network [illegible] season, but on [illegible] on tape instead [illegible] Saturday night [illegible] had in 1954-'55, [illegible] yesterday.

[illegible] began to broadcast [illegible] mphony's regular [illegible] e concerts last [illegible] ng the series given [illegible] rs by the N. B. C. [illegible] ler Arturo Tos- [illegible] rs. The proposed [illegible] ding schedule is [illegible] emore convenient [illegible] ians, since their [illegible] ule will not have [illegible] lo timing.

[illegible] or executives will [illegible] lewood on Thurs- [illegible] when a five-year [illegible] tract will be re- [illegible] the Boston Sym- [illegible] tails will be an- [illegible] a reception on that [illegible] the annual Tangle- [illegible] rade benefit for the [illegible] Music Center will be

[illegible] ade," the [illegible] Berkshire [illegible] her music [illegible] anglewood [illegible] ny Orches- [illegible] its Berk- [illegible] will have [illegible] ne of its [illegible] ates, Leon- [illegible] triple ca- [illegible] liant young [illegible] from Law- [illegible] n. interna- [illegible] s 36 years, [illegible] r and con- [illegible] Tanglewood [illegible] lovers who [illegible] st seem des [illegible] st summer's [illegible] ,050 persons. [illegible] rnstein open [illegible] ncert in the [illegible] acity Music [illegible] onducting the [illegible] ymphony Or- [illegible] n of the pro- [illegible] ert will be [illegible] Fiedler con- [illegible] rated. Boston [illegible] will consist [illegible] nce anywhere [illegible] rnstein has ar- [illegible] e he composed [illegible] e Waterfront," [illegible] ademy Award [illegible] ars" for its di- [illegible] and its star, [illegible] Mr. Bernstein [illegible] e to the noted [illegible] Aaron Cop- [illegible] leave of ab- [illegible] ties as assistant [illegible] Berkshire Music [illegible] performance of [illegible] rait," which will [illegible] nguished stage, [illegible] television star, [illegible] narrator. Dur- [illegible] tenure of the [illegible] Bernstein will [illegible] in George Gersh- [illegible] y in Blue."

[illegible] rnstein — he will [illegible] h birthday a week [illegible] od closes, on Aug. [illegible] in Lawrence, [illegible] attended the Bos- [illegible] ool, and then Har- [illegible] raduating in 1939. [illegible] Curtis Institute of [illegible] adelphia for two [illegible] studied conduct- [illegible] Reiner, orchestra- [illegible] dall Thompson, and [illegible] abella Vengerova.

[illegible] ORK, N. Y. [illegible] D-TRIBUNE [illegible] 56,443 - S. 528,253

[illegible] 2 - 1955

Tanglewood Tales

Forum Friday

A composers' forum will be held Friday afternoon at 4:30 in the Chamber Music Hall under the supervision of Department III.

The program follows:

Mass: Kyrie — Salvatore Martirano
String Quartet — Susan MacAdam
String Quartet: Adagio — William Sydeman
Piano Piece — Edward Miller
Violin and Piano Work — Richard Maxfield
Paul Gurevich, violin; Tossi Ichiyanagi, piano.
Music for Trombone and Piano — Michael Sahl

Composers' Forum

The program for the composers' forum, under the supervision of Department III of the Berkshire Music Center, to be held Saturday afternoon at 3 in the Chamber Music Hall, follows:

String Quartet — George Sicilianos
Hiroshi Hatoyama, violin; Jean Comstock, viola; Elizabeth Beebe, violin; Albert Petillo, violoncello.
Sonata for Viola and Piano — George Wilson
Joseph Pietropaolo, viola; George Crumb, piano.
Intermission.
Lieder: Die Sonette An Orpheus; on poems by Rilke — Eino Rautavaara
Da Stieg ein Baum (There Stands a tree).
Und fast ein Madchen war's (And it was like a maiden).
Ein Gott vermags.
O Ihr cartlichen (O, You Dear Ones).
Christina Cardillo, soprano.
Five songs for soprano, flute, clarinet, bassoon and violoncello — Michiko Toyama
Mary Jane Paul, soprano.
Pollee Slimm flute; John Pandolfi, clarinet; Janet Sillars, flute; Beatrice Messina, bassoon; David Spinks, violoncello.

Chamber Music Concert by Students

The sixth and final concert of chamber music by members of Department I of the Music Center will be given Sunday morning at 10 in the Theater Concert Hall.

The program:

Octet in E flat, Op. 20 — Mendelssohn
Paul Gurevich, violin; Joseph Hassid, violin; Edward Filmanowicz, violin; Jean Angers, violin; Jean Comstock, viola; Edward Gerber, viola; Alice Ober, violoncello; Marcia Hansen, violoncello.
Serenade No. 12 in C (K. 388) — Mokart
Nicholas Apostle, oboe; David Seeley, English horn; John Grande, bass clarinet; Catherine Carter, clarinet; Isabelle Glore, bassoon; Thomas Grove, bassoon; Robert Ricks, French horn.
Quintet — Brahms
Hiroshi Hatoyama, violin; Genia Palasanian, violin; Placido Pietropaolo, viola; David Spinks, violoncello; Susan Pearlman, piano.

* * *

Student Council Party

At the Student Council party at Wheatleigh Monday night for its emergency fund for needy students, John Grande, bass clarinetist from Long Island City, was master of ceremonies; Kenneth Schermerhorn, conducting student from Schenectady, was in charge of door prizes; and entertainment included impersonations by Stanley Dombrowski, violinist in the student orchestra, from Export, Pa.; and acrobatics by Esther Sweigart, a Study Group member from Kutztown, Pa.

'ON THE WATERFRONT,' Columbia's movie drama of the New York docks, was recently shown to this group personally involved in its production. Among those present were, left to right: Sam Spiegel, the producer; Leonard Bernstein, who composed the music, currently heading the music department at Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood; Father John Corridan, waterfront priest; Malcolm Johnson, Pulitzer Prize author of waterfront articles; and Bud Schulberg, author of screenplay.

Bernstein Expounds on Music for Movies

By LEONARD BERNSTEIN

The very nature of film music is fragmentary, almost by definition. There are exceptions, of course, such as music for films which are pageant-like, or short on dialogue and long on visual effect; in these cases extended musical sections are possible. "On The Waterfront" is not such a picture. Depending, as it does, on highly realistic dialogue, the opportunities for long developed musical sequences are few. In spite of this, I was so intrigued by the atmosphere and power of the film when I saw it in "rough-cut" that I decided to write the score hoping to compensate for the necessarily fragmentary quality of the music by strong thematic integration.

When it was suggested to me to make a "suite" out of this music, the gravity of the problem was fully apparent. Short sections of music may function well in the film itself; but how to avoid "bittiness" in a concert version? I have, therefore, relied on the thematic integration of the score in a double measure; rather than making a suite in the formal sense—a series, that is, of short, separate pieces—I have tried to coordinate the main material of the score into one continuous movement, using transitional methods. Hence the designation "Symphonic Suite," which is closer to the 19th century tone-poem than to the formal notion of a suite.

Opens With Solo Horn

The main materials of the suite are not many, but undergo numerous metamorphoses following as much as possible the chronological flow of the film score itself. There is an opening motive for solo horn (used over the title-credits in the film) which is a quiet representation of the element of tragic nobility that underlies the surface crudity and violence of the main character. After a short canonic treatment, this motive is forgotten until very near the end of the film, when the noble element begins to be dramatically apparent. From that point to the end, the score is chiefly concerned with the development of this motive to its full realization.

The second element is one of violence. It is heard first as a three-part fugato for nine drums (opening scene of the film) over which an alto saxophone bleats out a tugging, almost spastic, motive of pain. These two germinal entities are responsible for much of the following music; and the section closes with a dirge-like version of hte fugato-subject.

At this point, a lyrical song begins to unfold (already hinted at within the violent music) as the love-story takes hold. First sung unaccompanied by the oboe, it is then treated in a simple, shy harmonic way by flute and strings. After a short scherzando development, in which the more painful motives interpose themselves, the love song becomes a valse-lente, which grows steadily to its climax, and resolves as a pezzo-chiuso.

It is now that the original horn-theme returns, and begins to grow through a series of canonic treatments. A flight sequence follows (another outgrowth of the "painful" alto saxophone in the beginning); and the same material provides a brooding elegy (when we think the hero dead). But he is not dead; and as he makes his sacrificial gesture at the end of the film, the motive of his nobility climbs in intensity, mingled now with suggestions of the love-music, to the inevitable fortissimo that proclaims "The End."

Dedicated to Son

I have used a "normal" orchestra, having added only the alto saxophone, a vibraphone (can there be a film-score without one?) and extra percussion instruments for the fugato. The suite was finished on the 4th of July, 1955, and is dedicated to my son Alexander, who was born very shortly thereafter.

Chamber Music Concerts End At Hall Tonight

TANGLEWOOD — This season's series of Wednesday evening chamber music programs will end tonight in the Theater-Concert Hall with an all-Beethoven concert by six principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The concert begins at 8:30. Taking part will be Samuel Mayes, cello; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; and Ralph Gomberg, oboe. Also appearing on the program will be David Lloyd, tenor, and Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

The program will be devoted to the Trio for Clarinet, Cello and Piano, Opus 11, performed by Messrs. Cioffi, Mayes and Berkowitz; the song cycle "An Die ferne Geliebte," sung by Mr. Lloyd with Mr. Berkowitz at the piano; the Cello Sonata in A Major, Opus 69, played by Messrs. Mayes and Berkowitz; the Trio in C Major for Flute, Bassoon and Cello with Mrs. Dwyer and Messrs. Walt and Mayes; and the Quintet in E Flat, Opus 16, performed by Messrs. Berkowitz, Cioffi, Gomberg, Walt and Stagliano.

Mr. Lloyd, a frequent Tanglewood soloist, appeared twice with the Boston Symphony Orchestra last weekend and will again be a soloist in the performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony which concludes the Berkshire Festival on Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Mr. Berkowitz, who is dean of the Berkshire Music Center, is a well-known pianist and teacher. Last season he went on a five-month tour of Europe with the cellist, Gregor Piatigorsky, playing in England, France, Italy, Israel and Scandinavia.

The five first-chair wood-wind performers from the Boston Symphony Orchestra who will appear at tonight's concert have organized as the Boston Woodwind Qintet and as such have given concerts in many New England colleges and universities. This will be their first ensemble appearance at Tanglewood.

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 52,205
JUL 22 1955

Tanglewood Benefit Set Aug. 11

Tanglewood on Parade, the annual concert and program for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, will be presented Aug. 11. The Music Center is the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music which is conducted in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival.

The first half of the concert, starting at 8:15 p. m. will be given by the Boston Symphony, conducted by Leonard Bernstein. The Boston "Pops" Orchestra, with its conductor, Arthur Fiedler, will perform a typical "pops" program for the other portion of the concert.

Mr. Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's orchestra and conducting departments, will conduct the first performance of a suite he has arranged from the music he composed for the film, "On the Waterfront." He also will be piano soloist with the Boston "Pops" in George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

Mr. Fiedler's program will include "Caprice Espagnole" of Rimsky-Korsakov and the suite of Johann Strauss dances from the ballet "Graduation Ball" as arranged by Antal Dorati. A number of encores in typical light popular "pops" vein will follow.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-0068
Free Press
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Democrat
Circ. 7,100
AUG 6 1955

Claude Rains At Tanglewood

Distinguished stage, screen, radio and television star Claude Rains will narrate Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," which will be a highlight of the gala evening concert next Thursday (Aug. 11), in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., during "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's Orchestra's summer music school.

The Broadway star of Sidney Kingsley's dramatic "Darkness At Noon" and of T. S. Eliot's comedy-drama "The Confidential Clerk" will make his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting, and his debut at Tanglewood in the stirring musical portrait of the Great Emancipator which was composed during the war by Mr. Copland, the noted American composer who is assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center (on leave of absence in 1955) and which was first performed by the Boston Symphony on April 9, 1943.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 285,839
AUG 9 1955

Berkshire Festival

Music in Review

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, Aug. 9—The new operatic commissioning policy of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation paid off handsomely tonight in the presentation of Louis Mennin's "The Rope." This was the first performance anywhere, and judging by the way it was received it is unlikely to be the last.

Based on the one-act play by Eugene O'Neill about three unsavory characters who try to hoodwink an old New England farmer out of his money, the opera remains remarkably faithful to the original. The ironical twist at the end has been heightened in this operatic treatment as the child, Mary, is throwing the gold into the sea; here the opening lyrical mood returns in the orchestra to add a greater sense of futility to the whole venture.

Mr. Mennini has written an opera that has a corking duet, coming as a dramatic relief after the quarreling of the daughter and husband, and a virogous aria, "I Want Gold," in which Luke, the wayward son, explains his return after five years of roaming.

The composer makes considerable use of the melodrama, spoken dialogue over musical accompaniment, a device much admired by both Mozart and Beethoven. In fact, all through the opera characters will begin to speak and then slip over into song almost imperceptibly.

The orchestra employs a form of leit motif technique, explaining the characters by development of identifying themes appearing in various guises.

Tonight's cast, Malcolm Bernstein (Abraham), Mary MacKenzie (Annie), Lynn Detwiler (Pat), Holly McLennan (Mary), and Stephen Harvachick (Luke)) were all uniformly good with special honors going to Mr. Harbachick for his swaggering singing and acting of Luke.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

AUG 6 1955

Tanglewood Concert Honors Koussevitzky With Beethoven Mass

Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" was performed at Tanglewood in Lenox last night in memory of the late Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra and guiding spirit of the Berkshire Music festival.

6,400 Attend

The memorial concert, attended by some 6,400 persons, was conducted by Leonard Bernstein, who was one of Mr. Koussevitzky's favorite pupils at the summer music school run in connection with the festival. The four soloists, soprano Adele Addison, contralto Eunice Alberts, tenor David Lloyd and bass Mac Morgan, were also former students at the school.

The fifth week-end series of concerts at Tanglewood continues at 8:30 this evening, and Miss Christina Cardillo of this city will have one of the solo roles in a performance of the second act of Beethoven's opera "Fidelio." Also on the program are excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung."

To Present Opera

Tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 there will be another all-Beethoven program, with the Fifth and Eighth Symphonies and the Piano Concerto No. 4 to be heard.

On Monday and Tuesday evenings the opera department of the Music center will give the world premiere of a one-act opera, "The Rope," by Louis Mennini. This is the first opera to be commissioned at Tanglewood under the Koussevitzky Music Foundation plan to develop young composers.

On the same program will be the first American production of "Zaide," an unfinished two-act opera by Mozart. The Tanglewood version has been prepared in English by Sarah Caldwell.

All seats for the two performances are reserved.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 130,559

AUG 9 1955

MUSIC

By RUDOLPH ELIE

TANGLEWOOD, Aug. 8—The first performance of Louis Mennini's one-act opera "The Rope" demonstrated what everybody has known for some time: that the late Eugene O'Neill was a very great playwright.

Louis Mennini's setting of this powerful twist on the Biblical story of the prodigal son had a certain power of its own though there was no doubt from the outset that the dramatic mind of O'Neill was the principal motive force.

GHASTLY REVENGE

Once the issues were outlined between the sardonic old man who plans a ghastly revenge on his prodigal and his daughter and son-in-law by a previous marriage, the narrative itself held the stage.

The music served to underline the moods and to add characterization through a declamatory style that, if it never approached the lyrical, remained well within the vocal compass of the cast.

This is to say that Mennini, like Menotti, well understands the limitations of the human voice in action and does not call upon them for wildly jagged intervals requiring so much execution that the expression of character itself is difficult or impossible. Like Menotti, too, Mennini gives the principal musical action to the orchestra, which, now expressively, again violently, underlines and emphasizes the unfolding of the narrative and the characters on the stage.

Musically, Mennini's style derives from Copeland, though there is a strongly individual quality to it as well. His ideas reveal a strong melodic bent, but he doesn't develop them in long-breathed arias or set pieces. Only one, a duet between the rejected daughter and her husband, rises to operatic tension, though the prodigal is given a highly developed moment on the discovery that his ancient father actually wants him to hang himself in the noose set by the old man five years previously.

In general, however, this is a play—and a play with upper harmonics symbolically — with music, spoken, sung and played, and not an opera in the conventional sense. But it is an effective and gripping piece as indeed it would be without music.

WELL TRAINED CAST

The cast in tonight's performance was well trained and well suited to the roles. As Abrahama Bentley, the tortured old salt farmer, Malcolm Bernstein was suitably apoplectic and displayed a strong, well placed baritone voice. Mary MacKenzie as his daughter Annie was occasionally shrill—she was doubtless supposed to be—but effective, while Stephen Harbachick as Luke, the prodigal, gave the role a good deal of vocal and visual authority. Lynn Detwiler sang well as Annie's husband but tended to be a little wooden while Holly McLennan was entirely acceptable as the child who unwittingly frustrates the whole venal litter.

A single set of very imaginative quality and evocative of the New England coastal farm gave the production additional tension and the whole was deftly staged by Boris Goldovsky with fine orchestra support by Henry Janiec and the student orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald News (e)
FALL RIVER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 39,447

AUG 6 1955

Busy Closing Week at Tanglewood

The 1955 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood will come to a close next week.

It is expected that 130,000 persons will attend the Festival's 24 concerts which will include six chamber-music programs by noted soloists and visiting ensembles, six chamber orchestra concerts by principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and 12 concerts by the full, 104-piece Boston Symphony.

In addition, another 10,000 are expected to be present for "Tanglewood on Parade," the gala annual benefit for the orchestra's Summer School, the Berkshire Music Center.

This will take place on Thursday, "rain or shine." Events will begin with a special performance of opera in the Formal Gardens at 4 P. M.

A fanfare and welcome will be given at 5:15 and simultaneous sessions of the orchestra, opera and chamber music departments will take place at 6 in the Shed, the Theater-Concert Hall, and the Chamber Music Hall, respectively.

Lawn Party

Every one present is invited to attend a lawn party at 7. Each person is asked to bring his own picnic supper and to make use of the buffet and refreshment carts.

At th same hour, a concert will be given by the Chorus on the porch of the Main House.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Leonard Bernstein and the Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, conducting, will present a gala concert in the Shed at 8:15.

The Symphony will present the first performance of Bernstein's own suite, "On the Waterfront," and Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait."

The Pops Orchestra will offer "Capriccio Espagnole" ("Alborada," "Scene and Gypsy Song," "Fandango of the Asturias,") by Rimsky-Korsakov; Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue," with Bernstein as piano soloist, and "Suite from the ballet 'Graduation Ball,'" ("Acceleration Waltz," "Perpetual Motion," "Nocturne," "March," and "Galop") by Strauss-Dorati.

The concerts will be followed by waltzing on the lawn by the Main House.

Symphony, Pianist Excel At Festival

As if in collusion the long-awaited rain and Beethoven's 8th Symphony started Sunday afternoon's concert by the Boston Symphony in the Shed at Tanglewood. This caused a sudden scurry for cover by the outdoor listeners, creating an understandably loud rustling which was observed and then ignored by Mr. Munch and the orchestra. Although the opening phrases were barely heard, the rest of this fertile and joyous movement was clearly audible. The tantalizing allegretto scherzando with its metronomic quality was finely cut; then a stately and slightly ironical "tempo di minuetto" carefully carved as a fitting precedent for the capricious and sparkling finale. A burst of applause bespoke the temper of the audience, joy in this particular music at the same time reflecting thankful relief in the gently blowing rain.

A performance of masterful proportions by Eugene Istomin, young American pianist appearing for the first time at Tanglewood in Beethoven's 4th piano concerto, followed. With the unethical introductions of the first theme by the piano, carefully picked up by the orchestra and developed, one sensed an unusually fine understanding and rapport between performer and conductor. Mr. Istomin easily displayed his virtuosity in the two codas of this movement, the difficult double trills in one played with clarity and unerring exactitude. The incredibly beautiful second movement with its gentle and appealing improvisations on the piano, alternating with the strongly rhythmic and staccato octaves in the strings played forte for almost half the movement, gradually subsiding to a piannissimo, showed a limpid and penetrating quality of tone emanating from the dedicated fingertips of Mr. Istomin. The finale in rondo form, unusual only because of its lengthy and provocative coda was a masterpiece of brilliancy for both pianist and orchestra. The audience reacted in like manner, recalling Mr. Istomin and Mr. Munch several times.

After such a completely satisfying performance the thought of more music seemed an anticlimax, but such was not the outcome. Beethoven's 5th Symphony, so painfully familiar in its many and varied executions, was transfused by Mr. Munch's rhythmic and dynamic interpretation, the orchestra superbly aware of every mood, manner and melody. Superlative is undoubtedly the word for Sunday's all Beethoven concert; how fortunate we are to have inherited the works of this genius, without whom our progressive musical structure could not stand. — M. deB. B.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
RUTLAND, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 20,336

AUG 5 1955

UVM Students, Faculty To Attend Music Festival

BURLINGTON, Aug. 4.—Twenty students and faculty members from the University of Vermont Summer Session will leave here tomorrow for Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., where the annual Berkshire Music Festival is currently in progress.

The group will stay in Pittsfield, Mass., on Friday and Saturday nights and return home Sunday.

The Berkshire Festival trip is the final organized tour under the sponsorship of the University of Vermont Session. Recreation director Howard Delano made the arrangements for the trip.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 15,916

AUG 6 1955

Tenth Season of Chamber Music

Miss Margaret Fisher will present her tenth season of chamber music concerts at her barn-studio on Irontown road, West Redding, beginning Aug. 20 with a recital by the New York Woodwind Quartet.

The other two concerts in the series of three, all Saturday afternoon events, are scheduled for Aug. 27 and Sept. 17.

Miss Fisher, pianist and lecturer on music, has chosen for the season's offering three "gala request programs" which have been selected from the past nine seasons of chamber music concerts at the Lonetown studio and which, therefore, may be regarded as highlights in nearly a decade of music-making there.

Outstanding ensembles to be heard during the course will be assisted at the piano by Miss Fisher. The New York Woodwind Quartet which opens the events consists of Samuel Baron, flute; John Barrows, French horn; David Glazer, clarinet; Jerome Roth, oboe and Bernard Garfield, bassoon. They will play Darius Milhaid's suite, La Cheeminee du Roi Rene; Brahms' Sonata in F minor, opus 120, No. 1 for clarinet and piano; the Vivaldi Concerto in G minor for flute, oboe and bassoon, and a sextette by Francis Poulenc, for piano, flute, oboe, clarinet, bassoon and horn.

For the second concert, Aug. 27, an ensemble of strings, violin, cello, viola and contrabass, from the Boston Symphony orchestra, will be heard in a recital for string ensemble and piano, and for the final concert will be presented the New Music String Quartet, with Samuel Baron, flute soloist, in selections for strings, flute and piano combinations.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,241

AUG 10 1955

Tanglewood 'on Parade' Tomorrow

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will be a feature of "Tanglewood On Parade," tomorrow night's concert at the Berkshire Music Center which will benefit the Boston Symphony's Summer music school.

Fiedler returns to Boston for the conclusion of the Esplanade series Aug. 15 to 20.

The Pops program tomorrow will consist of Rimsky-Korsekow's "Cappriccio Espagnole"; Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" with Leonard Bernstein as piano soloist; and a suite from the ballet, "Graduation Ball," with music by Johann Strauss arranged by Antal Dorati. A number of encores in typical Pops style may be expected.

Besides the Pops section of the concert, Bernstein will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," with stage and screen star Claude Rains as narrator, and in a suite of music Bernstein composed for the Academy Award-winning motion picture "On the Waterfront."

At 4 p. m. tomorrow there will be a demonstration in the Barn by the Study Group of Berkshire Music Center students, and a performance for those who purchase box seats and reserved seats in the Shed, of the short Puccini opera, "Gianni Schicchi" by Tanglewood's Opera Department in the formal gardens.

From 6 to 7 p. m., the Berkshire Music Center will have simultaneous sessions of each department —orchestra, opera, and chamber music, with a concert by members of the choral department on the steps of the main house at 7 p. m. During intermission in the Shed concert, Boris Goldovsky will draw the names of winners of door prizes. Festivities conclude with waltzing on the lawn.

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 10, 1955

Two Contrasting Operas Are Skillfully Presented at Tanglewood Festival

By D. E. RITZ

The experimental aspects of the opera department at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, was demonstrated admirably Monday and last evening in the annual opera presentation in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Two contrasting operas, one modern and one old, were presented skillfully with excellent singing, fine acting and remarkable settings.

* * *

BORIS GOLDOVS head of the department, pref oth with his interesting comm aries and details of production sidelights.

"The Rope," by Louis Mennini of Rochester, faculty member of the Eastman School of Music, is a setting of the Eugene O'Neill one-act play, originally performed by the Provincetown Players in April, 1917. Mr. Goldovsky staged "The Rope" for its Tanglewood presentation.

* * *

"ZAIDE," an opera written by Mozart in 1779 at Salzburg, was presented in an English version prepared by Sarah Caldwell, who also staged the work.

"The Rope" is unique in that it is the first work commissioned by the opera department for production at Tanglewood. Mennini spent the summer of 1953 at the school preparing the work in consultation with Mr. Goldovsky and the staff. The composer supervised the casting of the opera and attended vocal and instrumental rehearsals.

O'Neill knew of the project before his death in 1953 and signed a contract allowing for its adaptation by Mennini.

The number is gripping in its character portrayals and in its presentation of the fallacy of money motivation theme.

* * *

THE OPERA CALLS for three men and one woman singer and a child actress. An old barn with rope noose prominent against the skyline is the setting for the one-act tragedy of human nature.

Of the music Mennini states "the whole opera is a development and extension of the first two measures of music with which it begins."

One felt the strength of the O'Neill writing but as opera material, we are not so sure. Probably we are "sugar and spice and everything nice" opera addicts. Gripping the work is but it is the strength of the O'Neill writing carrying over to its opera presentation.

* * *

ON MONDAY EVENING Malcolm Bernstein gave an able presentation of the role of Abraham Bentley, the aged father. Mary MacKenzie was cast as daughter Annie with Lynn Detweiler as Pat Sweeney, her husband; and Stephen Harbachick as Luke Bentley, Abraham's son by a second marriage. Holly McLennan had the role of the child, Mary.

Last night's cast included Peyton Higgison, Susana Naidich, Paul Berry, Holly McLennan and Robert Kirkham. Henry Janiec conducted.

Aviva Einhorn conducted the Mozart opus, which so far as has been learned, was given its first United States performance at Tanglewood Monday.

Listed as an opera in two acts it was given on Monday evening as an opera in one act. Mr. Goldovsky explained that in dress rehearsal the evening before the department was not satisfied with results and drastic last-minute changes were made. The audience found the opera delightful and we hope that it pleased Mr. Goldovsky for if it didn't it may have been a two-act opera last night.

* * *

GOLDOVSKY EXPLAINED that the opera had never really been completed by Mozart and as left includes only a number of set pieces. "No one knows," according to Goldovsky, "whether the sultan was to have been a harsh or a magnanimous pasho." As originally planned for Tanglewood presentation he was to have been harsh, but as presented Monday evening he had been turned into a magnanimous creature.

"Our patron saint, Mozart" Goldovsky called the composer.

The opera is a little gem musically. It poses no psychotic problems and follows the well-known theme of boy loves girl even through language barriers. The sultan was sung on Monday by Howell Zulick with McHenry Boatwright and Jefferson Morris as Allazim, and Jefferson Morris as adventurer Carlos D'Armendariz. Christina Cardillo was enchanting as Zaide, the serving girl in the Seraglio, and George Lussier was cast as Osmin, the young son of the sultan.

* * *

THE CAST for last night included Lynn Detwiler, George Lussier, Robert Kerns, Saramae Endich and Harold Johnson, Guards, servants and dancing girls made up the balance of the cast.

The setting, a garden in the Seraglio, was delightful.

Strangely enough the two operas, though so far apart musically, have several things in common.

Both employ one woman singer, a child in an acting part and three male leads.

The opera department of the Berkshire Music Center has been responsible for many fine offerings in the past and this year it is again offering excellent training and an opportunity for workshop preparation methods probably not equalled elsewhere.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 20,000

AUG 4 1955

Claude Rains to Narrate Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait" at Tanglewood

Distinguished stage, screen, radio and television star Claude Rains will narrate Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," which will be a highlight of the evening concert next Thursday (August 11), in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, during "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school.

The Broadway star of Sidney Kingsley's dramatic "Darkness At Noon" and of T. S. Eliot's comedy-drama "The Confidential Clerk" will make his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting, and his debut at Tanglewood in the stirring musical portrait of the Great Emancipator which was composed during the war by Mr. Copland.

Mr. Copland's Lincoln study was inspired by Andre Kostelanetz, who, during the crucial weeks following the U. S.'s entry into the second world war gave thought to a means by which music could be used to mirror the magnificent spirit of our country. The result was a triptych of musical characterizations, Mr. Copland's, Jerome Kern's on Mark Twain and Virgil Thompson's of the late Mayor LaGuardia of New York. Mr. Copland's text comes from letters and speeches of Lincoln, and the music incorporates two songs of the period, the famous "Camptown Races" and a ballad of 1840 known today as "Springfield Mountain." The composition is divided into three sections, the first suggesting the mysterious sense of fatality that surrounds Lincoln's personality, including something of his gentleness and simplicity; the middle one sketching the background of his era; concluding with a simple but impressive frame about the words of Lincoln himself.

Leonard Bernstein, who is conducting "A Lincoln Portrait" with Mr. Rains as speaker with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, also will include on his portion of the "Tanglewood on Parade" concert the first performance anywhere of a suite he has arranged from the music he composed for the Academy Award-winning film "On The Waterfront."

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston "Pops" Orchestra, in a program of Rimsky-Korsakov, Johann Strauss and Gershwin, with Mr. Bernstein soloist in the "Rhapsody in Blue," will conclude the gala concert.

During the early part of "Tanglewood on Parade," patrons are invited to simultaneous demonstrations from 6-8 p. m. by all five departments—student orchestra, chorus, composition, opera and Study Group—of the Berkshire Music Center, and as a dividend to holders of box seats and reserved ticket patrons, there is a performance in the formal gardens by the opera department of Puccini's short comic opera, "Gianni Schicchi."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

AUG 6 1955

Koussevitzky Honored At Festival Concrt

Friday night's Berkshire Festival concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood was in memory of the late Serge Koussevitzky, former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Director of the Berkshire Music Center until his death in the spring of 1951. Leonard Bernstein conducted Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" in D Major with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Festival Chorus of Tanglewood students trained by Hugh Ross. The vocal soloists were by Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Mac Morgan, bass. Richard Burgin had a violin solo, and the organ solo was by William Frank.

All four soloists are former students at the Berkshire Music Center. Miss Addison is a native of Springfield.

Tonight, Charles Munch will return to the Music Shed podium to conduct a concert of operatic excerpts — the second act of Beethoven's "Fidelio" in which Margaret Harshaw of the Metropolitan Opera Company will be heard as Leonore, with Messrs. Lloyd and Morgan, also Arthur Schoep, tenor, Malcolm Bernstein, bass, and Christina Cardillo, soprano, all of Tanglewood's opera department; excerpts from Wagner's "Die Gotterdamerrung," including Siegfried's Rhine Journey and Siegfried's Death Music, and the Immolation Scene with Miss Harshaw.

Sunday afternoon the fifth all-Beethoven program will be given when Mr. Munch will conduct two symphonies, the Eighth and Fifth, and Eugene Istomin will play the Fourth Piano Concerto.

BALTIMORE, MD.
AMERICAN
Circ. S. 317,397

JUL 24 1955

Radio And TV

Previews By Aldine R. Bird

Francis Kelly Taylor.

Tomorrow, Boston Symphony Orchestra, from the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Beethoven's "Symphony No. 7 in A Major," WBAL, 8.15 P. M.

Telephone Hour, WBAL to-

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-0068

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,014

AUG 4 1955

Margaret Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera soprano, will make her Tanglewood debut at the Berkshire Festival Concert of Saturday evening August 6 in the music shed at 8:30 p.m. She will sing the Immolation scene from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung," and act 2 of Beethoven's "Fidelio," with David Lloyd, Mac Morgan and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students. Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

Francis Kelly Taylor.

Tanglewood Audience Hears Serkin Play Beethoven

By GEORGE W. STOWE

Lenox, Mass. — Pianists, like so many other professional men today, have become specialists. Gieseking is associated with the performance of Debussy, Bachaus with Brahms and Edwin Fischer with Bach and Mozart.

And since the demise of Artur Schnabel, Rudolph Serkin has acquired a reputation as the foremost interpreter of Beethoven. Yet the two performers constitute opposite poles in their approach to the composer, a fact abundantly clear from Mr. Serkin's all-Beethoven program in the chamber music series at Tanglewood last night.

* * *

WHILE SCHNABEL'S fame rested on his eloquent exploration of the slow movements, Serkin makes his mark by the supercharged atmosphere that his playing invokes. His dynamism borders on the demoniac, his tempos are propulsive, his interpretive conception is on a grand scale.

In the face of these considerations Serkin's occasional deficiencies in rhythm and finger accuracy dwindle to insignificance. He is far from an impeccable player but one soon adjusts to such failings when he is building an architectonic structure, as he did last night with the "Hammerklavier" Sonata. Precious few could remain unmoved by such a performance.

His program started with the comparatively unchallenging Sonata in F Major (Op. 10, No. 2) and continued with the so-called "Waldstein" Sonata (Op. 53) that represents the composer in full command of his resources.

In both sonatas Mr. Serkin gave the impression that he was driving the music beyond its capacity for optimum expression. This criticism was particularly apt in the case of the "Waldstein." His tempo for the opening of the first movement was accelerated to a point where control was perceptibly affected. There was a compensating factor, though, in the tenderly expressed Adagio Molto of this sonata.

* * *

THE "HAMMERKLAVIER" poses a Herculean technical problem for the performer, but it was in this work that Serkin reached heights of expression and justified all that came before. The opening Allegro was imposing in its mounting grandeur, the Scherzo had an Olympian joviality, and even the attenuated Adagio was affecting in this knowing performance.

For the tortuous fugue that concludes this monumental sonata Serkin summoned all his reserve strength and played with a concentrated energy that almost defies description. The largest audience for these chamber concerts, more than 2,400 roared its approval.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 91,975

AUG 5 1955

ADELE ADDISON SINGS TONIGHT AT TANGLEWOOD

Will Participate in Koussevitzky Memorial Event at Festival

Tonight at 8.30, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, the Berkshire Festival concert will be in memory of the late Serge Koussevitzky, former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and director of the Berkshire Music Center until his death in the spring of 1951. Leonard Bernstein will conduct Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" in D Major with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Festival chorus of Tanglewood students trained by Hugh Ross. The vocal soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Mac Morgan, bass. Richard Burgin has a violin solo, and the organ solo is by William Frank.

All four soloists are former students at the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its concerts in the Berkshire Festival. Miss Addison, who has already appeared at this summer's Festival in Bach's Mass in B Minor, was a student in the opera department during the summers of 1947, 1948, and 1950; Miss Alberts, who is flying to Tanglewood especially for this performance from her duties on the faculty of the Aspen International Institute in Aspen, Colo., was a student here in the second session of the Berkshire Music Center, 1941, as well as in four subsequent summers; Mr. Lloyd was a member of the opera department in 1947 and sang in its American premiere production of Britten's "Albert Herring" and Rossini's "The Turk in Italy;" and Mac Morgan was enrolled in opera dramatics in the 1953 session.

Tomorrow evening at 8.30, Charles Munch will return to the Music Shed podium to conduct a concert of operatic exerpts—the second act of Beethoven's "Fidelio" in which Margaret Harshaw of the Metropolitan Opera will be heard as "Leonore," with Messrs. Lloyd and Morgan, also Arthur Schoep, tenor, Malcolm Bernstein, bass, and Christina Cardillo, soprano, all of Tanglewood's opera department; excerpts from Wagner's "Die Gotfried's Rhine Journey" and "Siegfried'as Rhine Journey" and "Siegfried's Death Music," and the "Immolation Scene" with Miss Harshaw.

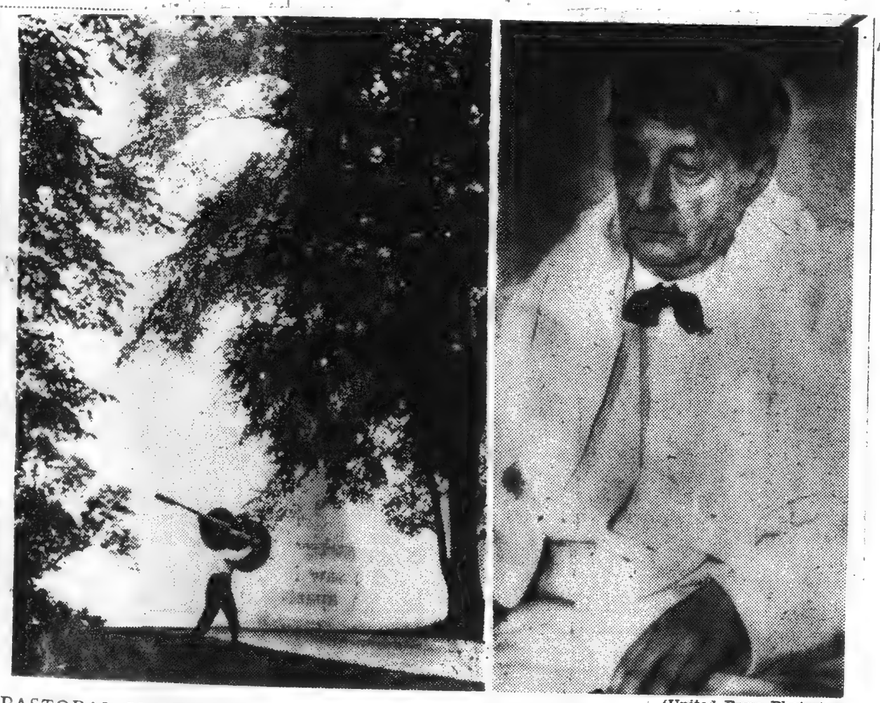
Sunday afternoon at 2.30, the 5th all-Beethoven program of this season's Festival will be given when Mr. Munch will conduct two symphonies, the Eighth and Fifth, and Eugene Istomin will play the Fourth Piano Concerto.

Remaining tickets for tonight's concert and the succeeding ones by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the Berkshire Festival, which concludes on the 14th, may be obtained at the Tanglewood box-office, and telephone reservations are accepted—Lenox (Mass.) 600. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,241

AUG 6 1955



(United Press Photos)

PASTORAL SYMPHONY—Huge trees dwarf this giant bass viol player of the Boston Symphony Orchestra as he lugs his instrument through idyllic landscape at Tanglewood, Lenox. He has been playing in another session of famed Berkshire Music Festival. At right is the noted conductor, Dr. Charles Munch, taking a breather between numbers.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

AUG 4 1955

Serkin "Exciting" At Tanglewood

Many ovations greeted pianist Rudolph Serkin who performed an all-Beethoven program Wednesday night at the Theater-Concert hall at Tanglewood before an audience of 2456 persons.

Before filled concert hall of 750 with others spilling out over the lawn under a typical moonlit Berkshire summer sky, Serkin delivered an exciting performance of three sonatas, the last of which was the Piano Sonata in B-Flat Major, Op. 106 "Hammerklavier").

An expert interpreter of Beethoven, Serkin played the very difficult Hammerklavier" with skill and beauty. The excitement of Beethoven's imagination was well represented by Serkin in the first movement where two themes are carried out, depicting a regal scene in which one can almost hear horn calls followed by a soft echo.

In the second scherzo movement, the playfulness and abruptness of the scales were drawn together thru the compactness of Serkin's playing. One of Beethoven's longest movements, the third adagio, showed the skill of Serkin in finding, feeling, and executing every mood in its romantic and slow patterns. Here, Serkin played not only musically, but made every note sing.

The character and style of the last movement differs greatly from the first three with a mixture of the baroque and classic in the largo, leading into a highly developed contrapuntal movement with stormy and heavy themes played against quieter ones. Serkin showed his ability to contrast the pianissimo and forte and to shade delicately.

Serkin opened with the Piano Sonata in F Major, Op. 10, No. 2, formal in style with lyrical climbing themes set against shorter broken ones, which he developed smoothly in the first movement. He connected the scales skillfully in the second movement and brought out the staccato, dance-like quality of the third.

His second selection, the Piano Sonata in C. Major, Op. 53 ("Waldstein"), proved almost as exciting as the third. He phrased the quick changing harmony of the first movement with skill and in the development section controlled the harmony, developing it to a fine recapitulation. Following the slow second movement, he again showed his ability to display color thru contrasts in the very lyrical third movement.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

AUG 4 1955

CHRISTINA CARDILLO IN TANGLEWOOD OPERA—Christina Cardillo, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Cardillo of 149 Pleasant street and a winner of Metropolitan Opera Auditions of the Air last year, is shown rehearsing with three other members of cast for performance of "Zaide," unfinished two-act opera by Mozart, to be given first American production by Berkshire Music center opera department at Tanglewood next Monday and Tuesday evenings. Miss Cardillo plays title role of Zaide. Also in scene, left to right, are Howell Zulick of Springfield, Penn., as Sulieman, sultan of Turkey; McHenry Boatwright of Boston as Allasim and Harold Johnson of Chicago as Don Carlos. Miss Cardillo will achieve top distinction of her several seasons at Tanglewood this Saturday evening when she will sing role of "Marcellina" in performance of Act 2 of Beethoven's opera, "Fidelio," with the full Boston symphony orchestra during major festival concert in music shed.

TOLEDO, OHIO
TIMES
Circ. D. 48,355
JUL 25 1955

Munch, Monteux Conduct In Berkshire Festival Shift

By FREDERICK J. KOUNTZ

TANGLEWOOD, Mass., Jul[illegible]—The Boston Orchestra's Berkshire Festival shifted, as it were, into high gear over this weekend. That is to say that the two weekends of theater concerts, in which only a chamber orchestra is employed, had been concluded, and the second concerts, in which the Boston Orchestra seems on occasion to overflow beyond its own concert-size proportions, had got under way.

Charles Munch conducted the orchestra Friday night and Sunday afternoon in programs devoted entirely to Beethoven. Pierre Monteux, venerable in years—he has now passed 80—but ageless in the ways of music, was the conductor Saturday night.

Music Unchangingly Fresh

The acquaintance of some of us with Mr. Monteux goes back as far as 1916, when he was touring the country with the Ballet Russe which he had been conducting in Europe from 1912 on.

That he has devoted himself to conducting for almost 45 years without any appreciable lapse is not in itself comparatively edifying. Others have done as much. But is remarkable beyond cavil that after so many years his way with music is unchangingly fresh and engaging.

Abundance Of Weapons

Quite frequently in the last decade and more Mr. Monteux has reminded me of Lefty Grove. Years ago there was in each of them blazing strength and whiplike vigor. And in each of them the blaze cooled, the whip softened. But each found other methods of dealing with the forces that beset them. And for each of them a mind mellowed, but disciplined, by experience and an enormous storehouse of knowledge have been an abundance of weapons.

The Honorable Lefty has of course been retired for several years. And one suspects that Mr. Monteux will retire when he is ready. But until that time let no one suppose that any matters of music or orchestras are escaping him.

He conducted Saturday night from among orchestral staples the Respighi transcription of Bach's Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor, Beethoven's Symphony No. 2, and the Richard Strauss tone poem, "Death and Transfiguration." Of his performance, one might say that his enlarging stride in Bach was masterful; that the luminosity and clarity of coloration in Beethoven were extraordinary; that all the stops were open, the sky the limit in Strauss.

Sessions' Work Heard

The new work on the program was Roger Sessions' Orchestral Suite from "The Black Maskers." Mr. Sessions, of Princeton University and for the summer a member of the music faculty at Tanglewood, originally composed incidental music in seven parts for the Leonid Andreyeff play. From this incidental music he has derived the suite which was played Saturday night.

The derivation remains basically program music. It is ingeneously constructed. Its orchestration is enormous, daring, and, especially in the use of the brasses, tremendously powerful. And all of it seems to fit logically within itself.

I was not satsified on first hearing, however, that it transmits with the savagery of the play the unrelenting horror and the terrible annhilation which are visited on the chief character. For my own part it needs more hearings.

It was played brilliantly. And the audience of more than 8,000 was only slightly less interested in it than it had been in the more familiar fare of the program.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,252 - S. 982,681
AUG 1 1955

Magnificent Programs

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass., Aug. 1.—Brahms may have dominated the weekend programs of the Berkshire Festival, but the single Beethoven program on Saturday night drew the largest crowd.

When Charles Munch conducted the "Eroica" symphony with Rudolf Serkin playing the "Emperor" concerto, Tanglewood was literally overrun with 15,500 people, almost an all-time record attendance. The weekend totaled more than 35,000.

Pierre Monteux conducted the Brahms concert in the shed yesterday afternoon. The program included the Academic Festival Overture, the Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist, and the First Symphony.

That Monteux presented these in the solid and masterful way characteristic of him could be almost taken for granted. His interpretation of Brahms has always been singularly satisfying. It was on this occasion.

Stern played with that growing sensitivity noted in his appearance at Lewisohn Stadium a week ago. He shapes the music with more insight than before and communicates more of it. He drew a beautiful tone from his violin to sing through the slow movement, but he could have given the other movements more bite and more brilliance to do full justice to their more weighty measures. It was a performance of distinction.

Brahms figured on the Friday evening program when Munch conducted the Fourth Symphony. This was magnificently performed. Munch was inspired and he in turn inspired the orchestra. All the musical accents came through with perfect timing and inflection. The finale, in particular, was set forth not only in the full strength of its cumulative power but also with a fiery conviction tremendous in impact and conclusive in artistry. Seldom has the work been more superbly played.

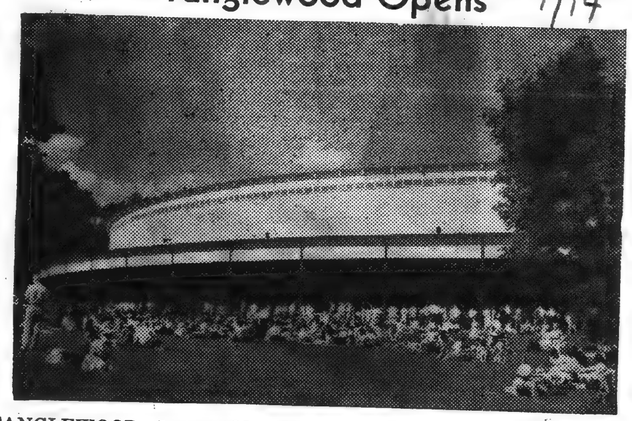
An important and quite moving contemporary work received an understanding performance during the Friday program: Samuel Barber's new choral work "Prayers of Kierkegaard," introduced to New York by the Bostonians last season.

This is a beautifully written score that sounds even more beautiful than it looks. Its intangible values exerted a strong influence in the performance by the Festival chorus with Leontyne Price as chief soloist. The program also included Handel's "Water Music" suite and Schumann's Fourth Symphony.

Except for the "Egmont" overture, the Beethoven program duplicated that of opening night at Lewisohn Stadium. However, it rated much higher in interpretation. Incidentally, this was Serkin's first appearance at Tanglewood.

Jewish Civic Leader, Worcester
8 7/24

Tanglewood Opens 7/14



TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. — The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the 16th season of 24 concerts in the hills of Western Massachusetts in which the orchestra has participated, runs for six weeks, July 6-August 14. Record-breaking attendance of 135,775 was recorded in 1954. The huge Music Shed (capacity 6,000) attracted an average of 9,197 persons with crowds overflowing on the spacious lawns.

WASHINGTON, D. C.
Post & Times Herald
JUL 26 1955

Tanglewood's D. C. Students

Study groups from all over the country are an annual feature of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Mass. Here, with Conductor Thor Johnson, of the Cincinnati Symphony, are, left to right, Washington's Karin Peterson, Judith Weinberg and Nancy Gardener, settled in the Berkshires through mid-August.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 179,065

AUG 7 1955

Tanglewood to Hear 'Typical' Boston Pop

A "TYPICAL" Boston Pops concert, complete to encores, with Arthur Fiedler conducting will be the feature of "Tanglewood on Parade" Thursday night, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Berkshire Festival's school at Lenox, Mass. This is the concluding week of the festival.

The event will start with a fanfare of welcome and simultaneous demonstrations of the school in operation at 6 o'clock. The orchestra will perform in the Shed, there will be opera in the Theater-Concert Hall, and chamber music in the chamber music hall.

Picnic With Music

This will be followed by a picnic supper with music by the student chorus at 7 o'clock. At 8:15 o'clock the concert will begin in the Shed, the first part of the program being by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, in Bernstein's Suite from the prize-winning film, "On the Waterfront," a first performance, and Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait."

Then the Pops will take over, with Fiedler conducting Capriccio Espanole, Rimsky-Korsakov; Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue, Leonard Bernstein, soloist, and Suite from the ballet, "Graduation Ball," Strauss-Dorati. After the concert there will be drawing for door prizes, and waltzing on the lawn.

Of interest among the concluding exercises of the school are performances tomorrow and Tuesday night of a two-opera bill, both first times in this country. One is "The Rope," one-act opera by Louis Mennini based on Eugene O'Neill's play of the same title and the first opera to be commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation especially for production at Tanglewood. Mennini is a faculty member of the Eastman School of Music and began his opera two summers ago when he was at Tanglewood.

The other opera is "Zaide," a two-act unfinished Mozart opus in an English adaptation by Sarah Caldwell and Marvin Schofer.

Final Festival Week

The orchestra begins its sixth and final festival week this afternoon in the Shed with Charles Munch conducting an all-Beethoven program consisting of the Eighth and Fifth Symphonies and the Piano Concerto No. 4, Eugene Istomin, soloist.

Beethoven's Ninth Symphony will feature the concluding concert in the Shed next Sunday. Munch will conduct and the soloists will be Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd and Donald Gramm.

Friday night Munch will conduct a program by Berlioz, Debussy, and Ravel. Pierre Monteux will conduct Wagner, Brahms, Debussy and Strauss Saturday night. The concluding chamber music concert Wednesday will be a program of Beethoven trios, quintets, cello sonatas and songs by six principals of the orchestra, David Lloyd, tenor, and Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

Tanglewood

Opera to Have World Premiere

"THE Rope", an opera in one act by Louis Mennini, commissioned for production by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will have its world premiere by students of Boris Goldovsky's opera department in the Theater-Concert Hall at 8:30 Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 8 and 9.

On the same program will be "Zaide" (K. 344), an unfinished two-act opera by Mozart. So far as can be learned, the "Zaide" will be the first in the U. S. Two different casts of students of the opera department will sing.

Performances are open to those who support the summer music school by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. All seats are reserved, and reservations may be made through the Friends' office, Tanglewood, telephone Lenox 600.

* * *

LOUIS MENNINI, of the faculty of the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N. Y., spent the summer of 1953 at Tanglewood on commission by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation and prepared his work from the beginning in consultation with Mr. Goldovsky and his staff. The opera is based on Eugene O'Neil's one-act play of the same name.

"By providing an opportunity for a young composer to live with the musical theater, the Koussevitzky commission is enabling him to steep himself in the problems peculiar to it," Mr. Goldovsky said.

* * *

OF "THE ROPE," Mr. Mennini says: "Eugene O'Neill knew of my project before his death in 1953. I never got to meet him, but I have a contract signed by the Pulitzer Prize playwright to adapt his play.

"I formed the idea of setting 'The Rope' to music after reading it: I have never seen it on the stage. I have used the O'Neill play as is, except for certain changes of words, sections of conversations which seemed unnecessary to the continuity of the drama, a few additions of my own that seemed advisable for musical extension.

"My one basic problem in setting the play was, whether to make the music as strong (dissonant) as the drama insofar as character portrayal, or whether to add warmth to the starkness and gloominess of the play.

"After much reading of O'Neill, I found a remark of his which made me decide to pursue the latter course. He said, 'Even in ugliness there is beauty'."

* * *

CLAUDE RAINS will narrate Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," a highlight on the Tanglewood on Parade program Thursday between 6 and 11 p. m., the annual benefit program for the music center. Mr. Copland is on leave this year as assistant director of the center.

Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Boston Symphony in "A Lincoln Portrait," also in a suite he has arranged from his music for the Academy Award-winning film "On the Waterfront."

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will offer a program of Rimsky-Korsakov, with Mr. Bernstein soloist in "Rhapsody in Blue."

Earlier from 6-8 p. m., student departments will demonstrate and at 4 p. m. for box and reserved ticker holders, there will be a performance of Puccini's opera, "Gianni Schicchi."

* * *

IN THE CONCLUDING Wednesday evening program of chamber music of Beethoven, six principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (Gino Cioffi, clarinet; Samuel Mayes, cello; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; James Stagliano, French horn), will be assisted by David Lloyd, tenor; and Ralph Berkowitz, piano, in a program of trios, songs, a quintet and a cello sonata.

Charles Munch will conduct an all-French orchestral program, music of Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel, on the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Shed concert Friday at 8:30 p. m., and will close the festival series with an all-Beethoven program including the Ninth Symphony with soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass and augmented chorus Sunday at 2:30. Pierre Monteux will conduct the 8:30 p. m. Saturday program, comprising Wagner, Brahms, Debussy and Strauss.

VALATIE, N. Y.
ROUGH NOTES
Circ. W. 1,000

JUL 22 1955

Tanglewood:

Munch, Monteaux to Conduct BSO in 4th Week of Festival

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, moves into the fourth of its six weeks of symphonic music, with a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet, on July 27 in the Theatre-Concert Hall

Leontyne Price, a former student of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, returns to Tanglewood on Friday evening, July 29, as soloist in "The Prayers of Kierkegaard."

Charles Munch's Friday (July 29) program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barbers "Prayer of Kierkegaard." Leontyne Price, soprano, has the principal solo role. Supporting solos will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, of New York, and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano, also of New York. The Tanglewood Choir, which will assist, has been trained by Hugh Ross, and comprises 60 voices.

Mr. Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist, makes his first appearance in the Music Shed, as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program of Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

AUG 6 1955

Rest—But Not Full Measure

CHARLES MUNCH, towel around his neck, is caught by camera as he takes breather at Tanglewood in Massachusetts hills between appearances on podium with Boston Symphony Orchestra in Berkshire Music Festival concert. UP Photo

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 55,423

AUG 8 1955

Thunderstorm Obbligato

Pianist Istomin Stars In Tanglewood Concert

By RAYMOND MORIN, Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — The real news at Tanglewood during the Sunday afternoon concert was a performance of Beethoven's Fourth Piano Concerto by Eugene Istomin with the Boston Symphony and Charles Munch that must have broken a record for competition.

In spite of a heavy percussion obbligato that grew worse and worse in the form of a thunderstorm, pianist and conductor refused to give up. The sensitive second movement — a beautiful dialogue in which the orchestra makes austere remarks and the piano replies gently — probably wasn't heard beyond the first few rows. For a time it looked as if the performance would be halted.

To make matters worse, Mr. Istomin was required to use his respite mopping up the keyboard and 9715 people did their best to concentrate on what they were able to hear from the stage.

Artistic Stature

Therefore the credit runs high that Mr. Istomin was able to disclose that he is a young pianist of full artistic and technical stature. His style of presentation is extremely attractive, simple, direct, unfettered from mannerisms, and musicianly.

The best test of his musicality appeared in the first movement cadenza which he played with sympathy and great concern over its poetry. Discounting the growls from without, we were close enough to the stage to appreciate the ringing, lyrical tone that Mr. Istomin elicited from the fragile statements.

A spirit of exuberance was released in the rondo, and Mr. Munch did an admirable job of co-ordinating the orchestral repartee with the soloist's style.

Received Ovation

Mr. Istomin received an ovation. It's no discredit to him to suggest that it may have been in part for his sportsmanship and power of concentration, but certainly his art received the lion's share.

The balance of this all-Beethoven program included the fifth symphonies. We have heard voiced criticism that too much Beethoven music is being played at this festival.

If we are to judge by the performances we've heard of Missa Solemnis—the second act of the opera, "Fidelio" and these symphonies, the arguments against this musical fare are stone cold.

Direct as Possible

The Munch approach to the eighth was most interesting it combined a successful transmission of philosophy with a constant aliveness. As we stated in a previous review, the Munch style is as direct as possible and as devoid of superfluous gesture. Not having heard music here since the Koussevitzky era, we find this a startling innovation.

The excellence of the Eighth was determined by strong, articulate phrasing, precise changes of volume, and soaring melodies. The trio of the third movement, which can bring ruin to the performance, was beautifully played by the wind instruments, especially the brasses.

Exciting Close

Sacrificing excessive speed for clarity the finale brought the work to an exciting close.

As was to be expected, the Fifth Symphony received a memorable performance. A full range of reflection was derived from the second movement — the basses and cellos played brilliantly during the trio — and the finale rose to heroic proportions.

Tonight at 8.30 the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center will present the American premiere of Louis Mennini's "The Rope." The performance is open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Herald Journal Syracuse
8/9/55

TALKING IT OVER

'Tanglewood' Draws Throngs For Superb Music Programs

By EMMA VAN WORMER

As the final week of the 1955 Berkshire Music Festival in "Tanglewood," Lenox, opens, record attendance figures for 20 of the 24 concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are impressive.

Through the weekend, a total of 111,835 attended the programs and it is expected that the 1954 figures of 135,775 will be equalled, if not surpassed by the weekend. Sunday afternoon's concert attracted 9,715. Rudolf Serkin's Piano Sonata recital in the Theater-Concert Hall recently brought the largest audience for an event in the smaller hall, with hundreds of listening on the lawns, a total of 2,456. This, according to Walter Alford, in charge of news releases, was unusual, in that the audience outside the hall could not see the artist. Earlier in the week Serkin played with the orchestra in The Shed.

"Tanglewood on Parade" for the benefit of Berkshire Music Center will take place Thursday from 6 to 11 p.m. with sessions simultaneously in all departments. At night there will be concerts in The Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Leonard Bernstein and by the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler. In the former program, Claude Rains, the eminent actor, will be narrator for Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait." In the Pops program, Bernstein will be at the piano for George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

Bernstein

Fiedler

Claude Rains

There will be a ceremony of musical significance on the Main House Porch late in the afternoon when a contract is signed for recordings both by the Boston Symphony and the Boston Pops Orchestra with RCA Victor. Conductor Charles Munch and conductor Fiedler signed for their respective orchestras.

The thousands who attended Sunday's concert, with places on the lawns, sought shelter during a heavy shower, the thunder adding to orchestral effects in the all-Beethoven program which included the Eighth and Fifth Symphonies, in that order, with the Fourth Piano Concerto in G Major, with Eugene Istomin as soloist with orchestra. This marked the young artist's debut both in "Tanglewood" and with The Boston. His was interesting reading of the Concerto, the second and third movements played without pause and with remarkable tempi. There was prolonged applause for both soloist and Director Munch, who shared the plaudits with the orchestra.

As ever, in this, the eighteenth season of the Berkshire Festival, the Tanglewood Tradition embodies the finest in musical standards and achievements. Since the '30's, Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony offer the world's greatest music. The Berkshire Music Center, Charles Munch, director, is unmatched in the distinction of faculty and students.

The Berkshire Hills are world-famed and "Tanglewood" with the Little Red House (where Hawthorne wrote) and other interesting buildings, including The Shed and the Theater-Concert Hall, annually are the center of interest of students and music lovers.

The Festival closes next Sunday afternoon with the Beethoven Ninth, with orchestra, chorus and soloists, Charles Munch conducting. There will be Friday and Saturday night concerts in The Shed and a Wednesday night concert in the Theater-Concert Hall, among numerous other music programs.

Eagle 8/10 D4

Lenox

ROBERT U. JOHNSON — Tel. 163

BSO Violinist Soloist Sunday

LENOX — Victor Manusevitch, violinist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be the soloist at the Church-on-the-Hill Sunday morning at 11, with the Rev. Dr. Harry Trust officiating.

Mr. Manusevitch is a graduate of both the St. Petersburg and Berlin Conservatories of Music. During World War II he organized and conducted the U.S. Air Force Symphony. He holds a degree in Fine Arts from Boston University and an M.A. and a Ph.D. at Harvard in Slavic languages and literature.

He will play "Grave" by Friedman Bach, arranged by Fritz Kreisler; "Melodie" by Gluck; and "Romanza" by Wieniawski. Mrs. Harriet Parsons Levinson is the organist.

Oil Paintings And Sculpture In Library Exhibit

LENOX—Sculpture and oil paintings of native scenes and flowers are currently to be seen at the Lenox Library. Miss Irene M. Poirier, librarian, has brought the work of Beatrice Paipert, sculptress, and Harry Lane, landscape artist, together with a display of musical manuscripts signed by Tanglewood composers.

An oversized head of Ludwig Luht, double bass with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, dominates Miss Paipert's exhibit, which includes two smaller heads of Einar Hansen, first violinist with the BSO, and his wife, Cathy. Miss Paipert is teaching this summer at Belvoir Terrace.

Fourteen of Harry Lane's nature scenes are on display. Mr. Lane, a native New Yorker, has been a resident at West Stockbridge since 1949. He studied at Munich, Germany, and Paris, France, and is represented in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York City, the Worcester Museum and the Museum of Fine Arts at Boston. His murals decorate the Post Offices of Port Washington, N.Y., and Oakdale, La. This year he won a prize at the spring exhibition at the Berkshire Museum.

The autographed music manuscripts displayed include Aaron Copland's "The Second Hurricane," Paul Hindemith's "Second Sonata for Piano," Oliver Messiaen's "L'Ascension," Darius Milhaud's "Suite for Piano" and Jacques Ibert's "Escales."

Miss Poirier said that Leonard Bernstein, Seymour Lipkin and Boris Blacher have promised to add to her collection of signed musical scores.

Local Scout Thanks Kiwanis

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-0068

Messenger (e)
ST. ALBANS, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 3,474

AUG 5 1955

20 UVM Students To Attend Berkshire Annual Music Festival

BURLINGTON — Twenty students and faculty members from the UVM Summer Session left Burlington this afternoon for Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., where the annual Berkshire Music Festival is currently in progress.

Traveling by car, the group will stay in Pittsfield, Mass., on Friday and Saturday nights and return home on Sunday evening.

The Berkshire Festival trip is the final organized tour under the sponsorship of the University of Vermont Summer Session. Recreation director Howard Delan made the arrangements for the trip.

On Friday evening, the Festival will feature Beethoven's Missa Solemnis, Leonard Bernstein, conducting.

Saturday's program will consist of Beethoven's Fedelio, Act II, and Wagner's Excerpts from "Gotterdammerung," Charles Munch, conducting.

On Sunday, they will hear Beethoven's Symphony No. 8, Piano Concerto No. 4, and Symphony No. 5. The Fifth Symphony will have Eugene Istomin as soloist and Charles Munch conducting.

The University of Vermont Summer Session heads into its final week on Monday.

Margaret Harshaw, Metropolitan Opera soprano, will make her Tanglewood debut at the Berkshire Festival Concert of Saturday evening August 6 in the music shed at 8:30 p.m. She will sing the Immolation scene from Wagner's .."Gotterdammerung," ..and act 2 of Beethoven's "Fidelio," with David Lloyd, Mac Morgan and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students. Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

A Good Week-End At Tanglewood Serkin Stars

A weekend of fine weather appropriately complemented the fine music heard at the Friday and Saturday evening concerts of the Berkshire Music Festival, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Friday evening, the first item on the program was the Handel Water Music Suite, which was admirably handled by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the vigorous directing of Charles Munch. Especially notable were the horns in the first movement, and the strings and woodwinds in the second.

After a pleasing rendition of the Schumann Symphony No. 4 in D minor, a rather drastic change of pace and mood was accomplished by the presentation of Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard." Although we doubt that over 30 per cent of the audience really understood the composition, there is no denying that the conductor, orchestra and soloists handled an extremely difficult piece with vigor and skill. The lovely vocal tones of Miss Leontyne Price, soprano soloist, were a highlight of this performance.

Unfortunately, the effort of contralto Regina Sarfaty and tenor Arthur Schoep seemed, at certain points, to be overwhelmed by the orchestra.

The last item on the Friday program was the Brahms 4th Symphony in E minor. Highly appreciated by the audience, points of note included well-handled transitions between relaxed loveliness and powerful grandeur in the second movement, the spirited directing and tight control over the orchestra exhibited by Mr. Munch particularly in the third movement and some fine work by the brasses in the last movement.

Saturday

Rudolph Serkin excelled Saturday night, as piano soloist in Beethovan's fifth piano concerto in E flat major. Mr. Serkin's nimble and skilled fingers more than amply met the challenge which this work has always presented to pianists in the chords, trills and syncopated figures demanded by the score. Mr. Munch and the orchestra carried out their part of the partnership with perfection. The audience granted Mr. Serkin a huge ovation at the conclusion of the concerto.

Beethoveen's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica", was an unforgettable experience as performed by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The second movement was particularly moving and powerful. Conductor and orchestra, it seemed, captured the very essence of the music as conceived by the master, and displayed it to full advantage.

The Beethoven Egmont overture was the first work on the Saturday program, and although well-performed, could not, measure up to the other two works played that evening.

L. F. M.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Republican
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 42,980

AUG 7 1955

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the summer music school maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts, will have the participation of one of its most illustrious graduates, Leonard Bernstein, in the triple capacity in which the brilliant young American musician from Lawrence, Mass., has won international fame during his 36 years, as conductor, composer and concert pianist.

On Thursday at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., music lovers who from advance interest seem destined to surpass last summer's record turnout of 10,050 persons, will hear Mr. Bernstein open the gala evening concert in the huge 5,000-seat capacity Music Shed at 8:15 p. m., conducting the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra. His portion of the program—the concert will be shared by Arthur Fiedler conducting the celebrated Boston "Pops" Orchestra — will consist of a first performance anywhere of a suite Mr. Bernstein has arranged from music he composed for the film "On the Waterfront," which won the Academy Award in 1955, also "Oscars" for its director, Elia Kazan, and its star, Marlon Brando.

Mr. Bernstein will also pay tribute to the noted American composer Aaron Copland, at present on leave of absence from his duties as assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, with a performance of "a Lincoln Portrait," which will have the distinguished stage, screen, radio and television star, Claude Rains, as narrator. During Mr. Fiedler's tenure of the podium, Leonard Bernstein will be piano soloist in George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Times
NEW MILFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,786

JUL 28 1955

Vivaldi Work Featured At Music Fete

New Milford mixed with Paris and Berlin at Tanglewood recently as the far-famed Berkshire Festival drew an international crowd to programs of the music of Mozart and Vivaldi.

While the theory of America's lack of culture was being destroyed before the eyes of Pravda's correspondent at Stratford's Shakespeare Festival, praise in French and German for the fine American performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra could be heard from various quarters of the large crowd at Tanglewood's Theatre Concert Hall, Lenox, Mass., last Friday and Saturday evenings.

Praise was not lacking from American listeners either, for the masterful work of Charles Munch conducting two Vivaldi Concerti Grossi, the perfectly balanced chorus achieved by Hugh Ross for the fiery excitement of Vivaldi's Gloria Mass (the event of the weekend), nor for the brilliant cello playing of the Boston Symphony's cellist, Samuel Mayes, in Boccherini's B-flat Major Violincello Concerto. And all of this magnificent harvest of American cultural achievement in one evening's program, Saturday!

Piano Concerto

Our visitors from abroad must also have been impressed, as we were, by the variety of Mozart offered on Friday night. Three little-known arias, were sung with verve, but with somewhat less than mastery by Jennie Tourel, whose voice was rich and vibrant in the forte parts, but not quite flexible enough in the coloratura passages. Two fairly standard works, the Don Giovanni Overture and the Linz Symphony (No. 36), and a rarely-performed, but delightful piano concerto (G. Major, K. 453) completed the evening's melodic program.

Leonard Bernstein conducted the symphony and overture, played and conducted the concerto. Mr. Bernstein, the apple of the late Serge Koussevitsky's eye directed all with an un-Koussevitsky-like interpretation, dictated more by his own creative urge than by the intent of the composer, it seemed to us. Actually, our chief complaint with Mr. Bernstein's conducting was that he had a tendency to alter the tempo at times, but less than able with Mozart than with any other composer. His playing of the piano concerto revealed a new and fascinating facet of this gifted young artist's talents.

Pierre Monteux

This weekend's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra include Pierre Monteaux conducting an orchestral program of Bach-Resphigi, Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor; Beethoven's Symphony No. 2 in D Major; Session's Suite from The Black Maskers, and Death and Transfiguration by Strauss, on Saturday evening at 8:30.

On Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Charles Munch will conduct an all Beethoven program; the First, Fourth and Sixth (Pastorale) Symphonies R.P.

On Friday evening, July 29, Charles Munch will conduct orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard." The latter work is a choral composition which will be sung by the Tanglewood Choir, under the direction of Hugh Ross, with solos sung by Leontyne Price, Arthur Schoep and Regina Sarfaty.

Saturday, Mr. Munch presents an all-Beethoven program, with Rudolph Serkin as piano soloist in the Emperor Concerto, in the Music Shed. Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor on Sunday afternoon at 2:30, in an all-Brahms program, including the Concerto for Violin in D Major with Isaac Stern as soloist.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 285,839

AUG 8 1955

Berkshire Festival

Music in Review

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Aug. 7—For this showery, breezy Sunday afternoon, Charles Munch chose another all-Beethoven program, the 8th and 5th symphonies and the 4th Piano Concerto. After the "Missa Solemnis," the "Fidelio," and the Wagnerian excerpts, heard in the concerts on Friday and Saturday and all employing huge forces, the gently pulsating 8th Symphony and the lyrical, introspective concerto provided an excellent contrast.

Both works were unusually well played, the Allegretto of the symphony and the Andante of the concerto being particularly beautiful.

In the concerto, a very remarkable pianist, Eugene Istomin, made his belated debut without orchestra. The choice of soloist for this work was indeed a happy one; Istomin is an artist of uncommon sensibilities and capable of well-modulated poetic projection.

Mr. Munch, in his customary manner, allowed the spotlight to fall on the pianist, but he could not help sharing it because he matched every mood and nuance with the soloist.

By the Rondo of the concerto, however, approaching storm signals could be sighted. Mr. Munch began to press the tempo, but the soloist seemed quite oblivious to the urging and continued on his even-paced way, holding back the orchestra.

But like a steam boiler without a relief valve, the conductor with so much nervous energy in check had to explode sometime. And what better piece to explode on than Beethoven's Fifth!

It was even a more violent reading than that with which Mr. Munch closed the Boston season in April. He gives evidence of not the slightest understanding of the piece.

For anyone to whom this particular composition is the epitome of symphonic thought, a treasured document of dramatic power, and a work of indescribable awe, sitting through the conductor's frenzied interpretation can only be compared to watching helplessly while a beloved friend is assaulted. The only defense is to walk out of hearing; this is what one listener did.

The number of people attending the three concerts this week end totaled 25,537, nearly 10,000 fewer than the previous one.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News Advertiser
WESTFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2700

AUG 4 1955

"Tanglewood on Parade" August 11th

One of the highlights of the Berkshire Music Festival, "Tanglewood on Parade," will be held Thursday, Aug. 11 for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood in Lenox. It is expected this popular feature will draw a heavy attendance again this year.

There will be much interest among music lovers in the Boston Symphony Orchestra concert in the shed at 8.15 when Leonard Bernstein will conduct his own "Suite from 'On the Waterfront'." The full orchestra will also play "A Lincoln Portrait," by Copland, with a special speaker.

In addition the Boston Pops Orchestra will play and Bernstein will be a soloist for George Gershwin's "Rhadsody in Blue." This program will also include "Spanish Caprice," by Rimsky-Korsakov and the "Suite from 'the Ballet 'Graduation Ball'," by Strauss-Dorati.

There will also be waltzing on the lawn, door prizes, a picnic supper, lawn party and many other activities beginning at 6 p.m. and ending at 11 p.m.

The Berkshire Music Festival is having another banner year in attendance during 1955 in a series of programs whose emphasis has been on Beethoven. Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, has been widely acclaimed again this year for his interpretations of the varied programs that have been played.

Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 101,022

JUL 12 1955

Bondsville

BONDSVILLE, July 12—Michael S. Mega Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Mega of Main street is studying at Tanglewood in Lenox under the supervision of Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Mega is a student at the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston.

... Church Street - New York

CLEVELAND, OHIO
PRESS
Circ. D. 300,880

JUL 29 1955

Social Scene

The Heat's On; Travel Lures Clevelanders

By MARJORIE ALGE

Wind-up of July finds Clevelanders eith on the brink of midsummer holidays or a ready in the midst of vacation fun.

MAINE . . . is cool destination of the Wi liam S. Burtons, Winslow Rd., Shaker Heights who take off for Lucerne Tuesday with daugh ters Betsey Lea, 11, and Deedee, 9.

Driving up they'll stop off in the Adiron dacks to pick up 12-year-old Susan at Moss Lake Camp. They'll route their return in late August via Old Greenwich, Conn., to visit Mrs. Burton's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. William McKenna.

MASSACHUSETTS . . . and their summer place, "Strawberry Hill," in Williamstown will be August address for Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Taplin and family. They'll take in some of the Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood.

BERMUDA . . . with its blue water and pink sand, is holiday spot for Playhouse director Frederick McConnell and Mrs. McConnell. They sailed aboard the "Queen of Bermuda."

PROVENCE . . . that charming province in southern France, is currently being explored on bike and bus by Joy Bailey, daughter of the Herbert P. Baileys, Lyman Circle, Shaker Heights.

She'll tour the country with an Experiment in International Living group until mid-August then strike out on her own for Denmark with plans to return around the end of September.

First part of Joy's continental summer, which began early this month, was spent in Beaune, France, with M. and Mme. Chastener de Gery and daughter, Mlle. Monique, on their estate "Le Dernois" in the Cote D'Or district.

Letters to the family report a "wonderful time" on the tour, Joy's second. Following her graduation from Wellesley, she was with an Experiment in Living group in Germany.

COLUMBIA, S. C.
STATE
Circ. D. 74,543 - S. 80,990

MAY 29 1955

Edwin A. Freeman

ENGINEER-COMPOSER

Clemson Teacher Wins Music Composition Prize

CLEMSON, May 28 (Special)—A young graduate assistant in engineering drawing at Clemson College with a diversified education has won a $500 prize for musical composition. Edwin A. Freeman, a native of Clemson and a graduate of the college, has been notified that he has been awarded the money to be used for further musical study by the 1954 Student Composers Radio Awards.

This competition is sponsored annually by Broadcast Music, Inc., in this country and Canada to further the creation of concert music in North America. Judges for the 1954 awards were William Schuman, president of the Julliard School of Music; Earl V. Moore, dean of the School of Music at the University of Michigan, and Henry Cowell, composer and professor at the Peabody Conservatory of Music.

Freeman's composition entitled "Fantasy on a Ground" is a passacaglia for orchestra. It was written while he was studying musical composition under Helen L. Gunderson in the School of Music at Louisiana State University. While at LSU he also received a prize from the Louisiana State Federation of Music for a viola suite which he wrote. His other compositions to date include a string quartet, a woodwind quartet, a two-piano sonatine and an art song with words from the poem "The Road Not Taken" by Robert Frost.

So far Freeman's life has been a blending of music and engineering, even in his home life. His father, Professor E. J. Freeman, head of the industrial engineering department, plays the cello, and his mother is an accomplished pianist and organist with whom he studied music from childhood.

At Clemson Freeman studied civil engineering and served as student bandmaster before his graduation in 1949. He later completed the four year course in musical composition at LSU in three years and served two years as a lieutenant in the Army's Corps of Engineers, including a tour of duty in Korea.

At the present time his plans for the future are indefinite. During the summer he will study at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, Mass., and at the Pierre Monteaux School of Conducting in Hanover, Maine.

ALLENTOWN, PA.
CALL

JUL 15 1956

Music Lovers Plan Second Summer Trip

The Music Lovers Club of Allentown which recently announced a trip to Tanglewood for July 28-31 has planned another to accommodate those members and friends with later vacations for Aug. 11-14.

The first trip will feature attendance at the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, at the Berkshire Summer Playhouse and at the concerts given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Those taking the second trip will attend the annual "Tanglewood on Parade." A special Sunday concert will include Beethoven's Symphony No. 9, with chorus and soloists.

Mrs. Grace E. Peters, arranging the trips, has complete details of the artists and personalities participating in dance, music and theater performances in the Berkshires during the intervals mentioned above.

A highlight of the July group's visit will be a performance by 10 leading dancers from the Royal Danish Ballet. The dance group, making its U.S. debut this season, has contrived a repertoire of many ballets by Danish choreographers which never before have been in this country.

RUSHVILLE, IND.
TELEGRAM
Circ. D. 1,167

JUN 14 1955

To Play With Symphony

R. J. Gohn, Straughn and New Lisbon band director, has been selected as a trombonist for the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Music Festival this summer. The festival is held in the Berkshires, near Lenox, Mass.

Mr. Gohn was granted a scholarship for the event which will be held at Tanglewood under the direction of Charles Munch, of the Boston Symphony for six weeks from July 4 to August 14. The Berkshire Music Center was established in 1940 by the late Serge Koussevitzky and its purpose is to provide for the advance study of music through experience in group performance.

Mr. Gohn resides with his wife in New Castle. His wife is the former Laura Hungerford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hungerford. He is a graduate of Jordan College of Music and Butler University and has done graduate work at Indiana University.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 230,930

AUG 7 1955

Week End Foul-Up Hurts Tanglewood

By TUCKER KEISER

One more week end like the last and the Boston Symphony will be hard pressed to restore its Berkshire Festival to popular favor. After wrenching their way through a traffic snarl that made the name Tanglewood seem a bitter jest, thousands of maddened motorists may well be resolved to attend summer musical events elsewhere, if at all.

The Boston Symphony concerts at Tanglewood undoubtedly constitute the most important summer music festival in the western hemisphere; the range of programs is extremely wide and the level of performance is extremely high.

Every major newspaper here and in Europe carries accounts of the performances. The NBC radio network broadcasts parts of the program each week. The publicity is so universal that cars can be seen from every State in the Union, from Canada and from Mexico.

It becomes increasingly evident, however, that Lenox and Pittsfield cannot cope with the crowds, particularly when other events in the area attract additional visitors.

Last Saturday night's concert dramatically pointed up the problem.

Concert Half Over

Thousands of listeners did not reach Tanglewood until the concert was half over. Tickets were still being sold as the musicians began to play the "Eroica," the last work on the program, and as the final chords were sounded people were still entering the gates. Some of the musicians, as a matter of fact, arrived only after intermission.

The huge turnout was predictable. Mr. Munch had planned a very popular Beethoven program, with Rudolf Serkin playing the "Emperor" Concerto. The weather was ideal—cool and moonlit—and this always means big crowds. It was the height of the vacation season.

The State police and local police had foreseen trouble and despatched every available officer to the area; both groups handled an impossible situation with commendable efficiency.

But the parking facilities were inadequate for the flood of automobiles. By 7:45 p. m. cars were backed up two or three miles and were three abreast on the eastern approaches to Tanglewood, and I assume the western roads were equally clogged.

No plan had been made for handling such a foreseeable emergency. Many cars were abandoned in ditches or in backroad areas. One farm just across from the main gate picked up a tidy bit of change by accommodating over 1000 cars in a hayfield at 50 cents apiece, it is reported.

Some Obligation

Tanglewood assumes certain responsibilities when it sells tickets. Among these is the responsibility to provide adequate facilities. A ticket entitles the purchaser to hear a concert, not simply hear about it.

Surely the Boston Symphony could plan for emergency parking areas, either in hayfields like those organized that night on a personal enterprise basis, or in the large sweep of land between the lake and the Tanglewood grounds.

Passing through the lobby of my hotel Sunday morning, I overheard what might be described as an emotionally disturbed lady summing up in what might be called emphatic tones:

...ew York

WASHINGTON, D. C.
POST & TIMES HERALD

JUL 26 1955

The DISTRICT LINE By Bill Gold

New Yorker Explained By Washingtonian

SEVERAL readers of the New Yorker magazine forwarded the same question to me over the weekend:

"The cover of the current issue shows a group of people sitting on the grass. They're all faced the same way, and I get the impression they're listening to music, because the picture of the people is superimposed on a musical score.

"What is the name of the composition they're listening to?"

Questions like that are the penalty we columnists pay for trying to create the impression that we know everything.

The score on the New Yorker's cover was a complete mystery to me. But the moment I shoved it under Paul Hume's nose, our maestro started to hum the tune.

"Never mind the recital," I said, "just identify it."

"Oh, that's quite clever, isn't it," said Hume. "You know, each summer, more and more music moves outdoors. People just love to sit on green grass and listen to the same music they've heard indoors all winter long."

"The name," I growled. "What's the name of the piece?"

"Of course," Hume continued, "one of the best places to do this outdoor listening is at the Berkshire Festival, given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch."

"The Tanglewood thing?" I inquired wearily.

"Right," said Hume. "It's up near Lenox, Mass. And of course that's what this New Yorker cover is supposed to depict. The Bach-Mozart concerts have become traditional at Tanglewood — especially the 3d Suite for orchestra, by our old friend Johann Sebastian Bach."

"So that's what the score on the cover is," I said.

"Oh, no," Hume explained. "This is the Overture to the 4th Suite. They didn't play the 3d Suite this year—they played the 2d Suite instead. This cover is very clever, isn't it?"

I'm sure it must be, if Paul Hume says so. But if I didn't have a reputation for omniscience to preserve, I'd have to confess that I didn't follow his explanation too well.

Simons wants ...

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 39,951

AUG 8 1955

Bernstein At Tanglewood Thursday

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the summer music school maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts, will have the participation of one of its most illustrious graduates, Leonard Bernstein, in the triple capacity in which the brilliant young American musician from Lawrence, Mass., has won international fame during his 36 years, as conductor, composer and concert pianist.

On Thursday at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., music lovers who from advance interest seem destined to surpass last summer's record turnout of 10,050 persons, will hear Mr. Bernstein open the gala evening concert in the huge 6,000-seat capacity Music Shed at 8:15 p. m., conducting the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra. His portion of the program—the concert will be shared by Arthur Fiedler conducting the celebrated Boston "Pops" Orchestra — will consist of a first performance anywhere of a suite Mr. Bernstein has arranged from music he composed for the film "On the Waterfront," which won the Academy Award in 1955, also "Oscars" for its director, Elia Kazan, and its star, Marlon Brando.

Mr. Bernstein will also pay tribute to the noted American composer Aaron Copland, at present on leave of absence from his duties as assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, with a performance of "a Lincoln Portrait," which will have the distinguished stage, screen, radio and television star, Claude Rains, as narrator. During Mr. Fiedler's tenure of the podium, Leonard Bernstein will be piano soloist in George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Citizen (e)
WINSTED, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 3,445

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 5,679

JUL 29 1955

Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., under the direction of Charles Munch, presents a series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and associated groups through August 14.

Friday, July 29, 8:30 p.m., Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor: Handel, "Water Music" Suite; Schumann, Symphony No. 4 in D minor; Barber, "Prayers of Kierkegaard", with chorus conducted by Hugh Ross, and Leontyne Price, soloist; Brahms, Symphony No. 4 in E minor.

Saturday, July 30, 8:30 p.m., Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor: Beethoven, Overture to "Egmont"; Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor") with Rudolf Serkin, soloist; Symphony No. 3, ("Eroica").

Sunday, July 31, 2:30 p.m., Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux, conductor: Brahms, Academic Festival Overture, Concerto for Violin in D major with Isaac Stern, soloist; Symphony No. 1 in C minor.

Wednesday, August 3, 8:30 p.m., Rudolf Serkin, pianist: Beethoven, Piano Sonatas in F major, Op. 10, No. 2; D major, Op. 10, No. 3; B flat, Op. 106 ("Hammerklavier").

AUG 5 1955

FINE EXHIBIT BEING ARRANGED AT TANGLEWOOD

An exhibition of sculpture and drawing by Miss Frank Epping of Lenox, Mass., arranged through the courtesy of the Berkshire museum, Pittsfield, and its director, Stuart C. Henry, and photographs of Tanglewood and the American south by Gus Manos, official photographer at Tanglewood, are on display during the coming week, from Saturday through the conclusion of the Berkshire festival, Sunday, Aug. 14, in the glassed reception room at the main gate at Tanglewood, in conjunction with the concerts of the Boston symphony orchestra at Lenox.

A private teacher in Lenox, and director of the sculpture workshop, Miss Epping is responsible for the annual outdoor exhibit of Berkshire sculptors in the Lenox library gardens, having its fifth annual display. This is Miss Epping's third Tanglewood showing.

Miss Epping's sculptures at Tanglewood include "The Musician," in walnut; "The Swimmer," in walnut; "Bereft," in mahogany; "Young David," in walnut; "The Seated Girl," in bronze; three drawings, and a composite photo of a new piece entitled "Profile," modeled from soapstone, recently shown at the Sculptors' Guild outdoor show in New York city.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 42 039

JUL 19 1955

Tanglewood Shed Concerts Open Friday

Music Shed Concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will open their season Friday evening when the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra presents an all-Beethoven program. Charles Munch will direct and Isaac Stern, violinist, will be the guest soloist in the Beethoven violin concerto.

* * *

PIERRE MONTEUX will conduct the Saturday evening program with the Tanglewood premiere of Roger Sessions suite from "The Black Maskers." Sessions, professor of music at Princeton University, is guest teacher of composition at Tanglewood this summer.

Three Beethoven symphonies will be conducted Sunday afternoon by Charles Munch.

Tomorrow night Stern and Alexander Zakin will present three of the Beethoven violin sonatas in the Theatre-Concert Hall. The sonatas are the number 2 in A major, opus 12, number 2; the number 5 in F major, opus 24 (Spring); and the number 7 in C minor, opus 30, number 2.

ALL EVENING PROGRAMS at Tanglewood start at 8:30 o'clock, and Sunday afternoon programs at 2:30 o'clock.

The Friday evening program, all Beethoven, will include the Overture to "Coriolan," the violin concerto and the Symphony number 7 in A major.

The Saturday evening program will include the Respighi, Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor; Beethoven, Symphony number 2 in D major; the Sessions suite; and Strauss, "Death and Transfiguration."

The Sunday afternoon program will include the Beethoven symphonies number 1 in C major; number 4 in B flat and the number 8 ("Pastorale').

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

AUG 8 1955

Many Prizes Are Announced For Tanglewood on Parade

A high fidelity phonograph and an electric refrigerator will be among numerous prizes to be awarded at Tanglewood on Parade Thursday, Mrs. Bruce Sanborn of Lenox, chairman of the prize committee announced today.

The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will take place rain or shine from 4 p.m. to midnight at Tanglewood.

RCA-Victor has donated its newest high fidelity machine, "The Mark IV" and the General Electric Co., a large refrigerator. A season ticket for two for the 12 concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood during the summer of 1956 is third prize.

Anonymous Donation

Other prizes include an English racing bicycle, which has been donated anonymously; a lifetime subscription to High Fidelity, monthly music magazine published in Great Barrington; an original by Ture Bengtz, Lenox sculptor and painter and director of the Bengtz School of Art; "an evening in the Berkshires," which entitles the winner to dinner for two at the Morgan House in Lee, a pair of seats at Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival and a skirt from the Lenox shop of Calypso of Bermuda; and a similar package, consisting of a dinner for two at Williams Inn and two seats for a performance at Adams Memorial Theater, Williamstown, plus a stole from Bratton Inc., a country shop in Williamstown; recordings of Beethoven's Symphonies 1, 3, 5, 7 and 9 performed by the Boston Symphony under the direction of Serge Koussevitzky or Charles Munch, donated by Victor Records; and the 25th anniversary record of the Boston Pops Orchestra under the direction of Arthur Fiedler.

Silent Auction Planned

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, of Lenox, widow of the former conductor of the Boston Symphony, has drawn likenesses of her husband, of Charles Munch, of composer Aaron Copland and of maestro Arturo Toscanini, and these will be placed in the glassed hall at the main gate at Tanglewood for silent auction. The highest bidder announced at auction time will receive them autographed.

Boris Goldovsky, head of the Tanglewood opera department, will draw the winning ticket numbers during the concert in the Music Shed, about 10 p.m., just after intermission and before Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra commences its portion of the program.

Program Listed

The Shed concert has programmed the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Berstein conducting, with actor Claude Rains as narrator in Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," and the premiere of Mr. Bernstein's film music from "On the Waterfront." Mr. Fiedler will lead the Pops in selections by Rimsky-Korsakov, Johann Strauss and Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue," with Leonard Bernstein as piano soloist.

Seats for Tanglewood on Parade are now on sale at the Tanglewood boxoffice, and telephone reservations are being accepted for seats and boxes. Unreserved seats entitle holders to seats in the Shed's rear sections and to participation in the prize-drawing.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald
CHICOPEE, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,675

AUG 1955

Share Tanglewood Podium

Three celebrated conductors are currently sharing the podium of th Boston Symphony Orchestra at its Berkshire Festival concerts bein given at Tanglewood through Aug. 14. Left to right: Charles Munch music director of the Boston Symphony; Pierre Monteux, guest con ductor; and Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 5,679

JUL 29 1955

A Stepney truck driver, Orrin Partrick, was slightly injured and 17 passengers on a bus bound from the Tanglewood Music Festival in Lenox, Mass., to New York City, escaped injury about 9:30 p.m. last Sunday, July 24, when the bus anl pickup truck collided on the new Route 6 highway in Newtown at Pole Bridge Road. The Truck was demolished and the bus was slightly damaged. Edward Bradley, of North Reading, Mass., driver of the bus, also escaped injury.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday News
BURLINGTON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 12,391

AUG 7 1955

Festival Nears Final Concert AtTanglewood

Special Sunday News Report

LENOX, Mass.—The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood concludes its 1955 schedule during the coming week.

The week opens with the concluding event of the Wednesday evening event of the chamber music of Bethoven in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Six principal of the Bostor. Symphony Orchestra Gino Cioffi, clarinet; Samuel Mayes, cello, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute Sherman Walt, bassoon; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; James Stagliano, French Horn), will be assisted by David Lloyd, tenor; and Ralph Berkowitz, piano, in a program of trios, songs, a quintet and a cello sonata.

Charles Munch will conduct an all-French orchestral program, music of Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel, in the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Shed concert of Friday evening, and an all-Beethoven program including the Ninth Symphony with soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; and augmented chorus on Sunday afternoon. Pierre Monteux will conduct the Saturday evening program, comprising Wagner, Brahms, Debussy and Strauss.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Mattapan Tribune
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 8,500

AUG 4 1955

Berkshire Festival Program Features Beethoven, Wagner

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in Lenox moves into its semi-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with the fifth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music by Beethoven, program of three piano sonatas performed by Rudolf Serkin, on August 3 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Beethoven and Wagner provide the fare for the three week end concerts in the huge Music Shed. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the three concerts, on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the department of orchestra and conducting of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, The Berkshire Music Center, takes the podium tomorrow night.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p.m. The Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

The complete programs are:

Wednesday, August 3 - 8:30 p.m. - Theatre-Concert Hall - Chamber Music. Beethoven: Piano Sonatas - F major, Op. 10, No. 2; D major, Op. 10, No. 3; B flat, Op. 106 ("Hammerklavier"). Rudolf Serkin.

Friday, August 5 - 8:30 p.m. - Music Shed - Boston Symphony Orchestra: Beethoven: Missa Solemnis (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky). Soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass. Violin solo: Richard Burgin, Organist: Willem Frank. Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Hugh Ross.

MARGARET HARSHAW, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, will make her Tanglewood debut at the Berkshire Festival concert of Saturday evening, August 6, singing the Immolation Scene from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung" and Act II of Beethoven's "Fidelio", with David Lloyd, Mac Morgan and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students. Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Leonard Bernstein, Conductor.

Saturday, August 6 - 8:30 p.m. - Music Shed - Boston Symphony Orchestra: Beethoven: "Fidelio", Act II (First performance at Tanglewood). Leonore - Margaret Harshaw; Rocco - Mac Morgan; Pizzaro and Fernando - Malcolm Bernstein; Florestan - David Lloyd; Marzelline - Christina Cardillo; Jaquino - Arthur Schoep.

Wagner: Excerpts from "Gotterdammerung": Siegfried's Rhine Journey; Siegfried's Death Music; Immolation Scene - soloist, Margaret Harshaw, soprano. Charles Munch, Conductor.

Sunday, August 7 - 2:30 p.m. - Music Shed - Boston Symphony Orchestra: (All-Beethoven). Beethoven: Symphony No. 8, in F major; Piano Concerto No. 4, in G major. Soloist: Eugene Istomin. Symphony No 5, in C minor. Charles Munch Conductor.

Tonight and again on Saturday and Sunday concerts will be given by students of the Berkshire Music Center, now in its 13th season at Tanglewood. The following performances will be given:

Tonight - 8:30 p.m. - Music Shed: Symphony Orchestra Concert by students of Dept. I.

Saturday, August 6 - 3 p.m. - Chamber Music Hall: Composers Forum by students of Dept. III.

Sunday, August 7 - 10 a.m. - Chamber Music Hall: Concert of Chamber Music by students of Dept. I.

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood box office for all Festival concerts, and reservations may be made by telephoning Lenox 600.

ENDICOTT, N. Y.
BULLETIN
Circ. D. 7,383
JUL 22 1955

On WINR

Hats off to Bill Wheeler and Joe Julian, WINR disc jockeys for their splendid job in raising funds to help equip the Binghamton Police Athletic League's newly purchased home for the city's small fry. It's proof that the cops are making every effort to curb juvenile delinquency.

Bill and Joe received hundreds of pledges for money for the worthwhile cause during the last few days. Poor Bill, who isn't used to too much ultra-violet ray, had to broadcast atop the Robinson Building until enough people pledged money to lower Willie back into WINR's studios . . . two stories down.

Music lovers will be happy to know that Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra from the famous Berkshire Festival of Music at Tanglewood, Mass., next Monday at 8:15 p. m. It will be heard on WINR-NBC.

Getting back to one Willie Wheeler. Bill's "Timekeeper" program has been extended to 5:30 a. m. Bill used to start the show at 8 a. m. We wonder how he does it, he told us once that he used to rise at 5:50 . . . shave, shower, eat breakfast and drive to the studios.

A salute to WKOP in Binghamton. WKOP this week is celebrating its eighth year of broadcasting. The station just boosted its daytime power to 5,000 watts. 'KOP's nighttime power still remains at 500 watts.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 509,171 - S. 1,117,392
AUG 1 1955

Concerts: Two at Lenox

Serkin Plays 'Emperor' Concerto, Stern Performs in an All-Brahms Program

By HAROLD C. SCHONBERG
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 31—The second week-end of concerts in the main shed of the Berkshire Festival ended this afternoon with one in which Pierre Monteux directed the Boston Symphony. An audience of about 12,000 attended—a good turnout, but nothing like last night's, in which 15,000 came to hear Rudolf Serkin play the "Emperor" Concerto.

•

The all-time record here for a single concert had been established in 1951, when 15,800 came for a Saturday night concert directed by Charles Munch. Last night, Berkshire officials were desperately looking for another 801 persons; but, honest souls that they are, refused to include the ushers and other personnel in the count. And thus 1951 stands supreme. The official attendance for this week-end was 35,117.

This afternoon's concert was all-Brahms. Mr. Monteux conducted the "Academic Festival" Overture and the First Symphony. Soloist was Isaac Stern in the Violin Concerto. Originally scheduled for this program was the Double Concerto, but Gregor Piatigorsky, who was to play the 'cello part, informed Mr. Munch last week that he was indisposed.

•

The collaboration of Mr. Monteux and Mr. Stern was a delight. Neither violinist nor conductor was out to sweep the world off its feet. They adopted a relatively mild approach to the concerto, one containing much in the way of delicate instrumental interplay. It was above all a lyric reading that almost suggested chamber music in its intimacy and ensemble. Mr. Stern, who never attempted to take over the show, and was content to stay in the framework imposed by the conductor, set a superb example of musicianship. And, needless to say, his violinistics were beyond reproach—firmly centered in pitch, technically deft, rhythmically fluent.

This was the high point of the concert, although Mr. Monteux' ideas about the First Symphony had their usual interest. His tempo for the third movement was somewhat slow, and the music emerged with pastoral characteristics. One does not remember hearing it exactly this way before, but it sounded perfectly natural in this conception.

Saturday night's program was all-Beethoven, containing the "Egmont" Overture, the "Eroica" Symphony and the "Emperor" Concerto.

•

Charles Munch conducted. Mr. Serkin, who was making his Tanglewood debut, played the concerto as usual—with breadth, virility and often a free view toward the music. Some of his playing sounded improvisatory, which probably was the effect he wanted for the sprawling cadenzas of the first movement.

The finale was taken at a remarkably fast clip, with Mr. Serkin never missing a note and going at it with the utmost brio. He received an ovation; one guesses he will not be a stranger to the Berkshire Festival in the future.

The orchestral portion of the program was done with the inevitable polish that Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony bring to their music-making. These were readings of elegance rather than passion, though it should not be implied that the interpretations lacked intensity. The "funeral march" of the "Eroica," for example, had all the drama one could expect.

•

No official word has yet been received about the Boston Symphony's offer to make an appearance in the Soviet Union during its European trip in the fall of 1956. All that can be said is that matters are being "negotiated." If one can cite a straw in the wind, officials of the orchestra seem remarkably optimistic that the offer will be accepted by the Soviet Government.

MILWAUKEE WISCONSIN JOURNAL
JUL 24 1955

Summer Festivals Bloom

FESTIVALS, festivals, who's going to festivals? Thousands and thousands, everywhere. Music and drama festivals have swept the nation in recent years.

The two North American Stratfords are gaining world attention. Stratford, Conn., has had a Shakespeare festival only since July 12, but its success is already assured. The Stratford (Ontario) festival, in its third year, not only has "Julius Caesar," "Oedipus Rex" and "Merchant of Venice" but a series of concerts, including Stravinsky's dance narrative, "A Soldier's Tale," with Marcel Marceau and Lilian Jarvas (shown at right) among the mimes. The festival will end Aug. 27.

The famed Berkshire festival at Lenox, Mass., will run to Aug. 14, and the Aspen (Col.) music festival will end Sept. 4.

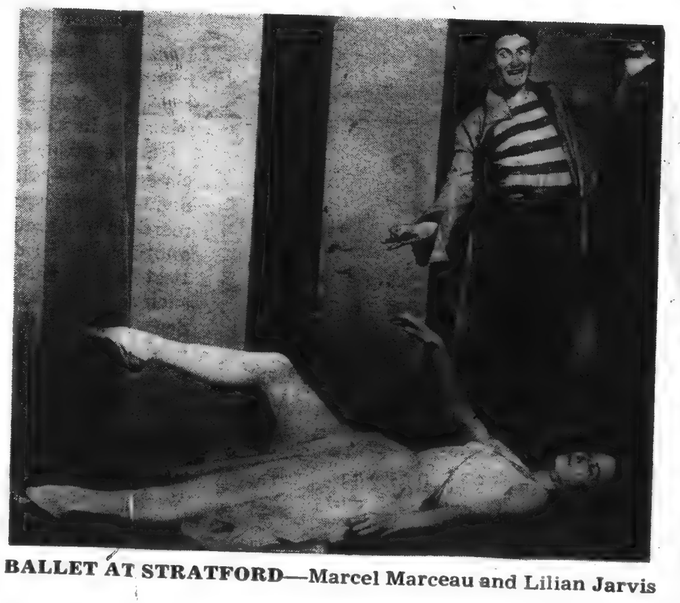
* * *

Milwaukee's own "Summer Evenings of Music" ended Thursday, at Wisconsin State college, and proved so successful that a 1956 festival is assured.

Wisconsin's Peninsula music festival, in its third year, will entail nine concerts, Aug. 6 to 21, at Fish Creek, Wis., under Thor Johnson's baton. The soloists will be Lois Marshall, Canadian violinist; Mayne Miller, Chicago pianist; Isidore Cohn, New York violinst; Grant Johannesen, American pianist; Richard Kapuscinski, cellist, formerly of Milwaukee; and Loren Driscoll, New York tenor.

Enrique Jorda, a Spaniard, leader of the San Francisco symphony orchestra, will make his Ravinia festival debut Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Eugene Istomin will be piano soloist Thursday, in Beethoven's 4th concerto, and Elisabeth Schwarzkopf will be soprano soloist Friday and Saturday.

At Washington park in Milwaukee Paul Whiteman will lead a Gershwin program Thursday—yes, Thursday, not the usual Tuesday. Tonight the Northerners chorus will sing at College camp, Williams Bay, Wis., and next Sunday night Mischa Mischakoff and Samuel Sorin will play violin-piano works.



BALLET AT STRATFORD—Marcel Marceau and Lilian Jarvis

* * *

The Port Players of Oconomowoc will take "Time Out for Ginger" for the last time tonight, and starting Wednesday will present the internationally loved comedy, "My Three Angels." Clinton Anderson will take the chief role, that of a bad man who does good.

Other summer stages: Beloit college, "Dear Charles" Tuesday to Saturday; Lake park, Milwaukee, "The Petrified Forest," Friday, Saturday; Port Washington, "The Happy Time" Thursday to next Sunday; Elkhart Lake, "Main Street Festival" Tuesday to Saturday; Attic, Appleton, "Morning's at Seven," Thursday to Saturday; Racine, "More Than Meets the Eye," Friday to Sunday; Fish Creek, "Laura," Tuesday to Sunday.

TULSA, OKLA.
WORLD
Circ. D. 85,842 - S. 145,258
JUL 24 1955

Music on the Air

What's New in Music

Jill Corey, the DeJohn Sisters and Eddy Arnold will tell "What's New In Music" on The Woolworth Hour today beginning at 12 noon Sunday over KTUL. Percy Faith will open the program with a lively orchestral version of "There's A Great Day Coming Manana." Donald Woods is host and master of ceremonies.

Music Festival

Sir Thomas Beecham's opening concert as guest conductor of the 1955 Bergen (Norway) Music Festival, and a portion of a lieder recital by Elisabeth Schwarzkopf will be presented in World Music Festivals over KTUL at 1:30 p.m. Sunday.

James Fassett, music commentator on the program, will introduce to American audiences a new work by Harald Saeverud, a contemporary Norwegian composer. Sir Thomas Beecham will conduct works of Mozart and Delius, and Miss Schwarzkopf will sing four songs by Richard Strauss. Two works by Edvard Grieg will close the program.

Masterworks

Sunday Masterworks, heard over KOME at 3 p.m. Sunday, will feature the Philadelphia orchestra under direction of Eugene Ormandy in William Schuman's Symphony No. 6.

Zino Francescatti will be soloist in a presentation of Paganini's Violin Concerto No. 1 in D major, opus 6. Victoria de los Angeles, Gino Bechi and Melchoirre Luise will be heard in excerpts from Rossini's "Barber of Seville." Solomon will be soloist in Mozart's Piano Concerto No. 15 as played by the Philharmonic orchestra conducted by Otto Ackermann.

On a Sunday Afternoon

Lucille Norman, one of the entertainment world's most versatile singing stars, has been signed as the lady of song for On a Sunday Afternoon program over KTUL at 3:30 p.m. Her musical duties will range from classical through operetta, musical comedy to popular songs of the day.

Music Hall of Fame

Music Hall of Fame at 10:30 p.m. Sunday on KVOO will feature highlights from Saint-Saens' "Samson and Delilah." Rise Stevens will be heard in the role of Delilah; Jan Peerce as Samson, and Robert Merrill as the high priest.

The NBC Symphony under the direction of Leopold Stokowski. Also on the concert: Artur Rubinstein performing Rachmaninoff's "Rhapsody on a Theme of Paganini," and NBC Symphony orchestra conducted by Arturo Toscanini, playing "Passo A Sei" from Rossini's opera, "William Tell."

At 11 p.m. Tuesday Music Hall of Fame will present Dvorak's "New World" Symphony, performed by Arturo Toscanini and the NBC Symphony orchestra.

Roberta Peters will be heard in an aria from Bellini's "La Sonnambula." The World Symphony orchestra will play "Traumerie," and Leopold Stokowski and his Symphony orchestra will play the Prelude to Act One of Wagner's "Parsifal."

Hour of Music

The music of five composers will be presented on the Hour of Music heard at 7 p.m. daily over KOME. A recital of Edward MacDowell's piano music will be performed by John Kirkpatrick. Also heard will be "Ports of Call," performed by the Philadelphia orchestra, Eugene Ormandy conducting.

Monday, the Concert Arts orchestra will perform Creston's Two Choric Dances and Rounds by Diamond. Alfred Wallenstein will conduct the Los Angeles Philharmonic Tuesday in Ippolitov-Ivanov's "Caucasian Sketches."

William Kapell will play Chopin Mazurkas Wednesday. Also heard will be Greunberg's Violin Concert, Jascha Heifetz soloist with the San Francisco Symphony. George Liberace will be soloist on Thursday's program. Friday operatic highlights from Verdi's "Don Carlo" will be presented with Ebe Stiguani and Maria Cagniia featured.

Hour of Refreshment

"One Night in Venice," by Johann Strauss Jr., with the Vienna Symphony orchestra, soloists, and chorus highlight's Sunday's Hour of Rrefreshment program, a heard over KTUL from 10:15 to 11:30 p. m. daily.

Schubert's Symphony No. 9 in C, performed by the NBC orchestra, Arturo Toscanini conducting, will be the featured selection on Monday's concert. Two major works will be heard on Tuesday's "violin night" presentation: Bach's Violin Sonata No. 5 in F minor with Yahuda Menuhin as soloist, and Saint Saens' Violin Sonata No. 1 in D minor, with Heifetz, soloist.

Bizet's "Arlesienne Suites" No. 1 and 2, played by the Boston Symphony orchestra, Charles Munich, directing will be featured with Rachmaninoff's "Rhapsodie Espagnole" on Wednesday's concert. Thursday's program will be a complete presentation of Verdi's "Requiem" with Arturo Toscanini conducting the NBC orchestra and the Robert Shaw Chorale.

Friday's "piano night" concert will feature Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3 in D minor, with Witold Malcuzynski, soloist.

Berkshire Festival

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony orchestra in the broadcast from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood at 7:15 p. m. Monday over KVOO and NBC.

The entire program will be devoted to Beethoven's Symphony No. 7 in A Major. Beethoven himself conducted its world premiere on Dec. 8, 1813. The movements are marked: A. Poco sostenuto, vivace; B. allegretto; C. presto; and D. Finale, allegro con brio.

Telephone Hour

Leonard Warren, the distinguished American baritone, will make his debut as guest artist on the Telephone Hour at 8 p. m. Monday over KVOO. With Donald Voorhees and the orchestra, Mr. Warren will sing three numbers on the broadcast which originates in Carnegie Hall.

Mr. Warren's first selection will be the majestic "Largo" from Handel's "Xerxes," one of the most familiar of the English composer's many compositions. In a complete change of mood, he will then sing the rollicking sea chantey "Blow the Man Down." His concluding selection will be the gripping "Nemico della Patria," from Giordano's "Andrea Chenier," in which Mr. Warren scored a triumph last year at the Metropolitan Opera.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 389,011 - S. 258,545
JUL 24 1955

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

7,000 Plus Hear Bostonians at Lenox

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., July 23—The stalwart Boston Symphony, under the aegis of its firebrand conductor, Charles Munch, defied the hottest, muggiest weather within memory for these parts, and played one of its most exciting concerts here Friday night.

Though the event opened the third week of the Berkshire Festival, it was the first program given in the 6,000-seat music shed. More than 7,000 people turned out to hear an all-Beethoven program with violinist Isaac Stern, as soloist in the D Major Concerto.

Wearing everything from formal summer evening dress to slacks, and sitting on anything from a chair to grass, the crowds were shouting their continued approval as the program closed with a magnificent performance of Beethoven's Seventh Symphony.

One extraordinary aspect of the concert was the high standard of sound-splendor maintained throughout, without any trace of tension. Last season Munch was frequently dynamic, but there was a nervousness which prevented many performances from having the effect of this "Seventh" and Concerto."

Friday's concert found our maestro communicating an inspired ardor to his ensemble, which in turn produced mellowness, high sensitivity and variety of mood. All with an ingratiating relaxation.

During the "Seventh," Munch almost danced on the podium at times, but never with excess of motion. He was quite in command. He employs a kind of whiplash technique, which is inclined to produce over-accents at times, but on this occasion it was minus sting. His directions were imperious, as if he were continuously summoning us all to an experience of great significance, as he well was, artistically speaking. And, also surprising for him, the slow movements of concerto and symphony were as impressive in their contemplation as the more vigorous movements were dynamic.

Stern's performance of the concerto was amazingly controlled, considering the weather. A high point was his finished and virtuoso performance of the cadenza in the long, initial movement followed by a beautiful mood of introspection as he rejoined the orchestra for the lyric theme. Munch and Stern obviously were in sympathy regarding their conception of the work, and the result was remarkable sympathy of mood and merging of color.

The Bostonians continue their music over the week-end and for the following two weeks. Though Tanglewood, the home of the concerts, is a four-hour trip from New York by train or car, the rare enjoyment of listening to great music in these unique surroundings is to receive a lot for little effort.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 50,234

AUG 7 1955

A Look At the Arts

By E. J. D.

If you boys and girls are planning a trip to France this Summer (only the deplorable state of our French and a slim pocketbook are holding us back from the Grand Tour), be sure to visit Perigueux. In that picturesque village you will, surprisingly enough, be able to brush up on your Americana as well as your French history by dropping into the Paul Revere Museum.

Perigueux takes its interest in our Revolutionary War hero from the nearby town of Riccaud, birthplace of Apollos de Revoire, who emigrated to America at the age of 13 and changed his name to Revere, "merely on account," in his own words, "that the bumpkins should pronounce it easier." He married and had 12 children, of whom the third, Paul, was born Jan. 1, 1735.

E. J. Dias

The display at the museum includes a collection in sterling of Paul Revere's famous silverware, duplicates of the Paul Revere papers, which contain an account of his midnight ride; manuscripts, prints, and drawings, and a gift from Boston—a copy of Revere's priceless Liberty Bowl.

Perigord (the section of France in which Perigueux is located) is known, too, for its relics of Cro-Magnon man, the Lascaux Caves with their prehistoric paintings, Roman ruins and Medieval chateaux, and some prized gourmet delicacies—among them turkey stuffed with chestnuts and truffles, pate de fois gras, and regional cooking of hare and chicken.

And, who knows? It might have been this same gourmet heritage which inspired Paul Revere to invent, as he did, the first dental plates in the New World and to advertise them with this unique slogan, "Of Real Use in Speaking and Eating."

Too Many Film Clips on TV

Many of the nation's TV critics are complaining vociferously these days about the number of programs that seem to be devoted, primarily, to long, long commercials about forthcoming Hollywood films.

Two of the greatest sinners in this respect hit the channels on Sunday nights—the Colgate Variety Hour and Toast of the Town. For the last couple of weeks, for example, the Colgate opus has given most of its time to beating the drum for Jack Webb and his soon-to-be-released movie, "Pete Kelly's Blues" and for the new Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis film whose name, mercifully, escapes us at present.

Martin

We have nothing against movies. In fact, we sometimes think Hollywood is right in its proud assertion that "Movies are better than ever." However, the place for trailers and coming attractions is in the movie theater—not in the quiet confines of one's living room. There are enough soul-stirring commercials on TV as it is without having whole programs concerned with pointing out the super-colossal qualities of motion pictures that soon will be on view in your local cinema palace.

TV is obviously doing plenty for the movie industry, with, we suppose, the old slogan in mind, "If you can't lick 'em, join 'em." The question that bothers us, though, is this: What are the movies doing for TV? The answer is nothing.

We expect any day now to see some studio head cavorting on our TV screen in a song-and-dance act. Or maybe Cecil B. DeMille will be on the channels giving bird-calls or imitations of George Gobel. And it is in the realm of possibility that Dore Schary, the genius of MGM, may capture the nation's hearts with a rendition of "You Ought to Be in Pictures!"

As we've said, we can take previews of coming attractions in the darkness of a movie theater. But please, boys, stay away from our TV set. It's entertainment we want—not film clips.

A Report on the Cape Cod Melody Tent

We paid our first visit of the season to the Cape Cod Melody Tent at Hyannis last week to watch a good, brisk production of "Guys and Dolls," that cheerful musical adaptation of some Damon Runyon stories about Mr. Runyon's never-never land of Broadway gamblers and picturesque characters.

Aldrich

Matters at Hyannis seem to be progressing nicely. A capable cast—paced by Norwood Smith as Sky Masterson, Ernest Sarracino as Nathan Detroit, Peggy Bonini as Sarah, Gloria Evans as Miss Adelaide and Jack Harrold as Nicely-Nicely—did well by the Abe Burrows book and fairly well by Frank Loesser's rather uneven score.

The best acting in the production was done by the male principals—Mr. Smith, Mr. Sarracino, and Mr. Harrold. As far as vocal talents go, Mr. Smith has a pleasant, though not outstanding voice; in fact, the best voice on hand probably was Miss Bonini's, although her acting, except in the scene in which she becomes inebriated in Havana, was somewhat stiff.

In any event, "Guys and Dolls" was imaginatively staged by Mr. Sarracino, and Julius Rudel won our admiration and respect by conducting his orchestra with such elan on so hot a night.

Richard Aldrich's Cape Cod Melody Tent is now in its sixth season. We can recall vividly the opening of the enterprise—a gala occasion with numerous celebrities on hand, among them the late Gertrude Lawrence who, by the way, chose Hyannis as the site for the project.

In those early days of music-tent activity, some of us used to wonder whether such production under canvas might not prove to be a mere flash in the pan, a fad that might outgrow its popularity. It is pleasant, therefore, to report that the musical tent seems here to stay—at least for a good number of years. For example, in the first week of "Guys and Dolls" (which ran for two weeks), the Cape Cod Melody Tent grossed $16,000—which, in the vernacular, ain't hay.

This season, of course, with the release for stock performance of such recent musicals as "Guys and Dolls," "Wonderful Town" and "South Pacific," musical tents throughout the nation received what they needed most—new scripts. After all, one can watch "Show Boat" and "The Student Prince" just so many times before he begins to long for something more modern and less familiar.

This week, "Annie, Get Your Gun" will be on display at Hyannis.

HERE AND THERE—Louis Mennini's new one-act opera, "The Rope," will have its world premiere tomorrow night and Tuseday night at Tanglewood. On the same program will be Mozart's unfinished opera, "Zaide." Productions will be presented by students of Boris Goldovsky's opera department.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 55,423

AUG 6 1955

Tanglewood Tribute

Koussevitzky Honored In Beethoven Concert

By RAYMOND MORIN, Telegram Music Critic

TANGLEWOOD—An eloquent tribute was paid to the memory of the late Serge Koussevitzky Friday night with the opening concert of the Series "C" of the Berkshire Music Festival.

The chosen work was Beethoven's massive and devout Missa Solemnis in D Major. Leonard Bernstein conducted the Boston Symphony and a chorus of 350 mixed voices of Berkshire Music Center students. Soloists were Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, Tenor, and Mac Morgan, bass. All of them are alumni of the Berkshire Center and known to Worcester audiences.

In spite of two vigorous thunderstorms between 5 and 8 p. m. there was an audience of 680.

Appropriate Work

The Bethoven work was particularly appropriate to the occasion — at least it was in Mr. Bernstein's version. Clearly the young conductor was sympathetic to its reverence and the ardor of its musical treatment. But the overall impression was a constant search and determination to produce a virtuosity that was totally reminiscent of the Koussevitzky principle.

Mr. Bernstein hasn't curtailed to any appreciable degree the podium histrionics that were in full charge when we last saw his work five years ago.

If anything, there was a little more podium stomping, athletic shoulders, impassioned facial expressions, and a few stereotypes that adapt themselves to manifold usages.

From Memory

Nevertheless, the talent cannot be denied. Most of the conducting was from memory, without as much as a faulty cue or neglect of the minutest detail.

By and large it was an electrifying performance. It gave cause to wonder if the Beethoven incentive was dominated by technique rather than depth of piety.

The orchestra played magnificently—even the wind instruments were made to behave despite the dampness. Most of the time one felt that the orchestral score was a carpet upon which the voices performed.

Unusual Feature

An unusual feature was the placing of the four soloists to the rear of the chorus. The voices were transmitted by amplifiers so that balances were adequate.

Mr. Lloyd and Miss Addison were in particularly fine voice. Notably in the Credo, Miss Addison produced quiet and high tones of admirable purity and confidence.

Mr. Lloyd produced large resonant tones without forcing and with pure intonation. While Mr. Morgan's solo excerpts were brief, there was a fine quality in his work and a sense of domination over subject matter.

The Kyrie

The evening opened with an arresting performance of the Kyrie. Full-scale attacks in chorus were interspersed with finely modulated solos in which volume was contrasted with precision.

The Gloria was taken at a terrific clip, somewhat obscuring words sung in Latin and creating an effect of impatience. From the "Quitollis peccata mundi" emerged some of the evening's greatest beauty. The fugal portion at the end was a blaze of brilliance — voices were thrilling with excitement and the parts completely solidified.

Tonight's Program

Mr. Bernstein implored from chorus and orchestra a heroic quality from the Credo through which undercurrents of reverence occasionally seeped through. Some of it was shouted not unlike the savage whelpings of Villa Lobos' "Mandu Carara." It was less securely organized in the union of voices and orchestra and between sections of the text. It did afford a beautiful moment, nevertheless, where phrasing was totally relaxed and nuances were of the utmost purity.

Tonig'r.'s program includes the second act of Beethoven's "Fidelio" and excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung." The chief soloist is Margaret Harshaw, soprano. Charles Munch will conduct.

Boston Herald 8/9

MUSIC

By RUDOLPH ELIE

TANGLEWOOD, Aug. 8—The first performance of Louis Mennini's one-act opera "The Rope" demonstrated what everybody has known for some time: that the late Eugene O'Neill was a very great playwright.

Louis Mennini's setting of this powerful twist on the Biblical story of the prodigal son had a certain power of its own though there was no doubt from the outset that the dramatic mind of O'Neill was the principal motive force.

GHASTLY REVENGE

Once the issues were outlined between the sardonic old man who plans a ghastly revenge on his prodigal and his daughter and son-in-law by a previous marriage, the narrative itself held the stage.

The music served to underline the moods and to add characterization through a declamatory style that, if it never approached the lyrical, remained well within the vocal compass of the cast.

This is to say that Mennini, like Menotti, well understands the limitations of the human voice in action and does not call upon them for wildly jagged intervals requiring so much execution that the expression of character itself is difficult or impossible. Like Menotti, too, Mennini gives the principal musical action to the orchestra, which, now expressively, again violently, underlines and emphasizes the unfolding of the narrative and the characters on the stage.

Musically, Mennini's style derives from Copeland, though there is a strongly individual quality to it as well. His ideas reveal a strong melodic bent, but he doesn't develop them in long-breathed arias or set pieces. Only one, a duet between the rejected daughter and her husband, rises to operatic tension, though the prodigal is given a highly developed moment on the discovery that his ancient father actually wants him to hang himself in the noose set by the old man five years previously.

In general, however, this is a play—and a play with upper harmonics symbolically—with music, spoken, sung and played, and not an opera in the conventional sense. But it is an effective and gripping piece as indeed it would be without music.

WELL TRAINED CAST

The cast in tonight's performance was well trained and well suited to the roles. As Abrahama Bentley, the tortured old salt farmer, Malcolm Bernstein was suitably apoplectic and displayed a strong, well placed baritone voice. Mary MacKenzie as his daughter Annie was occasionally shrill—she was doubtless supposed to be—but effective, while Stephen Harbachick as Luke, the prodigal, gave the role a good deal of vocal and visual authority. Lynn Detwiler sang well as Annie's husband but tended to be a little wooden while Holly McLennan was entirely acceptable as the child who unwittingly frustrates the whole venal litter.

A single set of very imaginative quality and evocative of the New England coastal farm gave the production additional tension and the whole was deftly staged by Boris Goldovsky with fine orchestra support by Henry Janiec and the student orchestra.

HARTFORD

TIMES, TUESDAY, AUGUST 9, 1955

'The Rope' -- A Tanglewood Opera

Special to The Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass.—Louis Mennini's "The Rope" is the first opera commissioned for the Berkshire Music Center.

Boris Goldovsky, before the premiere here last night, explained how this came about. It was neither simple nor inevitable, for while the late Dr. Koussevitzky was a zealot for not only encouraging but engaging composers to produce new works, Goldovsky would have none of it these several years.

He was afraid the contracted-for result would not suit Tanglewood and that he would have to give it whether he liked it or not. But "The Rope," he said, suited: he liked it; they all liked everything about it, and they liked the composer, too.

The audience, when it was over, had Mennini up on the stage and demonstrated thunderously their liking for him and his works. He is a dark, tall and slender and, like all composers today, looks like a successful Jaycee.

* * *

THE QUESTION is scarcely whether this opera suits Tanglewood but whether Mennin's music suits Eugene O'Neill's brief drama. Judging from intermission comments not many had ever seen it done or even read it. Nor had I. So that for once, at least, gives the reviewer on audience perspective which, after all, is the only one that counts.

* * *

THERE IS A TENSION and inevitability about the play not felt by the music which, at best, is a mere obbligato. The score is mildly dissonant; the play is discordant, built, in fact, upon the inharmony of man and the soil. It seems to have been an article of creed with O'Neill that the land drew out that which most is mean and evil in man. "The Rope" has to do with miserliness, hate and retribution. The only sympathetic character in the piece is a half-witted girl who is the instrument of retribution.

This doesn't make a very fit musical subject. There isn't any singing at all; merely a strident declamation which is bad for the voice and often obscures the words, although the principals really put themselves out to be understood last night.

The single set is simple but excellent. The musicianship on the stage and in the pit was highly competent. There was little of that straining eagerness which characterizes many opera workshop amateurs. An entire new cast takes over tonight.

One would expect that either to precede or to follow Mozart would be the most invidious situation in which any contemporary composer would parade his craft. After "The Rope," however, Mozart's "Zaide" sounded very puny indeed.

In the first place, it is only a fragment, as Mr. Goldovsky explained in a pre-curtain lecture. It is quite silly as far as the plot ever took shape and the music isn't very good Mozart, anyway. Mr. Goldovsky didn't say that but he might as well have done so because the perspective of the production seemed to be that the thing was hardly worth doing at all, so better play horse with it.

Mr. Goldovsky, who described himself as "an early settler — that is, of Tanglewood"—delivered an amusing homily on 18th century opera and operation methods at the Music Center. What he had to say was far more diverting that Mozart.—C. E. L.

82

THE HARTFORD COURANT: TUESDAY, AUGUST 9, 1955

O'Neill Play Presented In Opera Form

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 8 (Special)—Eugene O'Neill's one-act play, "The Rope," reached the stature of an opera here at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood tonight, when it was presented in a score by Louis Mennini, of the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N.Y.

It was the first opera commissioned especially for performance by the opera department of the music center, thereby fulfilling an idea envisioned by the late Serge Koussevitzky, former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and founder of the music center.

For those who do not remember back to 1917, or the infrequent intervals since then in which "The Rope" was presented, Mr. O'Neill's play stemmed from his familiar preoccupation with the early American temperament, which, for him, was bleak and forbidding in a gaunt atmosphere generally suggestive of the New England left over from Puritan days and still steeped in an exaggerated morality based on the most vindictive application of the old testament.

Prodigal Son Parable

In "The Rope," Mr. O'Neill told about the father of one such rockbound New England family, who appeared incensed at the fact his favorite son fled the farm for the sea, and who hung a noose in the barn against the lad's return. Naturally everyone thought the old codger wished the death of his offspring, and they are not surprised that when the son finally returns, the old man tries to get him to place his neck in the noose.

Actually, "The Rope" is but a double-take on the parable of the prodigal son, for when the rope is actually pulled, the old man's fortune of gold pieces tumbles from the beam where the rope was suspended. It is unhappy to have to report that the son failed to negotiate the rope, and the curtain goes down on a scene in which a small child, who discovered the secret, skims the fortune into the sea, coin by coin, to see the bright metal skip over the waves.

In view of the material to hand, Mr. Mennini has very competently converted the play into an opera. He is in the first place an able musician in the technical point. He has made a score which sounds well both in the voice and upon the orchestra. The music sings well, plays well, the writing is on the professorial side, having a certain studied quality and manufacture. While to some degree it has modern hwsonies, it is essentially conservative and conventional. It reminds very much of Benjamin Britten, without some of the extremities of style. It is somber, or at least sober, it is perhaps more lyric than dramatic. It is above all romatic, in a somewhat old-fashioned way, barring details here and there.

Ably Directed

It is this respect above all that Mr. Mennini's opera most faithfully embodies O'Neill's "The Rope." However universal may be the themes of O'Neill's plays, however seizing their peculiar atmosphere may be for the American scene, the fact is that they belonged to an era when authors and playwrights were writing about our culture in an almost entirely fanciful fashion. No one could possibly put O'Neill down as a realist among dramatists or the chroniclers of the early American temperament. That he achieved a certain atmosphere which we now accept, however artifically as "American," that he worked out his dramas on enormously impressive canvases reminiscent of the prophets of the old teetaments, no one will deny. Nor has anyone done so well since. But in many ways, O'Neill was the teller of fairy tales, of legends. And it is this impressive, but unreal vein, that is so consonant in Mr. Mennini's music. It is not the music that grows out of some real, dramatic situation. It grows instead out of a fanciful concept. If it were not written for "The Rope," it would be the setting form some equally unreal tale.

Tonight's performance was very ably directed by Henry Janiec. It was much too heavily produced by Boris Goldovsky, head of the music center opera department. The sets and lights by David Hays were in line with Mr. Goldovsky's ideas, but like the music, the play, incurably romantic.

The performance was excellent. Malcolm Bernstein as the Bible-crazed father, Mary Mackenzie as the daughter, Stephen Harbachick as the prodigal, Lynn Detwiler as the foreigner in the midst and Holly McLennan as the child, sang and acted very nicely. That is, they sang very well, and acted as much as the minimal opportunity of the play allows.

A performance of the two-act Mozart opera, "Zaide", rounded out the program, but a flight from the Seraglio was necessary in order to get "The Rope" into today's chronicle.

—T.H.P.

Cleveland Press 8/6/55

Heart of Musicland, the fan-shaped shed at Tanglewood.

By JIM FRANKEL, Press Staff Writer

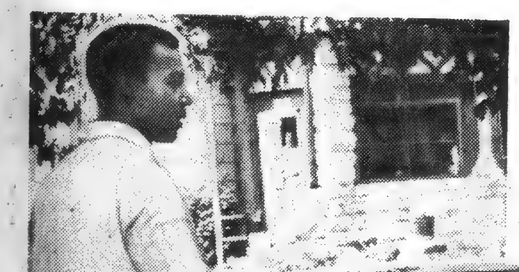
BERKSHIRE HILLS, Mass.: Once the private sanctuary of Boston's wealthy, this graceful mountain area has grown with the past 10 years, into a mammoth music enterprise.

It started with the Berkshire Music Center in 1942. Operated by the Boston Symphony, the center today swells with 405 students from 38 states and 18 foreign countries. This in addition to the festival concerts by the Boston Symphony which help pay for the vast musical plant.

Sprawling on Nathaniel Hawthorne's green and gentle territory, Tanglewood, the Berkshirt Center has become the mother hen which has hatched such healthy baby music chicks as the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, the Berkshire jazz festival, the South Mountain chamber music series, the Berkshire folk music fete, the ultra-highbrow Pro Musica Antiqua group, devoted to rare and ancient music, among others.

Cleveland trio: Sheldon Rosen (left) and Herbert Wainer learn to fiddle from Sidney Harth.

Clevelanders meet Conductor Thor Johnson. Left to right: Harriet Smith, Tom Waldman, George Posell and Clyde Hiss.



Haitian Dancer Jean Leon Destine talks on his art to Indian Hill campers.

Clevelanders Camp

One of the worthiest enterprises to arise here is Indian Hill, a music camp operated during July and August by two former Clevelanders, Mordecai and Irma Bauman. Until a few years ago, Bauman was voice department head at the Institute of Music.

In 1952 they moved to New York and Stockbridge, Mass., to open Indian Hill on the former estate of a onetime U. S. ambassador, Norman Davis. Purpose was to help youngsters achieve "a rounded musical and cultural life."

The Baumans started with 37 students. This year they have 81 youths whose devoted parents spend $600 for a summer of music, dance, art, photography and sports.

Four Clevelanders are on the faculty: Sidney and Teresa Harth, now of Louisville, where Sidney is associate conductor of the Louisville Philharmonic, and Seymour Lipkin, pianist serving as guest conductor, and Lou Gilbert, now an actor.

Dual Role for Lipkin

Lipkin also teaches at the Berkshire Center, along with "Signor Opera," Boris Goldovsky, who heads the opera department. Indian Hill, by the way, often supplies choral talent for Tanglewood, three miles away, when the need arises.

A number of Clevelanders have helped support the Bauman culture camp: the Harry Kirtzes, the Elliot Morgensterns and the Joseph Kleins, Arthur Loesser, Marcel Dick and Langston Hughes, among many others.

Both Tanglewood and Indian Hill have Cleveland students enrolled this summer. At Tanglewood are Nancy Harriet Smith, 14, 3264 Rumson Rd., Cleveland Heights, Tom Waldman, 16, 17611 Berwyn Rd., Shaker Heights, George Posell, 13, 2469 Kingston Rd., Cleveland Heights (a walking opera encyclopedia, by the way) and Clyde Hiss, 21, 23160 Gay Ave., Euclid.

Indian Hill campers include Herbert Wainer, 14, 2857 Washington Blvd., Cleveland Heights; Sheldon Rosen, 13, 14168 Cedar Rd., Cleveland Heights; Shelley Bartell, 17, 2215 Barrington Rd., University Heights. The Baumans' daughter, Elizabeth Israels, 16, is also a camper.

State Dept. Honor

This past week Indian Hill won an honor: The State Department invited the camp to perform Purcell's "Masque in Dioclesian," its feature production this summer, for Fulbright scholars studying at Bennington College, Vt.

Artistic impulses like this have made the Berkshires the gathering ground for summer vacationists, and are spurring other areas like Stratford, Ont., Aspen, Colo., and Ellenville, N. Y., to invest profitably in the musical and dramatic arts.

Until Cleveland can came up with an arts center of its own, these growing projects will continue to drain Cleveland talent and money in increasing quantities. Perhaps this should disturb our community's cultural leaders.

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.
UNION
Circ. D. 69,790 - S. 150,600

JUL 23 1955

CURTAIN CALL

Bruno Ussher Views Music-Drama Scene

VOCAL SENSATIONS DUE: Vocally the San Francisco Opera company seems well starred indeed. There will be a new Marshaling in "Rosenkavalier" with Elizabeth Schwarzkopff. (Oct. 28 at the Shrine Auditorium in Los Angeles.)

DR. USSHER

There will be the Nedda of Licia Albanesi in "Pagliacci," and "Don Giovanni" (Oct. 30 matinee and Nov. 5.) Renata Tebaldi sings "Andrea Chenier" (Oct. 21, opening night of Los Angeles engagement.) She will be heard again Oct. 26 in "Aida." Inge Borkh is due in "Lohengrin" (Oct. 23 matinee) Her only other appearance is in Verdi's rarely performed "Macbeth" Nov. 1.

Lovers of the new and admirers of soprano Dorothy Kirsten will mark Nov. 4 as the date of the new William Walton opera, "Troilus and Cressida."

One of the top sensations vocally is promised for Sunday October 30 (3 p.m.) when in addition to "Pagliacci" (with Albaneso), Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Coq d'Or" will introduce Mattiwilda Dobbs.

This will be her first operatic role in her native country. (She actually makes her American opera debut in San Francisco October 11 with a repeat October 15.) She sang the role last year in a Royal command performance at Covent Garden for Queen Elizabeth.

Miss Dobbs, daughter of a Negro railway clerk in Atlanta, Ga., is currently on a 30-concert tour of Australia. The coloratura soprano studied in this country at the Berkshire music center. There she won the John Hay Whitney Fellowship for advanced study in Paris.

Capturing first prize at the Geneva International Music Competition in 1950, within a short time she was appearing successfully on opera stages of Paris, Vienna, Stockholm Copenhagen and London. On March 4, 1953, she was acclaimed in her La Scala debut as Elvira in Rossini's "The Italians in Algiers." She thus became the first artist of her race to appear in this world famous Italian opera shrine of traditions.

Miss Dobbs "Song Recital" recording is one of the best-sellers on an Angel recording. Renaissance Records has her featured in Bizet's "The Pearlfishers," and Polymusic in the miniature Mozart opera, "Zaide."

SIBELIUS AND SHAKESPEARE: Sibelius' complete incidental music to Shakespeare's "The Tempest" will be heard at the Empire State Music Festival, Sept. 2 and 3 at Ellenville, N.Y. It has been played only once before complete in this country. That was the winter when the two works were combined in concert form by conductor Thor Johnson and the Cincinatti Symphony.

SPONSORS CONCERTS: The British Broadcasting Company is sponsoring again the famous Promenade Concert season at Queens Hall in London.

NEW WORKS: Word from Mosocw indicates that Sergei Prokofieff, great Russian composer, wrote a ninth Piano Sonata and a second Concerto for Violoncello shortly before he died two years ago. Expectations are that they will be published soon.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
BOX 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4260
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246
AUG 5 1955

Oracle

POETRY

It calls in lyric April's wistful note,
The breathless hush of every dawnlit hill,
October's cry of gold whose echoes spill
In flares of shattered sunset.
Like a boat
Of Faery cargo on a shadowmoat,
It plies the wharves of dream aglitter still
With Kubla's dome of dread, proud Israfel,
Far seas tranced by a bird's immortal throat.
It is the sound of night upon a lake
In ecstasies of silver; evening's brush
Of gold against a crag; the ebbing rush
Of weary cities. For its peace-less ache
Men trade their lives and dreams; what cry unheard
Has marked a singing line; what loss, one deathless word!

—Hugh Wilgus Ramsaur in Wings.

o o

Because the name Barham caught the eye, we submit this one in the do-it-better line: Since she became postmaster at Helotes, Texas, Mrs. Matilda Barham has planted shrubs and flowers out front where there used to be beer cans and trash, installed a flag-pole and completely redecorated the interior of her office. She reports that she believes "nice surroundings help the morale of everyone concerned." Arnold Barham of Royal Ave. is a retired staff member of the local post office. His daughter, Alva Barham Bricks, is the T-T society editor. They might have kinship with the Helotes postmaster. And the August issue of Postal Service News to our desk this week gives her that title, and not postmistress.

o o

The Stratford Shakespeare Festival has received friendly criticism for its first two productions, "Julius Caesar," and "The Tempest," the staging of which has been considered better than acting. It is surprising to note that most critics have found Raymond Massey a disappointment as a Shakespearean actor. So far the actor who has received the greatest critical applause is Roddy MacDowell, the former child star, in the role of Ariel.

o o

Any questions you may have about the origins of the Berkshire Festival and its quick rise to international glory are frankly and neatly answered in a new book "Music Under the Moon," by John G. W. Mahanna, county editor of the Berkshire Eagle. The book is a history of the Festival, profusely illustrated with photographs covering the two decades of the Festival's growth. There may be many who do not know that the Festival did not start at Tanglewood or with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Mahanna takes it from the beginning, and shows how it was a labor of love and faith on the part of Berkshire people in the face of much discouragement.

o o

Considering the extended honeymoons of the present day, it's interesting to note the following in the Townshend News of the Brattleboro Daily Reformer: The 50th wedding anniversary celebrated by Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Fontaine was the fourth golden wedding to be observed by Townshend couples this year. Mrs. Fontaine recalled that the couple left Windham early in the morning for Bellows, Falls in a horse and buggy accompanied by Mrs. Fontaine's mother. The horse was fast and they had a morning wedding and were in Saxtons River by noon for lunch at the inn. The couple set up housekeeping immediately in two rooms in the home of the bride's parents.

o o

During the early months of the year, when all this traffic that tours through our Connecticut Valley is headed for Florida, Holyokers by the hundreds choose to make the trip by Route 301—no hills, only Richmond as a city of size to poke through, nice rolling country, handsome forests, and, on the spring return, lovely with peach blossom and dogwood and later rich with the promise of corn and cotton and tobacco. One of the reasons why 301 rose so swiftly to fame was Hal Orr's motel at Rocky Mount, N. C. It was one of the first modern wayside successors to the old tourist homes that was set up on the way to Florida, if not the very first. Mr. and Mrs. Orr had a peculiar power to make the stranger feel he was at home. They helped create the systm of Quality Courts, which is such a comfort to motorists. Later years Mr. Orr undertook to be the public relations head of that travel serving body. With the upspringing of motels all over the country, as well as on 301, the difficulty was to keep aspirants out rather than gather them in and down came the quality flag if anybody [illegible] had it on his shield fell short of the requirements. One of the factors in the whole motel picture is the community picture they make up and down the land. When the touring public found [illegible] satisfaction at Hal Orr's in Rocky Mount a half dozen more great structures rose to match the popularity of the site. We have the same kind of picture on Route 5 as we head towards the North End Bridge. Hal Orr was one of the builders of this promised land for motorists taking the highways for their vacations or their fields of service. Through the Quality Courts the motorist can reserve and pay for his next night accommodations at any of the courts up or down the line. He may not know it but when he expresses satifaction for the comfort of the road he is paying tribute to the pioneering of Hal Orr whose untimely death is a great loss to the public he has served.

o o

For years now the beautiful snowy egrets have been visitors to our part of the Connecticut River. Sometimes there are more of them — sometimes fewer, but according to Wayne Hanley's official report in the Boston Herald the nesting of the snowy egrets for the first time in Massachusetts history; and the third wood ibis to be seen in the Commonwealth, were July events in our state calendar. The huge ibis has been and is still being seen in Rockport pond. The snowy egrets have nested and brought their young to active life in Dennis on the Cape. So important is this event that the Massachusetts Aubudon Society is keeping the exact location a secret for the security of the birds.

ORACLE.

Blacher: "A little bit different"

MUSIC:

Stranger at Tanglewood

"I'm not a good conductor," said Boris Blacher. No composer, he added with that tested observation, the 52-year-old German composer sat on the sidelines for the major event of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood last week, a performance of his little-known opera, "Romeo and Juliet." Blacher had other things, in fact, to keep him busy, for as composer-in-residence, he is also teaching at Tanglewood this summer.

Blacher's music is not often performed here, although he is a key figure in the postwar Central European school of composers, and this is his first visit to the United States. After Kalman Novak put the student orchestra through its intricate paces at Tanglewood last week, both the critics and audience agreed that "Romeo and Juliet" was admirable if not exciting.

Blacher calls his music "progressive," although he is not identified with atonalists like Alban Berg or Anton von Webern ("The thing to do is to experiment with really new things, not to outdo Arnold Schönberg"). As he says: "My music is not revolutionary at all, just a little bit different."

Much about Blacher has been a little bit different. He was born in China of Russian parents and studied music in Siberia. In 1922 he went to Berlin to study architecture, but wound up instead at the Hochschule für Musik, which he now heads. Performances of his works were few and far between, and he supported himself playing the piano for silent movies. Not until 1937 and his ballet, "Carnival in the South," did he find any success.

Oohs and Ahs: His newest opera, "Abstrakte Oper Nr. 1," with a text by Werner Egk, is a fantasy on the problem of communication, this time in terms of politics. In addition to learning a libretto in both English and Russian, the cast also has to sing a curious language of oohs and ahs (to convey love and fear). The less the cast understands, Blacher theorizes, the more the audience understands. Singers, if they sing very clearly, give a phony impression. But if [illegible]ly, that's more musical.

Extremely popular with his classes at Tanglewood, Blacher has a cheering sense of humor about himself and his work. The Berkshires have been a novel experience for him, and so, in its way, was New York, where he saw the Broadway hit, "Pajama Game," from the orchestra pit. "I was willing," he recalls, "to play the celesta or something, but they didn't need any help from me."

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 42,039

JUL 23 1955

Boston 'Pops' Set for Aug. 11 At Tanglewood

The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" program featuring Arthur Fiedler and the Boston "Pops" Orchestra has been set for Aug. 11 at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

* * *

THE PROGRAM, which last year attracted 10,050 persons, is presented with the aid of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, the Berkshire Music Center.

Gala activities open at 6 p.m. and run to 11 p.m. and include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, an evening concert and concludes with dancing on the lawn.

The Boston "Pops" Orchestra with Fiedler, its conductor for 26 years, will present a typical "Pops" program.

Fiedler presently is conducting the Art Commission Pop Concerts in San Francisco's Civic Auditorium. He will fly to conduct the Miami Beach Pops Concerts in Florida Aug. 7 and to the Berkshires for the "Tanglewood on Parade" program.

* * *

FIRST HALF of the program in the Shed will be given at 8:15 p.m. by the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Leonard Bernstein. He will direct the first performance anywhere of a suite he has arranged from the music he composed for the film "On the Waterfront." This portion of the program will also include "A Lincoln Portrait" by Aaron Copland.

Bernstein also will be piano soloist with the Boston "Pops" in George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." Fiedler's program will also include the "Caprice Espagnole" of Rimsky-Korsakov and the suite of Johann Strauss dances from the ballet, "Graduation Ball" as arranged by Antal Dorati. A number of encores in typical light "Pops" vein will follow.

Seats for the "Tanglewood on Parade" program are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office and may be reserved by telephone to Lenox, Mass.

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky is chairman of the "Tanglewood on Parade" committee.

OMAHA, NEBR.
World Herald (Sunday)
Circ. S. 261,246

JUN 26 1955

Lorraine Coats Plans Music Study at Camp

Lorraine Coats, 5312 Western Avenue, has been admitted to the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music festival—a six-week operatic study camp—at Tanglewood near Lenox, Mass.

Miss Coats, a graduate of Colorado Women's College and the University of Nebraska, is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norris W. Coats, Stuart, Neb.

165 Church Street - New York
NEWSWEEK
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL 25 1955

written, 1,600 have been declassified.

Dr. Bradbury believes that last week's "open house" may presage a new era when secrecy curtains may be removed. Even if world statesmen succeed in abolishing war, he added, Los Alamos could be a great center of peaceful nuclear research. [It] is not [all] built around the shape of a bomb."

Busy Petitioners

The futility of well-meaning scientists proclaiming that war is futile was never more apparently futile than last week. Bertrand Russell had asked eighteen eminent scientists to sign the late Albert Einstein's 1,200-word-long deathbed appeal for a congress "to appraise the perils" of atomic wars, which "threaten the continued existence of mankind." Of the eighteen scientists, however, only eight signed. One never answered. Nine

MUSIC:

Sounds and Skeeters

The summer air above the spacious garden of lovely Castle Hill in Ipswich, Mass., vibrated with the toot and twang of recorder, harpsichord, and viol last week as the New York Pro Musica Antiqua played music which dated from 1400 to 1650. Some miles to the West, in the Hollywood Bowl, Indians, frontiersmen, bandits, stagecoaches, and one bear participated in a salute to Walt Disney that included Fess (Davy Crockett) Parker, a company of more than 200, and the Roger Wagner Chorale. The Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra assisted, under four different conductors—a system possibly derived from the rotation of pitchers at the All-Star game. Across the land between, a multitude of other seasonal concerts, festivals, and extravaganzas of a musical nature were scheduled to take place. Summer music was upon the nation once again.

It has been remarked, callously, that the best thing to be said about a festival, musical or otherwise, is the employment it provides. Certainly, the only common

Newsweek—Marc S[illegible]

The summer audience: Fortitude

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

AUG 8 1955

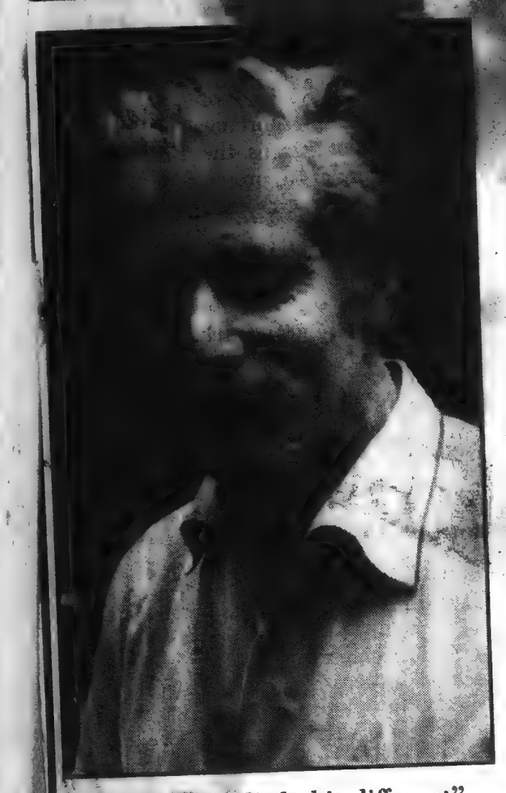
CLAUDE RAINS
In Thursday Debut

Claude Rains On Thursday Program

Lenox, Mass., —(UP)— Claude Rains will make his debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra here Thursday during the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" program of the Berkshire Music Festival.

Rains will be narrator in a performance of Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait." Leonard Bernstein will be the conductor.

NEWSWEEK
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL 25 1956



Blacher: "A little bit different"

MUSIC:

Stranger at Tanglewood

"I'm not a good conductor," said Boris Blacher, a composer, with that tested observation, the 52-year-old German composer sat on the sidelines for the major event of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood last week, a performance of his little-known opera, "Romeo and Juliet." Blacher had other things, in fact, to keep him busy, for as composer-in-residence, he is also teaching at Tanglewood this summer.

Blacher's music is not often performed here, although he is a key figure in the postwar Central European school of composers, and this is his first visit to the United States. After Kalman Novak put the student orchestra through its intricate paces at Tanglewood last week, both the critics and audience agreed that "Romeo and Juliet" was admirable if not exciting.

Blacher calls his music "progressive," although he is not identified with atonalists like Alban Berg or Anton von Webern. ("The thing to do is to experiment with really new things, not to outdo Arnold Schönberg.") As he says: "My music is not revolutionary at all, just a little bit different."

Much about Blacher has been a little bit different. He was born in China of Russian parents and studied music in Siberia. In 1922 he went to Berlin to study architecture but wound up instead at the Hochschule für Musik, which he now heads. Performances of his works were few and far between, and he supported himself playing the piano for silent movies. Not until 1937 and his ballet "Carnival in the South," did he find [illegible] success.

Oohs and Aahs. His newest opera, "Abstrakte Oper Nr. 1," with a text by Werner Egk, is a fantasy on the problem of communication, this time in terms of politics. In addition to learning a libretto in English and Russian, the cast [illegible] sing a curious language of [illegible] (to convey love and fe[illegible]ss the cast understands, Blacher theorizes, the more the audience understands. Singers, if they sing very cle[illegible]y impression. But if [illegible], that's more music.

Extremely popular with his classes at Tanglewood, Blacher has a cheering sense of humor about himself and his work. The Berkshires have been a novel experience for him, and so, in its way, was New York, where he saw the Broadway hit, "Pajama Game," from the orchestra pit. "I was willing," he recalls, "to play the celesta or something, but they didn't need any help from me."

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 42,039

JUL 23 1955

Boston 'Pops' Set for Aug. 11 At Tanglewood

The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" program featuring Arthur Fiedler and the Boston "Pops" Orchestra has been set for Aug. 11 at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

* * *

THE PROGRAM, which last year attracted 10,050 persons, is presented with the aid of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, the Berkshire Music Center.

Gala activities open at 6 p.m. and run to 11 p.m. and include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, an evening concert and concludes with dancing on the lawn.

The Boston "Pops" Orchestra with Fiedler, its conductor for 26 years, will present a typical "Pops" program.

Fiedler presently is conducting the Art Commission Pop Concerts in San Francisco's Civic Auditorium. He will fly to conduct the Miami Beach Pops Concerts in Florida Aug. 7 and to the Berkshires for the "Tanglewood on Parade" program.

* * *

FIRST HALF of the program in the Shed will be given at 8:15 p.m. by the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Leonard Bernstein. He will direct the first performance anywhere of a suite he has arranged from the music he composed for the film "On the Waterfront." This portion of the program will also include "A Lincoln Portrait" by Aaron Copland.

Bernstein also will be piano soloist with the Boston "Pops" in George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." Fiedler's program will also include the "Caprice Espagnole" of Rimsky-Korsakov and the suite of Johann Strauss dances from the ballet, "Graduation Ball" as arranged by Antal Dorati. A number of encores in typical light "Pops" vein will follow.

Seats for the "Tanglewood on Parade" program are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office and may be reserved by telephone to Lenox, Mass.

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky is chairman of the "Tanglewood on Parade" committee.

OMAHA, NEBR.
World Herald (Sunday)
Circ. S. 261,246

JUN 26 1955

Lorraine Coats Plans Music Study at Camp

Lorraine Coats, 5312 Western Avenue, has been admitted to the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music festival—a six-week operatic study camp—at Tanglewood near Lenox, Mass.

Miss Coats, a graduate of Colorado Women's College and the University of Nebraska, is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norris W. Coats, Stuart, Neb.

written, 1,600 have been declassified.

Dr. Bradbury believes that last week's "open house" may presage a new era when secrecy curtains may be removed. Even if world [illegible] succeed in abolishing war, he added, Los Alamos could be a great center of peaceful nuclear research. [It] is not [all] built around the shape of a bomb."

Busy Petitioners

The futility of well-meaning scientists proclaiming that war is futile was never more apparently futile than last week. Bertrand Russell had asked eighteen eminent scientists to sign the late Albert Einstein's 1,200-word-long deathbed appeal for a congress "to appraise the perils" of atomic wars, which "threaten the continued existence of mankind." Of the eighteen scientists, however, only eight signed. One never answered. Nine

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

AUG 8 1955

CLAUDE RAINS
In Thursday Debut

Claude Rains On Thursday Program

Lenox, Mass., —(UP)— Claude Rains will make his debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra here Thursday during the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" program of the Berkshire Music Festival.

Rains will be narrator in a performance of Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait." Leonard Bernstein will be the conductor.

MUSIC:

Sounds and Skeeters

The summer air above the spacious garden of lovely Castle Hill in Ipswich, Mass., vibrated with the toot and twang of recorder, harpsichord, and viol last week as the New York Pro Musica Antiqua played music which dated from 1400 to 1650. Some miles to the West, in the Hollywood Bowl, Indians, frontiersmen, bandits, stagecoaches, and one bear participated in a salute to Walt Disney that included Fess (Davy Crockett) Parker, a company of more than 200, and the Roger Wagner Chorale. The Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra assisted, under four different conductors—a system possibly derived from the rotation of pitchers at the All-Star game. Across the land between, a multitude of other seasonal concerts, festivals, and extravaganzas of a musical nature were scheduled to take place. Summer music was upon the nation once again.

It has been remarked, callously, that the best thing to be said about a festival, musical or otherwise, is the employment it provides. Certainly, the only common

Marc Simont

The summer audience: Fortitude

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-2800

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

AUG 1955

SOLOISTS DO WELL WITH MUSIC FROM BEETHOVEN OPERA

Margaret Hardshaw Outstanding in Second Portion Of Tanglewood Program

WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 6—The Berkshire Music Festival paid its respects tonight to Beethoven, the opera composer, performing the second act of his only opera "Fidelio."

Fine Soloists

Charles Munch gathered together a fine group of soloists including several from the Berkshire Music School. Resplendent in a crimson gown, Margaret Harshaw sang the title role of Leonora. The versatile David Lloyd sang Florestan; Mac Morgan sang Rocco; Christina Cardillo sang Marzelline; Malcolm Bernstein sang both Pizarro and Fernando and Arthur Shoep sang Jauino. The festival chorus was prepared by Hugh Ross and John Krueger.

Beethoven's opera of wifely virtue and fidelity is a grim tale which needs the settings to make it really effective. The second act discloses Florestan in his dungeon where the action takes place. Mr. Lloyd seems to be aiming toward the robust tenor realm, but at the expense of tone quality. He projected well tonight and sang his big aria effectively.

Miss Harshaw's opulent tones vitalized the ensemble numbers. She communicated the stress and strain of the heroine through a nice contrast of utterance. There was also much to admire in the big voice of Malcolm Bernstein. In the few measures allotted her, Christina Cardillo's lovely soprano was effective. Mr. Morgan and Mr. Shoep were adequate.

Mr. Munch conducted vigorously but did not succeed in overpowering the soloists. The chorus sang rhythmically and injected a note of happiness into this otherwise grim story.

Margaret Harshaw Shines

Margaret Harshaw was the particular star of the second half of the program. She repeated again her wonderous performance of the immolation scene from "Gotterdamerung" which she sang here a couple of seasons ago. The opening phrases were sung with stunning effect, for hers is a voice of power and beauty. She has gained greatly in her characterization of the "Gotterdammerung" Brunhilda and there was a constant play of color in the voice and a sure awareness of mood. It was a magnificent performance aided by the superb orchestral collaboration.

The immolation scene was prefaced by fine readings of the "Day Break" and Siegfried's death music. These two Wagnerian tone poems embrace some of the master's greatest music. There was a constant flow of exquisite tone color, reflective and at times overpowering in intensity. Mr. Munch was at his conductorial best in these excerpts and he received full support and response from the orchestra.

This afternoon Eugene Istomin will be the soloist in an all Beethoven program. He will play the "Piano Concerto No. 4 in G. Major." Surrounding the concerto will be "Symphony No. 8 in F Major" and "Symphony No. 5 in C Minor."

RED SLAVE

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 369,241

AUG 7 1955

MIDSUMMER HARVEST

As you go west in Massachusetts from the sea to the Berkshires, something happens which everyone must feel but no one mentions. Is there another spot in North America where this could be duplicated within an area equivalent?—Atlantic coast, Connecticut Valley and Berkshire Hills, within four hours' driving one is in three distinct regional cultures.

In first settlement the Valley trod upon the heels of the coastal towns, for the river was the road; but although the Indians did not like the mountains, the Berkshires came under cultivation almost a century later. Berkshire County, however, has made up bravely since, and especially in the past two decades, for it is now our Summer capital of music, the dance, and to some extent, drama. From Nathaniel Hawthorne's modest volume of stories for children written in a red cottage on a slope of the scenic Stockbridge Bowl, to the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Tanglewood is by now such a thrice-told tale that its deeper and more abiding fertilization of our soil may be overlooked amid the very abundance of its yearly harvests, for when the sounding billows of its orchestral and choral music subside, and its multitudinous audiences depart,

"Still do thy sleepless ministers move on,
"Their glorious tasks in silence perfecting."

* * *

It was Tanglewood which first proved on a grand scale that our people are eager to go to Summer music festivals on a small and intimate scale as well as a large one; that concerts of chamber music in poetical settings can be as enchanting a Midsummer Night's Dream as can a symphonic performance. Does anyone suppose the Summer festival at Aspen, Colorado, would have come into existence but for Tanglewood, or indeed, this benign inundation of our lives and our landscapes with music, dance, and theatre, as well as exhibitions of the visual and plastic arts in Summer?

Facts and figures cease to be dull and may even turn exciting when it is understood what they mean,

"For Greece and its foundations are
"Laid beneath the tides of war,
"Based on the crystaline sea
"Of thought and its eternity."

Beneath the dazzling programs and brilliant performances in the Music Shed, the Theatre-Concert Hall, and the Chamber Music hall at Tanglewood move the currents and rising tide of a human sea of talent, for our American social system is more and more performing that prime function of any civilized society—release of the widest possible spread of potential talents among its people.

And among other peoples, for these talents now come to the Music School at Tanglewood not only from all quarters of these United States, but from Europe, Asia and South America, to be sent out again from here as seed-carriers, the Appleseed Johnnies of golden orchards.

Thus the facts can now be seen for what they mean: more than ten percent of the membership in all the major symphony orchestras in the United States are by this time former students at Tanglewood; fledgling instrumental virtuosi take off from this Berkshire hilltop on the eagle flights of their touring careers; young singers walk off its platforms and out on the stages of opera house and concert hall; composers work both in and for Tanglewood, teaching, producing commissioned scores, and sending finished works here from abroad for first performance. The happy idea of a study group for amateur musicians to come and spend from two to six weeks making music to hearts' content has fished up from the deep sea soundings of our common life students as various as secretaries, housewives, officers from the armed services, medical doctors, a priest, a manufacturer of macaroni, salesmen, teachers . . . their ages ranging from eighteen to seventy-one.

* * *

A city grows complacent. Even though we may be on our guard against such stupidity, a notion tends to get abroad that nothing much of importance happens outside the metropolitan area. How all too easily do our minds and lives yield to the little tract within fifteen miles of the gilded State House dome, that domain where twenty-cent fare is King, when all the while this is no more than a postage stamp on a continent.

No sooner does one's car roll into the beautiful Worcester County hills than the human climate changes, the old rustic New England reasserts its identity, and the delightful twang of Yankee speech, the twang of a bowstring that launches shafts of wit, makes glad the ear and heart. By the time you reach the River Gods of the Connecticut Valley, Boston has ceased to cut much ice; they can cut their own, thank you—what with three famous old colleges, Amherst, Mt. Holyoke, Smith, and now a Massachusetts University, two colleges in Springfield, and the academies at Deerfield, Northfield and Mt. Hermon which are by now almost equally famous. The very doorways of the colonial houses in Deerfield and the Hadleys are distinctive to the Valley.

* * *

In Berkshire County, our third regional culture, the planting of a century ago which then drew thither Hawthorne, Melville, Longfellow, and Holmes, is now in full flower. Pittsfield is a city to which the United States Government entertains touring officials from abroad, as an example of a self-contained metropolis of moderate size and distinguished quality; the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield is a notable art collection admirably managed, and to this add the two art museums in Williamstown, that of the College and the handsome new building for the Clark collections. Both the Berkshire Playhouse at Stockbridge and the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival at Lee were in being before Tanglewood, and Jacob's Pillow is most unique in that the art of dance is relatively new in this country and therefore in its excitingly formative state of fluidity and experimentation.

The boundary lines of Massachusetts, artificial because political, run east and west; the natural lines, those of our mountains, hills and biggest river, run north and south; while the Berkshires, paralleling the Hudson, are tributary to New York. One sees this in the very audiences at Tanglewood, thronged though the place is with New Englanders: the Orchestra is Boston's, the people are from everywhere, not only New York, as well as New England, but from the West, South and points beyond, even to overseas.

Toynbee was not the first to notice that although the French, Dutch and Spanish had equally good chances to dominate the settlement and cultural development of North America, still it was the English who walked off with the prize, and, of the English, it was the New Englanders who most impregnated the young nation with their basic ideas, and this largely because of the stern discipline they drew from their scrawny soil. And now these our New England pastures, the Summer through flourish seed-pods of the arts, which burst in autumn and strew their winged insemination far and wide.

UNCLE DUDLEY.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR

JUN 11 1955

Miss Sylvia Elaine Mallery, daughter of Mrs. Robert H. Mallery, Secret Caverns, and the late Mr. Mallery, received a BA degree in music Monday at the 101st commencement of Syracuse University. Miss Mallery has been accepted for graduate work in education at Harvard University. She will also study music this summer at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE
Circ. D. 188,506 - S. 158,251

JUL 31 1955

Concert Tonight In Memory Of Elkan Naumburg

Special to The Blade

NEW YORK, July 30—The third concert in the Golden Anniversary season of the Naumburg Symphony Orchestra will be tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. on the Mall in Central Park. The concert is in memory of Elkan Naumburg, founder of the series, who died on that date in 1924, and will be conducted by Thor Johnson. Emanuel Vardi, violist, will be soloist.

Mr. Johnson, one of the youngest directors of a major symphony orchestra in America, was appointed permanent conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony in 1946 at the age of 33. Following a full season with the orchestra this past year, Mr. Johnson assumed a heavy schedule for the spring and summer as well.

In early May he conducted the University of Michigan Choral Union and the Philadelphia Orchestra in concerts at the annual May Festival. He then served as co-conductor of the Symphony of the Air during its Oriental tour, returning to act as music director of the Early American-Moravian Music Festival and Seminar at Winston-Salem, N.C., of which he is co-founder. This was followed by an engagement at the Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., where he conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In August, he will direct the third annual Peninsula Music Festival at Fish Creek, Wis., which he founded.

Mr. Vardi is a composer as well as a viola virtuoso and will perform as soloist in one of his works at the July 31 concert. Mr. Vardi and Mr. Johnson are no strangers as Mr. Vardi also toured with the Symphony of the Air in the Far East.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 42,039

JUN 13 1955

MISS SYLVIA ELAINE MALLERY

Miss Sylvia Elaine Mallery, daughter of Mrs. Roger H. Mallery of Secret Caverns and the late Mr. Mallery, received a BA degree at the 101st commencement exercises of Syracuse University. Governor Averill Harriman was guest speaker.

Miss Mallery has attended Skidmore College, Adirondack Studio of Song and Plymouth Rock Center of Music. She will do graduate study at Harvard University and will study at Tanglewood this summer.

Her activities at Syracuse University included Chapel choir, Madrigal singers, University chorus and Women Student Government assembly. She was a member of Alpha Omicron Pi social sorority.

CORPUS CHRISTI, TEX.
CALLER-TIMES
Circ. S. 62,176

JUL 26 1955

TODAY'S WOMAN

Stork Club Jazz Lover Starts Milking Cows

By DOROTHY ROE

LENOX, Mass., (AP)—If you feel an inferiority complex when people discuss long hair music in hushed voices, try bringing the discussion around to jazz, advises Stephanie Barber, a young woman who has succeeded in converting a culture conscious husband into a rabid jazz enthusiast.

Stephanie is a sultry blonde who worked as a fashion publicist in New York, married the boss, a good looking city dweller named Phil Barber, and moved him to an old estate in the Berkshires which they converted into an establishment named Music Inn.

Stephanie, born and bred in New York City, took to country life like a kitten to cream, worked furiously at turning a group of ancient farm buildings into a modern inn, then set about the business of running it as a profitable enterprise while her husband Phil carried on his business in New York.

Jazz Festival

Since the inn is situated near Lenox, Mass., home of the famous annual Berkshire Music Festival, Stephanie couldn't escape the atmosphere of highbrow music.

She personally preferred jazz. Neighbors now remark thoughtfully that one really never should underestimate the power of a woman, for this year Phil and Stephanie are opening their music barn, where, deep in the longhair music country, they are offering a program of folk and jazz concerts, with appearances by such well known downbeat artists as Count Basie, Richard Dyer-Bennet, Dizzy Gillespie.

Stephanie has been building up to this point for some time, having started an annual folk and jazz round table at the inn six years ago, and revelling in the arguments and performances of the jazz musicians who attended it.

Own Theatre

Phil, though a little dazed by the changes wrought in his life by his wife, is filled with nothing but admiration for her. Having taught drama at Yale for six years, he likes having a country theatre of his own.

He also likes having an inn keeping wife, who can attract the country's top jazz artists to their little establishment. He likes best, perhaps, the fact that she is able to show a profit on her enterprises, and that despite her talent for hard work and business acumen she continues to look like a glamor girl.

The Barber property in the Berkshires covers 100 acres and includes two lakes. The two Barber sons, Willson and Ben, both teenagers, have grown husky and healthy on country air, fresh vegetables — and jazz.

Says Phil: "When you meet a city girl who looks like she belongs strictly in a Stork Club atmosphere, look out. She may have you milking cows before you know what's happening."

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER
Circ. D. 25,388 - S. 25,685

JUL 23 1955

Weekend Concerts In Tanglewood Set

Tonight, at 8:30 o'clock, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Pierre Monteux will make his first of three appearances during the 1955 Berkshire festival conducting the full Boston Symphony orchestra in Bach's Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor (in the orchestration by Respighi), Beethoven's Second symphony and the symphonic poem, "Death and Transfiguration," by the late Richard Strauss. In addition, tonight's concert will include the Tanglewood premiere of "The Black Maskers" suite by Roger Sessions, the distinguished American composer who is professor of music at Princeton university and who is teaching composition at the Berkshire Music center this summer.

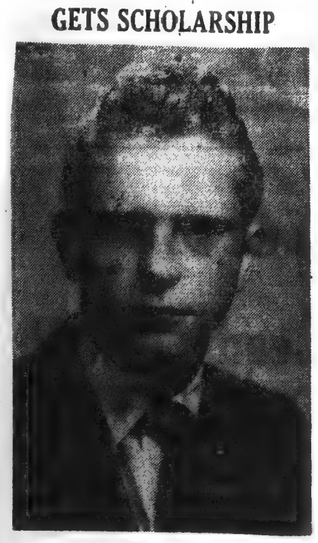
Mr. Monteux celebrated his 80th birthday last April 4 in characteristic fashion: he conducted the Boston Symphony orchestra in an all-Beethoven concert, donating his services for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension fund. Since then Mr. Monteux has conducted several performances of Debussy's "Pelleas et Melisande" in Belgium, conducted his old orchestra, the Concertgebouw, in Amsterdam, made records in Paris, and conducted a week of concerts at New York's Lewisohn stadium with the New York Philharmonic symphony. This is the fourth consecutive summer that Mr. Monteux is a guest conductor at Tanglewood; he also will be a guest conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra at home and on tour next season, the orchestra's 75th.

Tomorrow afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock, Charles Munch resumes the podium to conduct the second all-Beethoven program in this summer's Festival which is devoted largely to that composer's music. The concert tomorrow afternoon assembles three symphonies—the First, Fourth and Sixth ("Pastorale").

Sentinal (e)
ANSONIA, Conn.
Ind. Republican
Circ. 12,663

JUN 15 1955

GETS SCHOLARSHIP



MERRILL DEBSKI

Merrill Debski, son of Mr. and Mrs. Casimir Debski of 279 North Main Street, has been awarded a full tuition scholarship of $150 at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Mass., on the basis of his proficiency in trumpet playing as demonstrated in an audition with Roger Voisin, principal trumpeter of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The school, held from July 4 to August 14, is under the leadership of Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with a distinguished faculty including principals of the Boston orchestra. The purpose of the Berkshire Music Center is to provide for the advanced study of music through active participation in orchestral, chamber, music, choral and operatic performances.

While at Tanglewood, Mr. Debski will perform in the student orchestra under the baton of Leonard Bernstein and study trumpet privately with his present teacher, Armando Ghitalla.

Besides these activities Mr. Debski will also play with the New Haven Symphony Orchestra in its series of pop concerts at the Yale Bowl.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 91,975

JUL 9 1955

BONDSVILLE BRIEFS

Michael Mega, Sr. of 157 Main St., is enjoying his annual vacation from Wickwire Spencer Steel Co.

His son, Michael S. Mega, Jr. a sophomore at the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston is now studying at Tanglewood in Lenox under the supervision of Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He will re-enter the conservatory in the fall.

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK CITY
JUL 1955

LENOX, MASS.—Portions of concerts of the Berkshire Festival here are being broadcast on Monday nights by NBC radio starting July 11. The programs, from 8:15 to 9 p.m., EDT, present the Boston Symphony with vocal and instrumental soloists.

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK CITY
JUL 1955

Mennini Opera Premiere At Tanglewood

LENOX, MASS.—"The Rope", a one-act opera by Louis Mennini based on the Eugene O'Neill play of the same name, will receive its premiere at the Berkshire Music Festival this summer. Stemming from the composer's study of opera technique at the Berkshire Festival two years ago, the work will be offered on a twin-bill with Mozart's unfinished opera, "Zaïde", on Aug. 8 and 9.

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 176,827

JUN 12 1955

Chosen to Study At Tanglewood This Summer

Samuel Dress, son of Dr. Harry Dress of 234 Warrington St., is one of approximately 25 pianists from all over the country who have been accepted as students in the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's school for young musicians of ability which is run in connection with the Berkshire at Tanglewood.

At his audition in Symphony Hall, Boston, Dress played part of Addinsell's "Warsaw" Concerto and about two pages, he says, of a composition at sight. Two days later he received his notice of acceptance. He will study at Tanglewood from July 6 to Aug. 14.

Dress has studied with private teachers here. At Hope High School, from which he was graduated last year, he played the piano for school shows and was vice president of the school's Young Artists' Club. He has recently completed a year at Emerson College, Boston, where he majored in broadcasting, was chief of the music recordings on the closed circuit station and a member of the debating team. He is a member of Fidelity Chapter of DeMolay.

ELIZABETH, N. J.
JOURNAL
Circ. D. 45,474

JUN 15 1955

Ciurczak Given Music Degree

An Oberlin College bachelor of music education degree was conferred on Peter L. Ciurczak Jr. of 16 Rankin St. during commencement exercises at the Ohio institution Monday.

Ciurczak

Mr. Ciurczak has won full-tuition scholarship to the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Mass., for the summer session from July 4 through the second week of August. He also has received a grant of $200 from the Music Study Club of Newark and the Oranges.

At Tanglewood Mr. Ciurczak will play in the senior orchestra and in chamber music groups. He will study with Roger Voisin, first t rumpet player with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

While at college he played in the Oberlin Orchestra and the Symphony Band, the brass ensemble and the Opera Laboratory Orchestra. In 1953 he was overseas six weeks ehtertaining the armed forces with an all-college variety show orchestra. A graduate of Thomas Jefferson High School, he has been a member of the Elizabeth Recreation Concert Band.

SHREVEPORT, LA.
TIMES
Circ. D. 80,859 - S. 95,190
MAY 17 1955

ON WITH TH

By PERICLES A

TANGLEWOOD - BOUND .... Robert Price, violinist with the Shreveport Symphony, will attend the Berkshire Music School at Tanglewood, Mass., this summer as an active participating member, one of a restricted number of 40 young American violinists so honored.

HOUSTON, TEX.
POST
Circ. D. 187,155 - S. 201,445

JUN 16 1955

SOPRANO BABIKIAN
Off to Tanglewood

Soprano As Park Soloist Tonight

Virginia Babikian, Houston soprano, will join the Summer Symphony in a guest role Thursday evening in its concert in Hermann Park.

The program, which begins at 8:15 PM, will be conducted by Andor Toth.

Miss Babikian will sing "The King of Thule" and "Jewel Song," from Gounod's opera "Faust," and Charles' "Let My Song Fill Your Heart."

The orchestral program will include the prelude to Act III of Wagner's "Lohengrin"; Brahms' Variation on a Theme by Haydn; De Falla's "Spanish Dance"; Tchaikowsky's "Sleeping Beauty" ballet suite; three dances from Smetana's "The Bartered Bride"; English folk songs by Williams; Johann Strauss' "Wine Women and Song" waltz, and selections from Sigmund Romberg's "Up in Central Park."

The soloist will be making her last appearance in Houston before leaving for a summer of study at Tanglewood, Mass, in the Berkshire Music Center's opera department, to which she has just received a scholarship. She is a familiar soloist with the park orchestra and has also sung in concert halls throughout Houston.

CORPUS CHRISTI, TEX.
CALLER-TIMES
Circ. S. 62,176

JUL 26 1955

TODAY'S WOMAN

Stork Club Jazz Lover Starts Milking Cows

By DOROTHY ROE

LENOX, Mass., (AP)—If you feel an inferiority complex when people discuss long hair music in hushed voices, try bringing the discussion around to jazz, advises Stephanie Barber, a young woman who has succeeded in converting a culture conscious husband into a rabid jazz enthusiast.

Stephanie is a sultry blonde who worked as a fashion publicist in New York, married the boss, a good looking city dweller named Phil Barber, and moved him to an old estate in the Berkshires which they converted into an establishment named Music Inn.

Stephanie, born and bred in New York City, took to country life like a kitten to cream, worked furiously at turning a group of ancient farm buildings into a modern inn, then set about the business of running it as a profitable enterprise while her husband Phil carried on his business in New York.

Jazz Festival

Since the inn is situated near Lenox, Mass., home of the famous annual Berkshire Music Festival, Stephanie couldn't escape the atmosphere of high-brow music.

She personally preferred jazz. Neighbors now remark thoughtfully that one really never should underestimate the power of a woman, for this year Phil and Stephanie are opening their music barn, where, deep in the longhair music country, they are offering a program of folk and jazz concerts, with appearances by such well known downbeat artists as Count Basie, Richard Dyer-Bennet, Dizzy Gillespie.

Stephanie has been building up to this point for some time, having started an annual folk and jazz round table at the inn six years ago, and revelling in the arguments and performances of the jazz musicians who attended it.

Own Theatre

Phil, though a little dazed by the changes wrought in his life by his wife, is filled with nothing but admiration for her. Having taught drama at Yale for six years, he likes having a country theatre of his own.

He also likes having an inn keeping wife, who can attract the country's top jazz artists to their little establishment. He likes best, perhaps, the fact that she is able to show a profit on her enterprises, and that despite her talent for hard work and business acumen she continues to look like a glamor girl.

The Barber property in the Berkshires covers 100 acres and includes two lakes. The two Barber sons, Willson and Ben, both teenagers, have grown husky and healthy on country air, fresh vegetables — and jazz.

Says Phil: "When you meet a city girl who looks like she belongs strictly in a Stork Club atmosphere, look out. She may have you milking cows before you know what's happening."

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER
Circ. D. 25,388 - S. 25,685

JUL 23 1955

Weekend Concerts In Tanglewood Set

Tonight, at 8:30 o'clock, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Pierre Monteux will make his first of three appearances during the 1955 Berkshire festival conducting the full Boston Symphony orchestra in Bach's Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor (in the orchestration by Respighi), Beethoven's Second symphony and the symphonic poem, "Death and Transfiguration," by the late Richard Strauss. In addition, tonight's concert will include the Tanglewood premiere of "The Black Maskers" suite by Roger Sessions, the distinguished American composer who is professor of music at Princeton university and who is teaching composition at the Berkshire Music center this summer.

Mr. Monteux celebrated his 80th birthday last April 4 in characteristic fashion: he conducted the Boston Symphony orchestra in an all-Beethoven concert, donating his services for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension fund. Since then Mr. Monteux has conducted several performances of Debussy's "Pelleas et Melisande" in Belgium, conducted his old orchestra, the Concertgebouw, in Amsterdam, made records in Paris, and conducted a week of concerts at New York's Lewisohn stadium with the New York Philharmonic symphony. This is the fourth consecutive summer that Mr. Monteux is a guest conductor at Tanglewood; he also will be a guest conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra at home and on tour next season, the orchestra's 75th.

Tomorrow afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock, Charles Munch resumes the podium to conduct the second all-Beethoven program in this summer's festival which is devoted largely to that composer's music. The concert tomorrow afternoon assembles three symphonies—the First, Fourth and Sixth ("Pastorale").

Sentinal (e)
ANSONIA, Conn.
Ind. Republican
Circ. 12,663

JUN 15 1955

GETS SCHOLARSHIP

MERRILL DEBSKI

Merrill Debski, son of Mr. and Mrs. Casimir Debski of 279 North Main Street, has been awarded a full tuition scholarship of $150 at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Mass., on the basis of his proficiency in trumpet playing as demonstrated in an audition with Roger Voisin, principal trumpeter of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The school, held from July 4 to August 14, is under the leadership of Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with a distinguished faculty including principals of the Boston orchestra. The purpose of the Berkshire Music Center is to provide for the advanced study of music through active participation in orchestral, chamber, music, choral and operatic performances.

While at Tanglewood, Mr. Debski will perform in the student orchestra under the baton of Leonard Bernstein and study trumpet privately with his present teacher, Armando Ghitalla.

Besides these activities Mr. Debski will also play with the New Haven Symphony Orchestra in its series of pop concerts at the Yale Bowl.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 91,975

JUL 9 1955

BONDSVILLE BRIEFS

Michael Mega, Sr. of 157 Main St., is enjoying his annual vacation from Wickwire Spencer Steel Co.

His son, Michael S. Mega, Jr. a sophomore at the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston is now studying at Tanglewood in Lenox under the supervision of Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He will re-enter the conservatory in the fall.

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK CITY
JUL 1955

LENOX, MASS.—Portions of concerts of the Berkshire Festival here are being broadcast on Monday nights by NBC radio starting July 11. The programs, from 8:15 to 9 p.m., EDT, present the Boston Symphony with vocal and instrumental soloists.

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK CITY
JUL 1955

Mennini Opera Premiere At Tanglewood

LENOX, MASS.—"The Rope", a one-act opera by Louis Mennini based on the Eugene O'Neill play of the same name, will receive its premiere at the Berkshire Music Festival this summer. Stemming from the composer's study of opera technique at the Berkshire Festival two years ago, the work will be offered on a twin-bill with Mozart's unfinished opera, "Zaide", on Aug. 8 and 9.

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 176,827

JUN 12 1955

Chosen to Study At Tanglewood This Summer

Samuel Dress, son of Dr. Harry Dress of 234 Warrington St., is one of approximately 25 pianists from all over the country who have been accepted as students in the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's school for young musicians of ability which is run in connection with the Berkshire at Tanglewood.

At his audition in Symphony Hall, Boston, Dress played part of Addinsell's "Warsaw" Concerto and about two pages, he says, of a composition at sight. Two days later he received his notice of acceptance. He will study at Tanglewood from July 6 to Aug. 14.

Dress has studied with private teachers here. At Hope High School, from which he was graduated last year, he played the piano for school shows and was vice president of the school's Young Artists' Club. He has recently completed a year at Emerson College, Boston, where he majored in broadcasting, was chief of the music recordings on the closed circuit station and a member of the debating team. He is a member of Fidelity Chapter of DeMolay.

ELIZABETH, N. J.
JOURNAL
Circ. D. 45,474

JUN 15 1955

Ciurczak Given Music Degree

An Oberlin College bachelor of music education degree was conferred on Peter L. Ciurczak Jr. of 16 Rankin St. during commencement exercises at the Ohio institution Monday.

Ciurczak

Mr. Ciurczak has won full-tuition scholarship to the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Mass., for the summer session from July 4 through the second week of August. He also has received a grant of $200 from the Music Study Club of Newark and the Oranges.

At Tanglewood Mr. Ciurczak will play in the senior orchestra and in chamber music groups. He will study with Roger Voisin, first trumpet player with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

While at college he played in the Oberlin Orchestra and the Symphony Band, the brass ensemble and the Opera Laboratory Orchestra. In 1953 he was overseas six weeks entertaining the armed forces with an all-college variety show orchestra. A graduate of Thomas Jefferson High School, he has been a member of the Elizabeth Recreation Concert Band.

SHREVEPORT, LA.
TIMES
Circ. D. 80,859 - S. 95,190

MAY 17 1955

ON WITH TH

By PERICLES

TANGLEWOOD - BOUND . . . . Robert Price, violinist with the Shreveport Symphony, will attend the Berkshire Music School at Tanglewood, Mass., this summer as an active participating member, one of a restricted number of 40 young American violinists so honored.

HOUSTON, TEX.
POST
Circ. D. 187,155 - S. 201,445

JUN 16 1955

SOPRANO BABIKIAN
Off to Tanglewood

Soprano As Park Soloist Tonight

Virginia Babikian, Houston soprano, will join the Summer Symphony in a guest role Thursday evening in its concert in Hermann Park.

The program, which begins at 8:15 PM, will be conducted by Andor Toth.

Miss Babikian will sing "The King of Thule" and "Jewel Song," from Gounod's opera "Faust," and Charles' "Let My Song Fill Your Heart."

The orchestral program will include the prelude to Act III of Wagner's "Lohengrin"; Brahms' Variation on a Theme by Haydn; De Falla's "Spanish Dance"; Tchaikowsky's "Sleeping Beauty" ballet suite; three dances from Smetana's "The Bartered Bride"; English folk songs by Williams; Johann Strauss' "Wine Women and Song" waltz, and selections from Sigmund Romberg's "Up in Central Park."

The soloist will be making her last appearance in Houston before leaving for a summer of study at Tanglewood, Mass, in the Berkshire Music Center's opera department, to which she has just received a scholarship. She is a familiar soloist with the park orchestra and has also sung in concert halls throughout Houston.

CORPUS CHRISTI, TEX.
CALLER-TIMES
Circ. S. 62,176

JUL 26 1955

TODAY'S WOMAN

Stork Club Jazz Lover Starts Milking Cows

By DOROTHY ROE

LENOX, Mass., (AP)—If you feel an inferiority complex when people discuss long hair music in hushed voices, try bringing the discussion around to jazz, advises Stephanie Barber, a young woman who has succeeded in converting a culture conscious husband into a rabid jazz enthusiast.

Stephanie is a sultry blonde who worked as a fashion publicist in New York, married the boss, a good looking city dweller named Phil Barber, and moved him to an old estate in the Berkshires which they converted into an establishment named Music Inn.

Stephanie, born and bred in New York City, took to country life like a kitten to cream, worked furiously at turning a group of ancient farm buildings into a modern inn, then set about the business of running it as a profitable enterprise while her husband Phil carried on his business in New York.

Jazz Festival

Since the inn is situated near Lenox, Mass., home of the famous annual Berkshire Music Festival, Stephanie couldn't escape the atmosphere of high-brow music.

She personally preferred jazz. Neighbors now remark thoughtfully that one really never should underestimate the power of a woman, for this year Phil and Stephanie are opening their music barn, where, deep in the longhair music country, they are offering a program of folk and jazz concerts, with appearances by such well known downbeat artists as Count Basie, Richard Dyer-Bennet, Dizzy Gillespie.

Stephanie has been building up to this point for some time, having started an annual folk and jazz round table at the inn six years ago, and revelling in the arguments and performances of the jazz musicians who attended it.

Own Theatre

Phil, though a little dazed by the changes wrought in his life by his wife, is filled with nothing but admiration for her. Having taught drama at Yale for six years, he likes having a country theatre of his own.

He also likes having an inn keeping wife, who can attract the country's top jazz artists to their little establishment. He likes best, perhaps, the fact that she is able to show a profit on her enterprises, and that despite her talent for hard work and business acumen she continues to look like a glamor girl.

The Barber property in the Berkshires covers 100 acres and includes two lakes. The two Barber sons, Willson and Ben, both teenagers, have grown husky and healthy on country air, fresh vegetables — and jazz.

Says Phil: "When you meet a city girl who looks like she belongs strictly in a Stork Club atmosphere, look out. She may have you milking cows before you know what's happening."

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 39,271

MAY 20 1955

Stranieri Gets Tanglewood Scholarship

Vincent R. Stranieri, Whitney Ext., Westport, elementary instrumental instructor in Waterbury public schools, has received a choral and instrumental conducting scholarship to Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., for study this summer.

VINCENT R. STRANIERI

Mr. Stranieri was chosen from a limited number of students for the Festival's active division. He will study conducting with Leonard Bernstein and Hugh Ross. The course begins July 4 and runs to Aug. 14.

The festival was begun in 1940 by Serge Koussevitzky, late conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra. Festival director this summer will be Charles Munch, present director of the Boston orchestra.

Mr. Stranieri received his bachelor of arts degree in music from the University of Bridgeport. He was graduated from Columbia University with a master of arts degree in music. In 1953, he won top honors in a competition at Columbia for his conducting of Verdi's 'Requiem.' He is studying violin with Paul Bernard in New York City.

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 176,827

JUN 12 1955

Chosen to Study At Tanglewood This Summer

Samuel Dress, son of Dr. Harry Dress of 234 Warrington St., is one of approximately 25 pianists from all over the country who have been accepted as students in the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's school for young musicians of ability which is run in connection with the Berkshire at Tanglewood.

At his audition in Symphony Hall, Boston, Dress played part of Addinsell's "Warsaw" Concerto and about two pages, he says, of a composition at sight. Two days later he received his notice of acceptance. He will study at Tanglewood from July 6 to Aug. 14.

Dress has studied with private teachers here. At Hope High School, from which he was graduated last year, he played the piano for school shows and was vice president of the school's Young Artists' Club. He has recently completed a year at Emerson College, Boston, where he majored in broadcasting, was chief of the music recordings on the closed circuit station and a member of the debating team. He is a member of Fidelity Chapter of DeMolay.

ELIZABETH, N. J.
JOURNAL
Circ. D. 45,474

JUN 15 1955

Ciurczak Given Music Degree

An Oberlin College bachelor of music education degree was conferred on Peter L. Ciurczak Jr. of 16 Rankin St. during commencement exercises at the Ohio institution Monday.

Ciurczak

Mr. Ciurczak has won full-tuition scholarship to the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Mass., for the summer session from July 4 through the second week of August. He also has received a grant of $200 from the Music Study Club of Newark and the Oranges.

At Tanglewood Mr. Ciurczak will play in the senior orchestra and in chamber music groups. He will study with Roger Voisin, first trumpet player with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

While at college he played in the Oberlin Orchestra and the Symphony Band, the brass ensemble and the Opera Laboratory Orchestra. In 1953 he was overseas six weeks ehtertaining the armed forces with an all-college variety show orchestra. A graduate of Thomas Jefferson High School, he has been a member of the Elizabeth Recreation Concert Band.

SHREVEPORT, LA.
TIMES
Circ. D. 80,859 - S. 95,190
MAY 17 1955

ON WITH TH

By PERICLES A

TANGLEWOOD - BOUND . . . . Robert Price, violinist with the Shreveport Symphony, will attend the Berkshire Music School at Tanglewood, Mass., this summer as an active participating member, one of a restricted number of 40 young American violinists so honored.

HOUSTON, TEX.
POST
Circ. D. 187,155 - S. 201,445
JUN 16 1955

SOPRANO BABIKIAN
Off to Tanglewood

Soprano As Park Soloist Tonight

Virginia Babikian, Houston soprano, will join the Summer Symphony in a guest role Thursday evening in its concert in Hermann Park.

The program, which begins at 8:15 PM, will be conducted by Andor Toth.

Miss Babikian will sing "The King of Thule" and "Jewel Song," from Gounod's opera "Faust," and Charles' "Let My Song Fill Your Heart."

The orchestral program will include the prelude to Act III of Wagner's "Lohengrin"; Brahms' Variation on a Theme by Haydn; De Falla's "Spanish Dance"; Tchaikowsky's "Sleeping Beauty" ballet suite; three dances from Smetana's "The Bartered Bride"; English folk songs by Williams; Johann Strauss' "Wine Women and Song" waltz, and selections from Sigmund Romberg's "Up in Central Park."

The soloist will be making her last appearance in Houston before leaving for a summer of study at Tanglewood, Mass, in the Berkshire Music Center's opera department, to which she has just received a scholarship. She is a familiar soloist with the park orchestra and has also sung in concert halls throughout Houston.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER
Circ. D. 25,388 - S. 25,685

JUL 23 1955

Weekend Concerts In Tanglewood Set

Tonight, at 8:30 o'clock, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Pierre Monteux will make his first of three appearances during the 1955 Berkshire festival conducting the full Boston Symphony orchestra in Bach's Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor (in the orchestration by Respighi), Beethoven's Second symphony and the symphonic poem, "Death and Transfiguration," by the late Richard Strauss. In addition, tonight's concert will include the Tanglewood premiere of "The Black Maskers" suite by Roger Sessions, the distinguished American composer who is professor of music at Princeton university and who is teaching composition at the Berkshire Music center this summer.

Mr. Monteux celebrated his 80th birthday last April 4 in characteristic fashion: he conducted the Boston Symphony orchestra in an all-Beethoven concert, donating his services for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension fund. Since then Mr. Monteux has conducted several performances of Debussy's "Pelleas et Melisande" in Belgium, conducted his old orchestra, the Concertgebouw, in Amsterdam, made records in Paris, and conducted a week of concerts at New York's Lewisohn stadium with the New York Philharmonic symphony. This is the fourth consecutive summer that Mr. Monteux is a guest conductor at Tanglewood; he also will be a guest conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra at home and on tour next season, the orchestra's 75th.

Tomorrow afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock, Charles Munch resumes the podium to conduct the second all-Beethoven program in this summer's Festival which is devoted largely to that composer's music. The concert tomorrow afternoon assembles three symphonies—the First, Fourth and Sixth ("Pastorale").

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 91,975

JUL 9 1955

BONDSVILLE BRIEFS

Michael Mega, Sr. of 157 Main St., is enjoying his annual vacation from Wickwire Spencer Steel Co.

His son, Michael S. Mega, Jr. a sophomore at the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston is now studying at Tanglewood in Lenox under the supervision of Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He will re-enter the conservatory in the fall.

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK CITY
JUL 1955

LENOX, MASS.—Portions of concerts of the Berkshire Festival here are being broadcast on Monday nights by NBC radio starting July 11. The programs, from 8:15 to 9 p.m., EDT, present the Boston Symphony with vocal and instrumental soloists.

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK CITY
JUL 1955

Mennini Opera Premiere At Tanglewood

LENOX, MASS.—"The Rope", a one-act opera by Louis Mennini based on the Eugene O'Neill play of the same name, will receive its premiere at the Berkshire Music Festival this summer. Stemming from the composer's study of opera technique at the Berkshire Festival two years ago, the work will be offered on a twin-bill with Mozart's unfinished opera, "Zaide", on Aug. 8 and 9.

Sentinal (e)
ANSONIA, Conn.
Ind. Republican
Circ. 12,663

JUN 15 1955

GETS SCHOLARSHIP

MERRILL DEBSKI

Merrill Debski, son of Mr. and Mrs. Casimir Debski of 279 North Main Street, has been awarded a full tuition scholarship of $150 at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Mass., on the basis of his proficiency in trumpet playing as demonstrated in an audition with Roger Voisin, principal trumpeter of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The school, held from July 4 to August 14, is under the leadership of Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with a distinguished faculty including principals of the Boston orchestra. The purpose of the Berkshire Music Center is to provide for the advanced study of music through active participation in orchestral, chamber, music, choral and operatic performances.

While at Tanglewood, Mr. Debski will perform in the student orchestra under the baton of Leonard Bernstein and study trumpet privately with his present teacher, Armando Ghitalla.

Besides these activities Mr. Debski will also play with the New Haven Symphony Orchestra in its series of pop concerts at the Yale Bowl.

88

WINSTON SALEM, N.C.
TWIN CITY SENTINEL
Circ. D. 34,377

JUL 25 1955

Hart Plans To Attend Institute

James M. Hart, minister of music at First Presbyterian Church, will begin a "musical" vacation this week.

He and Mrs. Hart will leave Thursday morning for New England. They will stop at the Berkshire Festival at Lenox, Mass., to hear the Boston Symphony with Rudolph Serkin as pianist. Leontyne Price, young American Negro soprano, will sing.

WASHINGTON, D. C.
NEWS
Circ. D. 138,778

JUL 30 1955

Radio Fill-In:

TODAY'S

3:00 WRC—Direct from Mecca; first radio description of the pilgrimage.

8:05 WGMS — Opera House: Complete performance of "Die Fledermaus"; soloists and chorus of the Vienna State Opera; Vienna Philharmonic conducted by Clemens Krauss.

10:00 WWDC—Treasury Agent: "The Case of the Untrustworthy Telephone."

SUNDAY'S

2:30 WTOP—World Music Festivals: Sir Thomas Beecham heard in excerpts of final concert at Bergen (Norway) Music Festival; includes Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. Five.

3:00 WRC—Monitor: Backstage at Berkshire Music Festival.

6:05 WGMS — Gilbert & Sullivan: H. M. S. Pinafore, Part Three.

9:45 WWDC — Harry Wismer: Sportscaster interviews Vice President Nixon.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD JOURNAL
Circ. D. 129,251

JUL 19 1955

TALKING IT OVER

Young Musicians, Known Here, Have Full Summer Schedule

By EMMA VAN WORMER

Professional musicians, violinists and pianists, with wide acquaintance in the Syracuse Metropolitan area, have several summer engagements. Among them are Violinists Helen Kwalwasser and James D. Yannatos.

Kwalwasser

Yannatos

Cornell University Summer Session announces a series of three concerts, free to the public, on Thursday nights at 8:15 o'clock. The first will be given by Helen Kwalwasser with Harvey Wedeen at the piano. Miss Kwalwasser, Syracuse-born, and daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Jacob Kwalwasser, music-educators, now in New York City, has appeared in Cornell Campus halls on various occasions, first as a child prodigy, later as soloist in her late teens, then as recitalist and soloist in Bailey Hall Series. Her program July 21 will be in the Memorial Room, Willard Straight Hall. Recently, Miss Kwalwasser was soloist with the American Chamber Orchestra in a first performance, in this country, of the recently discovered "Melk" Concerto by Haydn. That concert was in New York City's Town Hall.

Among three young conducting students under Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein in "Tanglewood" Berkshire Music Center and summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is James D. Yannatos, concertmaster of the San Antonio, Texas Orchestra. Yannatos came from New York City several years ago to study composition in Syracuse University School of Music with Ernst Bacon, composer-in-residence. He played in several concerts in Crouse College including one featuring his own compositions. Mrs. William Cornell Blanding, Syracuse music patron and long identified with Syracuse Morning Musicals, Inc., gave him the violin, on which she had played some years previous.

Mrs. Theodore M. Hancock (Eleanor Stone), who passed a week-end in "Tanglewood," accompanying Florence Kopleff, Robert Shaw Chorale contralto, now on her way to the Pacific coast to visit and fill engagements, contacted Yannatos in the Berkshires. On San Antonio, he does some conducting of childrens' concerts. Last summer, he studied conducting in Aspen, Col. with Darius Milhaud; next year he hopes to go to Italy to study (with a scholarship in mind). Florence Kopleff gave her first New York Town Hall recital last year. With the Robert Shaw Chorale, she sang solos in the Bach B Minor Mass. In the west she will sing the role of the Sorceress in "Dido and Aeneas." In San Diego she will do the contralto parts in the Bach St. Matthew Passion with the Shaw singers. Robert Shaw, among other programs, is conducting the Berlioz Requiem on the coast.

There will be a reception in the Alumnae Lounge of the Women's Building Thursday night, following the concert to be given by Violinist Carroll Glenn and Pianist Eugene List. On Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock in Crouse College auditorium, a Forum recital will be presented by these two artists. They will discuss their careers and various aspects of music as a whole and will do some performing. There also will be a question-answer period with opportunity for those who hear Thursday night's program to participate. In private life the artists are Mr. and Mrs. List. Their summer home is East Dorset, Vt.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Carlton (Marjorie Almy Carlton) the latter a member of Civic Morning Musicals, Inc., board, have been near Sturgeon Lake, Dunsford, Canada, for a week for meetings of the International Association of Master Penmen of which Mr. Carlton is a member. There will be a Pop Concert tomorrow night in Chautauqua, Walter Hendl conducting the chautauqua Symphony with Cecil Stewart leading the Chautauqua Symphony Choir. The program will be a Rodgers & Hammerstein Night with excerpts from "Carousel", "Allegro", "State Fair" and "Oklahoma".

Sister George Maria, CSJ, of

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 52,205

JUL 26 1955

Cellist Cancels Tanglewood Dates

Because of a shoulder ailment cellist Gregor Piatigorsky has canceled engagements at three concerts at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

He was to have appeared Sunday afternoon and Aug. 10 and 12, but yesterday wired Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, he would be unable to leave his California home.

Mr. Munch announced today the three programs have been revised. Instead of the Concerto for Violin and Cello Mr. Piatigorsky was scheduled to play with Isaac Stern at the Symphony's all-Brahms program Sunday afternoon, Mr. Stern will perform Brahms' Concerto for Violin D, Op. 77.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
TIMES-HERALD
Circ. D. 10,258

JUL 22 1955

Orchestra Draws 400 Students to Berkshire Center

LENOX, Mass. — With 38 states and 18 foreign countries represented in its enrollment of 405 music students, the 13th session of the Berkshire Music Center is now in operation at Tanglewood. The summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival is the only school in the world sponsored by a major symphony orchestra.

The music center was established in 1940 by the Boston Symphony to provide a campus where young musicians could add to their professional training and artistic experience under the guidance of eminent musicians and teachers. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is director of the center.

Opera students, students of composition and pianists as well as those interested in stringed instruments and woodwinds and tympani, are enrolled at the school.

Study Group Is Newer

A Tanglewood Study Group (Department V) was set up four years ago to offer to students of music, professional or amateur, an opportunity to spend their vacations in extensive chamber orchestra reading, and practice also in early compositions for unusual ensemble. This year again under the chairmanship of Ingolf Dahl, associate professor of music at the University of Southern California, this department has enrolled 103 students, of whom 41 will stay for the six-week session, 22 are studying for four weeks, and 40 have elected a two-week study period.

Occupations of students at the center are many and varied, ranging from priest, armed services officers, macaroni manufacturer, salesman, housewives, secretaries, medical doctors, educators. Their age range is from 18 to 71. Since there is national competition for the scholarship grants towards tuition (the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund), the students are highly talented. These scholarships are awarded annually to those who play in the orchestra and chamber groups to conductors and composers, to those who are active in the choral and opera departments.

The majority of Tanglewood's students live at the Lenox Preparatory School and at Wheatleigh, a nearby estate owned by the Boston Symphony. For recreation they swim and boat in Stockbridge Bowl (Lake Mah-Kee-Nac), the lake whose shoreline touches the Tanglewood estate.

Norfolk, Va., Ledger-Dispatch & Portsmouth Star
D.

JUL 18 1955

Tonight's Tops in Radio Programs

TONIGHT

NIGHT MUSIC (8, WRVC-FM), high fedility recordings—Wagner; Die Meistersinger"—Overture; Brahms: Concerto No. 2.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL (8:15, WAVY), Thor Johnson conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Handel's Concerto Grosso No. 12 and Haydn's Symphonie Concertante.

MERRILL

VOICE (8:30, WGH), baritone Robert Merrill is guest soloist on program including "Mountain Greenery," "Stouthearted Men" and "Trees."

PARLEY AT THE SUMMIT (10:05, WTAR), special broadcast with top CBS newsmen focuses attention on the Big Four conference at Geneva.

TUESDAY

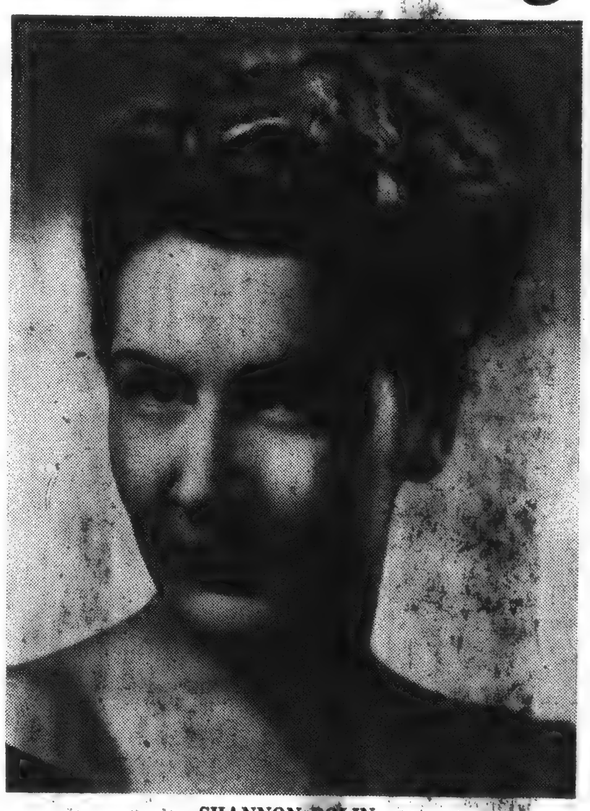
MAKE UP YOUR MIND (11:30 a. m., WTAR), Enid Haupt, editor of Seventeen magazine, discusses the teen-ager's desire for privacy.

ARMED FORCES HIT PARADE (11:45 a. m., WGH), USS Cape May County is featured.

BASEBALL (1:55 p. m., WLOW), Baltimore vs. Detroit.

NEWARK, N. J.
NEWS
Circ. D. 268,862 - S. 288,382

JUL 31 1955



SHANNON BOLIN

Stephen Douglass and Shannon Bolin, currently featured in the Broadway production of "Damn Yankees," will be featured guests on Kathy Godfrey's show this afternoon at 2:05 on WCBS.

Because of the large number of letters received from her listeners Miss Godfrey will repeat her singing rendition of "My Button Don't Bell, Bump," with Norman Leyden and his orchestra supplying the accompaniment.

* * *

Isaac Stern, American violinist, will be soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under direction of Charles Munch in the broadcast from the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood tomorrow night over WRCA at 8:15. The entire 45-minute program will be devoted to Beethoven's Concerto in D for violin and orchestra. The three movements of the work are marked: Allegro Ma Non Troppo Larghetto and Finale Rondo.

* * *

A radio milestone will be reached tonight when WABC's America Town Meeting of the Air will be heard from its 200th different point of origination. The broadcast, 8 to 9, will emanate from Lafayette College, Easton Pa.

The subject to be discussed at the residential seminar on world affairs will be "Outlook for Our China Policy." Participating in the panel discussion will be a spokesman for Nationalist China a representative of the U.S. State Department and other experts on the Far East. Shepherd L. Witman, director of Residential Seminars on World Affairs, will be the moderator.

It's doleful reading that Pittsfield's accident rate for the first six months of this year has risen a third over the same period of last year, and comparing the same two periods, fatal accidents increased from one to nine . . . At this writing, the Weather Bureau tells us that Connie isn't going to blow Tanglewood's parade into Stockbridge Bowl. The blowing will be confined strictly to "Rhapsody in Blue" . . .

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD JOURNAL
Circ. D. 130,981
JUL 27 1955

Personally Speaking

MR. AND MRS. FRANK C. LOVE, 226 Brattle Rd., will have as their guests this week end Mr. and Mrs. Robert Halter and Mrs. Ernest Love of Albany, who are coming to attend the wedding of Miss Linnea Love and Richard Charles Butler in Oneida on Sunday.

* * *

Mrs. Charles Hitchcock, 106 Sedgwick Dr., and Miss Eleanor Hughes, 1445 S. Salina St., have gone to the Berkshire Mountains in Massachusetts to attend the Music Festival at Tanglewood.

* * *

evening from a fishing trip to Black Lake.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Mc Carthy, 203 Hancock Dr., are the parents of a son, James O'Neill McCarthy, born in Memorial Hospital. Mrs. Mc

SPOKANE, WASH.
CHRONICLE
Circ. D. 75,684
JUL 22 1955

Long-Haired Music Lover Converted to Jazz 'Hound'

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor

If you feel an inferiority complex when people discusss long-hair music in hushed voices, try bringing the discussion around to jazz, advises Stephanie Barber, a young woman who has succeeded in converting a culture-conscious husband into a rabid jazz enthusiast.

Stephanie is a sultry blonde who worked as a fashion publicist in New York, married her boss, a good-looking city dweller named Phil Barber, and moved him to an old estate in the Berkshires which they converted into an establishment named Music Inn.

Stephanie, born and bred in New York city, took to country life like a kitten to cream, worked furiously at turning a group of ancient farm buildings into a modern inn, then set about the business of running it as a profitable enterprise while her husband Phil carried on his business in New York.

Atmosphere Highbrow

Since the inn is situated near Lenox, Mass., home of the famous annual Berkshire music festival, Stephanie couldn't escape the atmosphere of highbrow music. She personally preferred jazz. Neighbors now remark thoughtfully that one really never should underestimate the power of a woman, for this year Phil and Stephanie are opening their music barn where, deep in the longhair music country, they are offering a program of folk and jazz concerts, with appearances by such well-known downbeat artists as Count Basie, Richard Dyer-Bennet and Dizzy Gilepsie.

Stephanie has been building up to this point for some time, having started an annual folk and jazz round table at the inn six years ago, and revelling in the arguments and performances of the jazz musicians who attend it.

Phil, though a little dazed by the changes wrought in his life by his wife, is filled with nothing but admiration for her. Having taught drama at Yale for six years, he likes having a country theater of his own.

Artists Attracted

He also likes having an innkeeping wife, who can attract the country's top jazz artists to their little establishment. He likes best, perhaps, the fact that she is able to show a profit on her enterprises, and that despite her talent for hard work and business acumen she continues to look like a glamour girl.

The Barber property in the Berkshires covers 100 acres and includes two lakes. The two Barber sons, Willson and Ben, both teen-agers, have grown husky and healthy on country air, fresh vegetables—and jazz.

Says Phil: "When you meet a city girl who looks like she belongs strictly in a Stork Club atmosphere, look out. She may have you milking cows before you know what's happening."

ROANOKE, VA.
TIMES
Circ. D. 43,917 - S. 79,504
JUL 18 1955

Radio-TV Hilites

Radio

HOWARD MILLER, 11:45 a.m., WDBJ—One of the midwest's most dynamic radio personalities makes his bow as a network star on a new Monday through Friday series. The program will present newest and most interesting recordings in the popular music field and interview's with personalities. Today's guest is Julius LaRosa.

BASEBALL, 1:55, p.m. WRIS—The game for today is Washington at Kansas City.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, 8:15 p.m., WSLS — The American conductor Thor Johnson will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra. He has just returned from a highly successful concert tour of the Orient.

TELEPHONE HOUR, 9 p.m., WSLS—Another American artist will be added to the international roster of virtuoso musicians appearing regularly on the show when the brilliant violinist, Isaac Stern, makes his first appearance.

ROSEMARY CLOONEY, 9 p.m., WDBJ—Sings "Tweedle Dee," "The Unbirthday Song," "Cabaret" and "A Touch of the Blues" on her program.

PARLEY AT SUMMIT, 10:05 p.m., WDBJ—The historic Big Four Conference in Geneva, Switzerland, will be covered in a series of five broadcasts consisting of news summaries and interviews with key figures in the conferences.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD JOURNAL
Circ. D. 130,981
JUL 28 1955

TALKING IT OVER

Berkshires Offer Choice of Jazz or Bach and Brahms

By EMMA VAN WORMER

From the Berkshire Music Barn in Lenox, Mass., in a setting not far from beautiful "Tanglewood," summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, comes word of a contrasting musical weekend. It's two of the "Three B's" in one hall and modern scores in the other.

While Concert Violinist Isaac Stern, internationally known is playing Brahms with the Orchestra, under the baton of Guest Maestro Pierre Monteux in the Great Shed in "Tanglewood," or the all-Beethoven symphonic program is led by Director Charles Munch, with Pianist Rudolf Serkin, soloist, British and American folk songs and modern music (described as subtle) will be offered in the Berkshire Barn.

The Beethoven program is Saturday night; the all-Brahms concert is Sunday afternoon. The Barn concerts are Saturday afternoon and Sunday night. Richard Dyer-Bennett is the artist in The Barn on July 30, appearing in the third of a series reviewing the whole sweep of Scottish, Irish, English and American folk songs with a new group of songs not previously done in The Barn. The Teddy Charles Quartet, known for having introduced some of the elements of post-impressionistic music into jazz, is headed by Charles.

The leader had some formal musical education in Juilliard, but his most significant training, he says, came from his association with Pianist-Composer Hall Overton. Overton and Charles gave a series of concerts in the Museum of Modern Art, New York City. In the Charles Quartet are Charles Mingus, who is among top stringed bass players in the realm of jazz; Rudy Nichols, drums, and J. R. Montrose, tenor sax, known also as a composer. Hall Overton's newest composition, commissioned by the Boston Symphony, is to be played this year in Tanglewood."

Plans for a benefit sale will be discussed tonight in the Syracuse Conservatory of Music when members of the board of directors of the Syracuse Philharmonic Society meet. Mrs. Henry Travis is president of the society which sponsored a June performance of "La Boheme", in Central High School . . . Miss Jane H. Todd, vice chairman of the Republican State Committee and president, New York State Federation Women's Republican Clubs is expected to come to the State Fair on Women's Recognition Day when several women who worked with the Women's Committee in earlier years will be honored. Also expected is Miss Angela R. Parisi, Democratic Federation head.

The two Federations of major political women's clubs—Republican and Democratic—are seeing to it that there is recognition for the women who did the "spade work" through the years. Among them: Mrs. Edward S. McGuire of Syracuse, Miss Ursula Hornbrook of Ogdensburg, Mrs. Eliza Keats Young of Milton, and Mrs. Walter Scott McNab of Schenectady, with special honors for Mrs. Martha H. Eddy of Ithaca, for a decade or so director of women's activities. Mrs. Eddy has been acting as counselor this summer to Mrs. Gleason White of Schenectady, new women's activities director at the Fair. Mrs. Eddy and Mrs. McNab are sisters.

ZANESVILLE, OHIO
SIGNAL
Circ. D. 12,543
JUL 25 1955

What's on the Air

By NAOMI

Television

FAMILIES OF Zanesville communities will have an opportunity tonight at 7:30 o'clock on WHIZ-TV to see the award winning TV film used as an entry by the Ohio Fuel Gas company. The award was made recently by the Public Utilities Advertising association, at which time some 2,000 entries were judged. Utilities from Canada, Hawaii and the 48 states participated.

* * *

BIG TOWN BRINGS a factual news drama tonight on WHIZ-TV at 8 o'clock. When a homicide squad honor cop suddenly becomes close-mouthed about the details of a murder crime, and the victim turns out to be the policeman's own sister, Steve Wilson suspects the reason for the news blackout, and launches his own hunt for the murderer in "Shield of a Killer."

* * *

GENE POIRIER of Niagara Falls and Danny Jo Perez of New York City will feature the boxing show at St. Nick's Arena tonight at 9 o'clock. Poirier and Perez are both sharp punchers and crowd pleasers; both are established favorites at St. Nick's where they turned in their best performances. Perez has had two fights this year. He drew with Orlanda Zulueta on January 31st and lost a decision to Frankie Ryff on March 11th. Both

Radio

FIBBER McGEE AND MOLLY with Jim and Marian Jordan starring as the cheerful residents of 79 Wistful Vista can be heard on WHIZ Radio at 11:45 a. m. and 10 p. m. You'll want to follow the episodes in the lives of this loveable couple.

* * *

PRESENTING CLAUDE RAINS . . . the distinguished actor in a series of dramatic - narrative stories to be heard on WHIZ Radio Monday through Friday at 3:30 p. m.

* * *

THIS WEEK STELLA DALLAS heard Monday through Friday on WHIZ at 4:15, tries to persuade her daughter, Laurel, and her son-in-law, Dick Grosvenor not to get a divorce. Will she be successful? Why don't you listen for the outcome.

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the broadcast from the BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL at Tanglewood tonight at 8:15 o'clock. The entire program will be devoted to Beethoven's "Symphony No. 7 in A Major." Beethoven himself conducted its world premier on December 8, 1913. This season's concerts at the great Berkshire Festival are stressing the music of Beethoven. Many of his memorable works will be heard during the festival and re-broadcast in this series.

PROMENADE
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL 1955

talk talk talk . . .

by Ralph Pomeroy

. . . about jazz in the Berkshires. The Berkshire Music Barn down the road a piece from the Boston Symphony's famed summer home at Tanglewood. Purpose? To display all kinds of jazz and folk music. Among musicians already lined up are Art Farmer, Dizzy Gillespie, Richard Dyer-Bennet and Count Basie. . .the restoration of City Hall's 1812 look due to be finished next year. Statistics: ninety workmen, 3,000 tons of Alabama limestone, ten of the last 18 members of the Stone Carvers Union in New York—important face lifting. . .scrabble in other languages like Latin and French . .the first published photograph taken by Luis Azarrogas' astonishing new camera: a view of the liner United States showing six miles of Manhattan skyline and reaching across sixteen columns in the Herald Tribune where it appeared. . . the New School's "Course in Breathing As An Air Conditioner, Especially in Hot Weather" held twice a week. . .plans for a city center covering seventy eight acres alongside the Grand Concourse and atop the main lines of the New York Central and New Haven Railroads in the south Bronx from East 138th to East 161st Streets. . .gay yellow discs being tested as safety markers on subway platforms, replacing the continuous yellow line of yore. . .Einstein's disarming reply to the endless requests that he define relativity:

"I was once walking in the country on a hot day with a blind friend and I said I could do with a drink of milk.

"'Milk'? said my friend. 'Drink I know; but what is milk?'

"'A white liquid,' I replied.

"'Liquid I know,' said the blind man, 'but what is white?'

"'The color of a swan's feathers.'

"'Feathers I know, What is a swan?'

"'A bird with a crooked neck.'

"'Neck I know—but what is crooked?'

"I took his arm and straightened it. 'That's straight,' I said; "Then I bent it at the elbow. (Continued on page 33)

89

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD JOURNAL
Circ. D. 130,981
JUL 27 1955

Personally Speaking

MR. AND MRS. FRANK C. LOVE, 226 Brattle Rd., will have as their guests this week end Mr. and Mrs. Robert Halter and Mrs. Ernest Love of Albany, who are coming to attend the wedding of Miss Linnea Love and Richard Charles Butler in Oneida on Sunday.

* * *

Mrs. Charles Hitchcock, 106 Sedgwick Dr., and Miss Eleanor Hughes, 1445 S. Salina St., have gone to the Berkshire Mountains in Massachusetts to attend the Music Festival at Tanglewood.

evening from a fishing trip to Black Lake.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. William F. McCarthy, 203 Hancock Dr., are the parents of a son, James O'Neill McCarthy, born in Memorial Hospital [illegible]

SPOKANE, WASH.
CHRONICLE
Circ. D. 75,684
JUL 22 1955

Long-Haired Music Lover Converted to Jazz 'Hound'

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor

If you feel an inferiority complex when people discusss long-hair music in hushed voices, try bringing the discussion around to jazz, advises Stephanie Barber, a young woman who has succeeded in converting a culture-conscious husband into a rabid jazz enthusiast.

Stephanie is a sultry blonde who worked as a fashion publicist in New York, married her boss, a good-looking city dweller named Phil Barber, and moved him to an old estate in the Berkshires which they converted into an establishment named Music Inn.

Stephanie, born and bred in New York city, took to country life like a kitten to cream, worked furiously at turning a group of ancient farm buildings into a modern inn, then set about the business of running it as a profitable enterprise while her husband Phil carried on his business in New York.

Atmosphere Highbrow

Since the inn is situated near Lenox, Mass., home of the famous annual Berkshire music festival, Stephanie couldn't escape the atmosphere of highbrow music. She personally preferred jazz. Neighbors now remark thoughtfully that one really never should underestimate the power of a woman, for this year Phil and Stephanie are opening their music barn where, deep in the longhair music country, they are offering a program of folk and jazz concerts, with appearances by such well-known downbeat artists as Count Basie, Richard Dyer-Bennet and Dizzy Gillepsie.

Stephanie has been building up to this point for some time, having started an annual folk and jazz round table at the inn six years ago, and revelling in the arguments and performances of the jazz musicians who attend it.

Phil, though a little dazed by the changes wrought in his life by his wife, is filled with nothing but admiration for her. Having taught drama at Yale for six years, he likes having a country theater of his own.

Artists Attracted

He also likes having an innkeeping wife, who can attract the country's top jazz artists to their little establishment. He likes best, perhaps, the fact that she is able to show a profit on her enterprises, and that despite her talent for hard work and business acumen she continues to look like a glamour girl.

The Barber property in the Berkshires covers 100 acres and includes two lakes. The two Barber sons, Willson and Ben, both teen-agers, have grown husky and healthy on country air, fresh vegetables—and jazz.

Says Phil: "When you meet a city girl who looks like she belongs strictly in a Stork Club atmosphere, look out. She may have you milking cows before you know what's happening."

ROANOKE, VA.
TIMES
Circ. D. 43,917 - S. 79,504
JUL 18 1955

Radio-TV Hilites

Radio

HOWARD MILLER, 11:45 a.m., WDBJ—One of the midwest's most dynamic radio personalities makes his bow as a network star on a new Monday through Friday series. The program will present newest and most interesting recordings in the popular music field and interview's with personalities. Today's guest is Julius LaRosa.

BASEBALL, 1:55, p.m. WRIS—The game for today is Washington at Kansas City.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, 8:15 p.m., WSLS — The American conductor Thor Johnson will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra. He has just returned from a highly successful concert tour of the Orient.

TELEPHONE HOUR, 9 p.m., WSLS—Another American artist will be added to the international roster of virtuoso musicians appearing regularly on the show when the brilliant violinist, Isaac Stern, makes his first appearance.

ROSEMARY CLOONEY, 9 p.m., WDBJ—Sings "Tweedle Dee," "The Unbirthday Song," "Cabaret" and "A Touch of the Blues" on her program.

PARLEY AT SUMMIT, 10:05 p.m., WDBJ—The historic Big Four Conference in Geneva, Switzerland, will be covered in a series of five broadcasts consisting of news summaries and interviews with key figures in the conferences.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD JOURNAL
Circ. D. 130,981
JUL 28 1955

TALKING IT OVER

Berkshires Offer Choice of Jazz or Bach and Brahms

By EMMA VAN WORMER

From the Berkshire Music Barn in Lenox, Mass., in a setting not far from beautiful "Tanglewood," summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, comes word of a contrasting musical weekend. It's two of the "Three B's" in one hall and modern scores in the other.

While Concert Violinist Isaac Stern, internationally known is playing Brahms with the Orchestra, under the baton of Guest Maestro Pierre Monteux in the Great Shed in "Tanglewood," or the all-Beethoven symphonic program is led by Director Charles Munch, with Pianist Rudolf Serkin, soloist, British and American folk songs and modern music (described as subtle) will be offered in the Berkshire [illegible]

The Beethoven [illegible] Saturday night, the all-Brahms concert is Sunday afternoon. The Barn concerts are Saturday afternoon and Sunday night. Richard Dyer-Bennett is the artist in The Barn on July 31, appearing in the third of a series reviewing the whole sweep of Scottish, Irish, English and American folk songs with a new group of songs not previously done in The Barn. The Teddy Charles Quartet, known for having introduced some of the elements of post-impressionistic music into jazz, is headed by Charles. The leader had some formal musical education in Juilliard, but his most significant training, he says, came from his association with Pianist-Composer Hall Overton. Overton and Charles gave a series of concerts in the Museum of Modern Art, New York City. In the Charles Quartet are Charles Mingus, who is among top stringed bass players in the realm of jazz; Rudy Nichols, drums, and J. R. Montrose, tenor sax, known also as a composer. Hall Overton's newest composition, commissioned by the Boston Symphony, is to be played this year in Tanglewood."

Plans for a benefit sale will be discussed tonight in the Syracuse Conservatory of Music when members of the board of directors of the Syracuse Philharmonic Society meet. Mrs. Henry Travis is president of the society which sponsored a June performance of "La Boheme", in Central High School . . . Miss Jane H. Todd, vice chairman of the Republican State Committee and president, New York State Federation Women's Republican Clubs is expected to come to the State Fair on Women's Recognition Day when several women who worked with the Women's Committee in earlier years will be honored. Also expected is Miss Angela R. Parisi, Democratic Federation head.

The two Federations of major political women's clubs—Republican and Democratic—are seeing to it that there is recognition for the women who did the "spade work" through the years. Among them: Mrs. Edward S. McGuire of Syracuse, Miss Ursula Hornbrook of Ogdensburg, Mrs. Eliza Keats Young of Milton, and Mrs. Walter Scott McNab of Schenectady, with special honors for Mrs. Martha H. Eddy of Ithaca, for a decade or so director of women's activities. Mrs. Eddy has been acting as counselor this summer to Mrs. Gleason White of Schenectady, new women's activities director at the Fair. Mrs. Eddy and Mrs. McNab are sisters.

[illegible]
JUL

J454

talk talk talk . . .

by Ralph Pomeroy

• • • about jazz in the Berkshires. The Berkshire Music Barn down the road a piece from the Boston Symphony's famed summer home at Tanglewood. Purpose? To display all kinds of jazz and folk music. Among musicians already lined up are Art Farmer, Dizzy Gillespie, Richard Dyer-Bennet and Count Basie. . .the restoration of City Hall's 1812 look due to be finished next year. Statistics: ninety workmen, 3,000 tons of Alabama limestone, ten of the last 18 members of the Stone Carvers Union in New Yor[illegible]portant face lifting. . .scrabble in other languages like [illegible]nd French . .the first published photograph taken by [illegible] Azarrogas' astonishing new camera: a view of the line United States showing six miles of Manhattan skyline and reaching across sixteen columns in the Herald Tribu[illegible]ppeared. . . the New School's "Course in Bre[illegible] Conditioner, Especially in Hot Weather" held t[illegible]eek. [illegible]lans for a city center covering seventy eight a[illegible] the Grand Concourse and atop the main lines of [illegible] New [illegible] Central and New Haven Railroads in the [illegible] Bronx from East 138th to East 161st Streets. . .gay [illegible] dies being tested as safety markers on subway platforms, [illegible]cing the continuous yellow line of yore. . .Einstein's disa[illegible]ing reply to the endless requests that he define relativity:

"I was once walking in the country on a h[illegible] day with a blind friend and I said I could do with a drink of milk.

" 'Milk'? said my friend. 'Drink I [illegible] but what is milk?'

" 'A white liquid,' I replied.

" 'Liquid I know,' said the blind man, 'but what is w[illegible]'

" 'The color of a swan's feathers.'

" 'Feathers I know, What is a swan[illegible]'

" 'A bird with a crooked neck.'

" 'Neck I know—but what is crook[illegible]'

"I took his arm and straightened [illegible] 'That's straight,' I said; "Then I bent it at the elbow. (Continued on page 33)

ZANESVILLE, OHIO
SIGNAL
Circ. D. 12,543
JUL 25 1955

What's on the Air

By NAOMI

Television

FAMILIES OF Zanesville communities will have an opportunity tonight at 7:30 o'clock on WHIZ-TV to see the award winning TV film used as an entry by the Ohio Fuel Gas company. The award was made recently by the Public Utilities Advertising association, at which time some 2,000 entries were judged. Utilities from Canada, Hawaii and the 48 states participated.

* * *

BIG TOWN BRINGS a factual news drama tonight on WHIZ-TV at 8 o'clock. When a homicide squad honor cop suddenly becomes close-mouthed about the details of a murder crime, and the victim turns out to be the policeman's own sister, Steve Wilson suspects the reason for the news blackout, and launches his own hunt for the murderer in "Shield of a Killer."

* * *

GENE POIRIER of Niagara Falls and Danny Jo Perez of New York City will feature the boxing show at St. Nick's Arena tonight at 9 o'clock. Poirier and Perez are both sharp punchers and crowd pleasers; both are established favorites at St. Nick's where they turned in their best performances. Perez has had two fights this year. He drew with Orlanda Zulueta on January 31st and lost a decision to Frankie Ryff on March 11th. Both

Radio

FIBBER McGEE AND MOLLY with Jim and Marian Jordan starring as the cheerful residents of 79 Wistful Vista can be heard on WHIZ Radio at 11:45 a. m. and 10 p. m. You'll want to follow the episodes in the lives of this loveable couple.

* * *

PRESENTING CLAUDE RAINS . . . the distinguished actor in a series of dramatic - narrative stories to be heard on WHIZ Radio Monday through Friday at 3:30 p. m.

* * *

THIS WEEK STELLA DALLAS heard Monday through Friday on WHIZ at 4:15, tries to persuade her daughter, Laurel, and her son-in-law, Dick Grosvenor not to get a divorce. Will she be successful? Why don't you listen for the outcome.

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the broadcast from the BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL at Tanglewood tonight at 8:15 o'clock. The entire program will be devoted to Beethoven's "Symphony No. 7 in A Major." Beethoven himself conducted its world premier on December 8, 1913. This season's concerts at the great Berkshire Festival are stressing the music of Beethoven. Many of his memorable works will be heard during the festival and re-broadcast in this series.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD JOURNAL
Circ. D. 130,981
JUL 27 1955

TALKING IT OVER

Eminent German Composer Is In 'Tanglewood' for Opera

By EMMA VAN WORMER

World premiere opera performances in the Berkshire Music Center in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., attract attention of the free world of music. Included is "The Rope," a one-act work by Louis Mennini, commissioned by the Center Opera depart...t.

The distinguished German composer Boris Blacher, visiting in the United States for the first time, is guest teacher of composition in the Music Center. The "Tanglewood" premiere of his opera, "Romeo and Juliet," is set for next Monday night in the Theater-Concert Hall, the composer conducting. On the same program will be short operas by Milhaud and Martinu and choral music. In the cast will be Farr as Juliet, remembered by Syracuse music lovers for her recital during the 1953 biennial convention of the New York State Music Clubs convention in Hotel Syracuse. Miss Farr is a National Auditions winner. Also from New York is Regina Sarfaty as The Nurse. For the Syracuse convention, Mrs. Manfred W. Gerstley of Skaneateles was chairman. Mrs. Gerstley returned from Europe recently.

Boris Blacher

The role of Romeo will be sung by Harold Johnson of Chicago. Lynn Detwiler of Altoona, Pa., will be Tybalt; Peyton Higgison of Mobile, Ala., is cast as Capulet; Gwendolyn Belle of St. Louis as Lady Capulet and Robert Kearns of Utica, Mich., as Benvolio.

"The Rope," to be sung Aug. 8, is based on Eugene O'Neill's one-act play of that title. Composer Mennini, member of Eastman School of Music faculty, Rochester, passed the summer of 1953 in "Tanglewood" on commission by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, in preparation for his work. A native of Erie, Pa., Mennini studied composition in Eastman under Dr. Howard Hanson and Bernard Rogers. He was graduated in 1947 with degrees of Bachelor and Master of Music.

* * *

G.O.P. Women Will Assist Sept. 3 at N. Y. State Fair

Mrs. Marion Harrison Greene, president of the Onondaga County Women's Republican Club, announces these hostesses to serve Sept. 3 from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. in the Women's Building at the State Fair:

Mrs. Donald H. Mead, wife of the mayor; Mrs. Melanie Kreuzer, president of the Syracuse Common Council; Mrs. Norma W. Stone, vice chairman, Onondaga County GOP Committee; Mrs. George L. Traister, wife of the County Chairman; Mrs. William J. McNerney, Mrs. Carmen Regitano, Mrs. Frank Terry, recording secretary, New York State Federation of Women's Republican Clubs; Mrs. Ethel Carpenter Benz, Mrs. Helen Fulsom and Mrs. Jay A. Happich.

There will be entertainment, games for adults and children, with prizes, and possibly square dancing at the annual picnic of the County Women's Republican Club in Camp Brockway Aug. 10, according to Mrs. Greene. This will be a family event with candidates on the November ticket expected to attend.

Word comes to Syracuse of the passing of Mr. Paul H. Stoes, long active in concert artists management. Mr. Stoes was manager for Fritz Kreisler, the world famous violinist, who played here on several occasions, including his last concert tour, and for the Original Don Cossacks under Serge Jeroff, on arrival from Europe years ago . . . Doris Doree, who gave a fine Syracuse performance of Santuzza in Mascagni's opera "Cavalleria Rusticana," Nicholas Rescigno conducting several seasons ago, will stage and direct "The Telephone" by Gian-Carlo Menotti and "The Door", by Irving Mopper, one act operas, sung in English, during the '55-56 season in the United States and Canada.

Gus Manos Photo

NAOMI FARR, right, and Gwendolyn Belle, as Juliet and Lady Capulet, respectively, in the premiere of "Romeo and Juliet" in "Tanglewood," Aug. 1.

Organist E. Power Biggs, one of the first American artists to play in Iceland, introduced a number of organ works by American composers . . . Among artists receiving honorary degrees: Charles Munch, Boston Symphony director, that of Doctorate in Music from Boston University; Adele Addison, singer, master of arts from the American International College in Springfield, Mass.; Erica Morini, violinist, a Doctorate in Music from Smith College . . . Rudolph Bing, Metropolitan Opera director, is conducting auditions in France, Italy, Austria and Germany during his three months stay in Europe.

Programs Listed For Opera Scenes, Composers' Forum

The revised programs for the opera scenes to be presented tomorrow afternoon by Tanglewood's Dept. 4 under Boris Goldovsky, and for the composers' forum under the supervision of Dept. 3 were announced today. Both events will start at 4:30, the opera program in the theater-concert hall and the forum in the chamber music hall.

The opera program is as follows:

Manon — Massenet
Act II, Duet.
Naomi Farr, soprano.
Harold Johnson, tenor.

La Boheme — Puccini
Act III.
Thomas Cole, tenor.
Naomi Farr, soprano.
Rosemary Eves, soprano.
Malcolm Bernstein, baritone

Cosi Fan Tutte — Mozart
Duet.
Lucille Villeneuve, mezzo.
Virginia Babikian, soprano.

Aida — Verdi
Duet.
Rosemary Eves, soprano.
Gwendolyn Belle, mezzo.

Marriage of Figaro — Mozart
Cherubino Aria.
Helen Hess, soprano.
Robert Kirkham, baritone.

Un Ballo in Maschera — Verdi
Eri Tu.
McHenry Boatwright, baritone.

Carmen — Bizet
Michaela and Jose.
Darlene Miller, soprano.
Paul Berry, tenor.

MacBeth — Verdi
Sleepwalking Scene.
Mary Jane Paul, soprano.
Joan Lamberty, soprano.
Darius Robinson, bass.

The composers' forum program:

Music for Trombone and Piano.
Michael Sahl.
Arthur Kerr, trombone, Michael Sahl, piano.

String Quartet — Susan MacAdam
Elizabeth Beebe, violin; Jean Bohl, viola; Judith Heins, violin; Phyllis Rode, violoncello.

Piece for Pianoforte — Edward Miller
Robert Miller, piano.

String Quartet: Adagio — William Sydeman
Edward Filmanowicz, violin; Pandoro Hopkins, violin; Midhat Serbaji, viola; Mary Ann McClelland, violoncello.

Violin and Piano Work — Richard Maxfield
Poul Gurevich, violin; Tossi Ichiyanagi, piano.

Mass: Kyrie — Salvatore Martirano

Flagless Tanglewood

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

Lest you have not seen it, you may be interested in the following paragraph from the column of George E. Sokolsky which I read in the New York Journal-American:

"Now that Chou En-lai has gone in for good-will, it is almost complete. What we need to make it perfect is to find that Nehru's private devil, Krishna Menon, will go in for good-will and lustily sing out 'The Star-Spangled Banner,' which is more than one can hear at the Tanglewood concerts where last year there was an American flag but this year there is none. Perhaps it is characteristic of the era of good-will to put the American flag in mothballs for the duration."

L. J. LUNDE
231 George St.,
Babylon, N.Y.

Eagle 8/11

Public Events

Tonight

5:45—Fanfare for "Tanglewood on Parade," annual Berkshire Music Center benefit. Tanglewood, Lenox.

6:00—Simultaneous performances of opera, symphony orchestra, chamber music. Tanglewood.

8:15—Concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting and Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler conducting, with Bernstein as piano soloist. Tanglewood.

8:30-11:00—Teen-age dance. Girls' Club.

8:40—"The Late George Apley." Williamstown Summer Theater.

8:45—"The Tender Trap." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

8:45—"Here We Come Gathering." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

Tomorrow

All day—Second annual Berkshire County Fair. Hancock.

4:00 p.m.—Jacob's Pillow dance festival, featuring Moscelyne Larkin and Michael Maule, Myra Kinch & Co. and Priyagopal. East of Lee.

N'York THE COUNTRY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Final performances of the season by the Boston Symphony—Thursday, Aug. 11, at 6: The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" program, including offerings by the various student departments of the Berkshire Music Center, a lawn party, a concert by the Boston Symphony (conducted by Leonard Bernstein) and the Boston Pops (conducted by Arthur Fiedler, with Leonard Bernstein, piano), door prizes, and waltzing on the lawn. For the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. . . . ¶ Friday, Aug. 12, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting; no soloists. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 13, at 8:30: Pierre Monteux conducting, no soloists. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 14, at 2:30: Charles Munch directing an all-Beethoven program, with Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; and a chorus. (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.)

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 52,205
JUL 23 1955

Munch to Offer Premiere Of Barber Work Friday

Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will conduct the orchestra in two of three Berkshire Festival concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood next weekend. Pierre Monteux will take the podium for the third program.

Mr. Munch, will conduct the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" Friday night. Leontyne Price, soprano, has the principal solo role in this work. Supporting roles will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano. The Tanglewood Choir, trained by Hugh Ross, will assist.

The program also will include music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms.

Mr. Munch will give his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 festival next Saturday night. Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist, will make his first appearance in the Music Shed as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto. The program also will offer Overture to "Egmont" and Symphony No. 3.

The third Shed concert of the weekend will be Mr. Monteux's all-Brahms program Sunday afternoon. This program will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the concerto for violin and cello.

Festival patrons also will have the opportunity of hearing the Boston Symphony in a public rehearsal at 10 a. m. next Saturday. A nominal admission charge will go into the orchestra's pension fund.

Eagle 8/11

Tanglewood Parade Program

The complete program for Tanglewood on Parade which will benefit the Berkshire Music Center tonight follows:

P. M.

5:45—Fanfare (composed by Karl Kohn, assistant head, Tanglewood Study Group); welcome address by Ralph Berkowitz, Dean, Berkshire Music Center—Lawns outside Music Shed

Music Shed—Short symphonic works, Orchestra (students of Dept. I)
Theater-Concert Hall—One-Act Operas (Department IV students)
Chamber Music Hall—Chamber Music program (Dept. I students)

7:00—Lawn party, picnic supper—Concert by Chorus (Dept. II students)—Porch of Main House

8:15—Music Shed—Gala concert:

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA—Leonard Bernstein, Conductor

Suite from "On the Waterfront" — Bernstein
(First performance)
"A Lincoln Portrait" — Copland
Claude Rains, narrator

Intermission and drawing of door prizes by Boris Goldovsky.

BOSTON POPS ORCHESTRA—Arthur Fiedler, Conductor

Capriccio Espagnole — Rimsky-Korsakov
Rhapsody in Blue, for Piano and Orchestra — Gershwin
Soloist: Leonard Bernstein

Suite from "Graduation Ball" — Strauss-Dorati

11:00—Waltzing on the lawn

CAIRO, N. Y.
HERALD
Circ. W. 415
JUL 21 1955

Tanglewood Shed Concerts To Begin

The Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, move into high gear this week when the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra inaugurates the annual series of week end concerts in the Music Shed which will continue until the conclusion of the Festival on August 14, under the direction of Charles Munch. Again this year twelve concerts will be performed. A feature of the Shed series this year will be music by Beethoven.

Haberille Journal 8/11

TANGLEWOOD, AUGUST 5
By A. C. S.

Beethoven's Missa Solemnis was given its third Tanglewood performance this evening. It was first heard here under the direction of Serge Koussevitzky who had planned to repeat it during the 1951 season but died in June of that year. Leonard Bernstein presented the work then, as he did tonight, as a memorial to the great musician. A more fitting memorial would be hard to imagine for the Mass has more appeal for the musician than for the layman. It lacks the more popular aspects of tunefulness and outward emotionalism which make an appeal to public taste. The extremely personal protestations of faith remove it from the realm of both church and concert hall.

It is not unnatural to presume that Mr. Bernstein would mature in his interpretation of the Mass since 1951, but we were unprepared for the depth of understanding shown. The tempi were thoughtfully calculated; the blending of performing elements (solo quartet, chorus, orchestra) was handled with finesse; the inner compulsion of the work was keenly felt. "Impressive" is the word that comes to mind.

No quartet could have been more effective than the one tonight. Adele Addison, soprano, Eunice Alberts, contralo, David Lloyd, tenor, and Mac Morgan, bass, blended perfectly in ensemble and sang handsomely in solo passages. The chorus showed excellent training and was most responsive. The dedicated efforts of all performers under the leadership of an inspired conductor provided a memorable and moving exp[illegible]nce.

TANGLEWOOD, AUGUST 6
By A. C. S.

Charles Munch presented an unusual program of music from the operatic field this evening. The first half was devoted to Beethoven, the second to Wagner.

Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd, Malcolm Bernstein, Mac Morgan, Christina Cardillo, and Arthur Shoep joined the Festival Chorus and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a concert performance of Act II of Fidelio. The opera has its drawbacks when presented on stage and the removal of that crutch proved no help. The plot is pedestrian, the factors involved rather obscure (and mainly relegated to spoken dialogue which was omitted tonight). The infrequency of presentation in any form seems to give evidence of its lack of appeal. Despite moments of brilliance, this evening's reading was less than rewarding. Only Florestan's aria, the duet of husband and wife, and the final choruses had the stamp of authority usually associated with Tanglewood performances.

It is unusual for Wagner to rescue Beethoven but that was the case at this concert. Selections from Gotterdaemmerung (Daybreak, Siegfried's Rhine journey, the death music of Siegfried, and the Immolation Scene) eradicated all previous disappointment. Miss Harshaw, singing the taxing role of Bruenhilde, displayed vocal power and dramatic intensity which won a deserved ovation. Mr. Munch and the orchestra were enthusiastic and convincing in realizing the emotional content of the score.

Berkshire Festival 8/11

The Boston Symphony orchestra gives the final pair of concerts of its 1955 Berkshire Festival Saturday evening at 8:30 p. m. and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 p. m. in the huge Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox.

[illegible] FOR SALE [illegible]

Pierre Monteux, the conductor from 1919-1924, and a Festival guest conductor annually since 1952, is on the podium for Saturday's program, and Mr. Munch will conduct the concluding event.

If attendance figures of last summer, when 21,650 persons attended the final brace of concerts, can be considered a gauge, and if fair weather prevails for the more than 12,000 persons who plan to hear the music on the spacious Tanglewood lawns outside the music shed, again all records will be shattered for the third consecutive year in this 18th summer of symphonic music in the hills of western Massachusetts, the 16th since the Boston Symphony participated.

Saturday's program is all symphonic, with Mr. Monteux leading the 104-piece Boston Symphony in Wagner's Overture to "The Flying Dutchman;" Brahms' Symphony No. 3, in F major; Debussy's Three Nocturnes; and for the first time at Tanglewood the suite for "Der Rosenkavalier" of Richard Strauss. The Debussy nocturne "Sirenes" will have the participation of the feminine members of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Miss Iva Dee Hiatt, director of choral music at Smith college and assistant to Hugh Ross in the Tanglewood student choral department.

Concluding Concert

The concluding concert will be the sixth all-Beethoven concert on the 12-concert shed series, Mr. Munch's fifth summer program devoted to the works of that composer. It comprises the Overture "Leonore," No. 3, and the Symphony No. 9, in D minor, with Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass, as soloists, the first three being former members of the Berkshire Music Center. The enlarged chorus comprises the Festival Chorus of Tanglewood students and a chorus of 50 voices of the Springfield Symphony orchestra, trained by Hugh Ross and John Krueger, director of the Youngstown, Ohio, Philharmonic and Chorus.

Eagle 8/11

Music

Beethoven Potpourri Ends Chamber Concerts

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE SIXTH and final concert in the Wednesday evening chamber music series at Tanglewood was played in the theater-concert hall last night by five of the instrumental soloists of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and tenor David Lloyd assisting Ralph Berkowitz, pianist and dean of the Berkshire Music Center in a heterogenous program of Beethoven.

Mr. Berkowitz took part in the six offerings, each one for a different combination of instruments, and was a dependable anchor man in every instance. The program was a replacement of one originally announced in which Mr. Berkowitz would have played an evening of sonatas for 'cello and piano with Gregor Piatigorsky but in which the 'cellist was prevented from appearing by a recent slight but disabling accident.

* * *

BERKOWITZ organized last night's program by enlisting a half-dozen fellow-artists in a list of Beethoven's music which is rarely heard, consisting of chamber music for wind instruments, a 'cello and piano sonata and a short song cycle.

Beethoven was his own most severe critic. His first opus, published in 1793, was by no means the first he wrote. He discarded or at least kept hidden reams of manuscript on which he worked in his youth and even early young manhood. The trio for flute, bassoon and piano in G major which Doriot Anthony Dwyer and Sherman Walt played with Berkowitz had no opus number and was found among his posthumous effects. Yet it must not be supposed that Beethoven leaped in one bound from the status of apprentice to full-fledged master. He, himself, would have been the last to ask that. Thus much of his Bonn output has had to be catalogued in the indefinite column.

Ralph Berkowitz

* * *

THE E FLAT quintet, Opus 16, is from the early Vienna days when, evidently, wind playing was much in vogue, accounting for Beethoven's preoccupation with instruments of that category in his first eight years there. Oboist Ralph Gomberg, clarinetist Gino Cioffi, French horn James Stagliano with bassonist Sherman Walt played here with Berkowitz. This is such a pleasant and harmonically rich composition that Beethoven made arrangements of it for several other instrumental combinations. The excursions into distant tonalities are features of it which recommend it in any guise and doubly so in its original setting when so expertly played as it was last night.

* * *

'CELLIST Samuel Mayes had two opportunities on the program: The first with Cioffi and Berkowitz in the B flat trio, Opus 11, one of the early works in which Beethoven gave the clarinet the full freedom of the concert hall; and second, in the sonata for 'cello and piano, in A major, Opus 69. Beethoven's appreciation of the timbre and capacities of the instruments for which he wrote is exemplified nowhere better than in the broad slow phrases in this sonata that he gave the 'cello, and which both artists realized in complete understanding.

* * *

MR. LLOYD was called upon only for the song cycle "An die ferne Geliebte," opus 18, (written "entfernte" in my copy). Whether the lady was "far distant" or "far removed" may be a semantic question. The tenor sang the six songs, to disconnected poems of Alois Jeittleles, with much warmth. The piano part runs on from one song to the next and the first song is reechoed as a code of the sixth. By 1816, poor, frustrated Beethoven had about given up the fruitless search for a loved one and renounced what he had so often sung. Lloyd's vocalism made the musical climaxes and stressed the textual content. Berkowitz's piano was more than a little contribution to the success of this cycle as it was in so many other parts of the program.

* * *

THE EVENING was not consistent in the matter of tonal balance. Probably the best adjusted was the trio for fute, bassoon and piano where a degree of sensitiveness was apparent that was not so patent at other times. As a gratuitous bonus, an encore was offered the highly pleased audience in the form of a Beethoven march for four hands, in which Mr. Berkowitz was joined by Boris Goldovsky. It was good fun and light entertainment but out of character

Soviet Considers Visit by 'Porgy and Bess'; Operetta Suggests U. S. Tour by Ballet

NYT 8/12

Special to The New York Times.

MOSCOW, Aug. 11—The press department of the Foreign Ministry said today a proposal that "Porgy and Bess," American Negro folk opera, appear in the Soviet Union was under consideration by the Moscow Ministry of Culture.

Recently the management of the "Porgy and Bess" company that is playing in South America informed Soviet Government leaders that the company would welcome an invitation to this country. It has already played in fourteen other foreign countries.

Today's statement was the first official acknowledgment of the proposal. At the same time the press department said no proposals had been received from two other United States organizations that have expressed interest in appearing here.

One of these is the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which volunteered during the Geneva conference to present a series of concerts in the Soviet Union. The other is the Sauter-Finegan Band, which has made tentative inquiries about playing American jazz in Moscow.

A tour of the United States by the Moiseyev State Folklore Ballet, one of the best known Soviet dance troupes, was suggested by the "Porgy and Bess" management in its proposal to the Soviet Government.

but spaghetti for supper, [illegible]

COMBINE WORK WITH PLAY: Union County students are among many spending vacations studying music at Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Mass. Pausing for relaxation here are, left to right: Roger Sessions, American composer; Carol Douglas of 936 Leland Ave., Plainfield; Ellen Berse of 652 Nottingham Pl., Westfield; Kaid Friedel of Morristown and Peter Ciurczak of 16 Rankin St., Elizabeth. Elizabeth NJ. Journal 8/10/55

Lakeville 8/11

Grace Notes

TANGLEWOOD CONCERT
SUNDAY
By E. G. B.

When Charles Munch addressed this season's students at the opening of Tanglewood, he explained the choice of Beethoven as the principal composer of the Festival this year by saying: "This music is above all human. Everyone can find in it what he needs and what he is searching for . . . It is elevating and ennobling." Munch proved his point on Sunday last in conducting an all-Beethoven program: the Eighth symphony, the four piano concerto in G major, and the Fifth symphony. Eugene Istomin was the soloist.

Friday evening's storm which blew in from the West seemed to collide with a black cloud that the Raynsfords had observed moving across the lake from the direction of Hotchkiss School. In about a minute and a half, the small but violent twister wreaked havoc on the Raynsford property. The tent, rented from the Riverton Fair, and 40x80 in size, was ripped to shreds by the wind. Tent poles dented the Raynsford car and replacement of the top may be necessary.

Phillip Cianciola, fruit and vegetable dealer, who happened to be stopping at the Raynsford home, prevented an aluminum chaise longue from being hurtled by the wind through a plate glass window.

The tent had been left standing

Smith. Performances are given nightly except Sunday, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

GRACE NOTES

(Continued from Page Six)

Mr. Istomin is a thirty-year-old pianist, a native New Yorker, who has played each year at the Casals festivals in France and who was making his first appearance with the Boston orchestra. He has a brilliant technical equipment, and plays with assurance and well controlled dynamics. There was a refreshing, individual expressiveness in his phrasing, in the musical dialogue of the second movement of the concerto. Unfortunately the rainstorm beat about the music shed with its greatest violence when the piano part was at its gentlest, but for those fortunate ones seated near enough, the effect was not spoiled.

The Boston orchestra's tone is always a delight, and their unity and precision a sort of constant "tour de force." Munch used these attributes to maintain clarity of line and form to make the most of Beethoven's typical and sudden contrasts. If his tempi might sometimes be thought just a shade too fast, the music thereby losing in dimension, yet it was that factor which contributed largely to the cumulative excitement of the performance of the Fifth. It was all in all a most satisfying renewal of old enjoyments.

y Holly McLennan, an appealing oung person who hummed to her oll but otherwise only spoke lines. uke, the prodigal son was sung by tephen Harbachick, who tried too ard to be the villain.

The audience demanded the comser's appearance and he proved to a personable young man, modest d grateful. One of the characters the work sings, "I can't make ad nor tail to it" . . . one wonders w many in the audience really uld.

The second part of the program was a delightful gathering together of some resurrected fragments of an early Mozart work. These were written when he was twenty-one, but even so, one hears sheer loveliness. It seems that even the lesser works of real genius are worth while. The story is a prevue of the later "Die Entfuhrung aus dem Serail," turkish pasha, intruding tenor, charming maiden and even three oriental dancers. One hears themes which Mozart later used in his finished Entfuhrung, the most noticeable one being the orchestral interlude in the quartette, which he later used in Constanza's music. As always Mozart is vocal, pure joy to sing, and brings out the best in voices. It gives a singer every opportunity for lovely tone and clear diction. There is a lovely trio and one remembers the theme "The storm has passed away and it's such a lovely day." The performers seemed to have fun. Jefferson Morris has a light tenor of appealing quality and he looked like Van Johnson with a red beard. Allazim was sung by McHenry Boatwright with richness and ease. Christina Cardillo sang musically, her voice is a good one but not as free as one might wish. Howell Zulick did the Sultan with care and seriousness but seemed not to be at ease. Osmin, his son was George Lussier, a charming youngster who only spoke lines.

The settings for both works were most effective, the first grim and forbidding, and the second delightfully graceful and colorful.

The orchestra sounded well rehearsed and one appreciates the great opportunity these young people are enjoying.

There will probably be an epidemic of "group" performances of The Rope, but is there another Mozart in the world? In these days of atomic nightmares and grotesquerie which passes as art, it would be heavenly to discover one.

TANGLEWOOD OPERA
By M. S. R.

On Monday night, for a large and enthusiastic, invited audience, the opera dept. at Tanglewood presented two operas: The Rope by Louis Mennini and Zaida by Mozart. One can hardly imagine two more dissimilar works. The printed program was changed, The Rope being presented before the Mozart work, a wise decision probably arrived at after the dress rehearsal.

(Continued on Page Thirteen)

The Rope is a disturbing opus, adapted from a stark one-act play by Eugene O'Neill. It has a difficult-to-sing libretto and contrived, labored and obviously "clever" music. One hears snatches of Menotti, Hansen, Moussorgsky, and once, believe it or not, a faint provocative whiff of Porgy and Bess. There is a duet between Pat and Annie, which for a moment becomes interestingly dramatic, but the work, for the most part has no continuity. Pieces of vocal music are stuck together with discordant orchestral bits.

The performers did very well with their characterizations, acting realistically, sometimes awkwardly, but one felt, sincerely.

Malcolm Bernstein, as the father, looked like a character from Dostoievsky but sang his role convincingly. Mary Mackenzie as Annie, his daughter, was in turn shrewish and sympathetic. Lynn Detwiler was her husband and his voice was natural, his diction clear, and his acting easy. Mary their child was played

Lakeville 8/11

Grace Notes

TANGLEWOOD CONCERT
SUNDAY
By E. G. B.

When Charles Munch addressed this season's students at the opening of Tanglewood, he explained the choice of Beethoven as the principal composer of the Festival this year by saying: "This music is above all human. Everyone can find in it what he needs and what he is searching for . . . It is elevating and ennobling." Munch proved his point on Sunday last in conducting an all-Beethoven program: the Eighth symphony, the four piano concerto in G major, and the Fifth symphony. Eugene Istomin was the soloist.

Friday evening's storm which blew in from the West seemed to collide with a black cloud that the Raynsfords had observed moving across the lake from the direction of Hotchkiss School. In about a minute and a half, the small but violent twister wreaked havoc on the Raynsford property. The tent, rented from the Riverton Fair, and 40x80 in size, was ripped to shreds by the wind. Tent poles dented the Raynsford car and replacement of the top may be necessary.

Phillip Cianciola, fruit and vegetable dealer, who happened to be stopping at the Raynsford home, prevented an aluminum chaise longue from being hurtled by the wind through a plate glass window.

The tent had been left standing

Smith. Performances are given nightly except Sunday, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

GRACE NOTES

(Continued from Page Six)

Mr. Istomin is a thirty-year-old pianist, a native New Yorker, who has played each year at the Casals festivals in France and who was making his first appearance with the Boston orchestra. He has a brilliant technical equipment, and plays with assurance and well controlled dynamics. There was a refreshing, individual expressiveness in his phrasing, in the musical dialogue of the second movement of the concerto. Unfortunately the rainstorm beat about the music shed with its greatest violence when the piano part was at its gentlest, but for those fortunate ones seated near enough, the effect was not spoiled.

The Boston orchestra's tone is always a delight, and their unity and precision a sort of constant "tour de force." Munch used these attributes to maintain clarity of line and form to make the most of Beethoven's typical and su tempi might just a shade thereby losin was that fa largely to th of the perfo was all in a newal of ol

NG music on lawns outs all records third conse summer of hills of We

TANGLEWOOD OPERA
By M. S. R.

On Monday night, for a large and enthusiastic, invited audience, the opera dept. at Tanglewood presented two operas: The Rope by Louis Mennini and Zaida by Mozart. One can hardly imagine two more dissimilar works. The printed program was changed, The Rope being presented before the Mozart work, a wise decision probably arrived at after the dress rehearsal.

(Continued on Page Thirteen)

The Rope is a disturbing opus, adapted from a stark one-act play by Eugene O'Neill. It has a difficult-to-sing libretto and contrived, labored and obviously "clever" music. One hears snatches of Menotti, Hansen, Moussorgsky, and once, believe it or not, a faint provocative whiff of Porgy and Bess. There is a duet between Pat and Annie, which for a moment becomes interestingly dramatic, but the work, for the most part has no continuity. Pieces of vocal music are stuck together with discordant orchestral bits.

The performers did very well with their characterizations, acting realistically, sometimes awkwardly, but one felt, sincerely.

Malcolm Bernstein, as the father, looked like a character from Dostoievsky but sang his role convincingly. Mary Mackenzie as Annie, his daughter, was in turn shrewish and sympathetic. Lynn Detwiler was her husband and his voice was natural, his diction clear, and his acting easy. Mary their child was played by Holly McLennan, an appealing young person who hummed to her doll but otherwise only spoke lines. Luke, the prodigal son was sung by Stephen Harbachick, who tried too hard to be the villain.

The audience demanded the composer's appearance and he proved to be a personable young man, modest and grateful. One of the characters in the work sings, "I can't make head nor tail to it" . . . one wonders how many in the audience really could.

The second part of the program was a delightful gathering together of some resurrected fragments of an early Mozart work. These were written when he was twenty-one, but even so, one hears sheer loveliness. It seems that even the lesser works of real genius are worth while. The story is a prevue of the later "Die Entfuhrung aus dem Serail," turkish pasha, intruding tenor, charming maiden and even three oriental dancers. One hears themes which Mozart later used in his finished Entfuhrung, the most noticeable one being the orchestral interlude in the quartette, which he later used in Constanza's music. As always Mozart is vocal, pure joy to sing, and brings out the best in voices. It gives a singer every opportunity for lovely tone and clear diction. There is a lovely trio and one remembers the theme "The storm has passed away and it's such a lovely day." The performers seemed to have fun. Jefferson Morris has a light tenor of appealing quality and he looked like Van Johnson with a red beard. Allazim was sung by McHenry Boatwright with richness and ease. Christina Cardillo sang musically, her voice is a good one but not as free as one might wish. Howell Zulick did the Sultan with care and seriousness but seemed not to be at ease. Osmin, his son was George Lussier, a charming youngster who only spoke lines.

The settings for both works were most effective, the first grim and forbidding, and the second delightfully graceful and colorful.

The orchestra sounded well rehearsed and one appreciates the great opportunity these young people are enjoying.

There will probably be an epidemic of "group" performances of The Rope, but is there another Mozart in the world? In these days of atomic nightmares and grotesquerie which passes as art, it would be heavenly to discover one.

WEATHER CUTS CROWD TO 6637 AT TANGLEWOOD

Boston Symphony, Pops Orchestra Present Programs

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 11 — Black clouds hurtling across the sky, frequent squalls and some good old-fashioned Berkshire thunder storms cut the attendance at the annual "Tanglewood On Parade" to 6637.

Two Orchestras

However, those who did arrive had a wonderful view of the activities of the Berkshire Music School as well as hearing both the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Leonard Bernstein and the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

Mr. Bernstein was really the star of the concerts. He was at his most theatrical while conducting his own suite from his prize winning score to the picture "On the Waterfront" and Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait." The Bernstein profile was much in evidence and the Bernstein gestures were spacious.

The talented composer has made a delightful suite from his music to "On the Waterfront." It lasts approximately 30 minutes and because it contains such a variety of moods, ranging from turbulent cruelty to downright sentimentality there is never a dull listening moment. There are some lovely melodic moments and arresting moments of sheer, stark drama. The suite should enrichen the orchestral repertoire.

"A Lincoln Portrait" is one of Aaron Copland's most rewarding compositions. Tonight it had the distinguished actor Claude Rains as its narrator.

Copland has used excerpts from Lincoln's speeches, ending with the final passage from the Gettysburg Address. The music is powerful but seldom obtrusive. Mr. Raines and Mr. Bernstein collaborated in fine manner and all participants were heartily applauded at its conclusion.

The second portion of the program brought us the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by its founder Arthur Fiedler in a characteristic program which included "Capriccio Espagnol" by Rimsky-Korsakoff and a suite from "Graduation Ball" by Strauss and arranged by Dorati. Between these two, Leonard Bernstein appeared as soloist in Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." Just when Bernstein gets time to practice we do not know, but his playing tonight brought vitality and considerable splendor to this pops program.

Fine Choral Concert

There was much going on this afternoon. All departments were showing what they had accomplished. We listened particularly to a very fine choral concert by the Tanglewood choir and to a charming performance of Puccini's "Gianni Schicchi." This was to have been given in the formal gardens, but weather conditions put it inside. Also on the opera bill were some scenes from Ibert's "Angelique."

The student orchestra gave a fine program which enlisted the services of such excellent young conductors as James Yannatos of the Bronx, N. Y., conducting Copland's "An Outdoor Overture;" Kenneth Schermerhorn of Schenectady conducting Brahms' "A Tragic Overture" and George Mester from Mexico, conducting "The Afternoon of a Faun" by Debussy. The orchestra played better than many professional orchestras we have heard.

During the afternoon, brief ceremonies marked the renewal of the 30 years association of the Boston Symphony Orchestra with RCA Victor Records. Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra, were on hand to sign the contract. Making his first appearance at "Tanglewood On Parade" was Frank M. Folsom, president of the Radio Corporation of America.

NY Times, 8/12

Ex-Banker's Income Tax Lament Is Sung by Tanglewood Choir

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 11—Only a banker, or the Internal Revenue collector, would sing about the income tax. At Tanglewood tonight a retired banker, Avery Claflin of Brooklyn, contributed a madrigal, "Lament for April 15." His subject may have been unpromising, but his mood was right.

"Lament for April 15" had its première in the course of Tanglewood on Parade. It was sung by the Tanglewood Choir on the porch of the administration building of the Berkshire Festival while people were having their picnic suppers. If on Aug. 11 they could remember April 15 without pain, Mr. Claflin's touching lament did not cause them to gag on their sandwiches and liquid refreshments.

Mr. Claflin, who used to be president of the French American Banking Corporation in Brooklyn, retired recently and decided to devote himself to his old love—writing music. He was at work on a suite for string orchestra when he had to drop his inspirational efforts to take up the dreary task of preparing his income tax return early this year.

As he read the instructions, the words persisted in arranging themselves in a rhythmic and melodic pattern. He found that he was writing music instead of doing his duty by the Government. He ended by taking six excerpts from the instructions and molding them into a five-and-a-half-minute piece for five-part chorus.

The composition begins with the portentous phrase, "Who must file," and plunges into its stirring opening lines, "Every citizen or resident of the United States—whether an adult or a minor—who had $600 ($1,200 if 65 years of age or over) or more gross income in 1954 must file."

Being a thoroughgoing craftsman, Mr. Claflin gives every one of his chosen words his due. He has even taken the trouble to set the parentheses to music.

The "Lament" goes on with

Continued on Page 10, Column 2

Ex-Banker's Income Tax Lament Is Sung by Tanglewood Choir

Continued From Page 1

its incantation to "why you must file a return," to a detailed section on dependents, to "the case of children who are residents of the Republic of the Philippines" and winds up with these consolatory lines, "After reading these instructions you should be able to prepare your return, unless you have complicated problems."

Hugh Ross of the Berkshire Music Center faculty conducted this "Lament" with a tongue-in-cheek sobriety that suited well Mr. Claflin's setting. The composer, knowing that the subject carried the weight of its own gravity, used the gracious and lilting madrigal form to cover the emotion of all his—and our—memories.

Mr. Claflin, who is 57 years old, was here from his summer home in Rensselaerville, N. Y., to listen to the première of his unforgettable inspiration. Before he drove home he told of his musical studies with John P. Marshall, Archibald T. Davison and Erik Satie, French composer.

"I studied with Satie before World War I," he said, "and he was quite a teacher. You met him at 11 A. M., and went out at once to have an aperitif with him. Then you bought him lunch. Then he went to work. He could spend forty-five minutes on one measure, and believe me you learned something."

Mr. Claflin has written symphonies, operas and compositions in various other forms. Born in Keene, N. H., and educated at Phillips Exeter Academy and Harvard, he went to work as an office boy in the Wall Street area not far from the office of Charles Ives, another American who made a success in business and wrote music in his spare time. He remembers seeing Mr. Ives in those days, but he said tonight he was more interested in Mr. Ives' partner, Julian Myrick.

"Mr. Myrick was a tennis official," Mr. Claflin said, "and I was crazy about tennis."

Mr. Claflin, a quiet-spoken gentleman who answers all questions about his music with seriousness, said that he had wondered whether he had any right to appropriate the deathless words in the tax-instruction sheet.

"I consulted my lawyers," he said, "and they thought it was not copyright stuff," then he added, in dead-pan fashion, "if I earn anything from the piece, who do you think will share in my good luck?"

Ex-Banker's Income Tax Lament Is Sung by Tanglewood Choir

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 11—Only a banker, or the Internal Revenue Collector, would sing about the income tax. At Tanglewood tonight a retired banker, Avery Claflin of Brooklyn, contributed a madrigal, "Lament for April 15." His subject may have been unpromising, but his mood was right.

"Lament for April 15" had its première in the course of Tanglewood on Parade. It was sung by the Tanglewood Choir on the porch of the administration building of the Berkshire Festival while people were having their picnic suppers. If on Aug. 11 they could remember April 15 without pain, Mr. Claflin's touching lament did not cause them to gag on their sandwiches and liquid refreshments.

Mr. Claflin, who used to be president of the French American Banking Corporation in Brooklyn, retired recently and decided to devote himself to his old love—writing music. He was at work on a suite for string orchestra when he had to drop his inspirational efforts to take up the dreary task of preparing his income taxe return early this year.

As he read the instructions, the words persisted in arranging themselves in a ryhthmic and melodic pattern. He found that he was writing music instead of doing his duty by the Government. He ended up by taking six excerpts from the instructions and molding them into a five-and-a-half-minute piece for five-part chorus.

The composition begins with the portentous phrase, "Who must file," and plunges into its stirring opening lines, "Every citizen or resident of the United States—whether an adult or a minor—who had $600 ($1,200 if 65 years of age or over) or more gross income in 1954 must file."

Being a thoroughgoing craftsmen, Mr. Claflin gives every one of his chosen words his due. He has even taken the trouble to set the parentheses to music.

TThe "Lament" goes on with

Continued on Page 11, Column 4

NYT 8/12

Music: All-Beethoven

5 Chamber Works Are Heard at Tanglewood

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 10—Tanglewood is full of musicians, and Wednesday night's chamber - music program proved that enough talent could be assembled in a short time to make an unusual evenging of Beethoven.

The concert was to have been devoted to the five 'cello sonatas of Beethoven, with Gregor Piatigorsky as the soloist. But he hurt his shoulder while swimming in his pool in California and sent word that he could not appear. Ralph Berkowitz, his accompanist, who is dean of the Berkshire Music Center, promptly recruited David Lloyd, tenor, and a number of first-desk players from the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

•

The result was a program of five Beethoven chamber works, after all, although only one was a 'cello sonata. The other pieces were compositions you scarcely encounter in years of concert-going. If it was not all the greater Beethoven there were some delightful things, and it was pleasant to encounter the great man in some of his more modest aspects.

Mr. Berkowitz was the program's binding agent. Committed as he was to play in all the 'cello sonatas, he proceeded to play the piano in all of the pieces. But his associated instruments kept changing.

First, there was the Trio for clarinet, 'cello and piano, Op. 11, with Gino Cioffi, clarinetist, and Samuel Mayes, 'cellist. Then came the Trio for flute, bassoon and piano, with Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist, and Sherman Walt, bassoonist. This work belongs to Beethoven's boyhood, and it has a kind of fresh innocence.

Mr. Mayes then rejoined Mr. Berkowitz for the A major 'cello Sonata, Op. 69. He played with a clean, singing tone and considerable musicianship. Mr. Lloyd, Mr. Berkowitz' next colleague, performed the song cycle, "An Die Ferne Geliebte." He sang with restraint and feeling, filling down his voice and coloring it for expressive effect.

•

For the closing Quintet for oboe, clarinet, horn, bassoon and piano, Op. 16, Mr. Berkowitz had Mr. Cioffi and Mr. Walt back with him. The added starters were Ralph Gomberg, oboist, and James Stagliano, French horn player. Every one played with the give and take of the chamber-music spirit.

In the end, though, it proved to be Mr. Berkowitz' evening. By redeeming an awkward situation and by playing with consistently thoughtful musicianship, he deserved to make it so.

Ralph Berkowitz

BANKER PENS SONG OF THE INCOME TAX

Continued From Page 1

its incantation to "why you must file a return," to a detailed section on dependents, to "the case of children who are residents of the Republic of the Philippines" and winds up with these consolatory lines, "After reading these instructions you should be able to prepare your return, unless you have complicated problems."

Hugh Ross of the Berkshire Music Center faculty conducted this "Lament" with a tongue-in-cheek sobriety that suited well Mr. Chaflin's seting. The composer, knowing that the subject carried the weight of its own gravity, used the gracious and lilting madrical form to cover the emotion of all his—and our—memories.

Mr. Chaflin, who is 57 years old, was here from his summer home in Rensselaerville, N. Y., to listen to the premiere of his unforgettable inspiration. Before he drove home, he told of his musical studies with John P. Marshall, Archibald T. Davison and Erik Satie, French composer.

Teacher Had a System

"I studied with Satie before World War I," he said, "and he was quite a teacher. You met him at 11 A. M., and went out at once to have an apertif with him. Then you bought him lunch. Then he went to work. He could spend forty-five minutes on one measure, and believe me you learned something."

Mr. Claflin has written symphonies, operas and compositions in various other forms. Born in Keene, N. H., and educated at Phillips Exeter Academy and Harvard, he went to work as an office boy in the Wall Street area not far from the office of Charles Ives, another American who made a success in business and wrote music in his spare time. He remembers seeing Mr. Ives in those days, but he said tonight he was more interested in Mr. Ives' partner, Julian Myrick.

"Mr. Myrick was a tennis official," Mr. Clafin said, "and I was crazy about tennis."

Mr. Claflin, a quiet-spoken gentleman who answers all questions about his music with seriousness, said that he had wondered whether he had any right to appropriate the deathless words in the tax-instruction sheet.

"I consulted my lawyers," he said, "and they thought it was not copyright stuff," then he added, in dead-pan fashion, "if I earn anything from the piece, who do you think will share in my good luck."

Music: Big Play at Lenox

Ball Goes From Boston to Pops to Puccini

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 11—"Tanglewood on Parade," the hours-long fiesta wherein the hundreds of musicians at Tanglewood strut their stuff, took place this afternoon and evening with undiminished spirit despite overcast skies, frequent showers and the pother about the wind named Connie.

The bad weather cut down the size of the crowd, which was too bad for those who had planned to come and found they couldn't. It was also too bad for the exchequer, since the proceeds go to the school here known as the Berkshire Music Center.

But there were almost 7,000 men, women and children on the Tanglewood grounds. And if they were curious and their legs and ears held out, they could hear anything from old music to new, symphonic music to opera, serious material to cheerful stuff. From 4 to 11 P. M. there was scarcely a moment when one couldn't hear some kind of musical performance.

•

The big show took place in the big shed when the Boston Symphony Orchestra, first in its own identity and then converted by the mere use of a different name into the Boston Pops Orchestra, did the performing.

Leonard Bernstein was the conductor in the first half of this program. He directed the Boston Symphony in the first performance of his suite based on his music for the film "On the Waterfront." With Claude Rains as narrator, he also directed Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait."

Mr. Bernstein's suite makes great, big, beautiful sounds. It conveys some atmosphere, but if you had not seen the movie, you would have difficulty associating this music with its violence. Every bit of it comes off, but it goes on too long. It has a kind of spaciousness that might pass for nobility. When James Stagliano, the first horn player, went offstage for a few moments, someone asked, "Who was that who went off?" One felt like replying, "The ghost of Richard Strauss."

Mr. Bernstein got a rousing performance of this work from the Boston Symphony. Then he did equally well with Mr. Copland's touching hymn to Lincoln and democracy. Mr. Rains read the soaring words of the sixteenth President with fervor.

In the second half Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Boston Pops, took over on the podium. He conducted Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Capriccio Espagnol," Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue, with the busy Mr. Bernstein as the piano soloist, and the Strauss-Dorati "Graduation Ball" suite. Mr. Fiedler, who knows how to get some fun out of music, led performances of characteristic humor and gusto.

Arthur Fiedler

The day began with performances by the Tanglewood study group in the barn. At the same time the Opera Department offered Puccini's "Gianni Schicchi" in the theatre-concert hall. Showers caused the transfer of this show from the formal garden.

Then at 5:45 there was a fanfare and Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the center, formally welcomed the audience. Simultaneous performances followed, by the student orchestra, led by student conductors in the shed; opera scenes by the Opera Department in the theatre-concert hall, and music by Tanglewood composers in the chamber music hall.

•

During the afternoon the signing of a new contract between the Boston Symphony and R. C. A. Victor took place. A group of officials led by Frank M. Folsom, president of the Radio Corporation of America, came up for the day to sign the agreement. Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the orchestra; Charles Munch, its conductor, and Mr. Fiedler took part in the ceremony.

While the official announcement said only that the contract was "a long-term renewal of the forty-year recording association" of these two groups, it was learned from a Victor official that the pact was for five years. Under its terms Victor is expected to concentrate its major effort in this country on the Boston Symphony and the Boston Pops.

H. T.

BC

Music in Review

By TUCKER KEISER

LENOX, July 24—Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Beethoven program this afternoon in the Music Shed before an audience of 9000. Three symphonies made up the list, the first, the fourth, and the sixth.

Though Mr. Munch holds highly individualistic notions about Beethoven in general, the universality of the music is such that it remains a valid musical document no matter how unusual the emphasis or personal the approach.

Sympathetic treatment of music from the classical era has been one of the conductor's most impressive abilities, so it is not surprising that the First Symphony emerged a well-mannered, gracefully proportioned experience. The Andante with its flowing Cantabile was particularly touching; the conductor drew from the orchestra polished phrases sung in rich, fluent tone.

The Fourth Symphony was no less interesting if less aristocratic in articulation. Mr. Munch, pressing for orchestral effect in the 3rd and 4th movements (a conductor's prerogative), brought to these sections a thrust somewhat overbearing at times, but rompishly diverting nonetheless.

In the "Pastorale" we had a series of brilliantly colored pictures rather than a sequence of connected events. Each picture bore little relationship to what went before or what came after, despite Beethoven's allusions and recapitulations. Yet this interpretation possessed the virtue of a novel approach to a familiar score.

NY Times
Aug
UST 12 1955

6,637 Brave the Rain

Bernstein's Premiere Climax To 'Tanglewood on Parade'

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 12.—"Tanglewood on Parade," the Berkshire Music Center's annual procession of student skills, talent and ingenuities took place last night in the midst of intermittent rains and generally surly weather. As a climax to the event Leonard Bernstein appeared in the triple-threat capacity of composer, conductor and pianist by directing both the world premiere of his suite from the Academy Award winning film "On the Waterfront" and Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait" and by acting as piano soloist in Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

The latter number enlisted the services of the Boston Pops Orchestra which, under Arthur Fiedler's supervision, also played Rimsky-Korsakov's "Capriccio Espagnol" and the Strauss-Dorati "Graduation Ball" Suite. Claude Rains was narrator of Lincoln's lines in the Copland work.

6,637 Despite Showers

Previous to this rocketing finale in the festival grounds music shed, the various student divisions of the center had put on their customary admirable show with demonstrations—simultaneously staged throughout the area—of the choral, conducting, composition and opera departments. Despite harassing, needle-like showers, an audience of 6,637 early arrived on campus to cheer the youngsters ahead.

The "Parade's" major enticement, the evening concert, was also met with cheers, though for far different reasons. It is virtually conceded among musicians that Mr. Bernstein's background score for "On the Waterfront" was the most artistically conceived of the year, and his suite from the film thus provides an opportunity of meeting again an old and admired friend.

As did the movie, the present excerpt opens with a melancholly horn theme developed canonically and followed by a percussion fugue loud enough to stir the deaf into hearing. Subsequently we are introduced to the love-motif, a misty-eyed, sentimental theme after the Hollywood manner, which is enlarged upon to such a degree that there is no doubt as to what direction the love has taken.

These, and a few lesser ideas, are for all purposes the materials of this suite. They are, frankly, overextended in length, but the work nonetheless is one so overwhelmingly dramatic (albeit in the popular movie manner) that it literally crushes any reservations. "Waterfront" is theatrical in the best sense that it is music tailor-made for the theater. It is urgent and compelling and vivid as flame.

Vivid, as well, was Mr. Bernstein's rendition of "Rhapsody in Blue," though in achieving this quality he all but scuttled Gershwin. It was, in brief, an unorthodox, highly personal reading, erratic in tempo and rhythmically unstable. Nor was it aided by patent technical shortcomings and the presence of a wayward cymbal which mysteriously crashed to the floor during a soft piano solo, thereby jarring the audience and performing participants into a state of mild hysteria.

Elsewhere, however, the concert fortunately proceeded without incident. Mr. Bernstein's understanding of Copland's music is already a legend, and as such "A Lincoln Portrait," excluding a somewhat gamy rendition by Mr. Rains, was aburst with power and inner vibrancy.

For his part, Mr. Fiedler rode the Boston Pops Orchestra in the grand circus manner and concluded the evening with much demanded encores. Included among them was a hilarious, bulldozer version of "Davy Crockett" that at one point required the instrumentalists to yelp like a pack of Geronimos on sighting the United States Cavalry. And since the Boston Pops is without question the greatest organization of its kind, it is a pity it did not devote itself to more numbers of the pops variety. The concert might then have become more of a howler than it was.

'Fore' They Shout, Four They Get

LONDON, Aug. 12 (AP).—Two golfers halted on a suburban golf course today when they saw a group of children on the fairway.

"Fore!" They chorused to get the youngsters out o fthe way.

The next thing they saw was an ice cream seller walking across the links from a nearby road holding four ice cream cones in his hand.

"Your order, gentlemen," he said.

New York Journal American
8/12/55

Berkshire Festival:

Tanglewood On Parade

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 12.—Tanglewood went on parade yesterday when the four departments of the Berkshire Music Center performed simultaneously and later a gala concert in the music shed brought the Boston Symphony and the Boston Pops Orchestra together.

A rainy afternoon and generally threatening weather cut the crowd expected to 6,637 people.

The display of talent among the composers, conductors, singers, and other performers involved in this annual musical benefit told again of the staggering amount of music-making crowded into the six-week period when Tanglewood comes alive.

The student orchestra played Copland, Brahms, Debussy, and Berlioz under four different conductors. The opera department gave scenes from Ibert's "Angelique" and Martinu's "Comedy on a Bridge." Six composers held forth in the Chamber Music Hall.

Banker's Lament

One of the interesting items came during the concert by the Tanglewood choir. A "Lament for April 15" by Avery Claflin, a Brooklyn banker, was performed under Hugh Ross' direction. It is a piece about the income tax, undoubtedly the first of its kind.

Leonard Bernstein conducted the Boston Symphony in the first performance anywhere of his suite from the film "On the Waterfront," and Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait" with no less than Claude Rains as narrator.

Bernstein is, of course, a Tanglewood product, and Copland the assistant director of the school; so the concert was quite a family affair.

The music from the film is powerful stuff. It stood its ground firmly, shorn of the film; revealed again Bernstein's undisputed talent; and conveyed atmosphere graphically even without program annotation. Though suggestive of other composers, its themes ring true. Effective orchestrally, it was brilliantly performed. The crowd liked it.

Pops Plays 'Davy'

Arthur Fiedler of course conducted the Pops Orchestra according to his individualistic style. They offered Rimsky-Korsakov's "Capriccio Espagnol"; Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" with Bernstein in this third assignment, this time as pianist; and the Strauss-Dorati suite from "Graduation Ball," sometimes a bit deliberately paced.

When the encores came, they broke loose with Davy Crockett, coonskin hat and all.

For early comers the day's generous program had as a preface a performance by the Tanglewood study group and one of Puccini's "Gianni Schicchi."

RCA Victor took the opportunity to sign up both orchestras for a five-year renewal of their recording association.

Rain Holds Down Attendance at Parade

Babbitt

THE TANGLEWOOD CHOIR entertained more than 400 music lovers at the main house porch at Tanglewood last evening before the major concerts opened in the Music Shed. Hugh Ross, head of the choral department, and several student conductors, presented an hour-long program, including the premiere of Avery Claflin's "Lament for April 15," which Mr. Ross is leading in this view from the porch.

Plouffe

JOINING THE CROWD in the enthusiastic ovation accorded Leonard Bernstein, at left, following his performance as piano soloist in Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue," at the Tanglewood on Parade program in the Music Shed last night, is Arthur Fiedler, right, conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra, who thrilled the audience with his program of light music and novelty numbers.

Music Center Gross Is $15,952; 6,637 Attend

By MARY JANE GROSS

A crowd of 6,637 braved the afternoon downpour and the threat of hurricane "Connie" to attend Tanglewood on Parade last night.

The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the BSO's summer school of music now in its 13th year, grossed $15,952. The event netted $22,000 in 1954, an all-time record, made on a balmy Friday evening.

Despite a steady downpour, several hundred were on hand when the doors opened at 3:30 to watch all of the school's 405 students participate in some way in the afternoon activities. An opera for box and reserved seat holders, originally scheduled to take place in the formal gardens, was transferred to the Theater-Concert Hall. It was filled to near capacity for the performance.

Composers in Limelight

Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Center, officially welcomed guests at 5:45, when a "Fanfare" was played in front of the main Shed. Immediately after, simultaneous performances were given by the orchestra, opera and composition departments. An innovation was the demonstration of work by 22 young composers, among them Williamstown's Robert Ceeley, who played his own piano composition.

Early arrivals, many of them draped in the blankets which they had intended to spread on the lawn, scurried for cover from the rain in all buildings of the area. They staked claims to the most desirable seats, and some settled down to the business of eating immediately. Suppers ranged from fancy repasts of such goodies as hot fried chicken, and lobster sandwiches accompanied by gallons of martinis, to simple fare like ham sandwiches and bottles of milk. Many feasted in the Theater-Concert Hall, and one gentleman even napped there on five chairs in a rear row.

Camps Cancel Reservations

When the drizzle subsided, undaunted groups moved their picnic paraphernalia to the lawn in front of the main Shed or near the formal gardens. Among picnickers were George E. Judd, retired BSO manager, and Mrs. Judd, who came from their home in Cannonsville, N.Y. At the last minute some cocktail parties were switched to their hosts' homes to escape the elements. Several of these parties arrived just before the main Shed program, with some of their members dressed in furs and finery, in contrast to their sensible neighbors who were armed with raincoats and umbrellas.

Unlike other years, it was an adult gathering. Few children were in evidence, and the high incidence of polio caused several nearby camps to cancel their reservations.

By 8:15 every seat was taken in the packed Shed, ready for the main concert.

Leonard Bernstein, a conducting pupil of Dr. Koussevitzky during the school's initial two years, led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the opening number of the main concert, the first performance of his Suite from "On the Waterfront," completed only last July 5. For the performance the orchestra rehearsed but once. Mr. Bernstein later was pianist for Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" under Arthur Fiedler's baton with the Boston Pops. Last night marked Bernstein's final appearance this summer at the Center, where he heads the department of orchestra and conducting. He flies to California today for a week-long Festival of the Americas, of which he is director, in Hollywood Bowl. The Festival opens Aug. 16. The composer-conductor will return to his summer home in Great Barrington for a fortnight's relaxation before commencing preparation for a New York Carnegie Hall series in the autumn.

'Hooks' Plane Ride to N.Y.

Noted stage and screen star Claude Rains narrated excerpts from speeches by Abraham Lincoln, concluding with lines from the Gettysburg Address. The short narration was accompanied by music written by Aaron Copland, "A Lincoln Portrait."

Arthur Fiedler, who appeared for the first time at Tanglewood last summer, was recalled this year for a repeat performance. With his attractive wife, he arrived Wednesday by plane, and immediately after the concert "hooked a ride" with Frank Folsom in the RCA-Victor plane to New York, from which he will fly to Miami this morning. He will conduct the Miami Pops in a concert on Sunday, and the following day will return to Massachusetts for a Boston Pops concert.

Local residents captured a high proportion of the 11 door prizes, which Lady Luck usually distributes to visitors from East Overshoe, or other far-flung places. Six of the 10 main awards stayed in Berkshire County.

A member of the Tanglewood on Parade committee, Mrs. Albert Sterner of Richmond, won the General Electric refrigerator, and Miss Loretta A. Audner of Lenox won BSO tickets for two for the coming season.

Other Prize Winners

Others who won prizes were Miss Getrude Kudla of 118 Morningview Dr., "An evening in the Berkshires," consisting of dinner for two at the Red Lion Inn, tickets to the Berkshire Playhouse, a skirt from Calypso of Bermuda and a portrait by Whitestone Photographers of Lenox; Norton M. Case of Lenox, an English bicycle; Joe Watt of Lenox, "An exening in the Berkshires," consisting of dinner for two at the Morgan House, tickets to Jacob's Pillow, a skirt from Calypso and portrait by Whitestone; Miss Dorothy Perkins of Lee, a life-time subscription to High Fidelity Magazine.

A bonus door award was an autographed copy of Dr. Charles Munch's book, "I Am a Conductor," awarded to Mrs. Ira C. Jones of Cranford, N.J. Other winners were a high fidelity phonograph from RCA Victor to Naomi Goldsmith of Port Washington, N.Y.; "An Evening in the Berkshires" with dinner at the Williams Inn, tickets to the Adams Memorial Theater and a stole from Bratton Inc., to Dorothy Woodcock of Buffalo; RCA Victor recordings to five Beethoven symphonies, Miss Lillian Lazurus of Forest Hills; and a lithograph by Ture Bengtz, Miss Gwynne Gillette of Canaan, Conn.

Boris Goldovsky, head of the school's opera department, was master of ceremonies for the drawings, which took place this year at intermission, rather than at the close of the festivities, as in the past.

Other Tanglewood Stories On Page 20

Plouffe

NARRATOR Claude Rains of stage and screen fame, at left, shares with Leonard Bernstein, at right, the plaudits of the audience at Tanglewood on Parade last night following the performance of Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," which was heard for the first time at Tanglewood. Bernstein also conducted the BSO in his own Suite from "On the Waterfront," Academy Award winner this year.

August 11/55

MILLBROOK ROUND TABLE

Student Soloist

CATHERINE AKOS, contralto, a student of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood in 1954, is one of the soloists in 1955 of the concluding Berkshire Festival concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Miss Akos, with Adele Addison, David Lloyd and Donald Gramm and the Festival Chorus of BMC students will perform Beethoven's Ninth Symphony (Music Shed, 2:30 p.m.)

Weekend Concerts Open Tonight; No Reservations for Connie

TANGLEWOOD — The most unwelcome guest at the concluding concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra over the weekend is Hurricane Connie.

Connie's activities along the East Coast provided the only sour note at last night's annual Tanglewood on Parade benefit when rains kept the attendance below 7,000.

The weekend concerts will open tonight at 8:30, rain or shine, when Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a concert of French music in the Music Shed.

The program, slightly revised from that announced originally, will include the "Symphonie Fantastique" by Berlioz; "La Mer" by Debussy; and the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet "Daphnis and Chloe." Berlioz' "Symphonie Fantastique" was one of the outstanding features of last summer's Festival when Mr. Munch conducted all the major orchestral works of the composer in honor of the 150th anniversary of his birth. It is the only Berlioz composition included in this summer's Festival programs.

In the remaining concerts tomorrow night at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Pierre Monteux and Charles Munch respectively will conduct.

Beethoven's Ninth Sunday

Mr. Monteux' Saturday evening will include music by Wagner, Brahms, Debussy and Strauss; and on Sunday the 1955 Berkshire Festival will draw to a close with performances of Beethoven's Third "Leonore" Overture and Ninth Symphony conducted by Mr. Munch. Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass; are the soloists with the Festival Chorus, Berkshire Music Center students augmented by that of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra. Hugh Ross and John Krueger have trained the choristers.

Remaining tickets for these three concerts, as well as the open rehearsal tomorrow morning at 10 a.m. for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund, are now on sale at the Tanglewood box-office, and telephone reservations are accepted. Admission for listening from the lawn will be on sale the day of each concert.

Seven Music Center Students Are Picked To Tour With Pops

TANGLEWOOD — Seven students of the 1955 session of the Berkshire Music Center, have been hired to take part in the Boston Pops Touring Orchestra's tour through the United States and possibly Canada, Rosario Mazzeo, personnel manager of the Boston Symphony and the Boston Pops announced today.

They are: Barth Bennitt, French horn, of Miami, Fla; Bruce Paine, trombone, of Canajoharie, N.Y.; Peter Ciurczak, trumpet, of Elizabeth, N.J.; Sheldon Henry, horn, of Cadillac, Mich.; William Kaplan, bassoon, of Madison, Wis.; John Grande, clarinet, of New York City and Nicholas Apostle, oboe, of Kenton, Ohio.

Selected by Fiedler

All of them were personally selected by Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra, who came to Tanglewood, to audition students for the tour. Mr. Bennitt today was awarded the Dreyfuss Scholarship for outstanding Tanglewood students. He is a former member of the U.S. Air Force band and the University of Miami Symphony. Peter Ciurczak will be drafted into the U.S. Army after the tour.

This will be the fourth season of the Boston Pops Touring Orchestra, which was first instituted in 1953. The tour, led by Mr. Fiedler will begin in Boston in Jan. 1, 1956, last 12 weeks and will cover the major cities across the continent to California and back. Concerts in Canada have also been envisioned.

The orchestra will travel mainly by bus, occasionally also by train or plane. At times they will travel with as many as eight performances a week. Mr. Fiedler will drive his own Cadillac, occasionally assisted by an orchestra member.

Tanglewood Tales

Where Do They Go?

Where do they go after Tanglewood? The Berkshire Festival, which concludes its 18th summer at Tanglewood on Sunday, and the Berkshire Music Center which simultaneously winds up its 13th six-week summer session, disperses a number of noted musical personalities until most of them reassemble in Lenox next summer.

Boston Symphony Orchestra Music Director Charles Munch, who is also director of the summer music school, has a day of recording with the orchestra in Symphony Hall, Boston, on Monday, then flies to Europe to conduct in Salzburg, Austria; Montreux, Switzerland; Florence, Italy. The Salzburg Festival concert is one originally announced for the late Wilhelm Furtwangler, with whom Mr. Munch was associated in his youth, and will consist of Mozart, Honegger and Beethoven. After a vacation in his native France, Mr. Munch will return to Boston on Sept. 25, the day before his 64th birthday, to prepare for the 75th anniversary season of the Symphony, which will include a tour of the South and performances of 15 new works commissioned from eminent modern composers.

Pierre Monteux, who conducts for the last time this season at Tanglewood tomorrow will return immediately to his conducting school at Hancock, Maine, and will conduct at the Metropolitan Opera in the fall and winter. In February, 1956, he will be guest conductor again at the Boston Symphony.

Leonard Bernstein left Tanglewood directly after Tanglewood on Parade last night, to conduct a Festival of the Americas, a week-long, concert series in Hollywood Bowl. After its conclusion he will be back at his summer home in Great Barrington for a fortnight's relaxation with his wife and two young children, before going to New York in mid-September to prepare for the concerts he will conduct with the Symphony of the Air, and to do further work on his full-length opera "Candide," which, with Tyrone Guthrie directing, will be heard on Broadway in the fall of 1956.

* * *

Jacksons Entertain

Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Jackson of Lenox entertained at their home, Lakeside Stables, following Tanglewood on Parade. Among the guests were Pops Orchestra Conductor, Arthur Fiedler, and Mrs. Fiedler; Conductor Leonard Bernstein and Mrs. Bernstein; Boston Symphony Orchestra trustees Edward A. Taft, Talcott M. Banks Jr., Lewis Perry and Michael P. Kelleher with Mrs. Perry and Mrs. Kelleher; Rossario Mazzeo, BSO personnel representative, and officers of the Radio Corporation of America who earlier in the evening witnessed the signing of a contract between RCA Victor and the orchestra.

* * *

Festival on 'Today'

This morning the NBC television program "Today" went behind the scenes of the Berkshire Festival. The nationally televised program was seen at 7:15 and 8:15. The "Today" camera crew was at Tanglewood two weeks ago and took some 6,000 feet of film, which was edited into an eight minute documentary film on Tanglewood's many activities. Seen were Charles Munch and Leonard Bernstein rehearsing and conducting the Boston Symphony. Dave Garroway, regular host of the "Today" program, is on vacation and in his absence the noted actress Faye Emerson has been substituting for him.

* * *

100 Hear Waltz Music

Although the concert wasn't over until after 11 o'clock, more than 100 gathered in front of the Main House to hear waltzes played by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the music center and Ingolf Dahl, head of the study group. They played from the second story, and music was piped out by means of loudspeakers. One lone couple waltzed on the wet lawn.

* * *

Three Boxes Donated

All boxes and reserved seats were sold for the concert. Three boxes were donated for scholarship students' use by Mrs. Albert Spalding, of Great Barrington and New York, widow of the noted violinist; by Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller of Little Boer's Head, N.H., the former Massachusetts governor's wife; and by Mrs. Bruce Crane of Dalton.

* * *

David Lloyd Going to Greece

David Lloyd, tenor soloist this year and one-time student, soon will fly to Greece, where he will take part in the Athens Music Festival under Dmetri Metroupoulos.

* * *

Guests of Orchestra

Guests of the BSO and the Center were Mayor Robert T. Capeless; County Commissioners John F. Shea of Pittsfield, James A. Bowes of North Adams, Clinton J. Foster of Stockbridge; Selectmen R. H. Barnes, Charles F. House, David Mackey of Lenox; Warren A. Turner, Michael J. Sullivan, Peter Guristante of Lee; Arthur W. Maskell Jr., Stephen W. Cooney and Oliver E. Hanna of Stockbridge.

* * *

Fiedler Fiddlers

Arthur Fiedler believes his surname is occupational. For generations the Fiedlers have been fiddlers-violinists. The conductor's paternal grandfather, Isaac Fiedler, played the violin and conducted the town orchestra in Sambor, Austria. His father, Emanuel, was a violinist in the Boston Symphony from 1885 to 1910. Two of his father's brothers, Bernard and Gustav, both were BSO violinists. There are three sisters, Frederika, violinist; Elsa, pianist; and Rosa, cellist.

* * *

$152 Bid Wins Mrs. Koussevitzky's Drawings

Miss Constance Parrish of Lenox won the album of prints of Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky's drawings. The drawings are of Dr. Koussevitzky, Charles Munch, Arturo Toscanini, Pierre Monteux, Leopold Stokowski, Sergei Rachmaninoff, Jascha Heifitz, Gregor Piatigorsky, Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein, Boris Goldovsky, and the donor, Olga Koussevitzky.

The winning bid benefiting the Berkshire Music Center was $152.

Retired Banker Scores a Hit With 'Income Tax' Madrigal

Flouffe

TAX-RETURN WOES gave rise to former bank president Avery Claflin's "Lament for April 15," discussed before world premiere at Tanglewood last night by the composer, left, and conductor Hugh Ross, who led performance by Tanglewood choir.

TANGLEWOOD — "Lament for April 15," a short choral work, had its premiere last night in the course of Tanglewood on Parade. Its subject was the income tax, and its composer a retired banker, formerly president of the French-American Banking Corp. of Brooklyn, N.Y.

The 5½-minute piece was sung from the steps of the Tanglewood administration building by the student choir, under Hugh Ross' direction, while visitors ate their picnic suppers on the lawns.

Composer Attends

The composer, Avery Claflin, 57, was present for the premiere, having driven over from his summer home at Rensselaerville, N.Y. He told interviewers of his studies in music with Erik Satie before World War I, and described how, after his recent retirement, he decided to return to his composition. He was at work on a suite for string orchestra when interrupted by the dull task of preparing his 1955 income tax return.

As he read the instructions, the words persisted in forming a rhythmic pattern. Instead of filing his return, he first wrote his "Lament," arranging six excerpts from the tax instructions for a five-voice group and chorus.

The composition opens with the words, "Who must file," sung last night by soloist Kalman Novak of Cambridge. The chorus then answers, "Every citizen or resident of the United States—whether an adult or a minor—who had $600 ($1,200 if 65 years of age or over) must file." Even the parentheses are pronounced by the chorus.

Something of a lyrical height is attained by the quintet, which dwells at length on the words, "You can deduct your mother-in-law." At last the chorus cuts off this section with a resounding, "But," and plunges on into the fine print.

At the end, all are assured that "After reading these instructions you should be able to prepare your return, (pause) unless you have complicated problems."

Mr. Ross, both in introducing the work and in conducting it, drew laughter by his mock gravity. Audience reaction was epitomized by one lady's gay, "Isn't that cute!"

BSO and RCA Renew Contract

TANGLEWOOD—A long term renewal of the 40-year recording association of the Boston Symphony Orchestra with RCA Victor Records was announced last night during Tanglewood on Parade festivities at the Berkshire Music Festival.

The signing of a new contract extending the existing exclusive recording association of the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras with their respective conductors, Charles Munch and Arthur Fiedler, took place in the library of the Main House on the grounds at Tanglewood.

RCA President Here

The contract was signed by Henry B. Cabot, president of the board of trustees; Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the Boston Symphony; Charles Munch, music director; and Mr. Fiedler, conductor of the Boston Pops with Lawrence W. Kanaga, vice president and operations manager, RCA Victor Records. Making his first appearance at Tanglewood on Parade for the occasion was Frank M. Folsom, president of the Radio Corporation of America, who witnessed the contract signing with members of the board of trustees of the Boston Symphony, who included Michael T. Kelleher, Lewis Perry, C. D. Jackson, Talcott M. Banks Jr., Edward A. Taft.

Following the contract signing, the participants and members of the press covering Tanglewood on Parade adjourned to a cocktail party on the grounds.

The orchestra's first recording session under its new contract will take place on Aug. 15 and 16 at Symphony Hall, Boston. Conducting one session on the eve of his departure for a European holiday prior to the opening of the BSO's fall season will be Charles Munch, with Pierre Monteux, guest conductor for the Boston Symphony, conducting the second session.

The first symphony orchestra in the nation to make phonograph records, the Boston Symphony's career on records dates back to 1916 when the first discs were made for the Victor Talking Machine Co. The Boston Symphony Orchestra's forthcoming 1955-56 season of symphony concerts represents the 75th anniversary of the orchestra.

In Brief . . .

Connie's fretful tears yesterday are estimated to have cost the Berkshire Music Center $10,000 at the gate in the Tanglewood on Parade benefit. Her peeve is the more annoying because every dollar would have been matched by the Rockefeller Foundation . . . Considering the ruggedness of the terrain it's surprising how few airplane fatalities, such as yesterday's crash on Brick House Mountain, there are in the Berkshires. On the other hand, the Garnet Peak disaster in Peru in 1942 when a military transport crashed on a training mission killing 16 GIs could last us a lifetime . . . If personable Archie Moore is as quick with his gloves as he is in accepting Berkshire service club invitations to speak, he'll keep on his feet in Yankee Stadium in September . . .

The Laurel Hill Association in asking a noted planner to deliver the principal address at its annual do in Stockbridge on Aug. 27 could not have been more forehanded. With the Massachusetts Throughway scheduled for completion November, 1956, the question yet to be answered is whether Berkshire towns along its route want to be forewarned . . . Stockbridge has formally asked Lenox how to deal with the scantily clad to which our informal advice would be to look the other way unless she's worth looking at . . .

August 13

Symphony Group Has Rehearsal At Tanglewood

Practices Today for Concert With Boston Orchestra Tomorrow

Eighty - one singers from the Springfield Orchestra Association's Symphony Chorus will leave for Lenox early this morning for an 11 a. m. rehearsal of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony with the Boston Symphony and Tanglewood Chorus directed by Charles Munch. This is the final rehearsal before a performance Sunday afternoon at 2.30 in the Music Shed of the Berkshire Music Festival.

Second Season

This is the second successive season the Symphony Chorus has had an invitation to sing a major symphonic work with the Boston Symphony. Last year the chorus participated in a performance of the Berlioz "Requiem" and received high praise from Mr. Munch and Hugh Ross, director of the Choral Department at Tanglewood.

Since the Symphony's new music director, Robert L. Staffanson, does not arrive in Springfield until September, Ross, assisted by John Kruger from his staff, has conducted Beethoven Ninth Symphony rehearsals at Technical High School during July and August.

Symphony Chorus officers are: Ernest W. Furnans, Jr., Wilbraham, president; Ruth Gebeau, Wilbraham, vice-president; Louise Wolfson, Wilbraham, corresponding secretary; Helen Ritsher, Longmeadow, recording secretary; Helen Zea, Springfield, treasurer; Emerald Abbott, Springfield, assistant treasurer; Leslie Bezanson, Springfield, librarian.

Singers in the Sunday performance, from Springfield unless otherwise indicated, include: Sopranos, Eleanor Anderson; Margaret Aspinall, Effie Plaice; and Blanche Chilson, Westfield; Ruth Donnis, South Hadley; Henrietta Dunn and Marcia Francis; Eleanor Graves and Marion Magee, Northampton; Ruth McElwain and Mildred Harris; Mary Migdoll and Dora Nowak, Indian Orchard.

Altos: Katharine Atwood, Barbara Biever, Marion Coles, Gertrude Cowles and Mary Ellen Cullinan, Springfield; Maryke de Boer, Longmeadow; Beverly Nessell and Madeline Getchell, Wilbraham; Janet Hale, West Springfield; Hope Harder, Florence Jones, Eugenia Kuras, Barbara Murphy, Barbara Rochford, Beatrice Smith, Clio Stearns and Joyce Walker.

Tenors: James Denning and Homer Mallary; Joseph Donnis, South Hadley; James Wallace, Wilbraham; Norman Wrigley, Longmeadow; Ellis Wyman, West Springfield.

Basses: Bruce Skipton, Paul Atwood, and Alfonso Coles, John F. Henry and Donald King, Amherst; Beven D. Long, East Longmeadow; Robert MacFarlane and Morey Stearns, Donald Tull, James Prophy and Robert Tull, Wilbraham; Ernest J. Hills, Longmeadow; J. Richard Keating, Northampton.

Augmenting the chorus will be Gilbert Vickers, from the Springfield College music staff and Henry Teller, Williston Academy music director and associate conductor of the Hampshire Choral Society of Northampton.

Teller will bring two June graduates of Williston Academy who reside in Longmeadow, Harlow G. Ide, Jr., president of the glee club at Williston, and Carl G. Ericson, vice-president.

Plan Journey to Lenox

With Leslie Bezanson, Springfield Symphony Chorus librarian, pointing out the route on a map, members of the singing group plan their trip to Lenox for participation tomorrow afternoon in a concert at the Berkshire Music Festival. Mrs. Louise Folsom, extreme left, is corresponding secretary of the chorus. Mrs. Helen Ritscher is recording secretary.

Daily Argus, Mount Vernon, N.Y., Tues., Aug. 2, 1955

NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman

WESTCHESTER MUSIC STUDENTS AT TANGLEWOOD

MUSIC MAKERS

The recent announcement that an Empire State Festival is to take place in Ellenville, N. Y., indicates that the sponsors of that activity have caught up with the special fervor for Summer music that has been so long a feature of the Massachusetts' vacation lure. The Ellenville project will include the contribution of the NBC Symphony Orchestra which was formerly conducted by Arturo Toscanini and besides, a series of operas the first of which will be "La Boheme" to be followed by "Madame Butterfly", "La Traviata" and "Cosi Fan Tutte". There will also be a series of soloists among whom are Eugene List, pianist; Leonard Rose, cellist, Oscar Shumsky, violinist, and Jose Limon and his company of dancers. In short, the festival spirit has caught up with New York State and this indicates an awareness on the part of the promoters that the Summer weeks are just right for a projection of these art forms.

* * *

For a long time now the festival of music urge has been bustin' out all over and no little credit must be given to that long known establishment located in the Berkshires, in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

* * *

This writer, in his Summer wandering along the eastern seaboard inspecting Summer theatres, show-tents which feature popular operettas, the full program of dance at Jacob's Pillow, and the Berkshire music program, has repeatedly pointed out in these columns that a vast amount of New Yorkers were making pilgrimages to the excellent anchorage there of melody under the auspices of the Boston Symphony Orchestra with the chief direction by Charles Munch. Now that New York State is joining in, the interest in symphony and opera will only tend to widen the audiences for both festivals; and if we are in for more hot Summers the caravans to the mountains will increase as appeal for this type of popular hearing spreads.

* * *

A particularly interesting facet of the Berkshire Music Center is the campus for music students who come from 38 states and 18 foreign countries to study in the very lap of the Boston Symphony. This center was established in 1940 so that serious young musicians may add to their professional training and artistic experience. The faculty of the school has proven a magnet for the young people. It includes such notables as Leonard Bernstein, Richard Burgin, Boston Symphony's Associate Conductor, William Kroll, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Ingolf Dahl and members of the symphony. This season 405 students have come to study and among them are top composers from Japan, Chile, France, Brazil and other quarters of this ever growing smaller world.

* * *

Ten of the students have enrolled from Westchester County. Some are Salvatore Martirano, Suzanne Heckman, Alice Handleman, Jack Gottlieb, Helene Goldberg and Robert Miller who are shown above with Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the school.

The Berkshire Festival ends August 14th but the Ellenville tones go on through the first week of September.

kshire Evening Eagle

Massachusetts, Friday, August 12, 1955.

Plouffe

TOP PRIZE WINNERS at Tanglewood on Parade pose with Miss Margo Miller, left, secretary of the community committee, sponsors of the annual Berkshire Music Center benefit. Miss Naomi Goldsmith of New York, center, won the RCA-Victor high fidelity phonograph; and Mrs. Albert Sterner of Richmond, right, a General Electric refrigerator. Eleven prizes were awarded, six to county residents, after intermission.

Tanglewood Tenor To Sing at First Church

Harold Johnson, tenor with the opera department at Tanglewood, will be soloist Sunday at the First Congregational Church. Mr. Johnson is a senior at the University of Illinois, and last winter sang with the Lyric Theatre in Chicago.

He is singing in two of the operas which are being given at Tanglewood: "Romeo and Juliet" by Blacher, and "Zaide" by Mozart.

is garden behind ... for old-timers and others who may be footsore. . . . If you lack the price of admission at Tanglewood, a dime will get you the program in one of the phone booths just outside the gate. Called a number the other night, and found phone wires rebroadcasting the program, or something, and couldn't even hear other party it was so loud. . . . Mileage is a funny thing. From New Ashford, via Brody Mountain to Malden Bridge, N.Y., is 25 miles, the same as from Pittsfield. Must ...

Sadie McCollum Soloist Sunday

STOCKBRIDGE — Miss Sadie McCollum of Meridian, Miss., a scholarship student at Tanglewood will be guest soloist at the First Congregational Church Sunday at the 11 a.m. service.

Miss McCollum a mezzo-soprano, has studied for 11 years at colleges. She was four years at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music; she studied at the Juilliard School of Music in Baltimore and in Vienna for a year and a half as a Fulbright scholar, and for three and a half years at International House in New York. She was invited to sing in Rome at Santa Cecilia while singing in Salzburg. She has also sung in Switzerland, France and Germany. In the fall she will sing in concerts, at the Colony Club and for 30 weeks at the Met under Leopold Saches.

Berkshire Eagle 8/12

Music

Tanglewood Parade Runs From Solemn to Hilarious

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE ANNUAL one-day carnival at Tanglewood which by now is a tradition of Berkshire Festivals always ends in a climactic gala concert in the big tent at the close of the seven-hour program. (They call it "the great Shed" for the regular concerts.) Last night's will give way to none in the past for excitement, interest and gaiety, both planned and unplanned.

In one of the most emotional moments of Leonard Bernstein's piano solo, while he was playing Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" with the Boston Pops orchestra under Arthur Fiedler, one of the percussionists—let him remain unidentified—fell into his drums and cymbals. Martin and Lewis never contrived a more hilarious moment in all their careers. Bernstein took it in wonderful good sportsmanship and enjoyed the unrehearsed interpolation as much as anyone, and never allowed it to detract or alter the incandescent performance of the Rhapsody which he, with the truly splendid support of Fiedler, was giving.

* * *

THE POPS orchestra played a short few programmed numbers for their half of the concert and added a few, but not enough, additional ones which are always the most anticipated on the program. "Davy Crockett" and a thrilling "Buglers' Holiday" were among the kind that had everyone a-tingle and demanding more.

The first part of the program had been devoted to a first performance of Bernstein's new suite for orchestra written on the music he composed for the prize-winning movie, "On the Waterfront." This might give a still better impression when it is conducted by someone other than the comp r, for, granted his talents in that capacity, he seemed to be extra anxious for his offspring last night and forced the orchestra off balance in the busiest parts of the score.

* * *

THE LOVE STORY is graphically wr ten and the Boston orchestra strings gave him to the utmost of their ample abilities, but he allowed the brass to blow so strongly at the same time that the picture, we feel sure, was distorted. The register for the strings he chose for this particular section and the instruments he selected to play the introduction were examples of his fine intuition and craftsmanship. We had the impression that this was going to be a prime lesson in orchestration, but he strayed from what we thought was a wonderful start to intricacy and traffic snarls without apparent rationality. A lovely solo for the oboe which next passes to the flute was a gem of rare beauty and there were other excerpts which will bear remembering.

The well-known actor Claude Rains was the narrator in Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," and he was eloquent with dignity. This is one of Copland's most successful scores and Bernstein's conducting and Rains' expressive delivery were in exactly the right vein.

Springfield Union 8/13

Scholarships Given to Seven At Tanglewood

Lenox, Aug. 12—Seven scholarships and cash awards to students of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood were announced today. Tuition scholarships, and cash prizes will be presented at intermission of Saturday afternoon's concert by the student symphony orchestra in the Music Shed by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center.

The Gregor Piatigorsky Prize, value $250, has been awarded by the noted musician to student cellest Alice Q. Ober, 24, of Pasadena, Cal.

The High Fidelity Magazine Scholarship, value $250, goes to Peyton Higgison, 28, of Mobile, Ala.

The Serge Koussevitzky Composition prize, value $250, given by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation in honor of the former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for a work composed at Tanglewood this season went to Edward Jay Miller, 25, of Miami Beach, Fla.

The Samuel Wechsler Commission, value $300, goes to Jacob Druckman, of New York City.

Through the interest of the Industrial Buildings Corp. of Chicopee, there has been initiated this year an annual prize of $250 to a student composer, in memory of Raphael Sagalyn, given this year to Salvatore Martirano, 28, of New Rochelle, N. Y. The prize-winning composition, entitled "Contrasto", is to be performed Saturday afternoon during the first half of the student symphony concert, Seymour Lipkin conducting. Two scholarships, which cancel a student's indebtedness to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund for his tuition received from this fund are awarded to student horn players Barth Bennitt, 23, of Miami, Fla., and Richard A. Fiske, 21, of Upton, Mass. Both are valued at $150.

In addition to the awards announced today, 14 pupils have attended the 13th session of the Berkshire Music Center on scholarships awarded at the beginning of the season.

Herald Statesman, Yonkers, N. Y.
Tues., Aug. 25 1953

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman

WESTCHESTER MUSIC STUDENTS AT TANGLEWOOD

MUSIC MAKERS

The recent announcement that an Empire State Festival is to take place in Ellenville, N. Y., indicates that the sponsors of that activity have caught up with the special fervor for Summer music that has been so long a feature of the Massachusetts' vacation lure. The Ellenville project will include the contribution of the NBC Symphony Orchestra which was formerly conducted by Arturo Toscanini and besides a series of operas the first of which will be "La Boheme", to be followed by "Madame Butterfly", "La Traviata" and "Cosi Fan Tutte". There will also be a series of soloists among whom are Eugene List, pianist; Leonard Rose, cellist, Oscar Shumsky, violinist, and Jose Limon and his company of dancers. In short, the festival spirit has caught up with New York State and this indicates an awareness on the part of the promoters that the Summer weeks are just right for a projection of these art forms.

* * *

For a long time now the festival of music urge has been bustin' out all over and no little credit must be given to that long known establishment located in the Berkshires, in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

* * *

This writer, in his Summer wandering along the eastern seaboard inspecting Summer theatres, show-tents which feature popular operettas, the full program of dance at Jacob's Pillow, and the Berkshire music program, has repeatedly pointed out in these columns that a vast amount of New Yorkers were making pilgrimages to the excellent anchorage there of melody under the auspices of the Boston Symphony Orchestra with the chief direction by Charles Munch. Now that New York State is joining in, the interest in symphony and opera will only tend to widen the audiences for both festivals: and if we are in for more hot Summers the caravans to the mountains will increase as appeal for this type of popular hearing spreads.

* * *

A particularly interesting facet of the Berkshire Music Center is the campus for music students who come from 38 states and 18 foreign countries to study in the very lap of the Boston Symphony. This center was established in 1940 so that serious young musicians may add to their professional training and artistic experience. The faculty of the school has proven a magnet for the young people. It includes such notables as Leonard Bernstein, Richard Burgin, Boston Symphony's Associate Conductor, William Kroll, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Ingolf Dahl and members of the symphony. This season 405 students have come to study and among them are top composers from Japan, Chile, France, Brazil and other quarters of this ever growing smaller world.

* * *

Ten of the students have enrolled from Westchester County. Some are Salvatore Martirano, Suzanne Heckman, Alice Handleman, Jack Gottlieb, Helene Goldberg and Robert Miller who are shown above with Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the school.

The Berkshire Festival ends August 14th but the Ellenville tones go on through the first week of September.

William J. Cox, chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, and Mrs. Cox are spending the week in Stockbridge at the Pilgrim Inn.

William M. Judd of New York is spending August on vacation at the Meadowlark, his summer home, on the Dugway, Glendale.

Mr. and Mrs. George White and Mr. and Mrs. Irving M. White and children, Carolyn, Patty and Brenda, of 107 Appleton Ave., have returned from a nine-day holiday at the 1750 House, Hyannis, Cape Cod.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Mazzer of 119 Ridgeway Ave. have returned after a week's vacation at Niagara Falls, Canada and Hampton Beach, N.H.

Berkshire Festival Closes Sunday

The Berkshire Festival at Lenox, Mass., moves into its final week-end of orchestral concerts tomorrow night with Charles Munch conducting an all-French program featuring the "Fantastic Symphony" of Berlioz; Debussy's "La Mer" and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite, No. 2.

Saturday night's concert finds Pierre Monteux on the podium with Brahms' Symphony No. 3; Debussy's "Three Nocturnes" and Strauss' Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier."

The final event takes place Sunday afternoon when Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, assisted in the fiital movement by the Festival Chorus under the direction of Hugh Ross. Soloists will be: Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass.

For further information telephone Lenox 600.

N.Y. Post Thurs. Aug. 13

Springfield Union 8/13

Ravel, Debussy Works Exciting At Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 12—Charles Munch, one of the foremost interpreters of the music of Hector Berlioz, opened the last Friday night concert in the shed with the "Symphonie Fantastique," a work with which he scored a great success last season when the festival was centered around Berlioz. The change in program was necessitated by the illness of cellist Piatagorsky who was to have appeared with the orchestra.

Uncomfortable Listening

We are told that Hurricane Connie has nothing to do with the steady rain we have had all day, but it couldn't have been wetter if she were pouring it on. Naturally the audience suffered, but there was a large number of stalwart listeners on hand.

In this evening's all-French program, Mr. Munch included "La Mer" by Debussy and the second "Daphne et Echlose" suite by Ravel. Few symphonies have the savage impact of the Fantastique. Berlioz himself was somewhat awed at its results. It is the kind of music on which the Boston Orchestra thrives. Tonight there was a solidity, richness of tone, dynamic range and an inner excitement that almost brought the audience to its feet.

Ravel, Debussy

Continued From Page 1

There was beautiful utterance of the long-lined melody of the opening movement in which the "Estelle" motif is first announced which is to be "idee fixe" of the entire symphony. The waltz-Scherzo of the ball scene was inimitable in its grace and in its dramatic impact when the scene suddenly changes mood. The English horn and oboe sang sweetly in the Scene Au Champs.

"La Mer" by Debussy was always one of the great performances of the Boston Symphony Orchestra when led by Serge Koussevitzky. It continues to be a notable performance as led by Charles Munch. The symphony strings shimmer with myriad colors and the mysterious moods are communicated. There is, however, a sort of realism in the Munch conception that often obscures the fanciful nature of this music and makes of it more a tone poem than a thing of moods. This is music which must be remote from reality if it is to faithfully mirror the dreams of the composer.

Rich, Colorful

The scoring of "Daphne et Chloe" by Ravel, is so rich and colorful that it practically plays itself without the benefit of profound interpretation. The amazing flute cadenza tonight was played with ravishing tone by Doriot Anthony Dwyer.

Pierre Monteux takes over tomorrow night in the shed conducting a diversified program.

The festival will end Sunday when Mr. Munch leads the augmented festival chorus, orchestra and soloists in Beethoven's "Symphony No. 9 in D Minor." The soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. Members of the Springfield Symphony chorus will appear with festival chorus.

Standard-Star, New Rochelle, N. Y.—Tues., Aug. 2, 1955

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman

WESTCHESTER MUSIC STUDENTS AT TANGLEWOOD

MUSIC MAKERS

The recent announcement that an Empire State Festival is to take place in Ellenville, N. Y., indicates that the sponsors of that activity have caught up with the special fervor for Summer music that has been so long a feature of the Massachusetts' vacation lure. The Ellenville project will include the contribution of the NBC Symphony Orchestra which was formerly conducted by Arturo Toscanini and besides, a series of operas the first of which will be "La Boheme" to be followed by "Madame Butterfly", "La Traviata" and "Cosi Fan Tutte". There will also be a series of soloists among whom are Eugene List, pianist; Leonard Rose, cellist, Oscar Shumsky, violinist, and Jose Limon and his company of dancers. In short, the festival spirit has caught up with New York State and this indicates an awareness on the part of the promoters that the Summer weeks are just right for a projection of these art forms.

* * *

For a long time now the festival of music urge has been bustin' out all over and no little credit must be given to that long known establishment located in the Berkshires, in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

* * *

This writer, in his Summer wandering along the eastern seaboard inspecting Summer theatres, show-tents which feature popular operettas, the full program of dance at Jacob's Pillow, and the Berkshire music program, has repeatedly pointed out in these columns that a vast amount of New Yorkers were making pilgrimages to the excellent anchorage there of melody under the auspices of the Boston Symphony Orchestra with the chief direction by Charles Munch. Now that New York State is joining in, the interest in symphony and opera will only tend to widen the audiences for both festivals: and if we are in for more hot Summers the caravans to the mountains will increase as appeal for this type of popular hearing spreads.

* * *

A particularly interesting facet of the Berkshire Music Center is the campus for music students who come from 38 states and 18 foreign countries to study in the very lap of the Boston Symphony. This center was established in 1940 so that serious young musicians may add to their professional training and artistic experience. The faculty of the school has proven a magnet for the young people. It includes such notables as Leonard Bernstein, Richard Burgin, Boston Symphony's Associate Conductor, William Kroll, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Ingolf Dahl and members of the symphony. This season 405 students have come to study and among them are top composers from Japan, Chile, France, Brazil and other quarters of this ever growing smaller world.

* * *

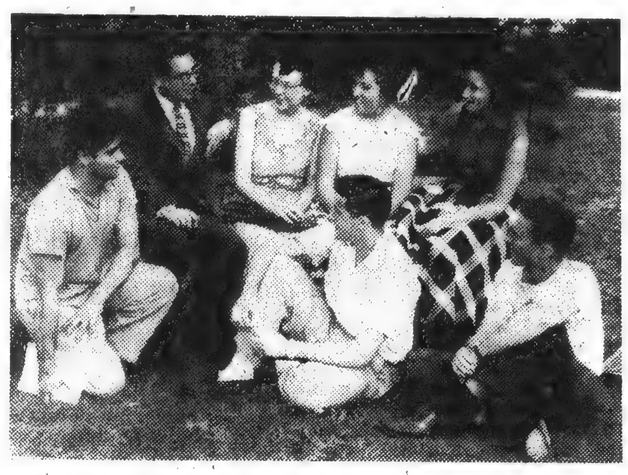
Ten of the students have enrolled from Westchester County. Some are Salvatore Martirano, Suzanne Heckman, Alice Handleman, Jack Gottlieb, Helene Goldberg and Robert Miller who are shown above with Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the school.

The Berkshire Festival ends August 14th but the Ellenville tones go on through the first week of September.

The Citizen Register, Ossining, N. Y., Tues., Aug. 2, 1955

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman



WESTCHESTER MUSIC STUDENTS AT TANGLEWOOD

MUSIC MAKERS

The recent announcement that an Empire State Festival is to take place in Ellenville, N. Y., indicates that the sponsors of that activity have caught up with the special fervor for Summer music that has been so long a feature of the Massachusetts' vacation lure. The Ellenville project will include the contribution of the NBC Symphony Orchestra which was formerly conducted by Arturo Toscanini and besides, a series of operas the first of which will be "La Boheme" to be followed by "Madame Butterfly", "La Traviata" and "Cosi Fan Tutte". There will also be a series of soloists among whom are Eugene List, pianist; Leonard Rose, cellist, Oscar Shumsky, violinist, and Jose Limon and his company of dancers. In short, the festival spirit has caught up with New York State and this indicates an awareness on the part of the promoters that the Summer weeks are just right for a projection of these art forms.

* * *

For a long time now the festival of music urge has been bustin' out all over and no little credit must be given to that long known establishment located in the Berkshires, in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

* * *

This writer, in his Summer wandering along the eastern seaboard inspecting Summer theatres, show-tents which feature popular operettas, the full program of dance at Jacob's Pillow, and the Berkshire music program, has repeatedly pointed out in these columns that a vast amount of New Yorkers were making pilgrimages to the excellent anchorage there of melody under the auspices of the Boston Symphony Orchestra with the chief direction by Charles Munch. Now that New York State is joining in, the interest in symphony and opera will only tend to widen the audiences for both festivals: and if we are in for more hot Summers the caravans to the mountains will increase as appeal for this type of popular hearing spreads.

* * *

A particularly interesting facet of the Berkshire Music Center is the campus for music students who come from 38 states and 18 foreign countries to study in the very lap of the Boston Symphony. This center was established in 1940 so that serious young musicians may add to their professional training and artistic experience. The faculty of the school has proven a magnet for the young people. It includes such notables as Leonard Bernstein, Richard Burgin, Boston Symphony's Associate Conductor, William Kroll, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Ingolf Dahl and members of the symphony. This season 405 students have come to study and among them are top composers from Japan, Chile, France, Brazil and other quarters of this ever growing smaller world.

* * *

Ten of the students have enrolled from Westchester County. Some are Salvatore Martirano, Suzanne Heckman, Alice Handleman, Jack Gottlieb, Helene Goldberg and Robert Miller who are shown above with Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the school.

The Berkshire Festival ends August 14th but the Ellenville tones go on through the first week of September.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

AUG 6 1955

Tanglewood Performance Not Up To Standard

Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" is a massive magnificent work, a standing revelation of the composer's belief in God. Last night, the Boston Symphony Orchestra with soloists and festival chorus performed the Mass at Tanglewood in honor of Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the Berkshire Music School and guilding spirit of the festival.

The orchestra is, of course, a suberb unit, and it performed with style and grace, providing integrated backdrop for the choral utterances. The chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, was enthusiastic and followed direction of Conductor Leonard Bernstein admirably. The soloists sang with style and feeling, especially Miss Addison and Miss Alberts.

The "Benedictus," with violin solo revealing the theme taken alternately by quartet and chorus, was the most successful movement, but much of the evening was very gratifying.

Unfortunately, Mr. Bernstein gave the impression throughout of directing a qui vive gallop, and the mighty Mass is certainly not this. Frenetic display of energy, for its own sake, while a thing of wonder on a hot humid night, serves only to distract. Personal idiosyncracies are not usually a subject for comment but last night Mr. Bernstein's mannerisms produced a permeating staccato effect alien to the spirit and musical text of the Mass. Mr. Bernstein, too, reached extremes in tempi which were not happy.

The chorus, too, was not well balanced. The music is extremely difficult, actually calling for tireless voices. There just weren't enough tenors and basses to match the soprano and alto sections, and the sopranos many times sounded shrill.

Beethoven did not spare his singers, either choristers or soloists. The chorus sounded tired, and the quartet did too. Fortunately Miss Addison and Miss Alberts are both fine singers and fine musicians, Mr. Lloyd, the tenor, has ample style, but the voice sounded lustreless and pinched.

Although there were many fine things about the performance, the powerful fugue in the Gloria, the dramatic dynamic contrasts, the thoughtful and effective Agnes Dei, with the solo introduction offset by telling repititions of Miserere Nobis by the chorus, the evening was not as successful as it should have been. The performance did not measure up to high Tanglewood standards.—B. D.

County Residents, Guests At Tanglewood On Parade

Dr. Robert P. Knight, medical director of Riggs Foundation, Stockbridge, second from right, and his brother, Paul D. Knight of Chicago, discuss the Tanglewood on Parade program with the latter's wife. Seated at left is Mrs. Adele Blasingame. Paul Knight is a speech pathologist in private practice.

Between numbers Mrs. Marion R. Hollingsworth of Lenox chats with Lt. Gov. Sumner Whittier, Lenox Selectman Ralph Henry Barnes and State Police Sgt. John LaPointe, guests of the Boston Symphony.

All photos by Flouffe

During intermission occupants of Roger W. Wellington's box chat with friends. Left to right are Harrison L. Amber, Harry C. Dutton, Mrs. Amber, Mr. Wellington and Lenox resident Robert Hibbard. The short intermission was followed by door prize drawings, with Boris Goldovsky as master of ceremonies.

Music: Big Play at Lenox

Ball Goes From Boston to Pops to Puccini

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 11— "Tanglewood on Parade," the hours-long fiesta wherein the hundreds of musicians at Tanglewood strut their stuff, took place Thursday afternoon and evening with undiminished spirit despite overcast skies, frequent showers and the pother about the storm named Connie.

The bad weather cut down the size of the crowd, which was too bad for those who had planned to come and found they couldn't. It was also too bad for the exchequer, since the proceeds go to the school here known as the Berkshire Music Center.

But there were almost 7,000 men, women and children on the Tanglewood grounds. And if they were curious and their legs and ears held out, they could hear anything from old music to new, symphonic music to opera, serious material to cheerful stuff. From 4 to 11 P. M. there was scarcely a moment when one couldn't hear some kind of musical performance.

•

The big show took place in the big shed when the Boston Symphony Orchestra, first in its own identity and then converted by the mere use of a different name into the Boston Pops Orchestra, did the performing.

Leonard Bernstein was the conductor in the first half of this program. He directed the Boston Symphony in the first performance of his suite based on his music for the film "On the Waterfront." With Claude Rains as narrator, he also directed Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait."

Mr. Bernstein's suite makes great, big, beautiful sounds. It conveys some atmosphere, but if you had not seen the movie, you would have difficulty associating this music with its violence. Every bit of it comes off, but it goes on too long. It has a kind of spaciousness that might pass for nobility. When James Stagliano, the first horn player, went offstage for a few moments, someone asked, "Who was that who went off?" One felt like replying, "The ghost of Richard Strauss."

Mr. Bernstein got a rousing performance of this work from the Boston Symphony. Then he did equally well with Mr. Copland's touching hymn to Lincoln and democracy. Mr. Rains read the soaring words of the sixteenth President with fervor.

In the second half Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Boston Pops, took over on the podium. He conducted Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Capriccio Espagnol," Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue, with the busy Mr. Bernstein as the piano soloist, and the Strauss-Dorati "Graduation Ball" suite. Mr. Fiedler, who knows how to get some fun out of music, led performances of characteristic humor and gusto.

The day began with performances by the Tanglewood study group in the barn. At the same time the Opera Department offered Puccini's "Gianni Schicchi" in the theatre-concert hall. Showers caused the transfer of this show from the formal garden.

Then, at 5:45 there was a fanfare and Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the center, formally welcomed the audience. Simultaneous performances followed, by the student orchestra, led by student conductors in the staging opera scenes by the Opera Department in the theatre-concert hall, and music by Tanglewood composers in the chamber music hall.

•

During the afternoon the signing of a new contract between the Boston Symphony and R. C. A. Victor took place. A group of officials led by Frank M. Folsom, president of the Radio Corporation of America, came up for the day to sign the agreement. Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the orchestra; Charles Munch, its conductor, and Mr. Fiedler took part in the ceremony.

While the official announcement said only that the contract was "a long-term renewal of the forty-year recording association" of these two groups, it was learned from a Victor official that the pact was for five years. Under its terms Victor is expected to concentrate its major effort in this country on the Boston Symphony and the Boston Pops.

H. T.

NY Times 8/14

NEWPORT MUSIC FESTIVAL
Newport Casino
Newport, R. I.

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M., Gluck's Orpheus (in concert form), performed by the Newport Festival Orchestra and Chorus directed by Remus Tzincocas and Martha Lipton, mezzo-soprano; Eva Likova, soprano.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

TODAY, 10 A. M., Chamber Music Hall. Program of chamber music by students of Department I.
TODAY, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch; Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; Festival Chorus augmented by members of the Chorus of the Springfield, Mass., Symphony.
Beethoven program: Leonore Overture No. 3; Symphony No. 9.

FOLK AND JAZZ ROUNDTABLE
Berkshire Music Barn
Lenox, Mass.

MONDAY, 8:40 P. M., Dizzy Gillespie and

Public Events

Tonight

7:00—Annual YMCA water show, Camp Merrill, Pontoosuc Lake.
8:30—Berkshire Festival concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting program of French music. Tanglewood Music Shed, Lenox.
8:[illegible]—"The Late George Apley." Williamstown summer theater.
8:45—"The Tender Trap." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.
8:45—"Here We Come Gathering." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.
9:00—Jacob's Pillow dance festival, featuring Moscelyne Larkin and Michael Maule, Myra Kinch & Co. and Priyagopal. East of Lee.

Tomorrow

All day—Second annual Berkshire County fair, Hancock.
10:00 a.m.—Public rehearsal of Boston Symphony Orchestra, benefiting BSO pension fund. Tanglewood, Lenox.
1:30 p.m.—Tenth annual City of Pittsfield-Berkshire County swimming meet, Pontoosuc Lake beach.
2:30 p.m.—"The Tender Trap." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.
2:30 p.m.—"Here We Come Gathering." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.
2:30 p.m.—"The Late George Apley." Williamstown summer theater.
3:00 p.m.—Student orchestra concert. Tanglewood Music Shed, Lenox.
4:00 p.m.—New York Woodwind Quartet, with George Schick, piano. South Mountain Music Temple, Pittsfield.
4:00 p.m.—Richard Dyer-Bennet. Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox.
4:00 p.m.—Jacob's Pillow dance festival. East of Lee.

County Residents, Guests At Tanglewood On Parade

Dr. Robert P. Knight, medical director of Riggs Foundation, Stockbridge, second from right, and his brother, Paul D. Knight of Chicago, discuss the Tanglewood on Parade program with the latter's wife. Seated at left is Mrs. Adele Blasingame. Paul Knight is a speech pathologist in private practice.

Between numbers Mrs. Marion R. Hollingsworth of Lenox chats with Lt. Gov. Sumner Whittier, Lenox Selectman Ralph Henry Barnes and State Police Sgt. John LaPointe, guests of the Boston Symphony.

During intermission occupants of Roger W. Wellington's box chat with friends. Left to right are Harrison L. Amber, Harry C. Dutton, Mrs. Amber, Mr. Wellington and Lenox resident Robert Hibbard. The short intermission was followed by door prize drawings, with Boris Goldovsky as master of ceremonies.

All photos by Plouffe

, Massachusetts, Friday, August 12, 1955.

Plouffe

TOP PRIZE WINNER at Tanglewood on Parade pose with Miss Margo Miller, left, secretary of the community committee, sponsors of the annual Berkshire Music Center benefit. Miss Naomi Goldsmith of New York, center, won the RCA-Victor high fidelity phonograph; and Mrs. Albert Sterner of Richmond, right, a General Electric refrigerator. Eleven prizes were awarded, six to county residents, after intermission.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Sentinel (m)
WATERVILLE, Me.
Independent
Circ. 17,352

AUG 10 1955

N. A. T. S. Holds Weekend Session At Tanglewood

The National Association of Teachers of Singing held its first meeting at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., last weekend.

Mrs. Edward J. Colgan is lieutenant governor of the Northeastern District of N. A. T. S., and this was one of the first activities inaugurated by her.

Accompanying Mrs. Colgan were Mrs. Mary Marston of Skowhegan Miss Mercia Merrill of Cape Elizabeth and Madame Verdeyn of Pittsburgh, who joined the group at Tanglewood. Mrs. Colgan and her group were house guests of Mrs. Spencer Logan, whose daughter Mimi is a former student at Oak Grove School and a pupil of Mrs. Colgan.

The N. A. T. S. held a luncheon at the Hotel Curtis. Fred Jagel of the Metropolitan Opera Company, now on the staff at the New England conservatory spoke on the need for permanent opera companies to give young singers an opportunity to learn the repertoire while being paid. Miss Ruth Douglass, head of the vocal department at Mount Holyoke College, told of her program to be given at Town Hall at Christmas, and discussed the contest to find the outstanding singer of the year to be held in Chicago in December.

Among soloists on the program were Leontyne Price, who will be one of the artists on the Portland Community Concert; Rudolf Serkin and Isaac Stern.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

AUG 11 1955

Concert in Big Shed Feature Of 'Tanglewood on Parade'

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit program for the Berkshire Music center, will get underway at 5.45 o'clock this afternoon at Tanglewood in Lenox.

Concert in Big Shed

Highlight of the affair will be the concert in the big shed, scheduled to get underway at 8.15 o'clock.

The first part of the program will feature the Boston Symphony orchestra under the direction of Leonard Bernstein. The opening work will be the first performance of a suite from the music which Mr. Bernstein wrote for the motion picture, "On the Waterfront. That will be followed by Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," with Claude Rains, star of stage, screen and television, as the narrator.

After the intermission, the Boston Pops orchestra will take the stage, with Arthur Fiedler as conductor. Featured work in the second half will be Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue," with Mr. Bernstein as piano soloist. Also to be heard are "Capriccio Espagnol" by Rimsky-Korsakov and a number of typical Pops selections.

Fanfare at 5.45

The fanfare and welcome to the benefit program will be at 5.45 near the big shed. Beginning at 6 o'clock there will be simultaneous demonstrations by students in the four departments of the summer music school.

The student orchestra will play in the shed and the opera department will perform in the theater-concert hall. The Tanglewood composers will have a concert in the chamber-music hall and the chorus will sing on the main house porch.

At 7 o'clock there will be a pic nic supper on the lawn. Othe features of the evening-lon event will be the awarding o prizes during the intermissio of the main concert and a pro gram of waltzing on the lawn b the main house after the concert

Last night the final concert i the series of Wednesday evenin chamber music programs wa held.

Last Week-End

Tomorrow evening the las week-end series of concerts in the 1955 festival, will get underway Charles Munch will conduct a the Boston Symphony play "Symphonie Fantastique," by Berlioz; "La Mer," by Debussy and "Daphnis and Cloe," Suite No 2, by Ravel.

The Saturday night program to be conducted by Pierre Monteux, will feature the Overture to "The Flying Dutchman," by Wagner; Brahms' Symphony No. 3 in F major; three nocturnes by Debussy and "Der Rosenkavalier," by Strauss.

Sunday afternoon's concert will be devoted to two works by Beethoven, the "Leonore" overture and the Symphony No. 9 in D minor.

Second Thoughts in Music

Major Beethoven Works Performed at Tanglewood

'Missa Solemnis' Given as Memorial to Serge Koussevitzky; Fifth Symphony, Fourth Piano Concerto With Istomin as Soloist, Portion of 'Fidelio'

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, Aug. 13—The penultimate week of the Berkshire Music Festival brought forth some of the finest performances of the season. Nourished, Eugene Istomin covered himself with glory with a sensitive and assured performance of Beethoven's fourth piano concerto and Margaret Harshaw sang a magnificent immolation scene from "Gotterdammerung."

The Wednesday night chamber music concert brought back pianist Rudolf Serkin, who had previously won a tremendous ovation after his superb performance of Beethoven's fifth piano concerto. Serkin was in rare form and played the "Waldstein" and "Hammer-Klavier" sonatas in a manner which will not soon be equalled.

One hears seldom the mighty "Hammer-Klavier" and the reason seemed obvious-few pianists can meet its demands. Serkin seemed to have unlimited resources, physical and intellectual. He probed the very heart of the work. In the "Waldstein" he was reposed, assured and penetrated its depths as studiously as he had the "Hammer-Klavier." He opened the program with a graceful reading of the Sonata in F major, Op. 10, No. 2.

Koussevitzky Memorial

The annual concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky took the form of a brilliant performance of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" conducted by Leonard Bernstein. The soloists were Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor and MacMorgan, baritone. The Festival chorus sang as if inspired and the orchestra responded in fine fashion to Bernstein's demands.

Mr. Bernstein seats his soloists high up behind the chorus. While this takes away any trace of personality, it does provide a sounding board which sends the voice out to the very ends of the Shed. Miss Addison sang beautifully, enunciating the text with clarity and blending well in the quartet numbers. Mr. Lloyd was his usual assured self. Miss Alberts, singing better than we have ever heard her, and Mr. Morgan completed this competent, experienced quartet.

There was still another rewarding concert last Saturday night when Charles Munch presented for the first time at Tanglewood the second act of "Fidelio," Beethoven's only opera. Powerful as it was, we felt the need of settings and action to make it wholly convincing. Miss Harshaw sang Leonora and Mr. Lloyd sang Florestan. The young tenor is going into the dramatic field, but at the cost of vocal quality. Miss Harshaw sang with a fine feeling for text and mood. Others in the cast were Malcolm Bernstein, Mac Morgan, Arthur Shoep and Christina Cardillo, all competent. The orchestral collaboration was magnificent.

Wagner Excerpts

The same program included selections from "Gotterdammerung," including the immolation scene so excitingly sung by Miss Harshaw. In addition to vocal opulence, Miss Harshaw's voice has a tender, lovely quality quite rare among dramatic sopranos, particularly those who specialize in Wagner. Mr. Munch and the orchestra were at their very best in "Siegfried's Rhine Journey" and "Siegfried's Death Music."

We had our first heavy rain Sunday afternoon and Mr. Istomin played the lyrical andante of the fourth piano concerto to the accompaniment of grumbling thunder and a downpour of rain. He scored a personal triumph, well deserved. Mr. Munch and the orchestra gave a brilliant performance of the eighth symphony, even though it was a bit heavy handed. Munch's reading of the gigantic fifth symphony was colossal in conception, awesome in performance. In lyrical moments it was a joy to the ear, in its powerful outcries it caused the nerves to tingle.

Opera Doings

The Opera Department paid its respects to contemporary opera last Monday performing Blacher's "Romeo and Juliet" and Milhaud's "The Abandonment of Ariana." Blacher is here as composer in residence. His opera is one of considerable interest and individual approach. He uses a pit chorus to narrate the action of the play through the words of Friar Lawrance, who does not appear. His music is fragmentary, but he has given Romeo and Juliet some interesting solo work.

Milhaud's opera is a trifle gay and inconsequential, but it was a foil for the rather grim "Romeo." There are fine voices in the Opera Department this year and, as usual, settings and action were imaginative and wholly credible.

Having paid their due to Messers Blacher and Milhaud, the department turned the next night to the music of Mozart, Humperdinck, Verdi, Strauss, Donizetti and the contemporary Meyerowitz. His "Eastward in Eden" is a version of the meeting of Emily Dickinson and Dr. Wadsworth. We heard the second act, in reality an opera in itself. It is good drama and singable music.

Miss Cardillo Soloist

I suspect that next year we shall hear a goodly portion of the music of Mozart. He is the patron saint of the Opera Department and of Boris Goldovsky. Two scenes from "Don Giovanni" served to introduce Christina Cardillo, a charming soprano from North Adams, as Zerlina. While Miss Cardillo has much to learn about the Mozart style, she is a clever actress and the voice is good.

The final scene from Strauss' "Dear Rosenkavalier" was notable for the fine voices heard. Claire Watson was a majestic, yet tender Marschallin and Regina Sarfaty an attractive and vocally opulent octavian. This 19 years old contralto has a truly gorgeous voice and considerable histrionic ability.

Two other fine voices were heard in the "Amneris, Aida" duet from "Aida." Mary MacKenzie was a fulled voiced Amneris and Helen Hess an entirely convincing Aida. Mr. Goldovsky's sure hand was noticed in the credibility of the action.

Orchestra Department

The concert of the Orchestra Department was particularly satisfying Thursday night. Sensitive, intelligent and musical was the reading which student conductor Kenneth Schermerhorn gave the first movement of Bruckner's Symphony No. 7 in E major. Student conductor George Mester and pianist Susan Pearlman, combined to provide a handsome performance of the second and third movements of Bartok's Piano Concerto No. 3.

Richard Burgi took over for the final portion of the program leading the fine orchestra in a rousing performance of the Ravel setting of Moussorgky's "Pictures at an Exhibition." We have heard many professional groups which could not approach the performance of this student orchestra. This department is, to us, the core of the Berkshire School of Music.

BOSTON SYMPHONY RENEWS CONTRACT

Lenox, Aug. 13—A long-term renewal of the 40-year recording association of the Boston Symphony Orchestra with RCA Victor Records has been announced. The signing of a new contract extending the existing exclusive recording association of the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras with their respective conductors, Charles Munch and Arthur Fiedler, took place in the library of the main house on the grounds at Tanglewood.

The orchestra's first recording session under its new contract will take place Monday and Tuesday at Symphony Hall, Boston. Conducting one session on the eve of his departure for a European holiday prior to the opening of the Symphony's fall season will be Charles Munch, with Pierre Monteux, guest conductor for the Boston Symphony, conducting the second session.

The first symphony orchestra in the nation to make phonograph records, the Boston Symphony's career on records dates back to 1916 when the first discs were made for the Victor Talking Machine Co.

STUDENTS TO JOIN BOSTON POPS TOUR

Lenox, Aug. 13—Seven students of the 1955 session of the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood have been hired to take part in the tour of the Boston Pops Orchestra's tour through the United States and possibly Canada, Rosario Mazzeo, personnel manager of the Boston Symphony and the Boston Pops, announced today. They are:

Barth Bennitt, French horn, of Miami, Fla.; Bruce Paine, trombone, of Canajoharie, N. Y.; Peter Ciurczak, trumpet, of Elizabeth, N. J.; Sheldon Henry, horn, of Cadillac, Mich.; William Kaplan, bassoon, of Madison, Wis.; John Grande, clarinet, of New York City and Nicholas Apostle, oboe, of Kenton, O.

All of them were personally selected by Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Boston Pops, who came to Tanglewood to audition students for the tour. This will be the fourth season of the Boston Pops Touring Orchestra, which was first instituted in 1953.

SIX MEMBERS OF BOSTON SYMPHONY READY TO RETIRE

Carlos Pinfield, Violinist, Joined Orchestra In 1912

Lenox, Aug. 13—Their colleagues in the Boston Symphony Orchestra honored six retiring members of the symphony at a luncheon at Tanglewood recently, and gold watches were presented to the instrumentalists by Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra. Gaston Dufresne, harp, was chairman of the orchestral committee which initiated the ceremony.

The six musicians, whose retirement takes effect at the conclusion of the festival tomorrow are Jacob Raichman, principal trombone; first violinists Carlos Pinfield and Paul Fedorovsky; second violinist Ralph del Sordo; Louis Artieres, viola; and Walter G. MacDonald, French horn. Neither Mr. Pinfield, who came from Boston for the ceremony, nor Mr. MacDonald have been performing in the 1955 Festival concerts at Tanglewood.

The orchestra principal retiring is the well-known trombonist Mr. Raichman, a native of Vitebsk, Russia, and a member of the orchestra since 1927. Mr. Pinfield is the oldest of the retiring BSO members from point of view of service, having joined the orchestra in 1912. A native Bostonian, he studied at the Royal Academy in Berlin under Willy Hess, served in World War I, and has conducted ensemble groups from the Boston Symphony. He has been guest conductor of the Boston "Pops" at Symphony Hall, teaches violin and conducts an amateur orchestra.

Incoming members are cellists Richard A. Kapuscinski of Cincinnati, and Robert Ripley, of Cleveland Heights; violinists Noah Bielski of Queens Village, N. Y., Alfred Schneider of St. Louis, and Joseph Silverstein of Detroit, and trombonist William M. Gibson of Pittsburgh.

STUDENT AWARDS AT TANGLEWOOD

Lenox, Aug. 13—Seven scholarships and cash awards were made to outstanding students of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood today. The prizes are given annually. The Gregor Piatigorsky Prize, value $250, has been awarded to student cellist Alice Q. Ober, 24, of Pasadena, Cal. The High Fidelity magazine scholarship, value $250, awarded for the first time this year to an outstanding student of the Berkshire Music Center, goes to Peyton Higgison, 28, of Mobile, Ala.

The Serge Koussevitzky Composition prize, value $250, given by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation in honor of the former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for a work composed at Tanglewood this season went to Edward Jay Miller, 25, of Miami Beach, Fla., whose prize-winning work, "Piece for Pianoforte" was performed on a composers' forum at Tanglewood yesterday. The Samuel Wechsler Commission, value $300, goes to Jacob Druckman, of New York City.

Through the friendly interest of the Industrial Buildings Corp. of Chicopee, there has been initiated this year an annual prize of $250 to a student composer, in memory of Raphael Sagalyn, given this year to Salvatore Martirano, 28, of New Rochelle, N. Y.

Two scholarships, each valued at $150, which cancel a student's indebtedness to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund for his tuition received from this fund are awarded to student horn players Barth Bennitt, 23, of Miami, Fla., and Richard A. Fiske, 21, of Upton.

Boston Symphony Maestro

Charles Munch, eminent music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who will bring the annual Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood to a close this afternoon with an all-Beethoven program, featuring the massive Ninth Symphony.

Tanglewood Topics

By WALTER ALFORD

Lenox, Aug. 13—Berkshire Festival concert attendance this summer seems bound, for the third successive year, to surpass previous figures. The 117,950 at 15 concerts in 1953 established a record. Last summer, when within its framework of six weeks the number of concerts was increased to 24, new record of attendance was set up, with 135,775. This season, with 20 out of 24 concerts played, the attendance figures total 111,835, and the four concerts Aug. 10-14 seem virtually certain of supplying the 24,000 necessary to top the figures of 1954.

* * *

Admirers of Roger Voisin's virtuosity as first trumpet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be interested to learn he is something of an acrobat. Last Saturday night for the off-stage trumpet call in "Fidelio," Charles Munch, the Boston Symphony's music director, had the French instrumentalist scramble way up in the Music Shed, atop the organ pipes. Thursday night, he had both feet more securely on the ground, sounding the "Fanfare" that welcomes "Tanglewood on Parade" from the lawns.

* * *

At the Student Council party at Wheatleigh last Monday night for its emergency fund for needy students, John Grande, bass clarinetist from Long Island City, was master of ceremonies; Kenneth Schermerhorn, conducting student from Schenectady, was in charge of door prizes; and entertainment included impersonations by Stanley Dombrowski, violinist in the student Orchestra, from Export, Pa.; and acrobatics by Esther Sweigart, a Study Group member from Kutztown, Pa.

* * *

The final composers' forum by students of Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher was an extra, unscheduled concert, given in Tanglewood's Chamber Music Hall on Friday. The program consisted of the "Kyrie" from a Mass by Salvatore Martirano, of New Rochelle, N. Y., who has been a student of Luigi Dallapiccola on a Fulbright Award in Italy for the past three years, and who won this year's composition prize. Also a string quartet by Susan MacAdam, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; the adagio from a string quartet by William Sydeman of Sarnia, Ont., Canada; a piano piece by Edward Miller, of Miami Beach, Fla.; music for trombone and piano by Michael Sahl, of New York City; and a violin and piano work by Richard Maxfield, performed by Paul Gurevich, violin, and Tossi Ichiyaragi, piano.

Maxfield, a student composer with Aaron Copland at Tanglewood last summer, is a native of Seattle, and has just been awarded a Fulbright scholarship to Italy, and will work with Mr. Dallapiccola in Florence next season. During the present session of the Berkshire Music Center he has acted as coordinator with the faculty in arranging composers' forum programs and performers.

* * *

Nathalie Scimonelli, of District Heights, Md., a suburb of Washington, D. C., is a student (associate) in the Tanglewood opera department this summer. Her husband, Frank, with the United States Naval Band in Washington, is rated tops in this country's post horn soloists, and has been on the Dave Garroway TV show. Mrs. Scimonelli directs choirs at the Naval Receiving Station, Anacostia, D. C. and at Henderson Hall in Virginia. She sings in churches, plays the organ, teaches piano, voice and organ in Washington. She is a graduate of Catholic U. (Bach. us.) and studied voice and piano at the Juilliard School of Music, New York.

* * *

The concluding concert of chamber music by students of Department I (orchestra) of the Berkshire Music Center will be given tomorrow at 10 a. m. in the Theater-Concert Hall, and will consist of Mendelssohn's Octet in E flat, Op. 20, played by Paul Gurevich, Joseph Hassid, Edward Filmanowicz and Jean Angers, violins; Jean Comstock and Edward Gerber, violas; Alice Ober and Marcia Hansen, cellos; Mozart's "Serenade No. 12 in C" (K. 388), played by Nicholas Apostle, oboe; David Seeley, English horn; John Grande, bass clarinet Catherine Carter, clarinet; Isabelle Clore, bassoon; Thomas Grove, bassoon; and Robert Hicks, French horn; and Brahms "Quintet," performed by Hiroshi Hatoyama and Genia Palasanian, violins; Placido Pietropaolo, viola; David Suinks, cello; and Susan Pearlman, piano.

* * *

Where do they go after Tanglewood? The Berkshire Festival, which concludes its 18th summer at Tanglewood tomorrow and the Berkshire Music Center, which simultaneously winds up its 13th six-week summer session, disperses a number of noted musical personalities until most of them reassemble in Lenox next summer.

Boston Symphony Orchestra music director Charles Munch, who is also director of the summer music school, has a day of recording with the orchestra in Symphony Hall, Boston, on Monday, then flies to Europe to conduct in Salzburg, Austria; Montreux, Switzerland, and Florence, Italy. After a vacation in his native France, he will return to Boston Sept. 25, the day before his 64th birthday, to prepare for the 75th anniversary season of the Symphony, which will include a tour of the South and performances of 15 new works commissioned from eminent modern composers.

* * *

Pierre Monteux, who conducted for the last time this season at Tanglewood tonight will return immediately to his conducting school at Hancock, Me., and will conduct at the Metropolitan Opera in the fall and winter. In February he will be guest conductor again of the Boston Symphony.

Leonard Bernstein left Tanglewood directly after "Tanglewood on Parade" on Thursday, to conduct a "Festival of the Americas," a week-long concert series in Hollywood Bowl. After its conclusion he will be back at his summer home in Great Barrington for a fortnight's relaxation with his wife and two young children, before going to New York in mid-September to prepare for the concerts he will conduct with the Symphony of the Air, and to do further work on his full-length opera "Candide," which, with Tyrone Guthrie directing, will be heard on Broadway in the fall of 1956.

50 Local Chorus Members In Tanglewood Final Today

Springfield Singers to Take Part in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony; Adele Addison Soloist

Lenox, Aug. 13—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch music director, will give the final concert of its 1955 Berkshire Festival tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 in the huge Music Shed at Tanglewood. Mr. Munch will conduct the concluding event.

Springfield Chorus

This will be the sixth all-Beethoven concert on the 12-concert Shed series, Mr. Munch's fifth summer program devoted to the works of that composer. It comprises the Overture "Leonore," No. 3, and the Symphony No. 9, in D minor, with Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass, as soloists, the first three being former members of the Berkshire Music Center.

The enlarged chorus comprises the Festival Chorus of Tanglewood students and a chorus of 50 voices of the Springfield, Mass., Symphony Orchestra, trained by Hugh Ross and John Krueger, director of the Youngstown, O., Philharmonic and Chorus.

This week end concludes also the seasonal activities of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood. The music school has presented some 40 concerts and demonstrations of its orchestra, chamber music, chorus, opera, composition division and amateur study group departments in this, its 13th six-week session.

Tomorrow at 10 in the Chamber Music Hall, comes the final program of chamber music by students of the school's Department I (Orchestra)' This event is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who may attend through voluntary contributions to the school. The final shed program:

Overture, "Leonore," No. 3, Beethoven
Symphony No. 9, in D. minor, Beethoven.
Soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd tenor; Donald Gramm, bass and Festival Chorus augmented by 50 voices of the chorus of the Springfield, Symphony, trained by Hugh Ross and John Krueger.
Charles Munch, conductor.

India Adds Steel Facilities

New Dehli — India, which produces a million tons of steel a year, is steadily adding production facilities and hopes to quadruple output in six years.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

AUG 10 1955

Notes and Footnotes

THOUGHTS ON the rocks: Farmers report that the weeks of hot, dry weather has parched the soil more than five feet deep in many places . . . Isn't goldenrod blooming several weeks early, due to the tropical Berkshire clime? . . . The Laurel Hill Assn., Stockbridge, ever on the alert, rushed into the fray upon learning the New Haven Railroad planned to remove the long, waiting platforms at the depot there. Felt they added much to the charm of the station, and the New Haven agreed . . . Last week's "Berkshire Week" supplement, carried a front cover of pictures taken at Jacob's Pillow, including one of Joan Ford of Lee supposedly being treated by Doris Dockray in the infirmary. Both women are from Lee, and Miss D was some years ago baby-sitter for Joan, who was then a tot . . . It is no secret that the Tanglewood Festival is about the only operation of the Boston Symphony that shows a profit. It is our considered opinion that some season soon, the profits might well be spent right here, improving the wholly inadequate plumbing system. A battery of modern restrooms and waiting lines are needed there, a few more drinking fountains . . . Rosario Mazzeo, Boston Symphony clarinetist, has for 14 years been working on a new development of the clarinet. He tells us it now is being made by the Selmer Co. in Paris, and orders are coming in briskly. He has developed a new system of keys and acoustical system. Hopes it will succeed the Boehm clarinet, in use since about 1900.

—o—

AMONG MOST popular clergymen to speak in Pittsfield is the Rev. Dr. James Gordon Gilkey, who has recently retired after 38 years with the South Congregational Church in Springfield. He will live in Weekepaug, R.I., and will be as busy as ever. He is finishing his latest book, "Some Modern Thoughts About God," to be published by Macmillan during Lent. It is one of 18 books published by Mr. Gilkey on religion. Several have been translated into foreign languages, and three into Braille. He also has taught religious courses at Amherst and Springfield Colleges. In the fall he plans a lecture trip to Korea and Japan, and on his return will embark on a speaking tour of the South.

—o—

UNEXPECTED by-product: Isoniazid, a drug developed to fight tuberculosis, has been found effective in killing weeds. Mixed as little as 350 parts to a million of water, destroys germinating weed roots before crop plants sprout.

—o—

IF YOU have never toured the phone company building, you cannot imagine what a talkative lot we are in Pittsfield. Manager Harry Robinson kindly took us about the other day, and in the switch room where all dial calls are handled by clicking, automatic devices, the sound was like a hail storm. No wonder you so frequently get a busy signal.

RICHARD V. HAPPEL.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

AUG 10 1955

Chamber Music Tonight at Lenox

The last of this season's Wednesday evening chamber music programs in the Tanglewood Theater-Concert Hall at Lenox, Mass., will be presented tonight at 8:30. The all-Beethoven concert will be given by six principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Samuel Mayes, cello; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; and Ralph Gomberg, oboe. Also on the program will be David Lloyd, tenor, and Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

AUG 8 1955

Iva Dee Hiatt's Chorus Acclaimed At Tanglewood

Margaret Harshaw, soprano for the Metropolitan Opera Co., sang a magnificently projected Brunnhilde from Gotterdammerung excerpts Saturday with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. For sheer gorgeousness of sound and climactic crescendo, the full orchestra, with emphasis on the brass choirs, combined with the opulence of Miss Harshaw's voice and presence would be hard to match. She seems to have been fashioned uniquely to perform the role of Brunnhilde. The orchestra and Charles Munch, its director, gave the music all the dramatic import which Wagner calls for and filled the music shed with great waves of sound.

There were about 6,000 fewer people at Tanglewood Saturday than there were a week ago. The references to traffic jams and early morning home returnings must have frightened many people from making a return trip this week. Their effort Saturday night would have been worthwhile though, for they would have been repaid if only to hear the Boston Symphony let out to its full magnificence but the voice of Margaret Harshaw was a dividend that is like finding gold at the foot of a rainbow.

The concert opened with "Fidelio" Act II, Op. 72, by Beethoven. Miss Harshaw was joined in this single operatic venture of Beethoven, by tenor David Lloyd, basses Mac Morgan, Malcolm Bernstein and Arthur Shoep and briefly by soprano Christina Cardillo. Also, for the finale, the festival chorus in top form and reportedly far superior in its performance to its Friday night effort, was prepared by Iva Dee Hiatt, well known in the Connecticut Valley for her remarkable success with the Smith College glee clubs. The chorus score is a veritable tour de forse of rapid and fortissimo singing. It would be hard to imagine a more capable person than Miss Hiatt to rehearse a chorus of the proportions of the festival chorus to the point where it can thrillingly project all the rejoicing that the composer intended. Especial note should be made of a trumpet call used as a signal in the opera. This was awe-inspiring in its proclamatory resonance and suddenness. This followed by those afore-mentioned brasses made a number of very memorable moments throughout the evening.

There was difficulty between the orchestra and the tenor in the opera as to tempo. It must be said that Mr. Munch is at home with an orchestra but does not seem too sympathetic to the temperamental vagaries of vocal soloists. Mr. Lloyd had a particularly hard time. It was all but impossible to hear anyone but Miss Harshaw from time to time. When the voices could be heard above the orchestral brilliance, their blending was very nice and the quality of the voices excellent.

"Tanglewood on Parade" Thursday from 6 to 11 p.m. will feature concerts by the Boston Symphony, Leonard Bernstein, conducting and the Boston Pops under the leadership of Arthur Fiedler. There will be a lawn party, picnic supper, door prizes and waltzing on the lawn.—F. M. R.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

AUG 10 1955

Tanglewood Tales

Voisin an Acrobat?

Admirers of Roger Voisin's virtuosity as first trumpet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be interested to learn he is something of an acrobat. Saturday night for the off-stage trumpet call in "Fidelio," Charles Munch had the French instrumentalist scramble way up in the Music Shed, atop the organ pipes. Thursday, he will have both feet more securely on the ground, sounding the fanfare that welcomes Tanglewood on Parade visitors from the lawns.

* * *

Chamber Music Sunday

The concluding concert of chamber music by students of Department I (orchestra) of the Berkshire Music Center will be given Sunday at 10 a.m. in the Theater-Concert Hall, and will consist of Mendelssohn's octet in E flat, Op. 20, played by Paul Gurevich, Joseph Hassid, Edward Filmanowicz and Jean Angers, violins; Jean Comstock and Edward Gerber, violas; Alice Ober and Marcia Hansen, cellos; Mozart's serenade No 12 in C (K.388), played by Nicholas Apostle, oboe; David Seeley English horn; John Grande, bass clarinet; Catherine Carter, clarinet; Isabelle Clore and Thomas Grove, basoons; and Robert Hicks French horn; and Brahms' quintet performed by Hiroshi Hatayama and Genia Palasanian, violins; Placido Pietrapaolo, viola; David Spinks, cello; and Susan [illegible] piano.

* * *

Extra Composers' Forum

The final composers' forum by students of Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher is an extra, unscheduled concert to be given in Tanglewood's Chamber Music Hall at 1:30 p.m. Friday. The program consists of the "Kyrie" from a Mass by Salvatore Martirano of New Rochelle, N.Y., who has been a student of Luigi Dallapiccola on a Fulbright award in Italy for the past three years, and who won this year's composition prize; a string quartet by Susan MacAdam of Brooklyn, N.Y.; the adagio from a string quartet by William Sydeman of Sarnia, Ont., Canada; a piano piece by Edward Miller of Miami Beach, Fla; music for trombone and piano by Michael Sahl of New York City; and a violin and piano work by Richard Maxfield, performed by Paul Gurevich, violin, and Tossi Ichiyanagi, piano. Mr. Maxfield, a student composer with Aaron Copland at Tanglewood last summer, is a native of Seattle. He has just been awarded a Fulbright scholarship to Italy, and will work with Mr. Dallapiccola in Florence next season. During the present session of the Berkshire Music Center he has acted as coordinator with the faculty in arranging composers' forum programs and performers.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

AUG 8 1955

ART ON EXHIBIT AT TANGLEWOOD

An exhibition of sculpture and drawing by Miss Franc Epping of Lenox, arranged through the courtesy of the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, and its director, Stuart C. Henry; and photographs of Tanglewood and the American Sputh by Gus Manos, official photographer at Tanglewood, are on display during the coming week, from Sat. August 6 through the conclusion of the Berkshire Festival, Sun. Aug. 14, in the [illegible] at the main gate at Tanglewood, in conjunction with the concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

AUG 10 1955

Tanglewood Busy Tuning Up For 'Parade' Tomorrow Night

TANGLEWOOD—Arthur Fiedler will arrive from Miami, Fla., this afternoon to conduct the popular Boston Pops Orchestra in the Music Shed tomorrow night at the Tanglewood on Parade program.

With good weather, the gala benefit is expected to draw an even larger crowd than last year because of the hit made by the Pops orchestra and Mr. Fiedler in a program of light music. Last year 10,050 attended.

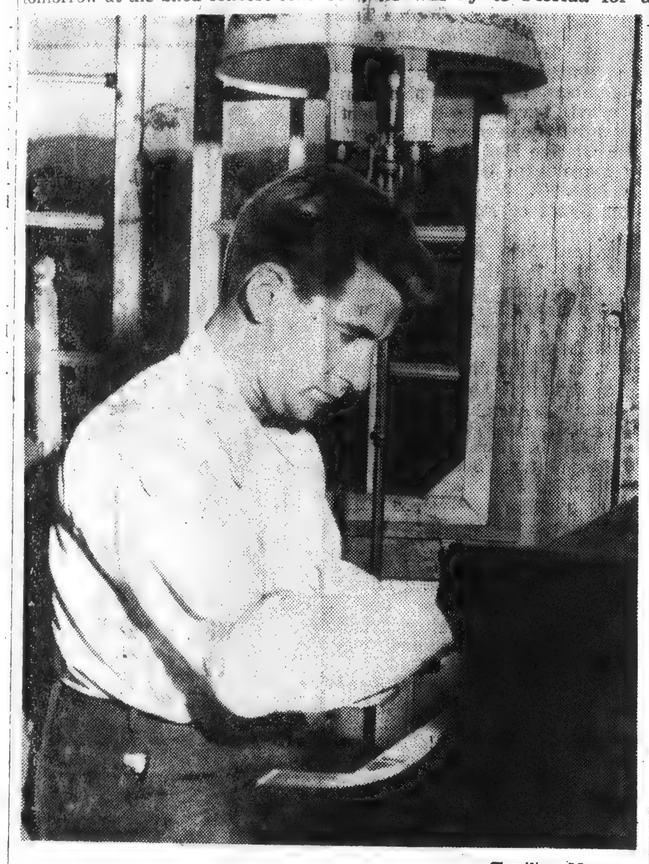
Leonard Bernstein will appear as conductor, composer and pianist tomorrow at the Shed concert commencing at 8:15. He will be the piano soloist with the Pops playing Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue," and also will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," with Claude Rains as narrator, and in a suite of music Bernstein composed for the Academy Award-winning motion picture, "On the Waterfront."

Besides "Rhapsody in Blue," the Pops program will consist of Rimsky-Korsakov's "Cappriccio Espagnole," and a suite from the ballet, "Graduation Ball," with music by Johann Strauss. It has been indicated Mr. Fiedler will provide as one of the encores, "The Ballad of Davy Crockett."

Drawing at Intermission

Preceding the evening concert, Tanglewood on Parade begins at 4 p.m. with a demonstration in the Barn by the Study Group of Berkshire Music Center students, and simultaneously with a performance for those who purchase box seats and reserved seats in the Shed, of the short Puccini opera, "Gianni Schicchi" by Tanglewood's Opera Department, in the formal gardens. From 6 to 7 p.m., the Berkshire Music Center will have simultaneous sessions of each department — orchestra, opera and chamber music, with a concert by members of the Choral Department on the steps of the Main House at 7 p.m. During intermission in the Shed concert, Boris Goldovsky will draw the names of winners of door prizes. Festivities conclude with waltzing on the lawn.

Mr. Fiedler has just completed his fifth consecutive guest conducting appearance with the Art Commission Pop Concerts in San Francisco's Civic Auditorium; last Sunday he conducted in Miami. After his visit to the Berkshires tomorrow, he will fly to Florida for a second concert; then return to Boston for the conclusion of the Esplanade series Aug. 15 to 20.



Hamilton Morgen

Leonard Bernstein will be tripling in brass at tomorrow night's Tanglewood on Parade program. He will be present as conductor, composer and pianist during the gala benefit concert in the Shed.

Conductor 26 Years

Mr. Fiedler has been conducting the famed Pops for 26 years. In 1924 he organized the Boston Sinfonietta. He founded the Esplanade Concerts in 1929, and has made more than 600 recordings. The Boston Pops tour orchestra which he organized in 1953 played 64 concerts in 68 days. A second six-week tour followed in 1954, and the third, last winter, played 58 concerts in 56 cities within 26 states, a distance of 10,000 miles.

In demand as a guest conductor, he has led the Montreal, Minneapolis, Seattle, Portland (Ore.), Dallas, Corpjus Christi and San Antonio Symphony Orchestras, as well as the Louisville Philharmonic, the Grant Park Concerts in Chicago, the NBC Symphony Orchestra and New Haven's Pops.

Mr. Rains is coming to Tanglewood for tomorrow's performance direct from his Pennsylvania farm, Stock Grange, located about 40 miles west of Philadelphia. London-born, he first came to the United States in 1914 with the late Harley Granville-Barker. This will mark his first appearance at Tanglewood.

Lunts To Co-Star

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

AUG 10 1955

Chamber Music Concerts End At Hall Tonight

TANGLEWOOD — This season's series of Wednesday evening chamber music programs will end tonight in the Theater-Concert Hall with an all-Beethoven concert by six principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The concert begins at 8:30. Taking part will be Samuel Mayes, cello; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; and Ralph Gomberg, oboe. Also appearing on the program will be David Lloyd, tenor, and Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

The program will be devoted to the Trio for Clarinet, Cello and Piano, Opus 11, performed by Messrs. Cioffi, Mayes and Berkowitz; the song cycle "An Die ferne Geliebte," sung by Mr. Lloyd with Mr. Berkowitz at the piano; the Cello Sonata in A Major, Opus 69, played by Messrs. Mayes and Berkowitz; the Trio in C Major for Flute, Bassoon and Cello with Mrs. Dwyer and Messrs. Walt and Mayes; and the Quintet in E Flat, Opus 16, performed by Messrs. Berkowitz, Cioffi, Gomberg, Walt and Stagliano.

Mr. Lloyd, a frequent Tanglewood soloist, appeared twice with the Boston Symphony Orchestra last weekend and will again be a soloist in the performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony which concludes the Berkshire Festival on Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Mr. Berkowitz, who is dean of the Berkshire Music Center, is a well-known pianist and teacher. Last season he went on a five-month tour of Europe with the cellist, Gregor Piatigorsky, playing in England, France, Italy, Israel and Scandinavia.

The five first-chair wood-wind performers from the Boston Symphony Orchestra who will appear at tonight's concert have organized as the Boston Woodwind Qintet and as such have given concerts in many New England colleges and universities. This will be their first ensemble appearance at Tanglewood.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

AUG 10 1955

Symphony Chorus Will Take Part At Tanglewood

The Springfield Symphony Chorus is having final rehearsals this week in preparation for a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony Sunday afternoon with the Tanglewood Chorus and the Boston Symphony, under the direction of Charles Munch at the Berkshire Festival in Lenox.

Northampton singers, also members of the Hampshire Choral Society, who will participate in the Sunday performance, are Eleanor D. Graves and Marion R. McGee, sopranos; John F. Henry and J. Richard Keating, basses; Donald J. King, tenor, from Amherst, will also sing with the group.

Hugh Ross, Tanglewood Choral department head, has directed the chorus rehearsals during July and August at Technical High School in Springfield, with John Kruger, also of the Tanglewood staff, assisting. The last rehearsal for the Beethoven Ninth Concert will be held at Tanglewood on Saturday with Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony.

The invitation to participate in the Tanglewood program is the second received by the Springfield Symphony Chorus. Last summer performing the Berlioz Requiem, they received high commendation from Mr. Ross and Mr. Munch for a splendid performance. The result were invited to sing at Tanglewood again this year.

Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, with the text from Schiller's "Ode to Joy," has as its theme the "Brotherhood of Man," and is considered as one of the greatest works written for chorus and orchestra. The Springfield Symphony and Chorus of 125 voices presented Beethoven's Ninth at the Municipal Auditorium in Springfield during the past season. The Springfield concert was sung in English, but the German text will be used in the Tanglewood performance next Sunday.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

AUG 10 1955

'ON THE WATERFRONT,' Columbia's movie drama of the New York docks, was recently shown to this group personally involved in its production. Among those present were, left to right: Sam Spiegel, the producer; Leonard Bernstein, who composed the music, currently heading the music department at Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood; Father John Corridan, waterfront priest; Malcolm Johnson, Pulitzer Prize author of waterfront articles; and Bud Schulberg, author of screenplay.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
NEWBURYPORT, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 6,504

AUG 9 1955

Cabbages and Kings

by NED BROWN

Numbered among the large audience on hand recently at Tanglewood for the Berkshire Festival were Miss Elena Hanley and Mrs. Hanley Snow.

Even though it was a hot Sunday afternoon thousands of families were on hand to hear Pierre Monteux, dean of American conductors, conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all Brahm's program.

They had the pleasure of hearing Isaac Sterne as the violin soloist in a Brahms concerto. Also slated to appear as a soloist was the renowned cellist Gregor Piatagorsky who cancelled his appearance due to an arm injury.

An amazing sidelight of the concert was even though there were many children present in the audience, the attentiveness and silence prevailing throughout the concert was remarkable.

It is almost impossible to find accommodations in or around Lennox where the concerts are held. All motels and hotels are well sold out in advance. Miss Hanley and her sister Mrs. Snow had to travel on to Albany where they stayed at the Sheridan Ten Ecyk, for the week-end.

Upon their return they stayed at the famed Wiggin Tavern in Northampton. That same weekend the largest Morgan horseshow of the country was taking place in Northampton.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

AUG 8 1955

Claude Rains To Be Tanglewood Narrator

Claude Rains will narrate Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," as a highlight of the gala evening concert next Thursday, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, during "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school.

The Broadway and Hollywood star, will make his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting, and his debut at Tanglewood in the stirring musical portrait of the Great Emancipator which was composed during the war by Mr. Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center. Mr. Rains has made three appearances in "A Lincoln Portrait" with the Philadelphia Orchestra, Eugene Ormandy conducting.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

CHARM MAGAZINE
NEW YORK, N. Y.

AUG 1955

Miss Hiatt invokes some pear-shaped tones

Music maker

Ida Dee Hiatt has made singing one of the most popular activities at Smith College where she has directed choral music for seven years. She is taking a busman's holiday this summer to serve as a staff conductor at the Berkshire Music Festival, helping [illegible] chorus for Boston Symphony's Dr. Charles Munch and rehearsing a small choir of expert singers in difficult new scores. Last summer, in cooperation with the U.S. State Department, she [illegible] 55 Smith College singers on a concert tour through Europe and the Middle East. The girls paid their own expenses, took tourist jaunts between concerts, presented some of the best of their own nation's music to the people of the eight countries they visited.

In addition to her work at Smith, Miss Hiatt has been associate conductor of Boston's Cecilia Society, second oldest singing group in the country. A native Californian, Miss Hiatt majored in music in college and prefers to conduct serious classical works, although she often offers show tunes as encores. She admits she once taught an evening course in hot jazz, though, and loved it.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

AUG 10 1955

Gala Concert Thursday Night At Tanglewood

The climax of tomorrow's "Tanglewood on Parade" celebrations at Tanglewood in Lenox, the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be a gala concert in the giant Music Shed at 8:15 p.m. The Boston Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Leonard Bernstein on the first half of the concert, with Claude Rains, distinguished actor of stage, screen, radio and television, as narrator in Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait." Mr. Bernstein will begin the program with the first performance anywhere of a suite he has fashioned from his score for the Academy Award-winning film "On the Waterfront." After the intermission Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston "Pops" Orchestra in a typical "Pops" concert, including Rimsky - Korsakov's "Capriccio Espagnole," the "Rhapsody in Blue" by George Gershwin with Mr. Bernstein as piano soloist, and a suite from the Ballet "Graduation Ball," arranged by Antal Dorati from music by Johann Strauss. As is customary at Boston "Pops" concerts, encores may be expected on this portion of the program.

"Tanglewood on Parade" marks the third and final conducting engagement of Leonard Bernstein at this summer's Berkshire Festival. In addition to recent appearances conducting opera at the famed La Scala in Milan and symphony with the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra both at home and on tour, he has also recently completed an opera, based on Voltaire's "Candide" with a libretto by Lillian Hellman, and is currently writing songs to accompany a new Broadway stage play, "East Side Story." During next season he will conduct a subscription series of six concerts in New York by the Symphony of the Air, the former NBC Symphony Orchestra, and in April he will be a guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the end of the orchestra's 75th anniversary season in Boston. The distinguished young American composer, pianist, conductor was himself a student at the Berkshire Music Center during its first seasons, 1940 and 1941, at Tanglewood.

Arthur Fiedler returns to conduct at "Tanglewood on Parade" for the second consecutive summer. His appearance at last year's program brought out the largest attendance in the history of "Tanglewood on Parade" — 10,050.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
NEWBURYPORT, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 6,504
AUG 9 1955

Cabbages and Kings

by NED BROWN

Numbered among the large audience on hand recently at Tanglewood for the Berkshire Festival were Miss Elena Hanley and Mrs. Hanley Snow.

Even though it was a hot Sunday afternoon thousands of families were on hand to hear Pierre Monteux, dean of American conductors, conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all Brahm's program.

They had the pleasure of hearing Isaac Sterne as the violin soloist in a Brahms concerto. Also slated to appear as a soloist was the renowned cellist Gregor Piatagorsky who cancelled his appearance due to an arm injury.

An amazing sidelight of the concert was even though there were many children present in the audience, the attentiveness and silence prevailing throughout the concert was remarkable.

It is almost impossible to find accommodations in or around Lennox where the concerts are held. All motels and hotels are well sold out in advance. Miss Hanley and her sister Mrs. Snow had to travel on to Albany where they stayed at the Sheridan Ten Ecyk, for the week-end.

Upon their return they stayed at the famed Wiggin Tavern in Northampton. That same weekend the largest Morgan horseshow of the country was taking place in Northampton.

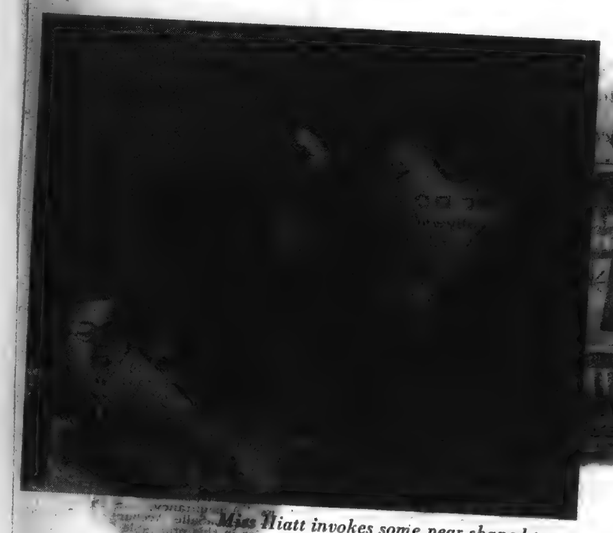
New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246
AUG 8 1955

Claude Rains To Be Tanglewood Narrator

Claude Rains will narrate Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," as a highlight of the gala evening concert next Thursday, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, during "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school.

The Broadway and Hollywood star, will make his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting, and his debut at Tanglewood in the stirring musical portrait of the Great Emancipator which was composed during the war by Mr. Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center. Mr. Rains has made three appearances in "A Lincoln Portrait" with the Philadelphia Orchestra, Eugene Ormandy conducting.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
CHARM MAGAZINE
NEW YORK, N. Y.
AUG 1955



Miss Hiatt invokes some pear-shaped tones

Music maker

[illegible] has made [illegible] of the most popular activities at Smith College where she has directed choral music for seven years. She is taking a [illegible]'s holiday this summer to serve as a staff conductor at the Berkshire Music Festival, helping [illegible] for Boston Symphony's Dr. Charles [illegible] and rehearsing a small choir of expert singers in difficult new scores. Last summer, in connection with the U.S. State Department, she [illegible] 55 Smith College singers on a concert tour through Europe and the Middle East. The girls paid their own expenses, took tourist jobs [illegible] concerts, presented some of the best [illegible] own nation's music to the people of [illegible] countries they visited.

[illegible] to her [illegible] at Smith, Miss Hiatt has been [illegible] conductor of Boston's Cecilia Society, second oldest [illegible] group in the country. A native Californian, Miss Hiatt majored in music in college and prefers to conduct serious classical works, although she often offers show tunes as encores. She admits she once taught an evening course in hot jazz, though, and loved it.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825
AUG 10 1955

Gala Concert Thursday Night At Tanglewood

The climax of tomorrow's "Tanglewood on Parade" celebrations at Tanglewood in Lenox, the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be a gala concert in the giant Music Shed at 8:15 p.m. The Boston Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Leonard Bernstein on the first half of the concert, with Claude Rains, distinguished actor of stage, screen, radio and television, as narrator in Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait." Bernstein will begin the program with the first performance anywhere of a suite he has fashioned from his score for the Academy Award-winning film "On the Waterfront." After the intermission Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston "Pops" Orchestra in a typical "Pops" concert, including Rimsky Korsakov's "Capriccio Espagnole," the "Rhapsody in Blue" by George Gershwin with Mr. Bernstein as piano soloist, and a suite from the Ballet "Graduation Ball," arranged by Antal Dorati from music by Johann Strauss. As is customary at Boston "Pops" concerts, encores may be expected on this portion of the program.

"Tanglewood on Parade" marks the third and final conducting engagement of Leonard Bernstein at this summer's Berkshire Festival. In addition to recent appearances conducting opera at the famed La Scala in Milan and symphony with the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra both at home and on tour, he has also recently completed an opera based on Voltaire's "Candide" with a libretto by Lillian Hellman, and is currently writing songs to accompany a new Broadway stage play, "East Side Story." During next season he will conduct a subscription series of six concerts in New York by the Symphony of the Air, the former NBC Symphony Orchestra, and in April he will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the end of the orchestra's 75th anniversary season in Boston. The distinguished young American composer, pianist, conductor was himself a student at the Berkshire Music Center during its first seasons, 1940 and 1941, at Tanglewood.

Arthur Fiedler returns to conduct "Tanglewood on Parade" for the second consecutive summer. His appearance at last year's program brought out the largest attendance in the history of "Tanglewood on Parade" — 10,050.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

AUG 10 1955

Tanglewood Tales

Forum Friday

A composers' forum will be held Friday afternoon at 4:30 in the Chamber Music Hall under the supervision of Department III.

The program follows:

Mass: Kyrie — Salvatore Martirano
String Quartet — Susan MacAdam
String Quartet: Adagio — William Sydeman
Piano Piece — Edward Miller
Violin and Piano Work — Richard Maxfield
Paul Gurevich, violin; Tossi Ichiyanagi, piano.
Music for Trombone and Piano — Michael Sahl

Composers' Forum

The program for the composers' forum, under the supervision of Department III of the Berkshir Music Center, to be held Satu day afternoon at 3 in the Chambe Music Hall, follows:

String Quartet — George Sicilianc
Hiroshi Hatoyama, violin; Jean Comstock, viola; Elizabeth Beebe, violin; Albert Petillo, violoncello.

Sonata for Viola and Piano, — George Wilso
Joseph Pietropaolo, viola; George Crumb, piano.

Intermission.

Lieder: Die Sonette An Orpheus: on poems by Rilke — Eino Rautavaar
Da Stieg ein Baum (There Stands tree).
Und fast ein Madchen war's (And it was like a maiden).
Ein Gott vermags.
O Ihr cartlichen (O, You Dear Ones).
Christina Cardillo, soprano.

Five songs for soprano, flute, Clarinet, bassoon and violoncello, — Michiko Toyam
Mary Jane Paul, soprano.
Pollee Slimm flute; John Pandolfi, clarinet; Janet Sillars, flute; Beatrice Messina, bassoon; David Spinks, violoncello.

Chamber Music Concert by Students

The sixth and final concert o chamber music by members of De partment I of the Music Center wil be given Sunday morning at 10 ir the Theater Concert Hall.

The program:

Octet in E flat, Op. 20 — Mendelssohn
Paul Gurevich, violin; Joseph Hassid, violin; Edward Filmanowicz, violin; Jean Angers, violin; Jean Comstock, viola; Edward Gerber, viola; Alice Ober, violoncello; Marcia Hansen, violoncello.

Serenade No. 12 in C (K. 388) — Mozart
Nicholas Apostle, oboe; David Seeley, English horn; John Grande, bass clarinet; Catherine Carter, clarinet; Isabelle Glore, bassoon; Thomas Grove, bassoon; Robert Ricks, French horn.

Quintet — Brahms
Hiroshi Hatoyama, violin; Genia Palasanian, violin; Placido Pietropaolo, viola; David Spinks, violoncello; Susan Pearlman, piano.

* * *

Student Council Party

At the Student Council party at Wheatleigh Monday night for its emergency fund for needy students, John Grande, bass clarinetist from Long Island City, was master of ceremonies; Kenneth Schermerhorn, conducting student from Schenectady, was in charge of door prizes; and entertainment included impersonations by Stanley Dombrowski, violinist in the student orchestra, from Export, Pa.; and acrobatics by Esther Sweigart, a Study Group member rom Kutztown, Pa.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

AUG 8 1955

Leonard Bernstein To Participate In Tanglewood Event

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the summer music school maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts, will have the participation of one of its most illustrious graduates, Leonard Bernstein, in the triple capacity in which the brilliant young American musician from Lawrence, Mass., has won international fame during his 36 years, as conductor, composer and concert pianist.

On Thursday, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., music lovers who from advance interest seem destined to surpass last summer's record turnout of 10,050 persons, will hear Leonard Bernstein open the gala evening concert in the huge 6,000-seat capacity Music Shed at 8:15 p.m., conducting the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra. His portion of the program — the concert will be shared by Arthur Fiedler conducting the celebrated Boston "Pops" Orchestra — will consist of a first performance anywhere of a suite Mr. Bernstein has arranged from music he composed for the film "On the Waterfront," which won the Academy Award in 1955, also "Oscars" for its director, Eliza Kazan, and its star, Marlon Brando. Mr. Bernstein will also pay tribute to the noted American composer Aaron Copland, at present on leave of absence from his duties as assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, with a performance of "A Lincoln Portrait," which will have the distinguished stage, screen, radio and television star, Claude Rains, as narrator. During Mr. Fiedler's tenure of the podium, Leonard Bernstein will be piano soloist in George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

Leonard Bernstein — he will observe his 37th birthday a week after Tanglewood closes, on Aug. 25 — was born in Lawrence, Mass., in 1918, attended the Boston Latin School and then Harvard College, graduating in 1939. He was at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia for two years, where he studied conduction with Fritz Reiner, orchestration with Randall Thompson, and piano with Isabella Vengerova.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

AUG 5 1955

MUSICIANS TO RETIRE

Their colleagues in the Boston Symphony Orchestra honored six retiring members of the symphony at a luncheon at Tanglewood, Lenox, yesterday, and gold watches were presented to the instrumentalists by Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra. Gaston Dufresne, string bass, was chairman of the orchestral committee which initiated the ceremony.

Members of the orchestra, whose retirement takes effect at the conclusion of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival on Aug. 14 are: Jacob Raichman, principal trombone; first violinists Carlos Pinfield and Paul Fedorovsky; second violinist Ralph del Sordo; Louis Artieres, viola; and Walter G. MacDonald, French horn. Neither Mr. Pinfield, who came from Boston for the ceremony, nor Mr. MacDonald have been performing in the 1955 Festival concerts at Tanglewood.

Ex-Banker's Income Tax Lament Is Sung by Tanglewood Choir

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 11—Only a banker, or the Internal Revenue Collector, would sing about the income tax. At Tanglewood tonight a retired banker, Avery Claflin of Brooklyn, contributed a madrigal, "Lament for April 15." His subject may have been unpromising, but his mood was right.

"Lament for April 15" had its première in the course of Tanglewood on Parade. It was sung by the Tanglewood Choir on the porch of the administration building of the Berkshire Festival while people were having their picnic suppers. If on Aug. 11 they could remember April 15 without pain, Mr. Claflin's touching lament did not cause them to gag on their sandwiches and liquid refreshments.

Mr. Claflin, who used to be president of the French American Banking Corporation in Brooklyn, retired recently and decided to devote himself to his old love—writing music. He was at work on a suite for string orchestra when he had to drop his inspirational efforts to take up the dreary task of preparing his income taxe return early this year.

As he read the instructions, the words persisted in arranging themselves in a rythmic and melodic pattern. He found that he was writing music instead of doing his duty by the Government. He ended up by taking six excerpts from the instructions and molding them into a five-and-a-half-minute piece for five-part chorus.

The composition begins with the portentous phrase, "Who must file," and plunges into its stirring opening lines, "Every citizen or resident of the United States—whether an adult or a minor—who had $600 ($1,200 if 65 years of age or over) or more gross income in 1954 must file."

Being a thoroughgoing craftsman, Mr. Claflin gives every one of his chosen words his due. He has even taken the trouble to set the parentheses to music.

The [illegible] goes on with

Continued on Page 11, Column 4

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 91,975

AUG 10 1955

FINAL CHAMBER MUSIC CONCERT FOR THIS YEAR

One Major Series of Berkshire Festival Concludes Tonight

Tonight at 8.30 the final concert in this season's series of Wednesday evening chamber music programs will be given in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox. The all-Beethoven concert will be given by six principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Samuel Mayes, cello; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; and Ralph Gomberg, oboe. Also appearing on the program will be David Lloyd, tenor, and Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

The program will be devoted to the Trio for Clarinet, Cello and Piano, Opus 11, performed by

JAMES STAGLIANO

Messrs. Cioffi, Mayes and Berkowitz; the song cycle "An Die ferne Geliebte," sung by Mr. Lloyd with Mr. Berkowitz at the piano; the Cello Sonata in A Major, Opus 69, played by Messrs. Mayes and Berkowitz; the Trio in C Major for Flute, Bassoon and Cello with Mrs. Dwyer and Messrs. Walt and Mayes; and the Quintet in E Flat, Opus 16, performed by Messrs. Berkowitz, Cioffi, Gomberg, Walt and Stagliano.

Mr. Lloyd, a frequent Tanglewood soloist, appeared twice with the Boston Symphony Orchestra last week-end and will again be a soloist in the performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony which concludes the Berkshire Festival on Sunday afternoon, the 14th, at 2.30. Mr. Berkowitz, who is dean of the Berkshire Music Center, is a well-known pianist and teacher. Last season he went on a five-month tour of Europe with the eminent cellist, Gregor Piatigorsky, playing in England, France, Italy, Israel and Scandinavia.

The five first-chair wood-wind performers from the Boston Symphony Orchestra who will appear at tonight's concert have organized as the Boston Woodwind Quintet and as such have given concerts in many New England colleges and universities. This will be their first ensemble appearance at Tanglewood.

Events Tomorrow

Tomorrow is "Tanglewood On Parade," the gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, with festivities commencing with a performance for boxholders and purchasers of reserved seats of Puccini's opera "Gianni Schicci" in the formal gardens at 4 p. m., and with simultaneous demonstrations by the student symphony orchestra, opera department, chamber music and chorus starting at 6 p. m. The evening concert features Leonard Bernstein conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first performance of a suite he arranged from music he composed for the Academy Award film, "On the Waterfront" and Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," with the distinguished star of stage, screen and TV, Claude Rains, as narrator; and concludes with Arthur Fiedler conducting the famous Boston "Pops" Orchestra, in Rimsky-Korsakov, Johann Strauss and Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue," with Leonard Bernstein as piano soloist.

Remaining tickets for tonight's concert; for "Tanglewood On Parade" tomorrow; for the final weekend festival by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra; and for the open rehearsal Saturday morning at 10 are now on sale at the Tanglewood box-office, and telephone reservations are accepted — Lenox 600. Admission for listening from the lawn will be on sale the day of each concert.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (m)
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 526,215

AUG 12 1955

[illegible] PENS SONG OF THE INCOME TAX

Continued From Page 1

its incantation to "why you must file a return," to a detailed section on dependents, to "the case of children who are residents of the Republic of the Philippines" and winds up with these consolatory lines, "After reading these instructions you should be able to prepare your return, unless you have complicated problems."

Hugh Ross of the Berkshire Music Center faculty conducted this "Lament" with a tongue-in-cheek sobriety that suited well Mr. Chaflin's seting. The composer, knowing that the subject carried the weight of its own gravity, used the gracious and lilting madrical form to cover the emotion of all his—and our—memories.

Mr. Chaflin, who is 57 years old, was here from his summer home in Rensselaerville, N. Y., to listen to the premiere of his unforgettable inspiration. Before he drove home, he told of his musical studies with John P. Marshall, Archibald T. Davison and Erik Satie, French composer.

Teacher Had a System

"T[illegible]

[illegible], operas and compositions in various other forms. Born in Keene, N. H., and educated at Phillips Exeter Academy and Harvard, he went to work as an office boy in the Wall Street area not far from the office of Charles Ives, another American who made a success in business and wrote music in his spare time. He remembers seeing Mr. Ives in those days, but he said tonight he was more interested in Mr. Ives' partner, Julian Myrick.

"Mr. Myrick was a tennis official," Mr. Clafin said, "and I was crazy about tennis."

Mr. Claflin, a quiet-spoken gentleman who answers all questions about his music with seriousness, said that he had wondered whether he had any right to appropriate the deathless words in the tax-instruction sheet.

"I consulted my lawyers," he said, "and they thought it was not copyright stuff," then he added, in dead-pan fashion, "if I earn anything from the piece, who do you think will share in my good luck."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

AUG 10 1955

Tanglewood Tales

Forum Friday

A composers' forum will be held Friday afternoon at 4:30 in the Chamber Music Hall under the supervision of Department III.

The program follows:

Mass: Kyrie — Salvatore Martirano
String Quartet — Susan MacAdam
String Quartet: Adagio — William Sydeman
Piano Piece — Edward Miller
Violin and Piano Work — Richard Maxfield
Paul Gurevich, violin; Tossi Ichiyanagi, piano.
Music for Trombone and Piano — Michael Sahl

Composers' Forum

The program for the composers' forum, under the supervision of Department III of the Berkshir Music Center, to be held Satu day afternoon at 3 in the Chambe Music Hall, follows:

String Quartet — George Sicilianc
Hiroshi Hatoyama, violin; Jean Comstock, viola; Elizabeth Beebe, violin; Albert Petillo, violoncello.

Sonata for Viola and Piano — George Wilso
Joseph Pietropaolo, viola; George Crumb, piano.

Intermission.

Lieder: Die Sonette An Orpheus; on poems by Rilke — Eino Rautavaar
Da Stieg ein Baum (There Stands tree).
Und fast ein Madchen war's (And it was like a maiden).
Ein Gott vermags.
O Ihr cartlichen (O, You Dear Ones).
Christina Cardillo, soprano.

Five songs for soprano, flute, clarinet, bassoon and violoncello — Michiko Toyam
Mary Jane Paul, soprano.
Pollee Slimm flute; John Pandolfi, clarinet; Janet Sillars, flute; Beatrice Messina, bassoon; David Spinks, violoncello.

Chamber Music Concert by Students

The sixth and final concert o chamber music by members of De partment I of the Music Center wil be given Sunday morning at 10 ir the Theater Concert Hall.

The program:

Octet in E flat, Op. 20 — Mendelssohn
Paul Gurevich, violin; Joseph Hassid, violin; Edward Filmanowicz, violin; Jean Angers, violin; Jean Comstock, viola; Edward Gerber, viola; Alice Ober, violoncello; Marcia Hansen, violoncello.

Serenade No. 12 in C (K. 388) — Mozart
Nicholas Apostle, oboe; David Seeley, English horn; John Grande, bass clarinet; Catherine Carter, clarinet; Isabelle Glore, bassoon; Thomas Grove, bassoon; Robert Ricks, French horn.

Quintet — Brahms
Hiroshi Hatoyama, violin; Genia Palasanian, violin; Placido Pietropaolo, viola; David Spinks, violoncello; Susan Pearlman, piano.

* * *

Student Council Party

At the Student Council party at Wheatleigh Monday night for its emergency fund for needy students, John Grande, bass clarinetist from Long Island City, was master of ceremonies; Kenneth Schermerhorn, conducting student from Schenectady, was in charge of door prizes; and entertainment included impersonations by Stanley Dombrowski, violinist in the student orchestra, from Export, Pa.; and acrobatics by Esther Sweigart, a Study Group member rom Kutztown, Pa.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampsnire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

AUG 8 1955

Leonard Bernstein To Participate In Tanglewood Event

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the summer music school maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts, will have the participation of one of its most illustrious graduates, Leonard Bernstein, in the triple capacity in which the brilliant young American musician from Lawrence, Mass., has won international fame during his 36 years, as conductor, composer and concert pianist.

On Thursday, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., music lovers who from advance interest seem destined to surpass last summer's record turnout of 10,050 persons, will hear Leonard Bernstein open the gala evening concert in the huge 6,000-seat capacity Music Shed at 8:15 p.m., conducting the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra. His portion of the program — the concert will be shared by Arthur Fiedler conducting the celebrated Boston "Pops" Orchestra — will consist of a first performance anywhere of a suite Mr. Bernstein has arranged from music he composed for the film "On the Waterfront," which won the Academy Award in 1955, also "Oscars" for its director, Eliza Kazan, and its star, Marlon Brando. Mr. Bernstein will also pay tribute to the noted American composer Aaron Copland, at present on leave of absence from his duties as assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, with a performance of "A Lincoln Portrait," which will have the distinguished stage, screen, radio and television star, Claude Rains, as narrator. During Mr. Fiedler's tenure of the podium, Leonard Bernstein will be piano soloist in George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

Leonard Bernstein — he will observe his 37th birthday a week after Tanglewood closes, on Aug. 25 — was born in Lawrence, Mass., in 1918, attended the Boston Latin School and then Harvard College, graduating in 1939. He was at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia for two years, where he studied conducting with Fritz Reiner, orchestration with Randall Thompson, and piano with Isabella Vengerova.

conduct a subscrip-ix concerts in New Symphony of the r NBC Symphony in April he will be ctor of the Boston
chestra at the end tra's 75th anniin Boston. The young American ist, conductor was ent at the Berk-
Center during its 1940 and 1941, at returns to con-
wood on Parade" consecutive sum-earance at last brought out the nce in the history on Parade" —

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

AUG 5 1955

MUSICIANS TO RETIRE

Their colleagues in the Boston Symphony Orchestra honored six retiring members of the symphony at a luncheon at Tanglewood, Lenox, yesterday, and gold watches were presented to the instrumentalists by Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra. Gaston Dufresne, string bass, was chairman of the orchestral committee which initiated the ceremony.

Members of the orchestra, whose retirement takes effect at the conclusion of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival on Aug. 14 are: Jacob Raichman, principal trombone; first violinists Carlos Pinfield and Paul Fedorovsky; second violinist Ralph del Sordo; Louis Artieres, viola; and Walter G. MacDonald, French horn. Neither Mr. Pinfield, who came from Boston for the ceremony, nor Mr. MacDonald have been performing in the 1955 Festival concerts at Tanglewood.

Ex-Banker's Income Tax Lament Is Sung by Tanglewood Choir

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 11—Only a banker, or the Internal Revenue Collector, would sing about the income tax. At Tanglewood tonight a retired banker, Avery Claflin of Brooklyn, contributed a madrigal, "Lament for April 15." His subject may have been unpromising, but his mood was right.

"Lament for April 15" had its première in the course of Tanglewood on Parade. It was sung by the Tanglewood Choir on the porch of the administration building of the Berkshire Festival while people were having their picnic suppers. If on Aug. 11 they could remember April 15 without pain, Mr. Claflin's touching lament did not cause them to gag on their sandwiches and liquid refreshments.

Mr. Claflin, who used to be president of the French American Banking Corporation in Brooklyn, retired recently and decided to devote himself to his old love—writing music. He was at work on a suite for string orchestra when he had to drop his inspirational efforts to take up the dreary task of preparing his income taxe return early this year.

As he read the instructions, the words persisted in arranging themselves in a ryhthmic and melodic pattern. He found that he was writing music instead of doing his duty by the Government. He ended up by taking six excerpts from the instructions and molding them into a five-and-a-half-minute piece for five-part chorus.

The composition begins with the portentous phrase, "Who must file," and plunges into its stirring opening lines, "Every citizen or resident of the United States—whether an adult or a minor—who had $600 ($1,200 if 65 years of age or over) or more gross income in 1954 must file."

Being a thoroughgoing craftsman, Mr. Claflin gives every one of his words his due. He has even taken the trouble to set the parentheses to music.

The [illegible] goes on with

Continued on Page 11, Column 4

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 91,975

AUG 10 1955

FINAL CHAMBER MUSIC CONCERT FOR THIS YEAR

One Major Series of Berkshire Festival Concludes Tonight

Tonight at 8:30 the final concert in this season's series of Wednesday evening chamber music programs will be given in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox. The all-Beethoven concert will be given by six principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Samuel Mayes, cello; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; and Ralph Gomberg, oboe. Also appearing on the program will be David Lloyd, tenor, and Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

The program will be devoted to the Trio for Clarinet, Cello and Piano, Opus 11, performed by

JAMES STAGLIANO

Messrs. Cioffi, Mayes and Berkowitz; the song cycle "An Die ferne Geliebte," sung by Mr. Lloyd with Mr. Berkowitz at the piano; the Cello Sonata in A Major, Opus 69, cestral home a vacation retre for scholars. They are staying f anywhere from a few days to fo weeks; next summer he will host for two months.

His guests so far have includ British biologist and philosoph Dr. Julian Huxley; Dr. Juli Boyd, editor of the Jefferson p [illegible] Symphony Orchestra last week-end and will again be a soloist in the performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony which concludes the Berkshire Festival on Sunday afternoon, the 14th, at 2.30. Mr. Berkowitz, who is dean of the Berkshire Music Center, is a well-known pianist and teacher. Last season he went on a five-month tour of Europe with the eminent cellist, Gregor Piatigorsky, playing in England, France, Italy, Israel and Scandinavia.

The five first-chair wood-wind performers from the Boston Symphony Orchestra who will appear at tonight's concert have organized as the Boston Woodwind Quintet and as such have given concerts in many New England colleges and universities. This will be their first ensemble appearance at Tanglewood.

Events Tomorrow

Tomorrow is "Tanglewood On Parade," the gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, with festivities commencing with a performance for boxholders and purchasers of reserved seats of Puccini's opera "Gianni Schicci" in the formal gardens at 4 p. m., and with simultaneous demonstrations by the student symphony orchestra, opera department, chamber music and chorus starting at 6 p. m. The evening concert features Leonard Bernstein conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first performance of a suite he arranged from music he composed for the Academy Award film, "On the Waterfront" and Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," with the distinguished star of stage, screen and TV, Claude Rains, as narrator; and concludes with Arthur Fiedler conducting the famous Boston "Pops" Orchestra, in Rimsky-Korsakov, Johann Strauss and Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue," with Leonard Bernstein as piano soloist.

Remaining tickets for tonight's concert; for "Tanglewood On Pa-

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (m)
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 526,215

AUG 12 1955

[illegible] PENS SONG OF THE INCOME TAX

Continued From Page 1

its incantation to "why you must file a return," to a detailed section on dependents, to "the case of children who are residents of the Republic of the Philippines" and winds up with these consolatory lines, "After reading these instructions you should be able to prepare your return, unless you have complicated problems."

Hugh Ross of the Berkshire Music Center faculty conducted this "Lament" with a tongue-in-cheek sobriety that suited well Mr. Chaflin's seting. The composer, knowing that the subject carried the weight of its own gravity, used the gracious and lilting madrical form to cover the emotion of all his—and our—memories.

Mr. Chaflin, who is 57 years old, was here from his summer home in Rensselaerville, N. Y., to listen to the premiere of his unforgettable inspiration. Before he drove home, he told of his musical studies with John P. Marshall, Archibald T. Davison and Erik Satie, French composer.

Teacher Had a System

"I studied with Satie before World War I," he said, "and he was quite a teacher. You met him at 11 A. M., and went out at once to have an apertif with him. Then you bought him lunch. Then he went to work. He could spend forty-five minutes on one measure, and believe me you learned something."

Mr. Claflin has written symphonies, operas and compositions in various other forms. Born in Keene, N. H., and educated at Phillips Exeter Academy and Harvard, he went to work as an office boy in the Wall Street area not far from the office of Charles Ives, another American who made a success in business and wrote music in his spare time. He remembers seeing Mr. Ives in those days, but he said tonight he was more interested in Mr. Ives' partner, Julian Myrick.

"Mr. Myrick was a tennis official," Mr. Clafin said, "and I was crazy about tennis."

Mr. Claflin, a quiet-spoken gentleman who answers all questions about his music with seriousness, said that he had wondered whether he had any right to appropriate the deathless words in the tax-instruction sheet.

"I consulted my lawyers," he said, "and they thought it was not copyright stuff," then he added, in dead-pan fashion, "if I earn anything from the piece, who do you think will share in my good luck."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 91,501

AUG 7 1955

Final Week At Berkshire Music Festival

The sixth and final week of activities at the Berkshire Music Festival will highlight the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" on Thursday, with receipts going to the benefit of the Boston Orchestra's summer school, the Berkshire Music Center—student symphony orchestra, chamber music, chorus and opera—followed by a "gala concert" in which the Boston Pops Orchestra will be featured. The evening will conclude with the awarding of door prizes and waltzing on the lawn of the Festival grounds. The day's schedule commences at 4 in the afternoon with most of the student events to be given simultaneously at 6 P. M.

The main Shed concert on Thursday evening will be in two portions. Leonard Bernstein will conduct the earlier offerings in which his own suite, adapted from his score for "On the Waterfront", will receive its first performance. Bernstein will also conduct Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait", with the distinguished actor, Claude Rains, acting as narrator. The young conductor will later be the soloist in Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." The Pops portion of the program, conducted by Arthur Fiedler. This latter half will include Rimsky-Korsakov's "Caprice Espagnol" and a dance suite from the "Graduation Ball", by Johann Strauss.

Tomorrow evening, the one act opera "The Rope," will have its world premiere in a performance by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center. The new opera, the first to be commissioned at Tanglewood under the Koussevitzky Music Foundation plan to develop young composers, is based on Eugene O'Neill's one-act play of the same name. The composer, 34-year old Louis Mennini, is a member of the faculty of the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, New York.

On Wednesday evening, the concluding event of the chamber music series will be given by six principals of the Boston Symphony. The program will present trios, songs, a quintet, and a cello sonata. Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Music Center, is to be the pianist in the program which was originally to have been presented by him and ailing cellist Gregory Piatigorsky.

The final weekend concerts will divide podium honors between Charles Munch, regular conductor of the Boston Orchestra, and guest conductor, Pierre Monteux. Mr. Munch will conduct an all-French program on Friday evening with music by Berlioz, Debussy, and Ravel —the "Symphonie Fantastique", "La Mer", and the "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite, No. 2, respectively. The Monteux concert on Saturday evening consists of Wagner's Overture to "The Flying Dutchman", Brahms' Third Symphony, and Debussy's Nocturnes (Clouds, Festivals, Sirens). The last Festival concert next Sunday afternoon, with Mr. Munch again on the podium, will be devoted principally to a performance of the Beethoven "Ninth", preceded by the "Leonore" Overture, No. 3. The soloists in the "Ninth" presentation are to be Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Citizen (e)
WINSTED, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 3,445

AUG 8 1955

Brilliant Musician To Conduct Annual Benefit Concert

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music center, the summer music school maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire festival concerts, will have the participation of one of its most illustrious graduates, Leonard Bernstein, in the triple capacity in which the brilliant young American musician from Lawrence, Mass., has won international fame during his 36 years as conductor, composer and concert pianist.

On Thursday at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., music-lovers who from advance interest seem destined to surpass last summer's record turnout of 10,050 persons will hear Leonard Bernstein open the gala evening concert in the huge 6,000-seat capacity Music shed at 8:15 o'clock, conducting the 104-piece Boston Symphony orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

AUG 6 1955

Festival Series Concerts Tonight, Sunday At 2:30

With concerts tonight at 8:30 p.m. and tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 p.m., the 1955 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, moves into its final weekend but one. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct both concerts.

The program this evening will be devoted to excerpts from two of the greatest operas in the literature—Beethoven's "Fidelio" and Wagner's "Die Gotterdammerung." With Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd and Mac Morgan as the principal soloists, and the Berkshire Festival Chorus trained by John Krueger, the first half of the program will consist of a concert presentation of the second act of "Fidelio," a Tanglewood first performance. After the intermission, three excerpts from "Die Gotterdammerung" will be heard: Siefried's Rhine Journey, Siegfried's Death Music, and the Immolation Scene in which Miss Harshaw will sing Brunnhilde.

Miss Harshaw joined the Metropolitan Opera Company as a contralto in the 1942 season and made her debut in the role of Gudrune. After singing contralto roles to great acclaim for a decade, she sang the soprano role of Senta in the Metropolitan's new production of Wagner's "The Flying Dutchman" in 1951. Ever since, she has been recognized as one of the outstanding Wagnerian sopranos of our time and is especially famous for her portrayal of Brunnhilde in "Die Gotterdammerung." She sang the Immolation Scene with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Mr. Munch in Boston last winter and the season before, and also at Tanglewood under Pierre Monteux during the 1952 Berkshire Festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 86,944

AUG 9 1955

O'Neill Play Presented In Opera Form

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 8 (Special)—Eugene O'Neill's one-act play, "The Rope," reached the stature of an opera here at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood tonight, when it was presented in a score by Louis Mennini, of the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N.Y.

It was the first opera commissioned especially for performance by the opera department of the music center, thereby fulfilling an idea envisioned by the late Serge Koussevitzky, former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and founder of the music center.

For those who do not remember back to 1917, or the infrequent intervals since then in which "The Rope" was presented, Mr. O'Neill's play stemmed from his familiar preoccupation with the early American temperament, which, for him, was bleak and forbidding in a gaunt atmosphere generally suggestive of the New England left over from Puritan days and still steeped in an exaggerated morality based on the most vindictive application of the old testament.

Prodigal Son Parable

In "The Rope," Mr. O'Neill told about the father of one such rockbound New England family, who appeared incensed at the fact his favorite son fled the farm for the sea, and who hung a noose in the barn against the lad's return. Naturally everyone thought the old codger wished the death of his offspring, and they are not surprised that when the son finally returns, the old man tries to get him to place his neck in the noose.

Actually, "The Rope" is but a double-take on the parable of the prodigal son, for when the rope is actually pulled, the old man's fortune of gold pieces tumbles from the beam where the rope was suspended. It is unhappy to have to report that the son failed to negotiate the rope, and the curtain goes down on a scene in which a small child, who discovered the secret, skims the fortune into the sea, coin by coin, to see the bright metal skip over the waves.

In view of the material to hand, Mr. Mennini has very competently converted the play into an opera. He is in the first place an able musician in the technical point. He has made a score which sounds well both in the voice and upon the orchestra. The music sings well, plays well, the writing is on the professorial side, having a certain studied quality and manufacture. While to some degree it has modern hwsonies, it is essentially conservative and conventional. It reminds very much of Benjamin Britten, without some of the extremities of style. It is somber, or at least sober, it is perhaps more lyric than dramatic. It is above all romatic, in a somewhat old-fashioned way, barring details here and there.

Ably Directed

It is this respect above all that Mr. Mennini's opera most faithfully embodies O'Neill's "The Rope." However universal may be the themes of O'Neill's plays, however seizing their peculiar atmosphere may be for the American scene, the fact is that they belonged to an era when authors and playwrights were writing about our culture in an almost entirely fanciful fashion. No one could possibly put O'Neill down as a realist among dramatists or the chroniclers of the early American temperament. That he achieved a certain atmosphere which we now accept, however artifically as "American," that he worked out his dramas on enormously impressive canvases reminiscent of the prophets of the old teetaments, no one will deny. Nor has anyone done so well since. But in many ways, O'Neill was the teller of fairy tales, of legends. And it is this impressive, but unreal vein, that is so consonant in Mr. Mennini's music. It is not the music that grows out of some real, dramatic situation. It grows instead out of a fanciful concept. If it were not written for "The Rope," it would be the setting form some equally unreal tale.

Tonight's performance was very ably directed by Henry Janiec. It was much too heavily produced by Boris Goldovsky, head of the music center opera department. The sets and lights by David Hays were in line with Mr. Goldovsky's ideas, but like the music, the play, incurably romantic.

The performance was excellent. Malcolm Bernstein as the Bible-crazed father, Mary Mackenzie as the daughter, Stephen Harbachick as the prodigal, Lynn Detwiler as the foreigner in the midst and Holly McLennan as the child, sang and acted very nicely. That is, they sang very well, and acted as much as the minimal opportunity of the play allows.

A performance of the two-act Mozart opera, "Zaide", rounded out the program, but a flight from the Seraglio was necessary in order to get "The Rope" into today's chronicle.

—T.H.P.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

News Advertiser
WESTFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2700

AUG 11 1955

Two Symphony Concerts This Week End

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, gives the final part of conecrts of its 1955 Berkshire Festival Saturday night and Sunday afternoon in the huge Music Shed at Tanglewood, in Lenox. Pierre Monteux will be on the podium for Saturday's program and Mr. Munch will conduct the concluding event on Sunday.

Last year 21,650 persons attended the final concerts, and if fair weather prevails this weekend, an even larger crowd is expected.

Saturday's program is all symphonic, with Mr. Monteux leading the 104-piece Boston Symphony in Wagner's Overture to "The Flying Dutchman"; Brahms' Symphony No. 3 in F Major; Debussy's Three Nocturnes; and for the first time at Tanglewood the suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" of Richard Strauss. The Debussy nocturne "Sirenes" will have the participation of the feminine members of the Festival Crorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Miss Iva Dee Hiatt, director of choral music at Smith College, Northampton, Mass., and assistant to Hugh Ross in the Tanglewood student choral department.

The concluding concert Sunday will be the sixth all-Beethoven concert on the 12-concert Shed series. Mr. Munch's fifth summer program devoted to the works of that composer. It comprises the Overture "Leonore," No. 3, and the Symphony, No. 9, in D minor, with Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass, as soloists, the last three being former members of the Berkshire Music Center. The enlarged chorus comprises the Festival Chorus of Tanglewood students and a chorus of 50 voices of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra, trained by Hugh Ross and John Krueger, director of the Youngstown (O.) Philharmonic and Chorus.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-0068

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ.
AUG 4 1955

Tanglewood Will Be On Parade August 11

Arthur Fiedler Will Conduct Boston "Pops"

Annual Event for Benefit of Berkshire Music Center Attracted 10,500 Last Year.—Every Department of Summer Music School Will Give Demonstrations.

Tanglewood will be On Parade Thursday, August 11. The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, which attracted 10,500 persons in 1954, afternoon and evening festivities in Lenox, is in aid of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, now in its thirteenth session in conjunction with the six-week Berkshire Festival. The gala day's activities, from 6:00 p. m. to 11:00 p. m., include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, an evening concert, followed by drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

The Boston "Pops" Orchestra, with Arthur Fiedler, its celebrated conductor for 26 years, on the podium, will perform a typical "Pops" program, as it did in 1954 when it made its first appearance in Tanglewood's 6000-seat Music Shed, helping to shatter all attendance records for "Tanglewood on Parade." Through its annual seasons in Symphony Hall and at the Esplanade concerts on the Charles river mall in Boston, its extensive tours, and the mediums of recordings, radio and television, probably more people have heard the "Pops" and Arthur Fiedler than any other orchestra or conductor in history. Mr. Fielder, who conducted the Art Commission Pop Concerts in San Francisco's Civic Auditorium last week, flies to conduct the Miami Beach Pops Concerts in Florida on August 7, will fly to the Berkshires for "Tanglewood on Parade," then flies to Miami for a second concert August 14, returning immediately to Boston to conclude the Esplanade series August 15 to 20.

The first half of the concert program in the shed next Thursday will be given at 8:15 p. m. by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's orchestra and conducting departments, and himself a student at the music school in 1940, the first year of its founding. Mr. Bernstein will conduct the first performance anywhere of a suite he has arranged from the music he composed for the film, "On the Waterfront," which won the 1955 Academy Award and additional Oscars for its star, Marlon Brando, and its director, Elia Kazan. Also on this portion of the program will be "A Lincoln Portrait" by Aaron Copland, the distinguished American composer who is assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center (on leave of absense in 1955). It was first performed by the Boston Symphony on April 9, 1943.

Leonard Bernstein, noted equally as composer, conductor and concert pianist, will be soloist with the Boston "Pops" in George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." Mr. Fiedler's program will also include the "Caprice Espagnole" of Rimsky-Korsakov, and the suite of Johann Strauss dances from the ballet "Graduation Ball" as arranged by Antal Dorati. A number of encores in typical light popular "Pops" vein will follow.

Seats for "Tanglewood on Parade" are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office, and may be reserved by telephone.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-0068

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,995
AUG 4 1955

Festival Audience Thrills to Brahms

Monteux Is Guest Conductor at Tanglewood Sunday

Isaac Stern Reaches Great Heights In "Concerto for Violin With Orchestra In D Major."—Rudolph Serkin Enticed Audience With Piano Concerto Saturday Evening.

By George E. Membrino

Brahms was the "Magic Word" Sunday as the fourth week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox was brought to a close. An extremely large audience thrilled to strains of the music by Brahms with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor.

Mr. Monteux is a conductor extremely cautious in the conservation of motion. This feeling of no wasted motion accounts for the artistic ease with which Mr. Monteux conducts.

The "Academic Festival Overture" opened the program. A most vibrant and rollicking mood was set The many themes of "collegiate" nature were blended with excellent results.

Returning for the third time this season was the violin soloist, Isaac Stern. The "Concerto for Violin with Orchestra in D major" was substituted in place of the "Concerto for Violin and Cello with Orchestra in A major" due to Gregor Piatigorsky's unavailability. Mr. Stern reached great heights in the second movement. The adagio was played most fluently and tranquilly.

Highlights of the afternoon's performance was "Symphony No. 1 in C. minor." In the second movement (andante sostenuto) attention was directed to the superb solo violin passage offered by Concertmaster Richard Burgin. The third movement was short and delightful.

The final movement (adagio, allegro non troppo ma con brio) brought to play the light pizzicatto of the strings followed by the brass choir in a choral style. It was a fitting climax to an afternoon of musical pleasure rich in experience.

A most varied program was presented Friday evening. Music by Handel, Schumann, Barber and Brahms was heard. Charles Munch's first offering was "Suite for Orchestra" by Handel. This composition is better known as the "Water Music." The suite, happy and charming, provided delightful listening through the ease and light reading offered by the conductor.

Symphony No. 4 in D minor, by Schumann, interested us from the standpoint of having no complete breaks between movements. This remains an extremely difficult role for the conductor to give balance and co-ordination for the comprehensive effect of the entire work. Maestro Munch succeeded in enabling his listeners to realize the full impact of this symphony.

Both these works gave the brass section of the orchestra (the horns in particular) an opportunity to come to full light and prominence. This section, seldom singled out for honors, was accorded special recognition by Mr. Munch.

The expected highlight of the evening, Mr. Barber's "Players of Kierkegaard," proved to be a great disappointment in musical content. Praise is high for the soprano soloist, Leontyne Price, chorus, and all concerned, but however, it was the music that left us cold.

The Barber piece was commissioned by the Koussevitsky Music Foundation and was first performed last year. This work paralleled a composition of Lucas Foss, "Parable of Death," performed at Tanglewood in 1953. Both by contemporaries, they lack the qualities of great choral and orchestral works such as Beethoven's and Mahler's, to mention a few. Deep emotional feeling, as is the case in such works, was lost, as the orchestra completely dominated the choral scene at climatic points.

Following intermission the Brahms "Symphony No. 4 in E minor" was played. Here the conductor returned to his lofty place as an interpreter of the finest in musical taste. With the exception of the Barber work Mr. Munch conducted without the aid of a score.

An all-Beethoven program was offered Saturday evening. Heard was the "Overture to Goethe's Egmont," "Concerto for Piano No. 5 in E flat major," and "Symphony No. 3 in E flat major Eroica." Soloist for the piano concerto was Rudolph Serkin.

Mr. Serkin enticed the audience into rendering the greatest ovation of the current season and certainly one of the greatest afforded any guest soloist in all Tanglewood history.

The audience Saturday night was also one of the largest ever attending a single concert. Numbering well over 15,000 persons and stretching as far back on the lawn as the main administration building, they were rewarded with an evening of Beethoven rarely heard under such favorable conditions.

It is quite understandable why Mr. Munch chose to honor Beethoven this summer. A smile little short of rapturous comes over his face when conducting the works of this great master of the past. E flat seemed to be the keynote of the evening's pleasure, with both the "Piano Concerto" and the "Eroica Symphony" being written in that key.

An oft-repeated anecdote of the "Eroica" remains constant in our minds with each new hearing. Beethoven supposedly had Napoleon in mind for this symphony. All that is great in human stature is definitely portrayed in this symphony. Even the slow second movement funeral march rises to the height of strength in life before it subsides. The knowledge of Napoleon's real self later turned the intention of Beethoven. We now prefer to think of the "Eroica" as giving us an insight into the greatness of Beethoven rather than Napoleon.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Citizen (e)
WINSTED, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 3,445
AUG 3 1955

FIFTH CONCERT OF CHAMBER MUSIC AT TANGLEWOOD

Tonight at 8:30 o'clock the fifth concert in this season's series of Wednesday evening chamber music programs will be given in the Theater-Concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., as part of the 1955 Berkshire festival. Rudolph Serkin, the eminent painist who made his Tanglewood debut earlier this season, will play three piano sonatas by Beethoven, the Sonata in F Major, Opus 10, No. 2; the Sonata in C Major, Opus 53, called the "Waldstein" Sonata; and the Sonata in B Flat, Opus 106, the "Hammerklavier" Sonata.

Mr. Serkin made his American debut 20 years ago with Arturo Toscanini and the Philharmonic Symphony orchestra of New York. Ever since he has been one of the most popular and distinguished concert artists in the United States. He has played with all the major orchestras in the world and in recent years has made an annual journey to the small French village of Prades to participate in festival performances with the great 'cellist, Pablo Casals. He is especially renowned as a Beethoven interpreter.

Remaining tickets for tonight's concert, as well as the six remaining ones by the Boston Symphony orchestra in the 1955 Berkshire festival, which ends Aug. 14, are on sale at the Tanglewood box office.

Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Citizen (e)
WINSTED, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 3,445

AUG 6 1955

BOSTON SYMPHONY PLANS PROGRAM OF HIGH ORDER

With concerts tonight at 8:30 o'clock and tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, the Berkshire festival by the Boston symphony orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its final weekend but one. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston symphony orchestra, will conduct both concerts.

The program this evening will be devoted to excerpts from two of the greatest operas in the literature, Beethoven's "Fidelio" and Wagner's "Die Gotterdammerung." With Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd and Mac Morgan as the principal soloists, and the Berkshire festival chorus trained by John Krueger, the first half of the program will consist of a concert presentation of the second act of "Fidelio," a Tanglewood first performance. After the intermission, three excerpts from "Die Gotterdammerung" will be heard: Siegfried's "Rhine Journey," Siegfried's "Death Music," and the immolation scene in which Miss Harshaw will sing "Brunnhilde."

Miss Harshaw joined the Metropolitan Opera Co. as a contralto in the 1942 season and made her debut in the role of Gudrune. After singing contralto roles to great acclaim for a decade, she sang the soprano role of "Senta" in the Metropolitan's new production of Wagner's "The Flying Dutchman" in 1951. Ever since, she has been recognized as one of the outstanding Wagnerian sopranos of the time and is especially famous for her portrayal of Brunnhilde in "Die Gotterdammerung." She sang the immolation scene with the Boston symphony orchestra under Mr. Munch in Boston last winter and the season before, and also at Tanglewood under Pierre Monteux during the 1952 Berkshire festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 86,944

AUG 9 1955

Annual 'Parade' At Tanglewood Is Due Thursday

So popular was the Boston "Pops" Orchestra on its first appearance in the Tanglewood Music Shed during "Tanglewood on Parade" in 1954, when its maestro Arthur Fiedler, put it through a program of light classical music that it has been invited to return for the annual benefit for the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, Thursday.

The concert last summer overflowed the 6,000-seat Shed for a record attendance of 10,050 persons.

The Boston "Pops" Orchestra program for "Tanglewood on Parade" will consist of Rimsky-Korsakov's "Capriccio Espagnole"; Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" with Leonard Bernstein as piano soloist; and a suite from the ballet, "Graduation Ball", with music by Johann Strauss arranged by Antal Doreti. A number of encores in typical "Pops" style may be expected.

Besides the "Pops" section of the evening concert, Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait", with distinguished stage and screen star Claude Rains as narrator, and a suite of music Bernstein composed for the Academy Award - winning motion picture "One the Waterfront."

Preceding the evening concert "Tanglewood on Parade" begins at 4 p.m. with a demonstration in the barn by the study group of Berkshire Music Center students and simultaneously with a performance for those who purchase box seats and reserved seats in the Shed, of the short Puccini opera, "Gianni Schicchi" by Tanglewood's Opera Department, in the formal gardens.

From 6-7 p.m., the Berkshire Music Center will have simultaneous sessions of each department, orchestra, opera and chamber music, with a concert by members of the choral department on the steps of the Main House at 7 p.m.

Reservations may be made by telephone to Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., 600.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538
AUG 9 1955

RSO MEMBERS who will play in tomorrow evening's concert at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall are, left to right: Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn. Concert will be devoted to Beethoven chamber [illegible] Manos

Opera

World Premiere Is Held Of Mennini's 'The Rope'

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

A WORLD premiere of an opera by Louis Mennini and an American premiere of a neglected Mozart opera was the bill in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood last night. This represented one of the two peak evenings prepared by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center.

Mennini's opera, "The Rope," is adapted from Eugene O'Neill's one-act play and is the first of the operas commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation under special arrangement requiring the collaboration of the opera department of the school.

* * *

IT CALLS for a cast of five of which one is a child, played last night with adorable charm and mature poise by Holly McLennan. The story concerns an interfamilial animosity over an aged father's money between a son and a married daughter. The setting is an old barn on a sea coast. The plot is sordid and bleak.

Mennini's problem, as he was quoted, was whether to make the music as dissonant and unpleasant as the characters or whether to add warmth to the starkness and gloom of the play. He has not solved it decisively, for above fragmentary phrases and interjections from the pit there keep arising promising rich orchestral introductions which reach nowhere but dissolve and stop short.

* * *

THE CURTAIN parts after a scant six bars from the orchestra, conducted by Henry Janiec, in which paucity of resources is strikingly apparent. The little child is singing a lullaby to her dolls when the daughter, Anne, sung by Mary MacKenzie, and her husband, sung by Lynn Detwiler, enter and unfold the family situation with a long narrative recitative in a free prosaic declaramation over an orchestra wandering with little purpose. Malcolm Bernstein as the father and Stephen Harbachick as the son give vivid portrayals of their parts and seemed to have the most meaty roles of Mennini's opera.

The Maupassant reading was dramatically very effective and made excellent theater. The music enhanced the [illegible] it was still a "play by [illegible] with incidental music t[illegible]." The whole production, [illegible] Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the school, moved forward with absorbing interest; the settings by David Hays were significant contributions to the illusion. Mennini was called to the stage from his seat in the audience to share with the singers the enthusiastic reception the large audience evinced.

"ZAIDE" IS a little two-act opera of Mozart which last night was telescoped by Sarah Caldwell and Marvin Schoefer into a short single act which still was too long. It did serve to bring forward several elements which were enjoyable and worthwhile even so.

In the title role of an incredibly ludicrous plot, fascinating Christina Cardillo distinguished herself by the pure lyric vocalism of the lovely music Mozart wrote for the part. Her tones were produced and supported with equal splendor in all registers and Mozart could not have found a voice in which the compass was better placed for the role than in Miss Cardillo's fresh liquid soprano. As the tutor of the Sultan's son, McHenry Boatwright's resonant voice was admirably suited to the part.

* * *

IT MAY BE apparent by now that the action takes place in a harem which therefore calls for guards, servants, and dancing girls. The individuals were all more than competent, but this part of the evening at times taxed the charity of a benevolent audience. The orchestra, conducted by Aviva Einham, was adequate only in spots.

The Mozart music, as might be expected, is thoroughly charming. There are solos and concerted numbers which are captivating as music, but it required no imagination to see why the opera has been neglected. Both operas will be repeated tonight with completely different casts except for Holly in "The Rope," and stalwart little George Lussier, who is the Sultan's son in "Zaide."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326
AUG 10 1955

Final Tanglewood Chamber Music Concert Tonight

The final concert in this season's series of Wednesday evening chamber music programs will be given at 8.30 o'clock this evening at the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood. The all-Beethoven program will feature six members of the Boston Symphony orchestra, along with tenor David Lloyd and Ralph Berkowitz, pianist.

Tomorrow evening the annual benefit concert for the Berkshire Music center, Tanglewood on Parade, will be held in the big shed. Featured will be the full Boston Symphony under the direction of Leonard Bernstein and the Boston Pops orchestra under Arthur Fiedler.

The final week-end series of concerts gets underway Friday evening, with additional programs Saturday night and Sunday afternoon.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872
AUG 12 1955

Another recorded program in the Berkshire Festival Concert series will be broadcast over WGBH-FM Saturday night from 8:30 until conclusion. Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the Festival Chorus, in the performance of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard." Guest soloist will be Leontyne Price, soprano. Orchestral selections include Handel's Water Music Suite, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor, and Brahms' Symphony No. 4 in E minor.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825
AUG 6 1955

Tanglewood Concluding Concerts Next Week

With an anticipated attendance of 130,000 at its twenty-four concerts—six chamber music programs by noted soloists and visiting ensembles; six chamber orchestra concerts by principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; twelve concerts by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, concludes its 1955 schedule during the coming week.

Added to the above will be an expected 10,000 at "Tanglewood on Parade," the gala annual benefit for the orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, next Thursday; 9,000 at four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony, in aid of the orchestra's pension fund; and a predictable 40,000 at the 30-odd concerts and demonstrations by the five departments of the Berkshire Music Center, and it may be estimated that attendance records again will be shattered, proving the popularity of Music Director Charles Munch's decision in 1954 to enlarge the annual summer Festival in the hills of Western Massachusetts within the scope of its six-week framework.

The sixth and final week of Festival concerts opens with the concluding event of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, on Aug. 10 in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Six principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (Gino Cioffi, clarinet; Samuel Mayes, cello; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, Bassoon; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; James Stagliano, French Horn), will be assisted by David Lloyd, tenor; and Ralph Berkowitz, piano, in a program of trios, songs, a quintet and a cello sonata.

Charles Munch will conduct an all-French orchestral program, music of Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel, on the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Shed concert of Friday evening (August 12) and an all-Beethoven program including the Ninth Symphony with soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; and augmented chorus on Sunday afternoon (August 14). Pierre Monteux will conduct the Saturday evening (August 13) program, comprising Wagner, Brahms, Debussy and Strauss.

Mr. Munch's concluding concert will be his fifth all-Beethoven program of the summer. With guest conductors Monteux and Leonard Bernstein also performing Beethoven on their concerts Tanglewood in 1955 will have been largely devoted to the music of the German composer. Al nine symphonies, the "Missa Solemnis," "Fidelio," Act II, two piano concertos, the violin concerto, a number of overtures, and a great body of chamber music has been performed.

Weekending music lovers are invited to subscribe to "Tanglewood on Parade" on Thursday. The annual benefit for the orchestra's music school, now completing its 13th session, which provides opportunity for ensemble performance and musical instruction under expert musicians for some 400 students from 38 states and 18 foreign countries, is from 6:00 to 11:00 p.m. It will commence with demonstrations by all departments: Student symphony orchestra, chamber music, chorus and opera, followed by a gala concert in the Music Shed and concluding with the drawing of door prizes and waltzing on the lawn. Leonard Bernstein, who heads the school's department of orchestra and conducting, and himself a student in the Berkshire Music Center's first years (1940 and1941), will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the premiere performance of a suite he has arranged from his score for the Academy Award-winning film, "On the Waterfront," also Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait." Arthur Fiedler will lead the Boston "Pops" Orchestra in a typical program of light music by Rimsky Korsakov, Johann Strauss and George Gershwin, with Mr. Bernstein soloist in the "Rhapsody in Blue."

A bonus for Festival patrons is the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10:00 a.m. (Aug. 13), for which a nominal charge is made for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30. the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 122,000
AUG 12 1955

Symphony Gets $125,000 Grant for Scholarships

A grant of $125,000 has been made by the Rockefeller Foundation to the Boston Symphony Orchestra to be used for music scholarships, it was announced yesterday by the Foundation.

The grant is part of $5,686,004 given by the Foundation during the second quarter of 1955 for studies ranging from solar energy to the biological control of the rhinoceros beetle.

The contribution to the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be used to provide scholarships for many young musicians to study at the Berkshire Music Center, Lenox.

The Center, best known for its series of Summer concerts at Tanglewood, was opened in 1940 by the Boston Symphony Orchestra with partial Foundation assistance. The grant will go into the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

Other grants include $300,000 to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology to aid in the development of a program in which a student may elect a major in the humanities or social sciences concurrently with one in a field of science or technology. The contribution will aid in the development of this program, started by M. I. T., during the next 10 years.

A grant of $50,000 was given to Dartmouth College for a program of research in cellular biology during a four-year period; $10,000 to Harvard Graduate School of Public Administration for a preparatory study for the organization of a Water Resources Seminar; $10,000 to Harvard University Laboratory of Social Relations for advanced research training of especially promising young men in the laboratory; $1400 for study in the field of jurisprudence by members of the Harvard Law Review staff; $4500 toward the appointment of Dr. Helen A. Rivlin as a research fellow in the Center for Middle Eastern Studies, Harvard University.

Also to Massachusetts Institute of Technology: $3000 for support of a journal devoted to the translation of languages with the aid of machines; $4000 for research in X-ray crystallography under the direction of Prof. Martin Buerger.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 196,593

AUG 12 1955

110

Boston Symphony Turns Out Real Talent At Tanglewood School

By TOM GERBER

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox winds up its 13th season Sunday.

For the past six weeks, the summer school of music has been the meeting-and-learning place for the cream of the nation's promising composers, singers and musicians.

COME FROM MANY PARTS OF WORLD

They have come from 38 states and 18 foreign lands to get instruction and practical experience under the guidance of top composers, conductors and instrumentalists.

The enrollment at this session has been 405—30 more than last year when attendance at the festival broke all previous records.

The students are both professionals and amateurs. They came to Tanglewood to enhance their professional standing, or just to learn as much as they can about classical music.

The faculty at Tanglewood is as imposing as the beauteous Berkshire setting. The director is Boston Symphony conductor Charles Munch.

The assistant director, serving in the post his first year, is Richard Burgin, the Boston Symphony's associate conductor and concertmaster.

Noted composer Aaron Copeland has held the post since the Festival was organized. But he's on his first leave of absence this year, traveling abroad.

Other faculty members include composer-conductor Leonard Bernstein, a Tanglewood alumni. Also Boris Goldofsky, William Kroll, Hugh Ross, Ingolf Dahl, Seymour Lipkin and members of the Boston Symphony.

STUDENTS SCATTERED THROUGHOUT WORLD

Former students at Tanglewood now are scattered throughout the world. More than 10 per cent of the membership in all major symphony orchestras in the United States is composed of Tanglewood graduates.

The student body at Tanglewood is as varied as it is talented.

There is national competition for the scholarship grants toward tuition, under the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

This year, students at the only school in the world sponsored by a major symphony orchestra were picked from 650 applications. Forty per cent of these were from students who wanted to return to Tanglewood.

Ages of the students range from 16 to 71. And the students include a priest, a macaroni manufacturer, two officers in the armed services, salesmen, housewives, secretaries, doctors and educators.

48 STUDENTS FROM BAY STATE

Massachusetts has 48 students, 31 from Greater Boston. Others are from Marblehead, Lowell, Lynn, Salem, Springfield, Chicopee, Pittsfield, Williamstown and Milford.

Most of the Massachusetts delegation stays at Wheatleigh, a nearby estate owned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The women are staying at a dormitory in Lenox Preparatory School.

One of the exceptions to this Lloyd S. McCausland of Medford.

He's been living in a tent on the shore of Stockbridge Bowl so his kettle drum practicing won't bother other students.

Another Greater Boston student is Kalman Novak of Channing Pl., Cambridge. He conducted a performance of Boris Blacher's opera "Romeo and Juliet" last week.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

AUG 9 1955

North Adams Can Be Proud Of the Musical Cardillos

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

"Cardillo" in Italian may mean a goldfinch or sparrow or some sort of beautiful bird but in northern Berkshire Cardillo means the outstanding musical family of North Adams. The Cardillos, Papa Anthony and Mama Anna, will celebrate their 40th wedding anniversary in about a month and the five children with whom they have been blessed will no doubt serenade them in the fashion they know best: the art of music.

The parents were born in Italy but the children were all born in North Adams. Mama Cardillo and her sisters all had good voices and the gift has been transmitted to the next generation and concentrated in the younger daughter, Christina. Papa Cardillo taught his sons clarinet and, of the three, Pasquale has gone on now to occupy an important chair in the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Studied With Pelletier

Pat came to Pittsfield, after graduating from Drury High School in North Adams, to study with Alphonse Pelletier, the well-known French horn player, retired from the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra. Pat had been guided at Drury by music supervisor Jim Chambers and remembers with especial gratitude the encouragement he got from him. Pelletier sent young Pat to Louis Pagerey, also of Pittsfield, for concentrated study of the clarinet. From there he went on to the New England Conservatory in Boston on a high school scholarship award. There he came under the training of the late Victor Polatchek, at that time solo clarinet of the Boston orchestra. An emergency vacancy occurred in the summer of 1939. Pat was recommended. He filled the bill so well that, following the short term of the agreement, he was engaged for the regular season and has been a reliable fixture ever since.

Chris, while still at Drury, commuted once a week to Troy, N.Y., for vocal lessons. Then she, too, went on to the New England Conservatory. She had many small opportunities but her first real recognition came in 1950 when Charles Munch invited her to sing one of the solo roles in the "Missa Solemnis" and the Schubert Mass in C with the Boston Symphony.

Studied in Milan

The way of the vocalist is not easy, but handsome and vivacious Chris has been ascending the ladder consistently now for several years. After getting her B.M. at the New England, she went to Italy for further study in Milan. In 1954 and also 1955 she won the Metropolitan Auditions of the Air which entails, in addition to a cash award, the chance to study under the "Met" maestri at the Metropolitan school.

Chris represented Tanglewood a week ago at the Berkshire Museum Celebrity Night; she is singing "Zaide" of Mozart at the Berkshire Music Center under Boris Goldovsky; and she sang Marzelline in the performance of the second act of Beethoven's "Fidelio" with the Boston Orchestra under Munch this season.

The other members of the family retain an amateur standing in music but are no ordinary bystanders. Francis and Peter concede little if anything to other amateurs in the neighborhood on the clarinet; Angela, a nurse, applied herself to the violin for years but not professionally.

There will be a lot of gaiety at the wedding anniversary. The parents will be mighty proud of their children, and the way they, in turn, will wish "happy anniversary to you" won't be duplicated in many households.

Mahon

MEET THE CARDILLOS. Christine and Pasquale, that is, members of a North Adams family of musicians. Christine is a soprano in Tanglewood's opera department. Her brother Pasquale is a clarinetist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

News Advertiser
WESTFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2700

AUG 11 1955

Four Sopranos to Sing at Lenox

Mrs. Stanley L. Plaice of 16 Kellogg St., Miss Margaret E. Aspinal of 9 Pine St., Mrs. Berton S. Chillson of 69 Court St. and Mrs. Henry A. Stillman of 19 Woronoco Ave. will sing soprano parts in the choral group for the Tanglewood presentation Sunday, Aug. 14, of Beethoven's Ninth "Choral" Symphony.

The four local women will be part of a chorus of 20 sopranos, 20 altos, 15 tenors, and eight basses, composed of singers from this city, Springfield, Northampton and Hartford.

The works of Beethoven have been prominent in the 1955 series of concerts at the Berkshire Music Festival at Lenox, Mass.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

AUG 12 1955

Boston Symphony Gets $125,000 Grant

By the Associated Press

New York

The Rockefeller Foundation has announced a $125,000 grant to the Boston Symphony Orchestra as a contribution to its Tanglewood revolving scholarship fund. [illegible] was announced a $300,000 gift to Massachusetts Institute of Technology for development of a new humanities-social sciences program.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538
AUG 9 1955

Notes and Footnotes

CLARINETIST Rosario Mazzeo and seven other Boston Orchestra players flew to Iceland for a series of concerts from June 13 to 22, which has been a refreshing memory to them at sweltering Tanglewood.

Mr. Mazzeo and organist E. Power Biggs arranged the unusual journey, and everyone was so pleased they hope to get back again. Although the country was "all cinders and lava," said Mr. M, "the Icelanders are a kindly and gentle people, full of hospitality. Everywhere we were met with the utmost courtesy."

Their trip was arranged by ANTA in cooperation with the U.S. State Department. Besides Mr. Mazzeo and Mr. and Mrs. Biggs, the company included violinists Emil Kornsand and Robert Brink, violist George Humphrey, cellist Alfred Zighera, oboe player Louis Speyer and trumpet player Roger Voisin. Mr. Mazzeo is also personnel manager of the Boston Orchestra.

As a hobby, Mr. M is an ornithologist. Iceland, despite its climate, is "an absolute bird-lover's paradise," said he. Between the seven concerts, Mr. Mazzeo took two trips into the remote parts of the islands and saw "magnificent colonies of breeding fulmars, razor-billed auks, murres, kittiwakes and puffins," all of which mean a lot to an ornithologist, you may be sure.

The flight was made in an Army plane, and one concert was at the military base at Keflavik. They played in an Army recreation hall "which we found filled with tables, smoke, jukebox and bar," said he. "Tables, jukebox and smoke cleared away, the bar closed down, and we played to a most attentive and responsive audience."

Temperature was 60 to 70 degrees, and on recent sweltering Berkshire nights, small wonder that these eight players dreamt of Iceland's air-cooled strand.

—o—

AFTER SO LONG a drought, it is pleasant to hear that Rains is coming Thursday, even if it is only Claude Rains, no disparagment intended. Mr. Rains will narrate Copeland's "A Lincoln Portrait," at Tanglewood on Parade. Rains came first to this area in 1932 when he starred at the Berkshire Playhouse season opener "The Queen's Husband." He was for a time a favorite Playhouse actor.

—o—

BERKSHIRES IN the news: Chief Calnan's order forbidding parading the streets in abbreviated shorts has found a champion in the letter columns of the Troy Record The writer, signing herself, "Veronica," says she would like to see the same rule enforced in Troy. "My hat," she writes, "is off to the chief of police of Pittsfield." Okay with the hat, Veronica, but no more comes off, mind you.

—o—

BRIEF NOTE from Col. Albert M. Jackson of Becket, including two sweet thoughts for the day—"Ever hear of the Russian invention that was really thought up by an Irishman, Sam O'Var?" And a step further, "There was a Swiss cheese that was detested by the Limburger for its holier-than-thou attitude."

RICHARD V. HAPPEL.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 74,966
AUG 10 1955 ... UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., WEDNESDAY,

FINAL CHAMBER MUSIC CONCERT SLATED TONIGHT

All-Beethoven Program at Festival; 'Tanglewood on Parade' Tomorrow

Lenox, Aug. 9—Wednesday at 8.30 p. m. the final concert in this season's series of Wednesday evening chamber music programs will be given in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood. The all-Beethoven concert will be given by six principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Samuel Mayes, cello; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; and Ralph Gomberg, oboe. Also appearing on the program will be David Lloyd, tenor, and Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

The program will be devoted to the Trio for Clarinet, Cello and Piano, Opus 11, performed by Cioffi, Mayes and Berkowitz; the song cycle "An Die ferne Geliebte," sung by Mr. Lloyd with Mr. Berkowitz at the piano; the Cello Sonata in A Major, Opus 69, played by Mayes and Berkowitz; the Trio in C Major for Flute, Bassoon and Cello with Mrs. Dwyer and Walt and Mayes; and the Quintet in E Flat, Opus 16, performed by Berkowitz, Cioffi, Gomberg, Walt and Stagliano.

The climax of Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade" will be a gala concert in the Music Shed at 8.15 p. m. The Boston Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Leonard Bernstein on the first half of the concert, with Claude Rains, distinguished actor of stage, screen, radio and television, as narrator in Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait." Mr. Bernstein will begin the program with the first performance anywhere of a suite he has fashioned from his score for the Academy Award-winning film "On the Waterfront." After the intermission Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston "Pops" Orchestra in a typical "Pops" concert, including Rimsky-Korsakov's "Capriccio Espagnole," the "Rhapsody in Blue" by George Gershwin with Mr. Bernstein as piano soloist, and a suite from the Ballet "Graduation Ball," arranged by Antal Dorati from music by Johann Strauss. As is customary at Boston "Pops" concerts, encores may be expected on this portion of the program.

"Tanglewood on Parade" marks the third and final guest conducting engagement of Leonard Bernstein at this summer's Berkshire Festival.

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky is chairman of the "Tanglewood on Parade" committee; Mrs. Bruce Sanborn of Lenox is vice-chairman, and Miss Margo Miller of Pittsfield is secretary. Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, of Glendale, is chairman of the committee for sale of boxes, with Mrs. Thomas D. Perry, Jr., as vice-chairman. Mrs. Sanborn also heads the committee for door prizes, which will be awarded to ticketholders by Boris Goldovsky during the evening concert's intermission.

Six-Week Berkshire Music Festival Ends; Attendance Mark Set

SPRINGFIELD UNION - MONDAY AUG. 15

136,087 at 24 Concerts, Topping Last Year's Total; Ninth Symphony Performance Is Disappointing Despite Impressive Work by Springfield Chorus

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 14—The Berkshire Music Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conductor, ended this afternoon on an exultant note.

Attendance for the 24 concerts totaled 136,087 persons. Last year, the first year of the six-week, 24-concert season, the attendance totaled 135,775, hampered by an inclement week end, those in charge have reason to be proud of this record.

It would be pleasant to relate that the festival ended as artistically as it opened, but such was not the case. Mr. Munch's reading of the Ninth Symphony of Beethoven emphasized the percussion section and revealed in spots in fact, there were moments when the admirable festival chorus, augmented by

Continued On Page 5

Six-Week Berkshire

Continued From Page 1

some 80 singers from the Springfield Symphony Chorus, was hard put to keep up with the conductor.

The chorus sang lustily and well. The soloists, Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto, David Lloyd, tenor and Donald Gramm, bass, were impressive as they sang the fearfully demanding music, particularly the two women.

The first movement was notable for the insistance of the tympani to be heard. At times it sounded as though it were a tympani solo with orchestral accompaniment. The presto of the second movement was taken at a terrific pace, while the adagio movement meandere dall about, with little integration or feeling. The final movement, the choral movement, was taken at such a speed that much of its strength was dissipated, nor was interest heightened by the jumping-jack gyrations of Mr. Munch. This was not a memorable performance.

Impressive Performance

The concert opened with a performance of the overture "Leonora" No. 3 Op. 72." It was given a performance of impressive size. The grave introduction based on Florestan's aria was uttered with finely controlled tone. The full proclamation of the body of the overture was magnificent in its strength. The offstafe trumpet call was as impressive as when it occurs in the opera and it was impeccably played. The final jubilant section was as dramatic as anything we have heard this season.

A total of 9740 turned out for this final concert. The weather was uncertain but as the festival chorus voiced its "Ode to Joy" the sun came out in full brilliance.

There has been much to admire during these six weeks of music. The growth in listener interest for the chamber music recitals has been remarkable, with audiences often twice the number the theater-concert hall can take. The chamber orchestra concerts were very popular and provided varied and estimable musical fare, performed in all cases in splendid manner.

Serkin a Highlight

It took the magic of Rudolf Serkin, pianist, and Beethoven's Fifth Piano Concerto to bring the top crowd of 15,685 people to Tanglewood. His performance of this work and his subsequent performance of three Beethoven sonatas were, to many, the highlights of the festival.

Of the concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra there may be many opinions. Some were notable, others routine. We shall not soon forget the performance of Berlioz's "Symphonie Fantastique" conducted by Mr. Munch or the performance of the "Missa Solemnis" conducted by Leonard Bernstein, or the sensitive, lovely reading of DeBussy's three "Nocturnes" by Mr. Monteux.

There was something for everyone during these six weeks and it is good to know that so many took advantage of the opportunity. Plans are already underway for the 1956 festival.

THE

Music: Festival Ends

Tanglewood Program Features Beethoven

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 14—The sun peeked through clouds and showers occasionally this afternoon and helped Beethoven's Ninth Symphony to end the Berkshire Festival on a grand, affirmative note.

Despite the rain and the wind most of this week-end, which caused hundreds of persons to cancel their trips to the festival, the season ended strongly. There were 9,750 persons here today, making a grand total of 136,087 paying customers for the six weeks of formal festival and a new attendance record.

But that was not all. The Berkshire Music Center, the school that operates as an adjunct of the festival, gave a series of thirty-two performances, which were attended by more than 27,000 visitors. The friends of the center raised more than $36,000 this summer, a 99 per cent increase over last year's receipts.

Charles Munch conducted the final concert. The Boston Symphony programs, as well as other concerts on the schedule, have concentrated heavily this year on Beethoven. Today this concentration was summed up in two of the composer's mightiest works—the "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and the Ninth Symphony.

The soloists were Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. The Tanglewood Choir, made up of students at the center, was augmented by seventy singers from the chorus of the Springfield Orchestra.

Mr. Munch conducted with dramatic fervor. The Overture, which contains more of the essence of the opera, "Fidelio," which it was meant to preface, than the opera itself, was played with striking effectiveness. And the majestic, earth-embracing material of the Ninth was traversed with the authority of knowledge and the fire of conviction.

The orchestra played brilliantly. The large chorus sang with impact. And the four soloists handled their difficult vocal parts expertly.

At last night's penultimate concert, the conductor was Pierre Monteux. He opened with Wagner's "Flying Dutchman" Overture, which has storm music that consorted well with the mood of the day's weather. Then came Brahms' Third Symphony. Mr. Monteux chose extremely broad tempos, slower than one is accustomed to. Within this framework, he saw to it that many poetic details were brought out.

•

Debussy's Three Nocturnes were done with expressive color. A female choral group from the festival chorus took part in the last section, "Sirenes." The concert ended with a suite from Strauss's "Rosenkavalier," apparently a favorite of Mr. Monteux when he conducts the Boston Symphony.

There has been vague talk that the length of the festival season ought to be extended by a week or two. No move has been made in that direction. However, the 1956 season will run through July and the first two weeks of August, if you want to make your reservations early. And you may be sure that the major composer will be Mozart, for the whole world will be observing the 200th anniversary of his birth.

Donald Gramm

Sunday

August 14

Tanglewood

10:00—Theater-Concert Hall—Dept. 1 Chamber Music. (Friends)

2:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch

Beethoven

Overture, "Leonore," No. 3

Symphony No. 9 in D minor

(With chorus and soloists: Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd, Donald Gramm)

Music Mountain

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-Partisan
Circ. 20,000

AUG 11 1955

Record-ially Yours

By MARTIN BOOKSPAN

LENOX (Aug. 11) — At Tanglewood today another milestone was reached in the history of the Boston Symphony Orchestra when a new five-year exclusive recording contract was signed between the orchestra and RCA Victor. Thus is continued a long association between the Boston Symphony Orchestra and RCA which began in 1915 when the Orchestra and its then conductor, Karl Muck, became the first American symphony orchestra to make records.

During the 25-year period of the conductorship of Serge Koussevitzky, many recordings were made. Of these there are still quite a number in the catalogue, including works by Sibelius, Strauss, Stravinsky, Haydn, Beethoven, Mozart, Moussorgsky, Prokofieff, Rachmaninoff, Tchaikovsky and Brahms. Some of the outstanding recordings accomplished since 1949, when Mr. Munch became the conductor, include two major choral and instrumental works by Berlioz—"Romeo and Juliet" and "The Damnation of Faust"—Honegger's Second and Fifth Symphonies, the Brahms B Flat Major Piano Concerto with Artur Rubinstein, Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote" with Gregor Piatigorsky, the Chopin Second and Saint-Saens Fourth Piano Concertos with Alexander Brailowsky and the Violin Concerto by Menotti with Tossy Spivakovsky as soloist. Also during this period several recordings have been made under the direction of Pierre Monteux — Stravinsky's "Rite of Spring," two Mozart Piano Concertos with Lili Krauss, Scriabin's "Poems of Ecstasy," Liszt's "Les Preludes" and two ballet suites by Delibes.

With the retirement of Arturo Toscanini and the disappearance (record-wise) of the NBC Symphony Orchestra, it seems safe to predict that major orchestral activity will now be concentrated in Symphony Hall, Boston. Terms of the new five-year contract are naturally not disclosed, but it is no secret that the management of the Orchestra is much more pleased with the new contract than they were with the old. Assuredly there will be more recording sessions per annum for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, consequently more releases and a greater royalty income. The individual members of the Orchestra, too, stand to benefit financially from the new arrangement, hence everybody should be very happy.

At Tanglewood this summer Mr. Munch has been consistently turning out the finest performances of his American career. The Festival proper has been devoted largely to the music of Beethoven and by the end of the concerts his Sunday afternoon, all the symphonies will have been performed, along with three overtures, the Fourth and Fifth Piano Concertos, the Violin Concerto, the "Missa Solemnis" and a concert presentation of the Second Act of "Fidelio." He conducted this music with a devotion and intensity which have made of the performances truly ennobling experiences. He has inspired all the members of the orchestra as well as the various instrumental and vocal soloists to give of their very best. It is significant that Isaac Stern has never played better than at his three appearances during this summer's Festival, that Rudolf Serkin's imperious performance of the "Emperor" Concerto was never more majestic, that Margaret Harshaw was in the best voice of her career here. Furthermore, Eugene Istomin, the young American pianist who made his Tanglewood debut last Sunday afternoon in Beethoven's Fourth Piano Concerto and who has already been engaged as a soloist with the Orchestra during the forthcoming Boston season, impressed us all as belonging in the very forefront of living interpretive musicians. Such simultaneous peaks of greatness do not just happen; they can be attributed directly to the man who this summer has emerged as the most dynamic symphonic conductor now active in the United States. Fortunately, by virtue of this new recording contract, the world at large will now be given greater opportunities to assess Charles Munch the conductor in something like a proper perspective.

Aug. 15, 1955

HERALD TRIBUNE, MONDAY, AUG

Berkshire Music Festival Ends With Beethoven's 9th

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 14.—The Berkshire Music Festival, 1955 edition, came to an end this afternoon in the burst of splendor that is Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Conducting in Tanglewood's imposing Music Shed, Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a performance of massive choral work and preceded it with the composer's Leonore Overture No. 3. Wet grounds, leaden skies and an occasional fistful of rain limited the number of listeners but quite failed to dampen the unleashed ardor of either audience or participants. These latter included the Berkshire Festival Chorus, jointly prepared by Hugh Ross and Iva Dee Hiatt, Adele Addison, soprano; Katherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass.

An Extrovert Reading

Mr. Munch, as is his way, provided a granitic, sturdy and extrovert reading of the symphony, that was—for him at any rate—remarkably orthodox and impersonal. In that respect alone the performance was something of a surprise, for Mr. Munch's aggressive tendencies toward Beethoven are by now well known. Insofar as the notes were allowed to speak for themselves, therefore, the mighty Ninth was all power, passion and poetry. It did what a good Ninth will always do—stretch the senses with its Herculean power and bring wonder that such ingenuity could abide in a single man.

There was, however, to these ears at least, a lack of involvement with the score that prevented the rendition from attaining the heights it can, given a conductor with an intensely personal view. The kind of musical molding, chiseling and planing that makes phrases and sonority balances more than imperfect reflections of the printed page was largely absent, and for this reason the work frequently lost a human focus. It seemed in fact rather mechanical, a situation which left the Ninth without much depth or character. In addition, the orchestra was by no means at its best, some cues having gone momentarily astray while others were misplaced entirely.

The same, fortunately, need not be remarked of the soloists and chorus, since both groups responded easily to Mr. Munch's demands. The Festival Choir, despite its augmented size, sang clearly, cleanly and in tune, and the soloists, especially Mr. Gramm, hurdled Beethoven's fiendish requirements without finding it necessary either to scream or bellow. In sum, they contributed handsomely to a performance that, for all its surging thrust, was somewhat bloodless and a mite dry.

Last night's concert, the third directed by Pierre Monteux, was nothing short of a tribute to the conductor's imposing insight and unflagging artistic authority. His program beat no new paths but concentrated instead on a quartet of standard works freshened, purified and filtered through the wisdom of Mr. Monteux's eighty years. In cluded were the Overture to Wagner's "The Flying Dutchman," Brahms' Third Symphony, Debussy's "Nocturnes" (with a Tanglewood women's chorus participating in the finale) and the Suite from Richard Strauss' "Der Rosenkavalier."

It being a night for stormy seas, what with squalls pounding the vicinity, Mr. Monteux and made "The Flying Dutchman" fly high and vengefully. It was a turbulent, tinderled reading, washed by a vigorous orchestra spray, that still managed to retain a certain nobility and repose. These two latter features, moreover, were the means for attaining, in the Brahms' Third, a rendition of such irrestible warmth and purity that, while remaining utterly familiar, it also remained utterly new.

A Serene Rendition

John Burk, in his excellent program notes for the Tanglewood series, refers to the "fine, even glow" of the Third and comments additionally that "Brahms never wrote a more unspectacular, personal symphony." These observations seem to have been at the core of Mr. Monteux's interpretation. Throughout, the work was inscribed in long, mellow thematic arcs, untroubled by those irritants of phrase commonly used to make Brahms sound like Beethoven. Withal it was a serene performance, though its serenity did not obscure an intensely masculine and broad-shouldered approach. Thus heard, the work is at once genial and profound, an ideal mixture and one which history tells us was the composer's nature in life.

As for Debussy "Nocturnes," it is safe to say that if Mr. Monteux's rendition is not immediately committed to records it will constitute one of the major crimes of our time. If I may be permitted a confusion of terms, so transparent was the texture of his reading that one could literally "see" through the sound of his orchestra. The whole business, in fact, was turned out with a mother-of-pearl irridescence, luminous to the exceptional degree that each tone color was allowed to stand forth on its own and yet happily complement its neighbor.

Furthermore, Mr. Monteux

Mary's parisioners in Pittsfield to celebrate 25 years in priesthood. Father Egan, a Boston native, has been assistant pastor at St. Mary's since 1952. . . . Mrs. Albert Sterner, Richmond, was winner of GE refrigerator at Tanglewood-on-Parade drawing. Miss Naomi Goldsmith of New York was winner of other principal prizes [illegible] high fidelity phonographs [illegible] Leonard Bernstein and [illegible] shared plaudits as [illegible] wood-on-Parade [illegible] stein leading [illegible] premiere of the orchestral suite "On the Waterfront" composed for movie of same name and Fiedler leading celebrated [illegible] Orcrestra.

(Continued On Page 5A)

MONTEUX DIRECTS SYMPHONY AGAIN AT TANGLEWOOD

Weather Cuts Attendance To 6000; Brahms Third Finely Detailed

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 13 — It was with accompaniment of steady rain that Pierre Monteux conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra tonight. The Berkshire Music Festival has suffered from this week-end siege of bad weather and the audience tonight was slightly over 6000 persons. There has been almost constant wind and frequent heavy rainfall today and there are many indications that the same sort of weather will be with us tomorrow. Wet feet and soaked clothing seem to be the only damage thus far.

Diversified Program

Mr. Monteux had arranged a diversified program for this, his second appearance with the orchestra this season. He opened proceedings with the overture to "The Flying Dutchman" by Wagner. Then he turned to Brahms playing his third symphony. The two concluding numbers were the three nocturnes by Debussy and a suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" by Strauss.

The overture to "The Flying Dutchman" contains an almost perfect picture of the opera. It opens with the dark, brooding storm music of the first act, most apropos for tonight. The lovely lyrical section is based upon the theme of Senta's ballard of the second act. Then there is a return to the story mood of opening. Mr. Monteux succeeded in communicating these moods and under his direction this heroic music was unfolded in realistic manner.

If there had been any doubt as to Brahms' stature as a symphonist following the first and second symphonies, such doubts were dissipated after the performance of the third, the "Symphony No. 3 in F Major." Its success was practically instantaneous, not because of the esteem in which Brahms was held, but because of the symphony itself. It had been six years since the second symphony had been given and in those six years there had evidently been a spiritual growth within the composer, for the third symphony is a peculiarly personal document. While this symphony has all the inner strength of the first two, it also reflects the composer as more subdued, refined, and its sentiment is not veiled. Mr. Monteux's reading of the work was finely detailed, closely integrated in performance and deeply human. The orchestral response was immediate and the performance moved quite tranquilly, bathed in wondrous tones.

Magical Reading

Mr. Monteux has a way with Debussy and there was magic in his readings of the three nocturnes. "Clouds" could almost be seen in fantastic shapes moving across the sky or almost motionless in their meditation. Such is the power of impression.

"Festivals" was entirely French in its gaiety and spirit and in its rhythms. The procession which invades the festival was dazzling in its colors. Nowhere in the score is there a more fairy-like effect than the wordless song of the sirens, sung tonight by some 30 women students of the Berkshire School of Music. Against a shimmering background, the voices sound ethereal. There were beautiful sounds from the orchestra as the music was unfolded by the veteran French conductor.

The program ended with a lilting performance of an orchestral suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" by Strauss. This suite includes the introduction to the first act: the music that accompanies Octavian's entrance bearing the silver rose; the duet between Octavian and Sophie and the incomparable waltzes. There is something for everyone in this music and Mr. Montuex saw to it that they got it.

Festival Ends Today

The festival closes tomorrow afternoon with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, the choral symphony. Some 80 members of the Springfield Symphony Chorus will augment the festival chorus that was here today for a final rehearsal. Adele Addison will be the soprano in the solo quartet. Others include David Lloyd, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass and Catherine Akos, contralto.

Public Events

Tonight

8:30 Greenwood Music Camp chamber music concert. Cummington village school.

8:30 Berkshire Festival concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting. Tanglewood Music Shed, Lenox.

8:30 New York Pro Musica Antiqua in French chansons and English madrigals. [illegible] Town Hall.

8:45 "The Late George Apley." Williamstown Summer Theatre.

8:45 "The Tender Trap." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

8:45 "Here We Come Gathering." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

9:00 Jacob's Pillow dance festival, featuring Moscelyne [illegible] and Michael Maule, [illegible] & Co. and [illegible] East of Lee.

All day Berkshire County Fair, Pittsfield.

A.M.

10:00 Chamber music concert by Berkshire Music Center students. Tanglewood chamber music hall. Lenox.

P.M.

2:30 Band concert sponsored by Park Dept. and Musicians' Union 109. Onota Lake.

2:30 Closing concert of Berkshire Festival, Charles Munch conducting. Boston Symphony Orchestra, chorus and soloists in Beethoven program. Tanglewood Music Shed, Lenox.

4:00 [illegible] Quartet with assisting artists. Music Mountain, Falls Village, Conn.

4:00 [illegible] Music Camp [illegible] concert. Cummington village school.

7:00 [illegible] Gathering. [illegible] (N.Y.)

8:00 [illegible] Music [illegible] Chorus. [illegible] Church. Monterey.

A.M.

9:30 City-wide archery tournament. Clapp Park.

P.M.

8:30 Faculty concert. Cummington School of the Arts.

MIAMIANS AT TANGLEWOOD CHAT WITH COMPOSER ROGER SESSIONS
. . . from left, Myrna Bressak, Sessions, Barth Bennitt and Edward Miller; two other Miamians there, Philip Fink, and Instructor Jean Bedetti, are shown in column below

Miamians Study at Tanglewood

Music and Art

Five of the students who are studying and producing music at Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Mass., this summer are Miamians — not a bad total considering this community's distance from the summer capital of music in this country.

The five, four of whom are currently students at University of Miami School of Music and the fifth a recent graduate, are dispersing their studies at Tanglewood as follows:

MYRNA BRESSAK, opera under Boris Goldovsky.

EDWARD MILLER, of Miami Beach, composition with the celebrated German composer Boris Blacher of the Musikhochschule in Berlin.

BARTH BENNITT, French horn.

CATHERINE CARTER, clarinet.

PHILIP FINK, 'cello.

The last are studying with members of the Boston Symphony.

Miami also has a faculty member at Tanglewood — Jean Bedetti, former first 'cellist with the Boston Symphony who teaches summers in the chamber music department.

A recent report from Tanglewood lists 20 Southern students from the states of Florida, Louisiana, Texas, Georgia and Mississippi.

★ ★ ★

THE 405 STUDENTS at the 13th session of the Music Center come from 38 states and 18 foreign countries.

This is the only school in the world sponsored by a major symphony orchestra and headed by that orchestra's conductor, in this case the distinguished Charles Munch. The Boston Symphony established the Music Center in 1940.

The two composers in residence this summer are Roger Sessions, professor of music at Princeton University, and Blacher.

Other famous teachers on hand this summer include Leonard Bernstein, conductor; Richard Burgin, the Boston Symphony's concertmaster and associate conductor; Hugh Ross, choral director; Seymour Lipkin, pianist and conductor; and Ingolf Dahl, associate professor of music at University of Southern California. Gregor Piatigorsky is advisor in chamber music for the latter part of the summer.

JEAN BEDETTI

PHILIP FINK

★ ★ ★

THE FOREIGN students come from such far-flung centers as Japan, Chile, France, Iran, Israel, Mexico, Brazil, Puerto Rico, Argentina, Hawaii, Honolulu, the Netherlands, and Czecho-Slovakia.

A great many of the foreigners are composers who have made the trip particularly to study with Sessions and Blacher.

Occupations of the students of the Center are many and varied, ranging this year from priest, armed services officers, and a macaroni manufacturer to salesmen, housewives, secretaries, doctors and educators. Their age range is from 18 to 71.

Many of the older students are members of the Tanglewood Study Group, which is open to amateurs.

Tanglewood alumni are now scattered across the globe and are engaged in all phases of musical activity.

Many are members of major symphony orchestras, others are famous as conductors or instrumentalists, singers or composers.

Seed-Pods

Boston Looks Upon A Midsummer Harvest In the Berkshires

(Boston Globe)

AS YOU GO west in Massachusetts from the sea to the Berkshires, something happens which everyone must feel but no one mentions. Is there another spot in North America where this could be duplicated within an area equivalent? — Atlantic coast, Connecticut Valley and Berkshire Hills, within four hours' driving one is in three distinct regional cultures.

In first settlement the valley trod upon the heels of the coastal towns, for the river was the road, but although the Indians did not like the mountains, the Berkshires came under cultivation almost a century later. Berkshire County, however, has made up bravely since, and especially in the past two decades, for it is now our summer capital of music, the dance, and to some extent, drama.

• • • •

IT WAS Tanglewood which first proved on a grand scale that our people are eager to go to summer music festivals on a small and intimate scale as well as a large one; that concerts of chamber music in poetical settings can be as enchanting a midsummer night's dream as can a symphonic performance. Does anyone suppose the summer festival at Aspen, Colorado, would have come into existence but for Tanglewood, or indeed, this benign imitation of our lives and our landscapes with music, dance, and theater, as well as exhibitions of the visual and plastic arts in summer?

Beneath the dazzling programs and brilliant performances in the Music Shed, the Theater-Concert Hall, and the Chamber Music hall at Tanglewood move the currents and rising tide of a human sea of talent, for our American social system is more and more performing that prime function of any civilized society—release of the widest possible spread of potential talents among its people.

And among other peoples, for these talents now come to the music school at Tanglewood not only from all quarters of these United States, but from Europe, Asia and South America, to be sent out again from here as seed-carriers.

Thus the facts can now be seen for what they mean: more than 10 per cent of the membership in all the major symphony orchestras in the United States are by this time former students at Tanglewood; fledgling instrumental virtuosi take off from this Berkshire hilltop on the eagle flights of their touring careers; young singers walk off its platforms and out on the stages of opera house and concert hall; composers work both in and for Tanglewood, teaching, producing commissioned scores, and sending finished works here from abroad for first performance. The happy idea of a study group for amateur musicians to come and spend from two to six weeks making music to hearts' content has fished up from the deep sea soundings of our common life students as various as secretaries, housewives, officers from the armed services, medical doctors, a priest . . . their ages ranging from 18 to 71.

Munch at His Peak in Berlioz 'Fantastic'

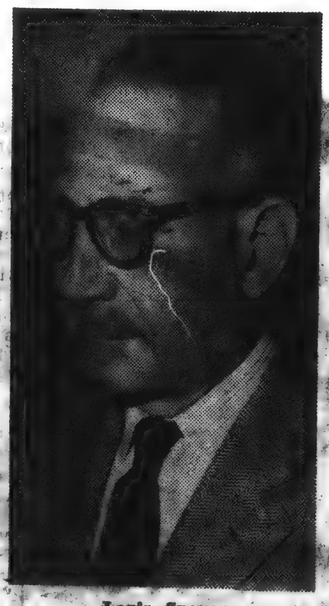
By JAY C. ROSENFELD

IT WAS A virtuoso orchestra which played the French program in the first of the final trio of concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood last night. The Boston Symphony Orchestra responded to the direction of Charles Munch with their greatest alertness and most vigorous stamina.

Munch reveled in the Berlioz "Fantastic" symphony. This is music that is malleable and can be shaped and formed. It is the farthest removed from the strict classics he could have chosen, and he molded and fashioned it to his taste. The orchestra was elastic and flexible and in the most exhilarated and freshest spirit. The performance was one of Munch's peak achievements in all his Tanglewood adventure, for this element of fantasies is the one in which he is most at home.

• • • •

THE STRINGS were allowed to display their wealth of tone. The wind sections were contained, at least in the first three movements, so that the balance was extremely valid and gratifying. There was a sweep and a crisp and clean trenchancy to the entire symphony which lifted it quite above the ordinary reading. Every detail came off. Berlioz' marvelous instrumental couplings became visible, especially in such instances as the unisons where the quality of one instrument strengthens and supports the other.



Louis Speyer

Munch felt free to indulge in any fancy and whim that pleased him. The orchestral response was immediate. Extravagance here is suitable and thus the delightful swing of the valse was infectiously fascinating; the scenes in the country were idyllic and the "March to the Gallows" arresting. This idiom, for us, is one of the great inspirations in music and ranks with such other examples of rhythm as the bewitching opening of the Brahms third which is on tonight's program.

• • •

In the "Lontano" of "The Witches' Sabbath," Munch used two heavy big real brass bells which gave off resounding peals of a wonderfully ominous character. Louis Speyer was beckoned to stand at the conclusion by Munch to acknowledge the recognition of his beautifully inflected English horn in the "Rustic Reveries."

The same zest and audacity prevailed in the last half of the program. "La Mer" of Debussy and the second suite of the Ravel "Daphnis et Chloe" ballet swept on with imagination and disciplined ecstasy.

• • •

A LIGHT RAIN fell during most of the concert, not enough to disturb the audience but probably just enough to cool the air so that the strings were at their most resonant. It did prevent anyone from attending who might have wanted to listen from the lawns outside the Shed. Yet the applause at the close of the "Fantastic" was so prolonged and so cumulative that it seemed to come from a greater assembly than the Shed alone could have sheltered.

STUDENTS RECEIVE AWARDS AT LENOX

Prizes for Outstanding Work Presented at Tanglewood After Final Concert

By The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 13—It was prize-giving time at Tanglewood today. The Berkshire Music Center, which gives young musicians professional experience in an intensive six-week summer course, does not confer credits or diplomas, but it does give a number of awards for outstanding students. These are awarded by individual and group supporters of the institution.

The prizes were distributed at the final concert by the Student Symphony Orchestra in the Shed. Ralph Berkowitz, Dean of the center, presided at the ceremonies.

The principal awards were as follows:

¶The Serge Koussevitzky composition prize of $250 to Edward Jay Miller of Miami Beach for his piece for pianoforte.

¶The Raphael Sagalyn memorial scholarship of $250 to Salvatore Martirano of New Rochelle, N. Y., a composer.

¶The Gregor Piatigorsky prize of $250 to Alice Q. Ober of Pasadena, Calif., a 'cellist.

¶The High Fidelity magazine scholarship of $250 to Peyton Higginson of Mobile, Ala., a baritone.

¶The Samuel Wechsler commission of $300 to Jacob Druckman of New York, who will write a work for solo violin and chamber group to be performed at Tanglewood next summer.

Salvatore Martirano

¶The Charlotte M. Dreyfus scholarship of $150 to Barth Bennitt of Miami, Fla., a horn player.

¶The Sally A. Eisemann scholarship of $150 to Richard A. Fiske of Upton, a horn player.

In addition to the awards announced today, fourteen students who attended the thirteenth season of the center this year received prizes some weeks ago. They were:

Kenneth D. Schermerhorn of Schenectady, N. Y., the $500 scholarship initiated last year by residents of Berkshire County in memory of the late Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony and founder of the center, for an outstanding student conductor.

Mr. Martirano and George Crumb Jr. of Charleston, W. Va., won Margaret Lee Crofts scholarships. Vahe Aslanian of Salinas, Calif., and Charles Connors of Boston received Ann M. Gannett scholarships provided by the National Federation of Music Clubs.

Esther Sweigart of Kutztown, Pa., won the award of the Yomissing, Pa., Institute presented by Mrs. Bruce Harden, and Peter Ciurczak of Elizabeth, N. J., the award of the Music Study Club of Newark and the Oranges.

Nancy Smith of Cleveland Heights, Ohio, received the Delta Omicron Award; Annette Guay of Providence, R. I., the award of the Providence Chopin Club, and Anet Sillars of University City, Mo., the award of the Women's Association of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra.

Other winners were Israel J. Sorouchov of Bat-Yam, Israel; Dolly Haim of New York; Jerome Lowenthal of Philadelphia; Evangeline Demarest of St. Petersburg, Fla.; Eino Bautavarra of Helsinki, Finland; Alan D. Daniels of New York; Tossi Ichiyanagi of Tokyo; Paul Gurevich of New York, and Hiroshi Hatoyama of Tokyo.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. LAST 2 CONCERTS
Berkshire Festival
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
TONIGHT at 8:30 ● TOMORROW AT 2:30
Shed Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra
TONIGHT—WAGNER—BRAHMS—DEBUSSY—STRAUSS (MONTEUX)
TOMORROW AT 2:30—BEETHOVEN PROGRAM (MUNCH)
Tickets: $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Admission $2)
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD; LENOX, MASS. PHONE LENOX 600

Despite Rain and High Winds Tanglewood Show Will Go On

6,400 at Last Night's Concert—Monteux Conducts Tonight—Beethoven's Ninth Tomorrow Afternoon at 2:30

TANGLEWOOD — Heavy rains and high winds may hold down the attendance at the final concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed tonight and tomorrow afternoon, but if last night's crowd serves as any criterion for stormy weather, the attendance figures are not expected to drop too far below last year's figure of 135,000.

Shed Holds 6,000

The great shed which holds about 6,000 persons is expected to be filled tonight before concert time at 8:30 when Pierre Monteux will make his last appearance of the season with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

His program will be the Overture to Wagner's opera, "The Flying Dutchman"; the Third Symphony by Brahms; the Nocturnes "Clouds," "Festivals," and "Sirens," by Debussy; and a suite from the opera, "Der Rosenkavalier," by the late Richard Strauss, which will be performed at Tanglewood for the first time. "Sirens," the third of Debussy's Nocturnes will have the assistance of the Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center students trained by Iva Hiatt.

Ticket Sales Brisk

Despite the inclement weather, ticket sales continued today to be brisk for tomorrow afternoon's final performance by the BSO and Mr. Munch. Should the rain stop by concert time at 2:30 tomorrow afternoon, a crowd of over 8,000 is expected which would bring the total attendance for the season up to last year's 135,000. Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony will conclude the summer's festival with the Third "Leonore" Overture and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Assisting in the Ninth Symphony will be the combined Berkshire Festival Chorus and the Chorus of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra, trained by Hugh Ross and John Krueger and the following soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. Of the soloists, all but Miss Akos are familiar Tanglewood artists, and each has already appeared at this summer's Festival at least once.

Miss Akos, a native of Budapest, has sung with several Middle European opera companies and has recorded extensively on the continent. In recent years she has made her home in Canada and has sung on the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. network. She was a Berkshire Music Center student in 1954, and was featured in Gian-Carlo Menotti's opera, "The Saint of Bleeker Street."

Manos

FINAL CONCERT plans are being discussed by Hugh Ross, left, head of the choral department at the Berkshire Music Center and Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for tomorrow afternoon's performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony in D Minor in the Music Shed. Appearing with the BSO will be the Festival chorus and the Springfield Symphony chorus trained by Mr. Ross. The concert will be at 2:30, rain or shine.

Manos

MASS REHEARSAL was held this morning in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Festival chorus, augmented by a chorus from the Springfield Symphony Orchestra for the performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, concluding the 1955 series of Berkshire Festival concerts.

Seven Scholarships Awarded To Students at Music Center

TANGLEWOOD—Seven scholarships and cash awards were made to students of the Berkshire Music Center here today. The prizes are given annually to outstanding students at the summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its Berkshire Festival which concludes its 18th summer tomorrow. Winners are chosen from among the 405 enrolled this year from 38 states and 18 foreign countries.

Tuition scholarships and cash prizes were presented at intermission of this afternoon's concert by the student symphony orchestra in the Tanglewood Music Shed by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center.

Wins Piatigorsky Prize

On the basis of conspicuous talent, general cooperation and the promise of an out-standing career, the Gregor Piatigorsky prize, value $250, has been awarded by the noted musician to student cellist Alice Q. Ober, 24, of Pasadena, Calif. Miss Ober prepared at the San Francisco Conservatory of Music and has been in the Pasadena Symphony for seven years, the past three years as first cellist. She performed in this afternoon's student orchestra concert and will be one of the players in Mendelssohn's Octet No. 8, Opus 20, at the chamber music concert by students tomorrow morning at 10 in the Theater-Concert Hall.

The High Fidelity magazine scholarship, awarded for the first time this year, value $250, to an outstanding student of the Berkshire Music Center, goes to Peyton Higgison, 28, of Mobile, Ala., who at present lives in New York, while he is a student at the Juilliard School of Music and the Mannes College of Music. Mr. Higgison attended Birmingham Southern College, the Aspen Institute in Colorado, has made opera appearances with Carol Longone, the Mobile Opera Theater, and has sung at the Paper Mill Playhouse in New Jersey and on radio and television. Mr. Higgison sang the role of Capulet in Boris Blacher's chamber opera "Romeo and Juliet," presented by the Tanglewood student opera department on Aug. 1, the leading role of Abraham Bentley in the world premiere of Louis Mannini's opera, "The Rope" on Aug. 9, and on Aug. 11 had the title role in Puccini's "Gianni Schicchi" in an outdoor performance during "Tanglewood on Parade."

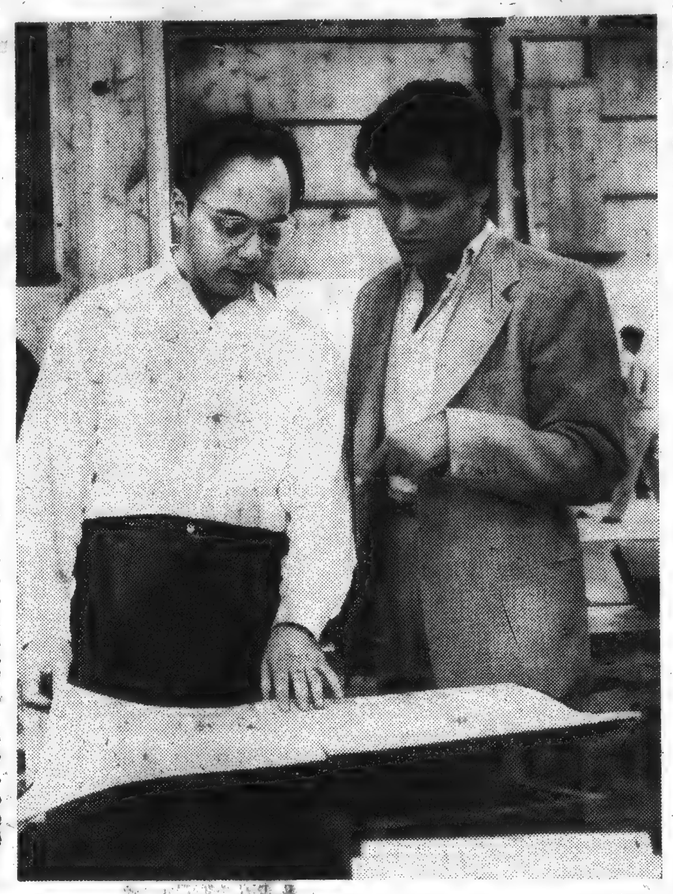
The Serge Koussevitzky Composition prize, value $250, given by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation in honor of the former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for a work composed at Tanglewood this season went to Edward Jay Miller, 25, of Miami Beach, Fla., who received his master's degree in music last June from Hartt College, Hartford, Conn. Mr. Miller was awarded a bachelor of music degree from the University of Miami, and has studied under Arnold Franchetti and Isadore Freed at Hartt College, under Carlos Chavez at Tanglewood when he was a student in 1953, and is currently a pupil of Boris Blacher at the Berkshire Music Center. His prize-winning work, "Piece for Pianoforte," was performed on a composers' forum at Tanglewood Aug. 12.

The Samuel Wechsler Commission, value $300, awarded by a former Tanglewood pupil to "a student, present or past, chosen from the composition department, for a work to be specified by the faculty," goes to Jacob Druckman of New York City, a Tanglewood student during 1949, 1950 and 1951, and now a teaching fellow at the Juilliard School of Music in New York. Mr. Druckman is commissioned to write a piece for solo violin with chamber group to be performed at Tanglewood in the summer of 1956.

Composer's Prize

Through the interest of the Industrial Buildings Corporation of Chicopee, there has been initiated this year an annual prize of $250 to a student composer, in memory of Raphael Sagalyn, given this year to Salvatore Martirano, 28, of New Rochelle, N.Y. The prize-winning composition, entitled "Contrasto," was performed this afternoon during the first half of the student symphony concert in the Music Shed, Seymour Lipkin conducting. Another of Mr. Martirano's works, the Kyrie section from a Mass, was performed by students at the composers' forum yesterday. A pupil of Roger Sessions this summer at Tanglewood, Mr. Martirano studied there three summers ago with Luigi Dallapiccola, and has just returned from three years' study in Florence with the Italian composer on a Fulbright scholarship. He holds a bachelor's degree from Oberlin College, Ohio, and a master of music degree from Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N.Y.

Two scholarships, which cancel a student's indebtedness to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund for his tuition received from this fund were awarded to student horn players Barry Bennitt, 23, of Miami, Fla., and Richard A. Fiske, 21, of Upton. Both are valued at $150. Mr. Bennitt, who won the Carlotte M. Dreyfus Scholarship, is an instructor at the University of Miami: he has performed professionally with the University's Symphony, the U.S. Air Force band, and the Miami summer Pops Concerts. Mr. Fiske, winner of the Sally A. Eisemann scholarship, will complete his bachelor of music course at Oberlin, Ohio, in 1956.



Manos

COMPOSER Salvatore Martirano, 28, right, of New Rochelle, N.Y., winner of the annual Raphael Sagalyn Memorial Scholarship for composition, valued at $250, at the Berkshire Music Center, goes over the score of his composition, "Contrasto," with Seymour Lipkin, pianist and conductor, before it was performed by the student orchestra this afternoon.

Manos

CELLIST Alice Ober, 24, of Pasadena, Calif., winner of the Gregor Piatigorsky prize of $250 for outstanding cello students at the Berkshire Music Center, plays for William Kroll, founder of the Kroll Quartet, who teaches chamber music at Tanglewood.

Cancellations Pour In Along With the Rains

Rain and room cancellations poured into the Berkshires today as remnants of Hurricane Connie swished through New York and New England accompanied by moderate winds.

Conference Flooded

The Berkshire Hills Conference reported at noon that notices of canceled reservations flooded the office during the morning from guest-house operators throughout Berkshire County.

Latest forecasts for the Berkshires predicted heavy rain and moderate winds ending tomorrow forenoon, followed by clearing with temperatures rising to near 80. Oven an inch of rain fell at the airport weather station during the 24 hours beginning at 7 a.m. yesterday and another inch fell before noon today.

The Kiwanis Tourist Information Booth in Lenox reported at noon today that there were 100 rooms available to tourists in that town, which last week didn't have a bed available by 10-a.m. Saturday. The booth has a total of 200 rooms registered.

Wendell Gets Some Back

William H. Clifford, assistant manager of the Wendell-Sherwood, gave The Eagle a guess at 11 a.m. today that about 40 per cent of the reservations made there for the weekend had been canceled. Some of the rooms thus made available have been filled, however, with travelers driven from the roads by the storm, Mr. Clifford reported.

Byrne Bauer, proprietor of the Red Lion Inn in Stockbridge, said that a drop of 12 per cent in room reservations was propably due to radio warnings to New Yorkers to stay off the highways. He said there was also a drop of about 25 per cent in meals served to transients.

Inquiries Drop

At the Chamber of Commerce booth in Great Barrington this morning, Horace A. Turner reported that only 54 inquiries were received yesterday—"not as much as on an average weekday."

The Berkshire Inn reported rooms which had been canceled were filled immediately. Other Great Barrington hotels, motels and resorts reported full houses, though fewer inquiries and "drop-ins."

Despite the inclement weather, 6,100 persons overflowed the 6,000 capacity of the Shed at Tanglewood last night for the final Friday-night concert of the season. The Boston Symphony Orchestra's scheduled performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony tomorrow, along with the forecast of clearing weather, is expected to bring a large turnout for the final concert, though not nearly as large as anticipated if Connie had blown the other way.

Trouble Crews Busy

The heavy rainfall and moderate winds kept emergency crews of the Western Massachusetts Electric Co. busy this morning when falling limbs brought down high voltage wires on Elm and Williams Streets. At 12:30 reports of [illegible] down began to pour into the police station.

District Forest Fire Warden Francis [illegible] reported at least one good aspect of the rainfall. He said the showers had at least temporarily done away with the forest fire danger which was so acute a week ago because of the long drought.

The rains came too late, however, to produce a second cutting of hay for winter silage, according to a spokesman at High Lawn Farm in Lenox. The farm's 300 dairy cattle have been fed silage for the past two weeks, though they would normally feed in the pasture until fall.

Pastures Helped

The spokesman said that with the rain, it will take the pastures about two weeks to grow back to normal. The rain will also give life to the new seeding.

Elsewhere in New England, the threat of high tides to coastline communities appeared to be the only remaining serious threat from "Connie." The Boston Weather Bureau said in a mid-morning bulletin that winds of from 30 to 50 miles per hour may still hit parts of New England.

The strong winds may hit the Southern New England coast accompanied by tides 3 to 5 feet above normal, with heavy seas along the exposed coasts of Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts through tonight.

Flooding Predicted

The bureau forecast heavy rains which will produce flooding especially on the eastern slopes of the Berkshires and Green Mountains.

Connie was centered near Baltimore at 8 a.m. EDT, with highest winds in gusts near 60 miles an hour.

The storm will continue to move toward the north northwest, the bureau said, at 18 miles an hour for the next 24 hours with diminishing wind strength.

4-6 Inches of Rain

Southern New England already has experienced 4 to 6 inches of rain.

Southeast storm warnings are displayed along the entire New England coast.

What's Going On?

TONIGHT:

8:30—Tanglewood. Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Pierre Monteux.

NY Herald Tribune
22 8/14

5,000 Hear Boston Symphony At Tanglewood Despite Rain

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 13.—The Berkshire Music Festival, bubbling under a minor monsoon of its own, entered the last phase of its 1955 activity last night in Tanglewood's vast Music Shed. For the occasion, Charles Munch directed the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program virtually so foolproof that nothing short of a heavensent calamity would have lessened its effect. Included were Berlioz' "Fantastic" Symphony, Debussy's "La Mer" and the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet "Daphnis and Chloe." An audience estimated at 5,000 braved the relentless, windswept rains to attend the event.

It can be said in all honesty that this reviewer has never heard as fantastic a "Fantastic" Symphony as that provided by Mr. Munch and his colleagues at the evening's start. It was a reading graphic beyond wildest dreams, with the conductor going to great lengths to paint in full color every gory, grisly and sepulchral image of the score. The opening movement, after a brilliantly intense introduction, assumed in its breathless tempo an emotional agitation that prepared the listener, in every way, for the cataclysms to follow; and the ensuing waltz was a model of elegance, not at all the barnstorming galop some conductors take it to be.

A Fudtive Quality

In an equivalent manner did the third movement progress, though Mr. Munch does not see the "Scene on the Fields" as simply a prolonged pastoral study. Through his ears it takes on a sombre, furtive quality, seemingly to indicate that even gentle nature offers no rest to the demand and tormented hero of the work. But it was only in the two final sections of the "Fantastic" that Mr. Munch really spelled out his unequivocal views on the matter of Berlioz' incredible score.

The "March to the Gallows," for instance, was so lucid in its exposition of the movement's hideous detail that the whole ghastly scene of execution was illumined in a stroke. And the concluding "Witches' Sabbath" was lugubrious to a degree approaching psyohosis. It wheezed and rattled and groaned and snarled. In every measure of the episode, at indeed, in every measure of the entire work, Mr. Munch imposed upon the orchestra his precise personal demands and let nothing slip by without some special stamp of his preference. As a result, the symphony emerged in a performance, completely, wholeheartedly his won. While there may be other routes to an understanding of the programmatic connotations of this score, Mr. Munch's is far and away the most direct.

"La Mer" Criticized

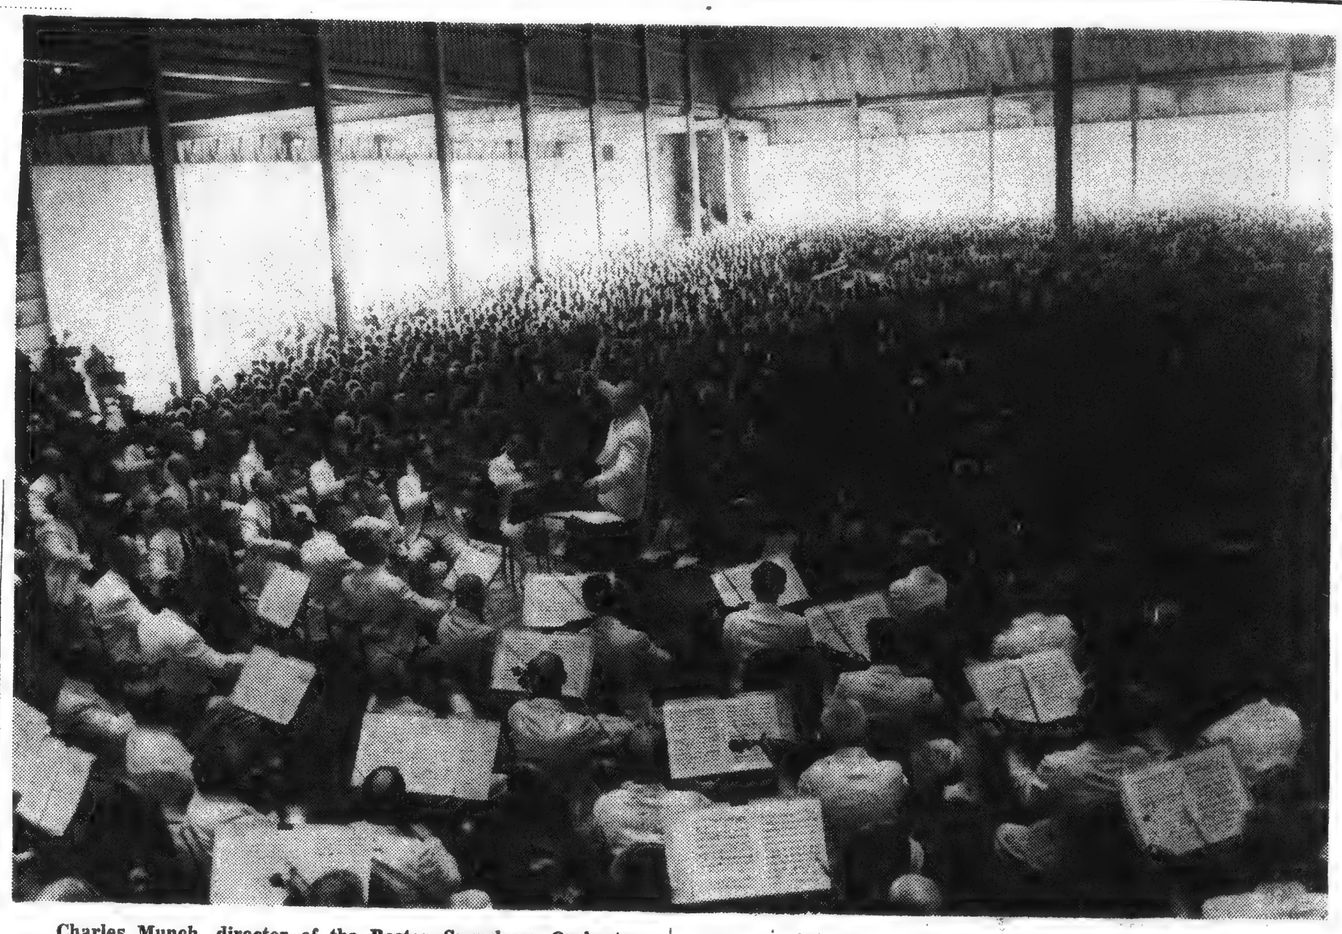
It is conceivabe that the same might be said of the Boston Symphony's rendition of "La Mer" were it not for the inexcusable rowdiness of the percussion players. In Debussy, the percussion is ever an extension of the ensemble's coloring and not only, as is usual, a means for rhythmic accentuation. No amount of furious beating and pummeling of cymbal, triangle and drum can evoke the iridescence necessary to unfolding the composer's ageless sea poem, and in consequence the performance quite failed to mirror the music's magic.

About "Daphnis and Chloe" no more need be remarked than to indicate that the virtuoso piece was packaged in virtuoso style. Thus, at its conclusion it naturally brought down the house. It always will. It always should.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 91,501

MAY 15 1955



Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is seen above conducting the orchestra in the 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The 18th season of the Berkshire Festival, the 16th in which the orchestra has participated, will open on July 6 and continue through August 14. Last year concerts attracted a record-breaking total attendance of 135,775, an average of 2,275 in its chamber concerts in the Theater Concert-Hall, and an average of 9,177 in the Music Shed.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES UNION
Circ. D. 60,449 - S. 116,052

JUL 29 1955

Tanglewood Second Series Opens Tonight

The second in the series of four weekend concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the big shed at Tanglewood, under the direction of Charles Munch, will be presented tonight and tomorrow night at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Tonight's program will include the "Water Music" suite by Handel; Schumann's Symphony, No. 4 in D-minor; Barber's "Prayers of Kierkgaard," with Leontyne Price as soprano soloist, and the Fourth Symphony by Brahms.

Saturday night's all-Beethoven program will consist of the Overture to "Egmont;" the "Emperor" Concerto with Rudolf Serkin as piano soloist, and Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica").

Sunday afternoon's all-Brahms program will be conducted by Pierre Monteux and will include the "Academic Festival" Overture; the violin concerto in D-major with Isaac Stern as soloist, and Symphony No. 1 in C-minor.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
65 Church Street - New York
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 42,039

JUL 29 1955

Second Concert Weekend Will Open at Tanglewood

The second weekend of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra will open tonight with a program in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., at 8:30 o'clock.

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH will conduct the programs tonight and tomorrow and Pierre Monteux will conduct the Sunday afternoon program. A public rehearsal is also scheduled for tomorrow at 10 a.m. in the Music Shed which will be open to the public at a nominal fee as a benefit for the orchestra's pension fund.

Tonight's program will include a Suite from Handel's "Water Music" in an arrangement by the late Sir Hamilton Harty, the Symphony number 4 in D minor by Schumann and the Symphony number 4 in E minor by Brahms. The concert will also feature the Tanglewood premiere of the latest score by Samuel Barber, the solo cantata, "Prayers of Kierkegaard." Scored for orchestra, chorus and vocal soloists the work was commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. It was given its world premiere by Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony last December.

* * *

THE SOPRANO soloist will be Leontyne Price, who also sang in the premiere. Other vocal solos in tonight's performance will be presented by Arthur Schoep, tenor; and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano. Miss Sarfaty is a student in the Berkshire Music Center's Opera department and Mr. Schoep is assistant stage director to the opera department's head, Boris Goldovsky.

Tomorrow evening's program, all Beethoven, will feature Rudolf Serkin in his Tanglewood debut as soloist in the Piano Concerto number 5 in E flat major. Mr. Munch will also include the overture to "Egmont" and the Symphony number 3 in E flat, the "Eroica" in the program.

* * *

SUNDAY AFTERNOON Mr. Monteux will conduct an all-Brahms concert with Isaac Stern as soloist in the Violin Concerto in D major, opus 77. In addition the program will include the "Academic Festival" overture and the Symphony number 1 in C minor.

Remaining tickets for the concerts and for the special open rehearsal are on sale at the Tanglewood box office. Admission for listening from the lawn is on sale on the day of each concert.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
Democrat & Chronicle
Circ. D. 117,818 - S. 172,719

AUG 11 1955

New Mennini Op Praise at Premier

REVIEWS of the new opera, "T Mennini of the Eastman Sch tell of a successful premiere at L the Tanglewood festival, Monday

The opera, based on a one-act play by Eugene O'Neill, was written on a commission of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, which two years ago invited the 34-year-old Rochester composer to spend a summer at Tanglewood and consult with its opera department staff in preparation for the work.

Howard Taubman in the New York Times wrote that Mennini "has a lyrical gift and he has turned out a piece that should have wide currency in the workshops, perhaps on television. One would like to see what he could do with a bigger subject filled with more poetry."

The O'Neill play is described as "a bitter vignette of brutish people living on the seacoast, presumably New England, in 1917." The composer, according to the review, "resisted the temptation to be obvious—to write harsh infuse poigna The ported ished." Likew in the that " verted . . . int without a diff alien m few spo most of are give speech fully def and a fe cases aris the gene The inst said to b

Mennini was present to receive the warm tribute of the audience.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISH
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
TAMPA, FLA.
TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 118,657 - S. 132,487

JUL 31 1955

Berkshire Festival Music To Be Broadcast Tomorrow

By CECIL MANN
Tribune Staff Writer

ISAAC STERN, noted American violinist, will be soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under direction of Charles Munch in the broadcast from the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, tomorrow night, (NBC-Radio, WFLA, 8:15-9:00. The entire 45-minute program will be devoted to Beethoven's Concerto in D for violin and orchestra. The three movements of the work are marked allegro ma non troppo, Laghetto and finale, and Rondo.

Stern

* * *

BREAKFAST CLUB Toastmaster Don McNeill returns to his early morning ABC Radio variety show, tomorrow, after a month-long vacation. Peter Donald has been pinch-hitting for Don during his absence. Cast members, including Aunt Fanny (Fran Allison), comedian Sam Cowling, singers Betty Johnson and Dick Noel, and maestro Eddie Ballantine, will be on hand to welcome McNeill back. It's heard on WSUN, 9 to 10 A. M.

McNeill

* * *

DISTINGUISHED COMPOSER Victor Young, who has written many popular sons and motion picture scores for such movies as For Whom The Bell Tolls, Love Letters, and Three Coins In The Fountain will take over the conductor's baton for vacationing Percy Faith on CBS Radio's The Woolworth Hour: What's New In Music, today and next Sunday, over WDAE, 1:00-2:00.

* * *

PAUL LAVALLE will present a novelty arrangement of the aria, Un Voce Poco Fa from Rossini's popular opera, The Barber of Seville, on the Cities Band of America concert tomorrow night, NBC-Radio, WFLA, 9:30-10.

Lavalle

Rythmic numbers chosen by Paul Lavalle for the band include Blaze Away March by Holzman, Mardi Gras Parade, by Kent Cooper, Invercargill March, by Lithgow, The Light Cavalry Overture, by Von Suppe, and Hands Across the Sea, by Sousa.

* * *

HOWARD MILLER, CBS Radio's new man-about-music, will interview two musical groups and three vocal soloists on the Howard Miller Show today and next Sunday, over WDAE, 1:00-2:00.

* * *

A KEY HEAVYWEIGHT BATTLE between Ezzard Charles, former champ from Cincinnati, and Tommy "Hurricane" Jackson, third ranking heavyweight contender of Far Rockaway, N. Y., will be broadcast over the nationwide ABC Radio Network, Wednesday, 10:15 P. M. (WSUN).

* * *

Thursday The Hilltoppers from the Muehlbach Hotel in Kansas City, with their recordings of the Kentuckian Song, and I Must Be Dreaming.

Friday, Mindy Carson from her apartment in Manhattan, with her recordings of Wake the Town and Hold Me Tight. (WDAE, 11:45 to 12 Noon).

* * *

Tuesday, June Valli will talk from the swimming pool of the Fontainblue Hotel, Miami Beach, with her recordings of A Kiss Like Yours and Oh, My Lover.

Wednesday Jerry Vale will come from Al and Dick's, New York, with his recording of Only Beautiful.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
65 Church Street - New York
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 42,039
JUL 29 1955

Second Concert Weekend Will Open at Tanglewood

The second weekend of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra will open tonight with a program in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., at 8:30 o'clock.

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH will conduct the programs tonight and tomorrow and Pierre Monteux will conduct the Sunday afternoon program. A public rehearsal is also scheduled for tomorrow at 10 a.m. in the Music Shed which will be open to the public at a nominal fee as a benefit for the orchestra's pension fund.

Tonight's program will include a Suite from Handel's "Water Music" in an arrangement by the late Sir Hamilton Harty, the Symphony number 4 in D minor by Schumann and the Symphony number 4 in E minor by Brahms. The concert will also feature the Tanglewood premiere of the latest score by Samuel Barber, the solo cantata, "Prayers of Kierkegaard."

Scored for orchestra, chorus and vocal soloists the work was commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. It was given its world premiere by Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony last December.

* * *

THE SOPRANO soloist will be Leontyne Price, who also sang in the premiere. Other vocal solos in tonight's performance will be presented by Arthur Schoep, tenor; and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano. Miss Sarfaty is a student in the Berkshire Music Center's Opera department and Mr. Schoep is assistant stage director to the opera department's head, Boris Goldovsky.

Tomorrow evening's program, all Beethoven, will feature Rudolf Serkin in his Tanglewood debut as soloist in the Piano Concerto number 5 in E flat major. Mr. Munch will also include the overture to "Egmont" and the Symphony number 3 in E flat, the "Eroica" in the program.

* * *

SUNDAY AFTERNOON Mr. Monteux will conduct an all-Brahms concert with Isaac Stern as soloist in the Violin Concerto in D major, opus 77. In addition the program will include the "Academic Festival" overture and the Symphony number 1 in C minor.

Remaining tickets for the concerts and for the special open rehearsal are on sale at the Tanglewood box office. Admission for listening from the lawn is on sale on the day of each concert.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
TAMPA, FLA.
TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 118,657 - S. 132,487
JUL 31 1955

Berkshire Festival Music To Be Broadcast Tomorrow

By CECIL MANN
Tribune Staff Writer

ISAAC STERN, noted American violinist, will be soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under direction of Charles Munch in the broad-

EZ-WAY Hurricane Proof!

Peterburg Historical Museum Collector's Club will display and comment on his collection of mustache cups on Date With Fran Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock over WSUN-TV.

You Are On the Air Tuesday night at 6:45 o'clock over WSUN-TV will present scenes from the new Sunshine Swimming Pool at Maritime Base in St. Petersburg.

Talent Varieties Tuesday night at 7 o'clock over WSUN-TV will present vocalist Sherry Lee Myers, Louie and Rookie, ventriloquist act and dancer Brebner Walker.

A young man with ideas decides to raffle off his services for a year, in order to get enough money to leave the West for big city life on Tuesday night at 7:30 o'clock. General Theater over WSUN-TV

The Williams family is man-euvered into unwittingly becoming involved in the unwelcome romance of Danny's agent in Make Room for Daddy Tues-this week. His interviews are conducted by two-way radio channel between his Chicago studio and preappointed locations across the country. Tomorrow The Four Aces will be interviewed from their dressing room in the Chicago Theatre. Miller will play their recordings of Love Is A Many Splendored Thing, and Sin.

Tuesday, June Valli will talk from the swimming pool of the Fontainblue Hotel, Miami Beach, with her recordings of A Kiss Like Yours and Oh, My Lover.

Wednesday Jerry Vale will come from Al and Dick's, New York, with his recording of Only Beautiful.

Thursday The Hilltoppers from the Muehlbach Hotel in Kansas City, with their recordings of the Kentuckian Song, and I Must Be Dreaming.

Friday, Mindy Carson from her apartment in Manhattan, with her recordings of Wake the Town and Hold Me Tight. (WDAE, 11:45 to 12 Noon).

* * *

A KEY HEAVYWEIGHT BATTLE between Ezzard Charles, former champ from Cincinnati, and Tommy "Hurricane" Jackson, third ranking heavyweight contender of Far Rockaway, N. Y., will be broadcast over the nationwide ABC Radio Network, Wednesday, 10:15 P. M. (WSUN).

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
Democrat & Chronicle
Circ. D. 117,818 - S. 172,719
AUG 11 1955

New Mennini Opera Wins Praise at Premiere

REVIEWS of the new opera, "The Rope," by Louis Mennini of the Eastman School of Music faculty, tell of a successful premiere at Lenox, Mass., home of the Tanglewood festival, Monday night.

The opera, based on a one-act play by Eugene O'Neill, was written on a commission of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, which two years ago invited the 34-year-old Rochester composer to spend a summer at Tanglewood and consult with its opera department staff in preparation for the work.

Howard Taubman in the New York Times wrote that Mennini "has a lyrical gift and he has turned out a piece that should have wide currency in the workshops, perhaps on television. One would like to see what he could do with a bigger subject filled with more poetry."

The O'Neill play is described as "a bitter vignette of brutish people living on the seacoast, presumably New England, in 1917." The composer, according to the review, "resisted the temptation to be obvious—to write harsh dissonance for a harsh subject. He has sought to infuse it with warmth and poignancy."

The performance was reported to be "remarkably polished."

Likewise Frances D. Perkins in the Herald Tribune reported that "Mr. Mennini has converted the Eugene O'Neill play . . . into genuine music drama without a sense of transfer into a different and sometimes alien medium." There are a few spoken passages, but "in most of the score the singers are given a flexible lyric speech with occasional more fully defined melodic episodes and a few arias which in most cases arise spontaneously from the general musical texture," The instrumental score was said to be "expertly written."

Mennini was present to receive the warm tribute of the audience.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 103,999

AUG 21 1955

SERKIN SOLOIST

Pianist Rudolf Serkin will be soloist in Beethoven's "Emperor" concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch on the Berkshire Festival broadcast Monday, on WBZ-NBC radio.

KINGSTON, N. Y.
FREEMAN
Circ. D. 14,013

AUG 4 195

THE SUMMER STAGE

Stage, screen, radio and television star Claude Rains will narrate Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait, Lenox, Mass., during "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school.

The Broadway star of Sidney Kingsley's dramatic "Darkness at Noon" and T. S. Eliot's comedy-drama "The Confidential Clerk" will make his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting and his debut at Tanglewood in the musical portrait composed during the war by Mr. Copland, noted American composer who is assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, and which was first performed by the Boston Symphony April 9, 1943.

Mr. Rains is familiar to motion picture fans for featured roles in 50 films including "Anthony Adverse," "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," "Caesar and Cleopatra" (he was Bernard Shaw's personal choice for the role) and "Casablanca." Before going to Hollywood, he acted the dynamic counsel for the defense in "They Shall Not Die."

He made a concert tour under the title "Words and Music" this spring and currently can be heard over NBC in a program of dramatic readings.

Mr. Copland's Lincoln study was inspired by Andre Kostelanetz, who, in the early weeks of World War 2, gave thought to a means by which music could be used to mirror the spirit of our country. The result was a triptych of musical characterizations by Mr. Copland, Jerome Kern and Virgil Thompson.

Leonard Bernstein, who is conducting, also will include on his portion of the program, the first performance anywhere of a suite he has arranged from the music he composed for the Academy Award-winning film "On the Waterfront."

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston "Pops" Orchestra, in a program of Rimsky-Korsakov, Strauss and Gershwin, with Mr. Bernstein soloist in the "Rhapsody in Blue" will conclude the concert.

During the early part of "Tanglewood on Parade," patrons are invited to simultaneous demonstrations from 6 to 8 p. m. by all five departments of the Music Center. For holders of box seats and reserved tickets, there is a performance in the formal gardens by the opera department of Puccini's comic opera "Gianni Schicchi."

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 222,157

AUG 7 1955

Fiedler, Bernstein in 'Tanglewood' Parade

During the coming week, the 1955 schedule in "Tanglewood," summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be concluded. This, the sixth and final week of the Berkshire Music Festival, includes a concert this afternoon in The Shed by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony under direction of Charles Munch, an all-Beethoven program. Eugene Istomin, pianist, will be the soloist, with orchestra in the Fourth Concerto in G Major. Symphonic selections the Symphony No. 8 in F Major and the Symphony No. 5 in C Minor. Last night there was a first performance, in "Tanglewood" of the second act of Beethoven's "Fidelio" with Margaret Harshaw, Mac Morgan, David Lloyd, Christina Cardullo, Malcolm Bernstein and Arthur Scoep in the cast. The program, Charles Munch conducting, also included excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung," with Miss Harshaw, soloist.

This date in music: 1829, Mendelssohn visited Fingal's Cave in the Hebrides Islands and wrote 20 bars of the music for his "Fingal's Cave" overture.

Next Thursday will be "Tanglewood on Parade," that unique event which has attracted many for the late afternoon and evening music and attendant festivities, including dancing on the lawn. The occasion is a benefit for Berkshire Music Center, with the "Center in Operation"—simultaneous sessions of each department. The Orchestra will play in The Shed and there will be opera in the Theater-Concert Hall. All are invited to bring a picnic supper and to make use of the buffet and refreshment carts. A concert is scheduled by The Chorus at 7 p.m. on the Porch of the Main House.

The Gala Concert in The Shed comprises selections by both the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting, nd the Boston Pops Orchestra, rthur Fiedler conducting. This arks the second season in hich the "Pops" has played in Tanglewood." The Symphonic elections: Bernstein's Suite "On he Waterfront" (a first perormance) and Aaron Copland's A Lincoln Portrait." The "Pops" oncert, a typical Fiedler proram will have Leonard Bernein as piano soloist in the ershwin "Rhapsody in Blue" ith orchestra. The Rimsky-Korsakov "Capriccio Espagnole" nd Antal Dorati's arrangement of the Suite from the Strauss Ballet "Graduation Ball," also are included.

The Wednesday Night Series of Chamber Music in the Theater-Concert Hall closes Aug. 10 when six principals of the Boston Symphony will be assisted by David Lloyd, tenor and Ralph Berkowitz, piano, in Beethoven compositions. An all-French symphonic concert, music of Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel, is announced for next Friday night and an all-Beethoven program next Sunday afternoon, Aug. 14, Charles Munch conducting. Next Saturday night, Pierre Monteux will conduct the Orchestra in Wagner, Brahms, Debussy and Strauss works. The Beethoven Ninth, to be performed with soloists and an augmented chorus Aug. 14 will be Conductor Munch's fifth all-Beethoven concert of the summer. Thwitzky soloists: Adele Addison, soprano Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Donald Gramm the bass. Concert of the Berkshire Music Center. After a lawn party and picnic supper at 7 p.m. there will be a gala concert in the shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Distinguished stage, screen and TV star Claude Rains will narrate Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," which will highlight the evening. Leonard Bernstein will be soloist for the Rhapsody in Blue by Gershwin. Following the concert, there will be waltz-

News
WEST HARTFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 5,350

AUG 11 1955

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch music director, gives the final pair of concerts of its 1955 Berkshire Festival Saturday, August 13, at 8:30 p.m. and Sunday, August 14, at 2:30 p.m., in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Pierre Monteux, the B.S.O. conductor from 1919-1924, and a Festival guest conductor annually since 1952, is on the podium for Saturday's program, and Mr. Munch conducts the concluding event Sunday.

If attendance figures of last summer, when 21,650 persons attended the final brace of concerts, can be considered a gauge and if fair weather prevails for the more than 12,000 persons who plan to hear the music on the spacious Tanglewood lawn outside the Music Shed, again all records will be shattered for the third consecutive year in the 18th summer of symphonic music in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the 16th year the Boston Symphony participated.

Saturday's program is all symphonic, with Mr. Monteux leading the 104-piece Boston Symphony in Wagner's Overture to "The Flying Dutchman"; Brahms' Symphony No. 3 in F major; Debussy's Three Nocturnes; and for the first time at Tanglewood the suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" of Richard Strauss. The Debussy nocturne "Sirenes" will have the participation of the feminine members of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Miss Iva Dee Hiatt, director of choral music at Smith College, Northampton, Mass., and assistant to Hugh Ross, the Tanglewood student choral department.

The concluding concert will be the sixth all-Beethoven program on the 12-concert Shed series. Mr. Munch's fifth summer program devoted to [illegible] that composer. It comprises the Overture "Leonore, No. 3," and the Symphony No. 9 in D minor with Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass, as soloists, the first three being former members of the Berkshire Music Center. The enlarged chorus comprises the Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center students and a group of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra chorus, Hugh Ross and [illegible] director of choruses, Ohio, Philharmonic

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES UNION
Circ. D. 60,449 - S. 116,052

AUG 5 1955

TANGLEWOOD EVENT TODAY

Series C of the Berkshire Music Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will open tonight at 8:30 in the music Shed with a performance of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis," conducted by Leonard Bernstein in memory of Serge Koussevitsky.

Soloists include Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; Richard Burgin, violinist and William Frank, organist. The choruses will be sung by the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Hugh Ross.

SATURDAY PROGRAM

Saturday night's program will feature excerpts from Beethoven's opera, "Fidelio" and Wagner's "Gotterammerung," conducted by Charles Munch. Soloists will be Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd, Mac Morgan, Christina Cardillo, Malcolm Bernstein and Arthur Schoep.

Sunday afternoon, Charles Munch will conduct an all-Beethoven program consisting of the symphonies, No. 5 and No. 8. Eugene Istomin, pianist, will play the concerto, No. 4 in G-major with the orchestra.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 42,039

AUG 5 1955

Bernstein Will Conduct At Tanglewood Tonight

LEONARD BERNSTEIN
In Opening Program

Leonard Bernstein will direct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the opening program of the semi-final weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts in the Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight.

Charles Munch will direct the programs tomorrow night and Sunday afternoon. Evening programs open at 8:30 o'clock and the afternoon programs at 2:30 o'clock.

* * *

TONIGHT'S PROGRAM will feature Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" presented as a memorial to the orchestra's late conductor, Serge Koussevitzky. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Mac Morgan, bass. The Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center Students of the chorus, opera and study group departments, trained by Hugh Ross, also will assist.

Mr. Munch's program tomorrow evening will open with a first Tanglewood performance of Beethoven's opera "Fidelio," Act II and the Festival Chorus trained by John Krueger of Youngstown, Ohio. Soloists will be Margaret Harshaw of the Metropolitan Opera, soprano; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; Arthur Schoep, tenor; and from the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center students Christina Cardillo, soprano; and Malcolm Bernstein, bass.

The second half of the program will be devoted to excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung" with Miss Harshaw as soloist in the Immolation Scene.

THE SUNDAY AFTERNOON program, all Beethoven, will feature Eugene Istomin as soloist in the piano concerto number 4 in G major. It also will include the symphonies number 8 in F major and number 5 in C minor.

A morning public rehearsal will be held tomorrow at 10 a.m. at the music shed as a benefit for the orchestra's pension fund.

Final concerts in the festival series will be presented Aug. 10, 12, 13 and 14. The annual Tanglewood on Parade, a benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will be held Aug. 11.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 103,999

AUG 21 1955

SERKIN SOLOIST

Pianist Rudolf Serkin will be soloist in Beethoven's "Emperor" concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch on the Berkshire Festival broadcast Monday, on WBZ-NBC radio.

KINGSTON, N. Y.
FREEMAN
Circ. D. 14,013

AUG 4 195?

THE SUMMER STAGE

Stage, screen, radio and television star Claude Rains will narrate Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait, Lenox, Mass., during "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school.

The Broadway star of Sidney Kingsley's dramatic "Darkness at Noon" and T. S. Eliot's comedy-drama "The Confidential Clerk" will make his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting and his debut at Tanglewood in the musical portrait composed during the war by Mr. Copland, noted American composer who is assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, and which was first performed by the Boston Symphony April 9, 1943.

Mr. Rains is familiar to motion picture fans for featured roles in 50 films including "Anthony Adverse," "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," "Caesar and Cleopatra" (he was Bernard Shaw's personal choice for the role) and "Casablanca." Before going to Hollywood, he acted the dynamic counsel for the defense in "They Shall Not Die."

He made a concert tour under the title "Words and Music" this spring and currently can be heard over NBC in a program of dramatic readings.

Mr. Copland's Lincoln study was inspired by Andre Kostelanetz, who, in the early weeks of World War 2, gave thought to a means by which music could be used to mirror the spirit of our country. The result was a triptych of musical characterizations by Mr. Copland, Jerome Kern and Virgil Thompson.

Leonard Bernstein, who is conducting, also will include on his portion of the program, the first performance anywhere of a suite he has arranged from the music he composed for the Academy Award-winning film "On the Waterfront."

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston "Pops" Orchestra, in a program of Rimsky-Korsakov, Strauss and Gershwin, with Mr. Bernstein soloist in the "Rhapsody in Blue" will conclude the concert.

During the early part of "Tanglewood on Parade," patrons are invited to simultaneous demonstrations from 6 to 8 p. m. by all five departments of the Music Center. For holders of box seats and reserved tickets, there is a performance in the formal gardens by the opera department of Puccini's comic opera "Gianni Schicchi."

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 222,157

AUG 7 1955

Fiedler, Bernstein in 'Tanglewood' Parade

During the coming week, the 1955 schedule in "Tanglewood," summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be concluded. This, the sixth and final week of the Berkshire Music Festival, includes a concert this afternoon in The Shed by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony under direction of Charles Munch, an all-Beethoven program. Eugene Istomin, pianist, will be the soloist, with orchestra in the Fourth Concerto in G Major. Symphonic selections the Symphony No. 8 in F Major and the Symphony No. 5 in C Minor. Last night there was a first performance, in "Tanglewood" of the second act of Beethoven's "Fidelio" with Margaret Harshaw, Mac Morgan, David Lloyd, Christina

This date in music: 1829, Mendelssohn visited Fingal's Cave in the Hebrides Islands and wrote 20 bars of the music for his "Fingal's Cave" over-

News
WEST HARTFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 5,350

AUG 11 1955

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch music director, gives the final pair of concerts of its 1955 Berkshire Festival Saturday, August 13 at 8:30 p.m. and Sunday, August 14 at 2:30 p.m., in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Pierre Monteux, the B.S.O. conductor from 1919-1924, and a Festival guest conductor annually since 1952, is on the program for Saturday's program, and Mr. Munch conducts the concluding event Sunday.

If attendance figures of last summer, when 21,650 persons attended the final brace of concerts, can be considered a gauge and if fair weather prevails for the more than 12,000 persons who plan to hear the music on the spacious Tanglewood lawn outside the Music Shed, again all records will be shattered for the third consecutive year in the 18th summer of symphonic music in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the 16th since the Boston Symphony participated.

Saturday's program is all symphonic, with Mr. Monteux leading the 104-piece Boston Symphony in Wagner's Overture to "The Flying Dutchman"; Brahms' Symphony No. 3 in F major; Debussy's Three Nocturnes; and for the first time at Tanglewood the suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" of Richard Strauss. The Debussy nocturne "Sirenes" will have the participation of the feminine members of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Miss Iva Dee Hiatt, director of choral music at Smith College, Northampton, Mass., and assistant to Hugh Ross, the Tanglewood summer choral department.

The concluding concert will be the sixth all-Beethoven concert on the 12-concert Shed series. Mr. Munch's fifth summer program devoted to [illegible] that composer. It [illegible] Overture "Leonore No. 3" and the Symphony No. 9 in D minor with Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass, soloists. The first time [illegible] former members of the Music [illegible] orus [illegible] of T[illegible]

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES UNION
Circ. D. 60,449 - S. 116,052

AUG 5 1955

TANGLEWOOD EVENT TODAY

Series C of the Berkshire Music Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will open tonight at 8:30 in the music Shed with a performance of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis," conducted by Leonard Bernstein in memory of Serge Koussevitsky.

Soloists include Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; Richard Burgin, violinist and William Frank, organist. The choruses will be sung by the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Hugh Ross.

SATURDAY PROGRAM

Saturday night's program will feature excerpts from Beethoven's opera, "Fidelio" and Wagner's "Gotterammerung," conducted by Charles Munch. Soloists will be Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd, Mac Morgan, Christina Cardillo, Malcolm Bernstein and Arthur Schoep.

Sunday afternoon, Charles Munch will conduct an all-Beethoven program consisting of the symphonies, No. 5 and No. 8. Eugene Istomin, pianist, will play the concerto, No. 4 in G-major with the orchestra.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 42,039

AUG 5 1955

Bernstein Will Conduct At Tanglewood Tonight

LEONARD BERNSTEIN
In Opening Program

Leonard Bernstein will direct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the opening program of the semi-final weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts in the Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight.

Charles Munch will direct the programs tomorrow night and Sunday afternoon. Evening programs open at 8:30 o'clock and the afternoon programs at 2:30 o'clock.

* * *

TONIGHT'S PROGRAM will feature Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" presented as a memorial to the orchestra's late conductor, Serge Koussevitzky. Soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Mac Morgan, bass. The Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center Students of the chorus, opera and study group departments, trained by Hugh Ross, also will assist.

Mr. Munch's program tomorrow evening will open with a first Tanglewood performance of Beethoven's opera "Fidelio," Act II and the Festival Chorus trained by John Krueger of Youngstown, Ohio. Soloists will be Margaret Harshaw of the Metropolitan Opera, soprano; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; Arthur Schoep, tenor; and from the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center students Christina Cardillo, soprano; and Malcolm Bernstein, bass.

The second half of the program will be devoted to excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung" with Miss Harshaw as soloist in the Immolation Scene.

THE SUNDAY AFTERNOON program, all Beethoven, will feature Eugene Istomin as soloist in the piano concerto number 4 in G major. It also will include the symphonies number 8 in F major and number 5 in C minor.

A morning public rehearsal will be held tomorrow at 10 a.m. at the music shed as a benefit for the orchestra's pension fund.

Final concerts in the festival series will be presented Aug. 10, 12, 13 and 14. The annual Tanglewood on Parade, a benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will be held Aug. 11.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
POST STANDARD
Circ. D. 89,399 - S. 101,254

AUG 7 1955

Opera Based On O'Neil Play

Louis Mennini of the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, wrote a one-act opera, "The Rope," based on the one-act play by Eugene O'Neill, which will have its world premiere by the oprea department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood tomorrow and Tuesday, under the direction of Boris Goldovsky. The opera is the first work to result from the new commissioning plan of the Krussevitzky Foundation.

Louis Mennini

On Thursday there will be "Tanglewood on Parade" for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. After a lawn party and picnic supper at 7 p.m. there will be a gala concert in the shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Distinguished stage, screen and TV star Claude Rains will narrate Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," which will highlight the evening. Leonard Bernstein will be soloist for the Rhapsody in Blue by Gershwin. Following the concert, there will be waltz-

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 55,423

AUG 12 1955

Rockefeller Fund Gives MIT Grant of $300,000

NEW YORK (AP)—A four-year grant totaling $250,000 to the University of Wisconsin for research on utilization of the energy of the sun was announced Thursday by the Rockefeller Foundation.

The announcement was made in the second quarterly report by Dean Rusk, the foundation president, who disclosed that the Foundation's grants for the period totaled $5,686,004. In addition, 66 fellowships were awarded to individuals from 24 countries.

Other grants include $300,000 to Massachusetts Institute of Technology for the development of a new humanities-social science program; $94,000 to the American Press Instiute of Columbia University for seminars involving foreign and American editors and $125,000 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra as a contribution to the Tanglewood revolving scholarship fund.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

AUG 13 1955

Seven Scholarships, Cash Awards Given Tanglewood Students

Seven scholarships and cash awards were made to students of the Berkshire Music center at Tanglewood, Lenox, today.

The prizes are given annually to outstanding students at the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its Berkshire festival which concludes its 18th and most successful summer tomorrow. Winners are chosen from among the 405 enrolled this year from 38 states and 18 foreign countries.

Tuition scholarships and cash prizes are to be presented at intermission of this afternoon's concert by the study symphony orchestra, attended by some 3,000, in the Tanglewood music shed at 3 by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music center.

Winners are: Alice Q. Ober, 21, of Pasadena, Calif., the $250 Gregor Piatigorsky prize for conspicuous talent; Peyton Higgison, 28, of Mobile, Ala., the High Fidelity magazine scholarship of $250 for an outstanding student; Edward Jay Miller, 25, of Miami Beach, Fla., the Serge Koussevitzky prize of $250 for a work composed at Tanglewood; Jacob Drukman, of New York city, the Samuel Wechsler commission, valued at $300, for the composition of a work to be specified by the faculty; Salvatore Martirano, 28, of New Rochelle, N. Y., the Raphael Sagalyn memorial prize of $250 for a composition; and Barth Bennitt of Miami, Fla., and Richard A. Fiske, 21, of Upton, cancellation by the Tanglewood Revolving scholarship fund of their indebtedness for the grants they received this year of $150 each, in recognition of their outstanding work.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

AUG 14 1955

STUDENT AWARDS AT TANGLEWOOD

Lenox, Aug. 13—Seven scholarships and cash awards were made to outstanding students of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood today. The prizes are given annually. The Gregor Piatigorsky Prize, value $250, has been awarded to student cellist Alice Q. Ober, 24, of Pasadena, Cal. The High Fidelity magazine scholarship, value $250, awarded for the first time this year to an outstanding student of the Berkshire Music Center, goes to Peyton Higgison, 28, of Mobile, Ala.

The Serge Koussevitzky Composition prize, value $250, given by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation in honor of the former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for a work composed at Tanglewood this season went to Edward Jay Miller, 25, of Miami Beach, Fla., whose prize-winning work, "Piece for Pianoforte" was performed on a composers' forum at Tanglewood yesterday. The Samuel Wechsler Commission, value $300, goes to Jacob Druckman, of New York City.

Through the friendly interest of the Industrial Buildings Corp. of Chicopee, there has been initiated this year an annual prize of $250 to a student composer, in memory of Raphael Sagalyn, given this year to Salvatore Martirano, 28, of New Rochelle, N. Y.

Two scholarships, each valued at $150, which cancel a student's indebtedness to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund for his tuition received from this fund are awarded to student horn players Barth Bennitt, 23, of Miami, Fla., and Richard A. Fiske, 21, of Upton.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 93,274 - S. 103,597

AUG 8 1955

Radio and TV

Berkshire Festival on KAI Devoted to Beethoven W

The second Berkshire Festival program devoted e a major work of Beethoven will be presented at 7:15 p. r over KARK. Charles Munch will conduct the Boston S Orchestra in Beethoven's "Pastorale Symphony" (N Major.)

The symphony is one of Beethoven's few program works, and its five movements have these descriptive titles: Cheerful impressions on arrival in the country; scene by the brook; merry gathering of country folk; thunderstorm; shepherd's song; glad and grateful feelings after the storm.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD JOURNAL
Circ. D. 130,981

AUG 9 1955

TALKING IT OVER

'Tanglewood' Draws Throngs For Superb Music Programs

By EMMA VAN WORMER

As the final week of the 1955 Berkshire Music Festival in "Tanglewood," Lenox, opens, record attendance figures for 20 of the 24 concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are impressive.

Through the weekend, a total of 111,835 attended the programs and it is expected that the 1954 figures of 135,775 will be equalled, if not surpassed by the weekend. Sunday afternoon's concert attracted 9,715. Rudolf Serkin's Piano Sonata recital in the Theater-Concert Hall recently brought the largest audience for an event in the smaller hall, with hundreds of listening on the lawns, a total of 2,456. This, according to Walter Alford, in charge of news releases, was unusual, in that the audience outside the hall could not see the artist. Earlier in the week Serkin played with the orchestra in The Shed.

"Tanglewood on Parade" for the benefit of Berkshire Music Center will take place Thursday from 6 to 11 p.m. with sessions simultaneously in all departments. At night there will be concerts in The Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Leonard Bernstein and by the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler. In the former program, Claude Rains, the eminent actor, will be narrator for Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait." In the Pops program, Bernstein will be at the piano for George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

Bernstein

Fiedler

Claude Rains

There will be a ceremony of musical significance on the Main House Porch late in the afternoon when a contract is signed for recordings both by the Boston Symphony and the Boston Pops Orchestra with RCA Victor. Conductor Charles Munch and conductor Fiedler signed for their respective orchestras.

The thousands who attended Sunday's concert, with places on the lawns, sought shelter during a heavy shower, the thunder adding to orchestral effects in the all-Beethoven program which included the Eighth and Fifth Symphonies, in that order, with the Fourth Piano Concerto in G Major, with Eugene Istomin as soloist with orchestra. This marked the young artist's debut both in "Tanglewood" and with The Boston. His was interesting reading of the Concerto, the second and third movements played without pause and with remarkable tempi. There was prolonged applause for both soloist and Director Munch, who shared the plaudits with the orchestra.

As ever, in this, the eighteenth season of the Berkshire Festival, the Tanglewood Tradition embodies the finest in musical standards and achievements. Since the '30's, Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony offer the world's greatest music. The Berkshire Music Center, Charles Munch, director, is unmatched in the distinction of faculty and students.

The Berkshire Hills are world-famed and "Tanglewood" with the Little Red House (where Hawthorne wrote) and other interesting buildings, including The Shed and the Theater-Concert Hall, annually are the center of interest of students and music lovers.

The Festival closes next Sunday afternoon with the Beethoven Ninth, with orchestra, chorus and soloists, Charles Munch conducting. There will be Friday and Saturday night concerts in The Shed and a Wednesday night concert in the Theater-Concert Hall, among numerous other music programs.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

AUG 13 1955

John Brook

Pierre Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood tonight.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

AUG 16 1955

Berkshire Music Center Nets $61,776

Proceeds of $61,776 were netted by the Berkshire Music Center, the world's only school of music maintained by an orchestra, from this season's Berkshire Festival chamber music concerts.

This total was boosted to $72,776 by an additional $11,000 contributed by the Rockefeller Foundation to match receipts for the Center from six chamber music concerts.

Some $79,975 was received this season from six chamber music concerts by noted soloists and ensembles, six by the Boston Symphony orchestra, four public orchestra rehearsals, and the Tanglewood on Parade program.

Attendance figures reached an all-time high of 136,097, compared to last year's 135,775, while the season's top attendance at the 12 music shed concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra was 15,624 on Saturday, July 30.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

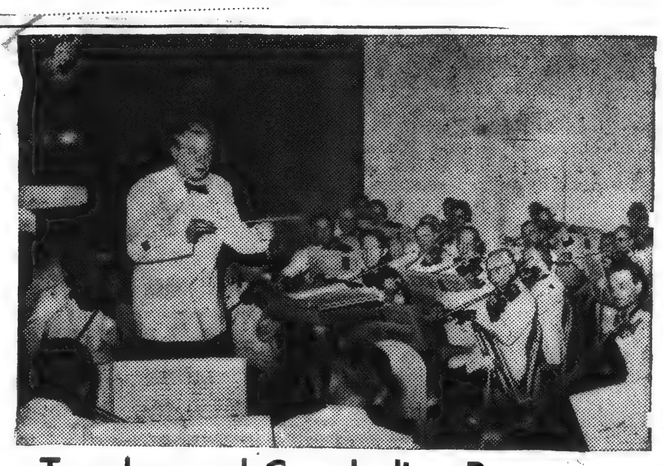
AUG 12 1955

Plouffe

TOP PRIZE WINNERS at Tanglewood on Parade pose with Miss Margo Miller, left, secretary of the community committee, sponsors of the annual Berkshire Music Center benefit. Miss Naomi Goldsmith of New York, center, won the RCA-Victor high fidelity phonograph; and Mrs. Albert Sterner of Richmond, right, a General Electric refrigerator. Eleven prizes were awarded, six to county residents, after intermission.

Jewish Civic Leader
WORCESTER, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 14,200

AUG 11 1955



Tanglewood Concluding Programs

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Charles Munch, Music Director for the past six years of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conclude the annual Berkshire Festival in the hills of Western Massachusetts August 14.

Mr. Munch is also Director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival, now in its thirteenth session.

The program for the final weekend is as follows:

Friday, August 12
(Shed at 8:30 Festival Concert)
Boston Symphony Orchestra—
Brahms: Variations on Haydn
Bloch: "Schelomo"
Soloist: Gregor Piatigorsky
Debussy: "La Mer"
Ravel: "Daphnis and Chloe"
Conductor: Charles Munch

Saturday, August 13
(Shed at 10 Open Rehearsal)
Boston Symphony Orchestra—
(Shed at 3 Dept. 1 Orchestra)
(Shed at 8:30 Festival Concert)
Boston Symphony Orchestra—
Wagner: "Flying Dutchman"
Brahms: Symphony No. 3
Debussy: Nocturnes
Strauss: "Der Rosenkavalier"
Conductor: Pierre Monteux

Sunday, August 14
(Theatre at 10)
Dept. 1 Chamber Music
(Shed at 2:30 Festival Concert)
Boston Symphony Orchestra—
Beethoven: Overture, Leonore No. 3
Symphony No. 9—Chorus and Soloists:
ADELE ADDISON, Soprano
CATHERINE AKOS, Contralto
DAVID LLOYD, Tenor
Donald Gramm, Bass
Conductor: Charles Munch

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 372,583 - S. 247,755

AUG 11 1955

Berkshire Festival Closes Sunday

The Berkshire Festival at Lenox M[illegible]ves into its final week-end of orchestral concerts tomorrow night with Charles Munch conducting an all-French program featuring the "Fantastic Symphony" of Berlioz; Debussy's "La Mer" and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite, No. 2.

Saturday night's concert finds Pierre Monteux on the podium with Brahms' Symphony No. 3; Debussy's "Three Nocturnes" and Strauss' Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier."

The final event takes place Sunday afternoon when Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony assisted in the final movement by the Festival Chorus under the direction of Hugh Ross. Soloists will be: Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass.

For further information telephone Lenox 600.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Times
NEW MILFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,786

AUG 11 1955

The Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox(Mass. winds up its 1955 season this weekend, with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-French orchestral program, music of Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel on Friday, and an al-Beethoven concert Sunday afternoon, with the Ninth Symphony and the Leonore Overture, No. 3. Saturday evening, Pierre Monteux wil conduct the B. S. O. in a program of music by Wagner, Brahms, Debussy and Strauss. Performances are at 2:30 p. m. Sunday, 8:30 p. m. for the evening programs.

ATHENS, N. Y.
HERALD
Circ. W. 3[illegible]
AUG 11 1955

Berkshire Festival Concerts End With Week's Program

The sixth and final week of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood ~~opens with the concluding~~ event of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, tomorrow evening in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Six principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (Gino Cioffi, clarinet; Samuel Mayes, cello; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; James Stagliano, French Horn), will be assisted by David Lloyd, tenor; and Ralph Berkowitz, piano, in a program of trios, songs, a quintet and a cello sonata.

Charles Munch will conduct an all-French orchestral program, music of Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel, on the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Shed concert of Friday evening (August 12), and an all-Beethoven program including the Ninth Symphony with soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; and augmented chorus on Sunday afternoon (August 14). Pierre Monteux will conduct the Saturday evening (August 13) program, comprising Wagner, Brahms, Debussy and Strauss.

Review
DARIEN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,792

AUG 11 1955

The Boston Symphony Orchestra gives the final pair of concerts of its 1955 Berkshire Festival Saturday at 8:30 p.m. and Sunday at 2:30 p.m., in the huge Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 39,951

AUG 13 1955

Final Berkshire Concert Tomorrow

The last concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30, Charles Munch conducting.

The 1955 Berkshire Festival will draw to a close with performances of Beethoven's Third "Leonore" Overture and Ninth Symphony conducted by Mr. Munch.

Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass, are the soloists with the Festival Chorus, Berkshire Music Center students augmented by that of the Springfield, Mass., Symphony Orchestra. Hugh Ross and John Krueger have trained the choristers.

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 86,944

AUG 12 1955

Final Programs At Tanglewood Starting Tonight

The Boston Symphony Orchestra and Charles Munch, director give the final concerts of its 1955 Berkshire Festival Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p.m. and Sunday at 2:30 p.m., in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Friday night's program includes Brahms' Variations On A Theme by Haydn, and the same composers's Violin Concerto in D, performed by Isaac Stern. Debussy's "La Mer," and Ravel's second suite from "Daphnis and Chloe."

Saturday's program is all symphonic, with Pierre Monteux leading the 104-piece Boston Symphony in Wagner's Overture to "The Flying Dutchman"; Brahms' Symphony No. 3, in F major; Debussy's Three Nocturnes; and for the first time at Tanglewood, the suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" of Richard Strauss. The Debussy nocturnee Strauss. The Debussy nocturne "Sirenes" will have the participation of the feminine members of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Miss Iva Dee Hiatt, director of choral music at Smith College, Northampton, Mass.

The concluding concert will be the sixth all-Beethoven concert on the 12-concert Shed series, Mr. Munch's fifth summer program devoted to the works of that composer. It comprises the Overture "Leonore", No. 3, and the Symphony No. 9, in D minor, with Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass, as soloists.

General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the Tanglewood lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

AUG 12 1955

Weekend Concerts Open Tonight; No Reservations for Connie

TANGLEWOOD — The most unwelcome guest at the concluding concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra over the weekend is Hurricane Connie.

Connie's activities along the East Coast provided the only sour note at last night's annual Tanglewood on Parade benefit when rains kept the attendance below 7,000.

The weekend concerts will open tonight at 8:30, rain or shine, when Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a concert of French music in the Music Shed.

The program, slightly revised from that announced originally, will include the "Symphonie Fantastique" by Berlioz; "La Mer" by Debussy; and the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet "Daphnis and Chloe." Berlioz' "Symphonie Fantastique" was one of the outstanding features of last summer's Festival when Mr. Munch conducted all the major orchestral works of the composer in honor of the 150th anniversary of his birth. It is the only Berlioz composition included in this summer's Festival programs.

In the remaining concerts tomorrow night at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Pierre Monteux and Charles Munch respectively will conduct.

Beethoven's Ninth Sunday

Mr. Monteux' Saturday evening will include music by Wagner, Brahms, Debussy and Strauss; and on Sunday the 1955 Berkshire Festival will draw to a close with performances of Beethoven's Third "Leonore" Overture and Ninth Symphony conducted by Mr. Munch. Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass; are the soloists with the Festival Chorus, Berkshire Music Center students augmented by that of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra. Hugh Ross and John Krueger have trained the choristers.

Remaining tickets for these three concerts, as well as the open rehearsal tomorrow morning at 10 a.m. for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund, are now on sale at the Tanglewood box-office, and telephone reservations are accepted. Admission for listening from the lawn will be on sale the day of each concert.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

AUG 13 1955

6,637 Brave the Rain

Bernstein's Premiere Climax To 'Tanglewood on Parade'

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 12.—"Tanglewood on Parade," the Berkshire Music Center's annual procession of student skills, talent and ingenuities took place last night in the midst of intermittent rains and generally surly weather. As a climax to the event Leonard Bernstein appeared in the triple-threat capacity of composer, conductor and pianist by directing both the world premiere of his suite from the Academy Award winning film "On the Waterfront" and Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait" and by acting as piano soloist in Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

The latter number enlisted the services of the Boston Pops Orchestra which, under Arthur Fiedler's supervision, also played Rimsky-Korsakov's "Capriccio Espagnol" and the Strauss-Dorati "Graduation Ball" Suite. Claude Rains was narrator of Lincoln's lines in the Copland work.

6,637 Despite Showers

Previous to this rocketing finale in the festival grounds music shed, the various student divisions of the center had put on their customary admirable show with demonstrations—simultaneously staged throughout the area—of the choral, conducting, composition and opera departments. Despite harassing, needle-like showers, an audience of 6,637 early arrived on campus to cheer the youngsters ahead.

The "Parade's" major enticement, the evening concert, was also met with cheers, though for far different reasons. It is virtually conceded among musicians that Mr. Bernstein's background score for "On the Waterfront" was the most artistically conceived of the year, and his suite from the film thus provides an opportunity of meeting again an old and admired friend.

As did the movie, the present excerpt opens with a melancholy horn theme developed canonically and followed by a percussion fugue loud enough to stir the deaf into hearing. Subsequently we are introduced to the love-motif, a misty-eyed, sentimental theme after the Hollywood manner, which is enlarged upon to such a degree that there is no doubt as to what direction the love has taken.

These, and a few lesser ideas, are for all purposes the materials of this suite. They are, frankly, overextended in length, but the work nonetheless is one so overwhelmingly dramatic (albeit in the popular movie manner) that it literally crushes any reservations. "Waterfront" is theatrical in the best sense that it is music tailor-made for the theater. It is urgent and compelling and vivid as flame.

Vivid, as well, was Mr. Bernstein's rendition of "Rhapsody in Blue," though in achieving this quality he all but scuttled Gershwin. It was, in brief, an unorthodox, highly personal reading, erratic in tempo and rhythmically unstable. Nor was it aided by patent technical shortcomings and the presence of a wayward cymbal which mysteriously crashed to the floor during a soft piano solo, thereby jarring the audience and performing participants into a state of mild hysteria.

Elsewhere, however, the concert fortunately proceeded without incident. Mr. Bernstein's understanding of Copland's music is already a legend, and as such "A Lincoln Portrait," excluding a somewhat gamy rendition by Mr. Rains, was aburst with power and inner vibrancy.

For his part, Mr. Fiedler rode the Boston Pops Orchestra in the grand circus manner and concluded the evening with much demanded encores. Included among them was a hilarious, bulldozer version of "Davy Crockett" that at one point required the instrumentalists to yelp like a pack of Geronimos on sighting the United States Cavalry. And since the Boston Pops is without question the greatest organization of its kind, it is a pity it did not devote itself to more numbers of the pops variety. The concert might then have become more of a howler than it was.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 369,241

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

AUG 13 1955

Springfield Chorus To Be Heard Sun. At Tanglewood

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch Music Director, gives the final pair of concerts of its 1955 Berkshire Festival tonight and tomorrow afternoon in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. Pierre Monteux, the B. S. O. conductor from 1919-1924, and a Festival guest conductor annually since 1952, is on the podium for tonight's program, and Mr. Munch conducts the concluding event tomorrow.

If attendance figures of last summer, when 21,650 persons attended the final brace of concerts, can be considered a gauge, and if fair weather prevails for the more than 12,000 persons who plan to hear the music on the spacious Tanglewood lawns outside the Music Shed, again all records will be shattered for the third consecutive year in the 18th summer of symphonic music, the 16th since the Boston Symphony participated.

Tonight's program is all symphonic, with Wagner's Overture to "The Flying Dutchman"; Brahms' Symphony No. 3, in F major; Debussy's Three Nocturnes; and for the first time at Tanglewood the suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" of Richard Strauss. The Debussy nocturne "Sirenes" will have the participation of the feminine members of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Miss Iva Dee Hiatt, director of choral music at Smith College, and assistant to Hugh Ross in the Tanglewood student choral department.

The concluding concert will be the sixth all-Beethoven concert on the 12-concert Shed series, Mr. Munch's fifth summer program devoted to the works of that composer. It comprises the Overture "Leonore", No. 3, and the Symphony No. 9, in D minor, with Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass, as soloists, the first three being former members of the Berkshire Music Center. The enlarged chorus comprises the Festival Chorus of Tanglewood students and a chorus of 50 voices of the Springfield Symphony Orcestra, trained by Hugh Ross and John Krueger, director of the Youngstown, Ohio, Philharmonic and Chorus.

This weekend concludes also the seasonal activities of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood. The music school has presented some 40 concerts and demonstrations of its orchestra, chamber music, chorus, opera, composition division and amateur study group departments in this, its 13th six-week session.

Hampshire Gazett NORTHAMPTON,
Independent
Circ. 12,825

AUG 13 1955

Last 2 Concerts At Tangle

The Boston Symphony tra, Charles Munch, us tor, gives the final pair certs of its 1955 Berkshi val tonight at 8:30 and to afternoon at 2:30, in th
Music Shed at Tanglewood
Pierre Monteux, the B. S.
ductor from 1919-1924,
Festival guest conductor ly since 1952, is on the for tonight's program, an Munch conducts the con event tomorrow.

If attendance figures summer, when 21,650 per tended the final brace o certs, can be considered a and if fair weather prev
the more than 12,000 who plan to hear the m
the spacious Tanglewood outside the Music Shed, a records will be shattered third consecutive year 18th summer of symphonic in the hills of Western chusetts, the 16th since th ton Symphony participate

Tonight's program is all symphonic, with Mr. Monteux leading the 104-piece Boston Symphony in Wagner's Overture to "The Flying Dutchman"; Brahms' Symphony No. 3, in F major; Debussy's Three Nocturnes, and for the first time at Tanglewood the suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" of Richard Strauss. The Debussy nocturne "Sirenes" will have the participation of the feminine members of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Miss Iva Dee Hiatt, director of choral music at Smith College, Northampton, and assistant to Hugh Ross in the Tanglewood student choral department.

The concluding concert will be the sixth all-Beethoven concert on the 12-concert Shed series, Mr. Munch's fifth summer program devoted to the works of that composer. It comprises the Overture "Leonore," No. 3, and the Symphony No. 9, in D minor, with Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass, as soloists, the first three being former members of the Berkshire Music Center. The enlarged chorus comprises the Festival Chorus of Tanglewood students and a chorus of 50 voices of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra, trained by Hugh Ross and John Krueger, director of the Youngstown, Ohio, Philharmonic and Chorus.

CLOSE CALL FOR CHARDASTIN

nscript (e)
ADAMS, Mass. dependent
rc. 13,326

13 1955

Week-End of Festival ff To RainSoaked Start l week-end of the 1955 Music festival got off oaked start at Tangle- night, with the bad lding the audience far nal.

rench program, how- warmly received by did brave the elements

Charles Munch con- Boston Symphony and concert with a per- f "Symphonie Fantas- Hector Berloiz. That performed at Tangle- ear when the festival d around Berloiz' mu- ce again it proved a ss.

rks heard last night ier" by Debussy and "Daphnis and Cloe" suite No. 2 by Ravel.

Pierre Monteux is to conduct tonight's concert, which may also run into trouble from the weather. Scheduled to be heard are Wagners' overture to "The Flying Dutchman," the Symphony No. 3 in F major by Brahms, three nocturnes by Debussy, and a suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" by Strauss. The female voices of the Festival chorus will be heard in the Debussy nocturnes.

The festival ends tomorrow afternon with Mr. Munch conducting the Overture to "Leonore" and the Ninth symphony. Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd and Donald Gramm will be vocal soloists in the Ninth symphony.

Jackson
Republican (m)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 21,295

AUG 13 1955

Final Concert Slated Sunday

The last concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival will be held Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Charles Munch conducting.

The 1955 Berkshire Festival will draw to a close with performances of Beethoven's Third "Leonore" Overture and Ninth Symphony conducted by Mr. Munch.

Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass are the soloists with the Festival Chorus, Berkshire Music Center students augmented by that of the Springfield, Mass., Symphony Orchestra. Hugh Ross and John Krueger have trained the choristers.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

AUG 13 1955

Boston Symphony Festival at End

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will give the final concerts of its 1955 Berkshire Festival tonight at 8:30 and Sunday at 2:30, in the Tanglewood Music Shed, Lenox, Mass.

Tonight Pierre Monteux will lead the 104-piece Boston Symphony in Wagner's Overture to "The Flying Dutchman;" Brahms' Symphony No. 3, in F major; Debussy's Three Nocturnes; and for the first time at Tanglewood the suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" of Richard Strauss.

The Debussy nocturne "Sirenes" will have the participation of the feminine members of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Miss Iva Dee Hiatt, director of choral music at Smith College, Northampton, Mass., and assistant to Hugh Ross in the Tanglewood student choral department.

The concluding concert will be Charles Munch's fifth all-Beethoven program of the series. It comprises the Overture "Leonore," No. 3, and the Symphony No. 9, in D minor, with Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass, as soloists, beside the Festival Chorus of Tanglewood students and a chorus of 50 voices of the Springfield, Mass., Symphony Orchestra, trained by Hugh Ross and John Krueger, director of the Youngstown, Ohio, Philharmonic and Chorus.

This weekend concludes also the seasonal activities of the Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's summer school of music which has presented some 40 concerts and demonstrations of its orchestra, chamber music, chorus, opera, composition division and amateur study group departments in its six-week session.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

AUG 12 1955

Weekend Concerts Open Tonight; No Reservations for Connie

TANGLEWOOD — The most unwelcome guest at the concluding concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra over the weekend is Hurricane Connie.

Connie's activities along the East Coast provided the only sour note at last night's annual Tanglewood on Parade benefit when rains kept the attendance below 7,000.

The weekend concerts will open tonight at 8:30, rain or shine, when Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a concert of French music in the Music Shed.

The program, slightly revised from that announced originally, will include the "Symphonie Fantastique" by Berlioz; "La Mer" by Debussy; and the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet "Daphnis and Chloe." Berlioz' "Symphonie Fantastique" was one of the outstanding features of last summer's Festival when Mr. Munch conducted all the major orchestral works of the composer in honor of the 150th anniversary of his birth. It is the only Berlioz composition included in this summer's Festival programs.

In the remaining concerts tomorrow night at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Pierre Monteux and Charles Munch respectively will conduct.

Beethoven's Ninth Sunday

Mr. Monteux' Saturday evening will include music by Wagner, Brahms, Debussy and Strauss; and on Sunday the 1955 Berkshire Festival will draw to a close with performances of Beethoven's Third "Leonore" Overture and Ninth Symphony conducted by Mr. Munch. Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass; are the soloists with the Festival Chorus, Berkshire Music Center students augmented by that of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra. Hugh Ross and John Krueger have trained the choristers.

Remaining tickets for these three concerts, as well as the open rehearsal tomorrow morning at 10 a.m. for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund, are now on sale at the Tanglewood box-office, and telephone reservations are accepted. Admission for listening from the lawn will be on sale the day of each concert.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 S. 528,253

AUG 13 1955

...terday on the Hooded Bell

...ain

...emiere Climax ...od on Parade'

...(albeit in the popular movie manner) that it literally crushes ...any reservations. "Waterfront" ...is theatrical in the best sense ...that it is music tailor-made for ...the theater. It is urgent and ...compelling and vivid as flame.

Vivid, as well, was Mr. Bernstein's rendition of "Rhapsody in Blue," though in achieving this quality he all but scuttled Gershwin. It was, in brief, an unorthodox, highly personal reading, erratic in tempo and rhythmically unstable. Nor was

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 369,241

AUG 14 1955

Berkshire Festival Ends

The Berkshire Festival comes to an end today with Charles Munch conducting the concluding concert in the Music Shed this afternoon at 2:30. The program, the last of six devoted to music of Beethoven, will present the overture "Leonore" No. 3, and the Ninth Symphony. The soloists: Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd, Donald Gramm.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE. Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

AUG 13 1955

Springfield Chorus To Be Heard Sun. At Tanglewood

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch Music Director, gives the final pair of concerts of its 1955 Berkshire Festival tonight and tomorrow afternoon in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. Pierre Monteux, the B. S. O. conductor from 1919-1924, and a Festival guest conductor annually since 1952, is on the podium for tonight's program, and Mr. Munch conducts the concluding event tomorrow.

If attendance figures of last summer, when 21,650 persons attended the final brace of concerts, can be considered a gauge, and if fair weather prevails for the more than 12,000 persons who plan to hear the music on the spacious Tanglewood lawns outside the Music Shed, again all records will be shattered for the third consecutive year in the 18th summer of symphonic music, the 16th since the Boston Symphony participated.

Tonight's program is all symphonic, with Wagner's Overture to "The Flying Dutchman"; Brahms' Symphony No. 3, in F major; Debussy's Three Nocturnes; and for the first time at Tanglewood the suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" of Richard Strauss. The Debussy nocturne "Sirenes" will have the participation of the feminine members of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Miss Iva Dee Hiatt, director of choral music at Smith College, and assistant to Hugh Ross in the Tanglewood student choral department.

The concluding concert will be the sixth all-Beethoven concert on the 12-concert Shed series, Mr. Munch's fifth summer program devoted to the works of that composer. It comprises the Overture "Leonore", No. 3, and the Symphony No. 9, in D minor, with Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass, as soloists, the first three being former members of the Berkshire Music Center. The enlarged chorus comprises the Festival Chorus of Tanglewood students and a chorus of 50 voices of the Springfield Symphony Orcestra, trained by Hugh Ross and John Krueger, director of the Youngstown, Ohio, Philharmonic and Chorus.

This weekend concludes also the seasonal activities of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood. The music school has presented some 40 concerts and demonstrations of its orchestra, chamber music, chorus, opera, composition division and amateur study group departments in this, its 13th six-week session.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

AUG 13 1955

Last 2 Concerts At Tanglewood

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch music director, gives the final pair of concerts of its 1955 Berkshire Festival tonight at 8:30 and tomorrow afternoon at 2:30, in the huge Music Shed at Tanglewod, Lenox. Pierre Monteux, the B. S. O. conductor from 1919-1924, and a Festival guest conductor annually since 1952, is on the podium for tonight's program, and Mr. Munch conducts the concluding event tomorrow.

If attendance figures of last summer, when 21,650 persons attended the final brace of concerts, can be considered a gauge, and if fair weather prevails for the more than 12,000 persons who plan to hear the music on the spacious Tanglewood lawns outside the Music Shed, again all records will be shattered for the third consecutive year in this 18th summer of symphonic music in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the 16th since the Boston Symphony participated.

Tonight's program is all symphonic, with Mr. Monteux leading the 104-piece Boston Symphony in Wagner's Overture to "The Flying Dutchman"; Brahms' Symphony No. 3, in F major; Debussy's Three Nocturnes, and for the first time at Tanglewood the suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" of Richard Strauss. The Debussy nocturne "Sirenes" will have the participation of the feminine members of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Miss Iva Dee Hiatt, director of choral music at Smith College, Northampton, and assistant to Hugh Ross in the Tanglewood student choral department.

The concluding concert will be the sixth all-Beethoven concert on the 12-concert Shed series, Mr. Munch's fifth summer program devoted to the works of that composer. It comprises the Overture "Leonore," No. 3, and the Symphony No. 9, in D minor, with Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass, as soloists, the first three being former members of the Berkshire Music Center. The enlarged chorus comprises the Festival Chorus of Tanglewood students and a chorus of 50 voices of the Springfield Mass., Symphony Orchestra, trained by Hugh Ross and John Krueger, director of the Youngstown, Ohio, Philharmonic and Chorus.

CLOSE CALL FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

AUG 13 1955

Final Week-End of Festival Is Off To RainSoaked Start

The final week-end of the 1955 Berkshire Music festival got off to a rain-soaked start at Tanglewood last night, with the bad weather holding the audience far below normal.

The all-French program, however, was warmly received by those who did brave the elements to attend. Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony and opened the concert with a performance of "Symphonie Fantastique" by Hector Berloiz. That work was performed at Tanglewood last year when the festival was centered around Berloiz' music, and once again it proved a great success.

Other works heard last night were "La Mer" by Debussy and "Daphnis and Cloe" suite No. 2 by Ravel.

Pierre Monteux is to conduct tonight's concert, which may also run into trouble from the weather. Scheduled to be heard are Wagners' overture to "The Flying Dutchman," the Symphony No. 3 in F major by Brahms, three nocturnes by Debussy, and a suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" by Strauss. The female voices of the Festival chorus will be heard in the Debussy nocturnes.

The festival ends tomorrow afternon with Mr. Munch conducting the Overture to "Leonore" and the Ninth symphony. Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd and Donald Gramm will be vocal soloists in the Ninth symphony.

Jackson ...

Republican (m)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 21,295

AUG 13 1955

Final Concert Slated Sunday

The last concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival will be held Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Charles Munch conducting.

The 1955 Berkshire Festival will draw to a close with performances of Beethoven's Third "Leonore" Overture and Ninth Symphony conducted by Mr. Munch.

Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass are the soloists with the Festival Chorus, Berkshire Music Center students augmented by that of the Springfield, Mass., Symphony Orchestra. Hugh Ross and John Krueger have trained the choristers.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

AUG 13 1955

Boston Symphony Festival at End

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will give the final concerts of its 1955 Berkshire Festival tonight at 8:30 and Sunday at 2:30, in the Tanglewood Music Shed, Lenox, Mass.

Tonight Pierre Monteux will lead the 104-piece Boston Symphony in Wagner's Overture to "The Flying Dutchman;" Brahms' Symphony No. 3, in F major; Debussy's Three Nocturnes; and for the first time at Tanglewood the suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" of Richard Strauss.

The Debussy nocturne "Sirenes" will have the participation of the feminine members of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Miss Iva Dee Hiatt, director of choral music at Smith College, Northampton, Mass., and assistant to Hugh Ross in the Tanglewood student choral department.

The concluding concert will be Charles Munch's fifth all-Beethoven program of the series. It comprises the Overture "Leonore," No. 3, and the Symphony No. 9, in D minor, with Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass, as soloists, beside the Festival Chorus of Tanglewood students and a chorus of 50 voices of the Springfield, Mass., Symphony Orchestra, trained by Hugh Ross and John Krueger, director of the Youngstown, Ohio, Philharmonic and Chorus.

This weekend concludes also the seasonal activities of the Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's summer school of music which has presented some 40 concerts and demonstrations of its orchestra, chamber music, chorus, opera, composition division and amateur study group departments in its six-week session.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

AUG 14 1955

BOSTON SYMPHONY RENEWS CONTRACT

Lenox, Aug. 13—A long-term renewal of the 40-year recording association of the Boston Symphony Orchestra with RCA Victor Records has been announced. The signing of a new contract extending the existing exclusive recording association of the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras with their respective conductors, Charles Munch and Arthur Fiedler, took place in the library of the main house on the grounds at Tanglewood.

The orchestra's first recording session under its new contract will take place Monday and Tuesday at Symphony Hall, Boston. Conducting one session on the eve of his departure for a European holiday prior to the opening of the Symphony's fall season will be Charles Munch, with Pierre Monteux, guest conductor for the Boston Symphony, conducting the second session.

The first symphony orchestra in the nation to make phonograph records, the Boston Symphony's career on records dates back to 1916 when the first discs were made for the Victor Talking Machine Co.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 130,559

AUG 16 1955

Banner Year for Berkshire Fete

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, ended the 18th Berkshire Festival on a note of triumph Sunday afternoon. Word today discloses that the Festival reached an all-time high in attendance.

In six weeks — from July 6 through August 14—the attendance at 24 concerts has totalled 136,087 as compared with 1954's 135,775. In addition, six chamber music concerts attracted 9,561, and, on August 3, created a record for this series when 2,456 attended in an auditorium designed for 1,200 listeners. Four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the orchestra lured a total of 8,935 persons and 405 students were maintained at the Berkshire Music Center, the only music school in the world supported by an orchestra.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 91,975

AUG 15 1955

1955 BERKSHIRE MUSIC FESTIVAL HITS NEW HIGH

'Connie' Cuts Expected Attendance Over Closing Week End

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, its Music Director Charles Munch conducting, closed the 18th Berkshire Festival, the 16th since the Boston Symphony participated at Tanglewood in the hills of Western Massachusetts, yesterday afternoon despite torrential rains and high winds, by-products of hurricane "Connie," which cut final week end's crowds to one-third of expectations, attendance for the 24 concerts matched 1954's all-time high. Simultaneous with the close of the Festival, the Berkshire Music Center, the only school of music in the world maintained by an orchestra, dispersed its 405 students as its 13th six-week session ended.

Yesterday's concluding concert, Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, involved the participation of the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra; soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass; the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center, plus 70 voices of the Chorus of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra, trained by Hugh Ross and John Krueger. 9750 persons attended.

In six weeks, from July 6 through Aug. 14, the attendance at 24 Berkshire Festival concerts has totaled 136,087, as compared with 135,775 in 1954. Attendance for 15 concerts in previous summers has been: 1953: 117,950; 1952: 104,875; 1951: 112,650; 1950: 113,300. 1950 was the year of the late Serge Koussevitzky's last Tanglewood concerts after 25 years as music director of the orchestra; 1951 was the year Charles Munch, who succeeded him, first conducted in the Berkshires.

Highly Gratified

Gratification at the high attendance records for the orchestra's concerts and its school's demonstrations was expressed by Thomas D. Perry, Jr., who has just completed his first year as manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Perry expressed thanks for the public's endorsement for the second summer of Charles Munch's plan, inaugurated last year, to increase the existing 15 concerts to 24 within the Berkshire Festival's six-week framework, by adding six Wednesday evenings of chamber music by noted artists and ensembles in the intimate (capacity 1200) theater-concert hall, and by adding three performances by the Boston Symphony Orchestra to the nine previously given in the huge 6000-seat Music Shed.

FULLY AIR COND.

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican

year.

During the six weeks from July 6 through Aug. 14 attendance at 24 concerts totaled 136,087, ac compared to 135,775 last year.

Six chamber concerts attracted 9.561, including 2,456 on Aug. 3.

Four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the orchestra brought out 8,935.

At the eBrkshire Music Center, only music school supported by an orchestar, 405 students were maintained.

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 86,944

AUG 16 1955

Tanglewood's Season Comes to a Close

The close of another season—the eighteenth—at Tanglewood in the Berkshires brings home a realization of what musical treasures lie in store there. Little more than two hours drive from Hartford, a season of brilliant music is available. Aside from the minor creature discomforts, such as the valley chill broken by the occasional spells of tropical heat, and the restless mosquitoes, the season is an unmixed blessing. For more than 100,000 visitors over the brief course of the festival, there is an opportunity to hear music at its finest. To this contribute not only the young and earnest students but the polished and practiced men of the Boston Symphony.

The advent of the automobile has added much to the pleasures of the many. Not only in the Berkshires, but at Yale Bowl these summers a short drive has allowed a family a pleasant outdoor evening of music. The Bowl series, set up by the New Haven Junior Chamber of Commerce, has drawn sizable crowds. Farther to the southwest, the Shakespeare Festival is just off the expressway for those who want something more serious than the ordinary summer theater fare. And for those who don't, Connnecticut's summer theaters have been offering a variety of the best, both musical and dramatic.

The selection, both at home and abroad, of entertainment and the arts is broad enough for all. But the finest remains Tanglewood. The outstanding symphonic festival in the nation, it provides, over a season, a sampling of the old and the new in music. It has devoted this season's attention to Beethoven, with spectacular programs. Mr. Munch and the festival authorities deserve a warm hand as they conclude another year.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 74,966

AUG 16 1955

Berkshire Music Center Gets $61,776 From Series

Additional $11,000 Contributed by Rockefeller Foundation; Attendance Over That of 1954

Berkshire Music Center, the world's only school of music maintained by an orchestra, benefited to the tune of $61,776 from this season's Berkshire Festival chamber music concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox.

An additional $11,000, contributed by Rockefeller Foundation to match the net receipts for the Music Center from six chamber music concerts, boosted the total to $72,776.

Attendance 136,087

Although hurricane fringe weather cut the final week-end's crowds to one-third the anticipated size, attendance for the 24 concerts of the season that closed Sunday topped the all-time high figure of 1954, Festival officials said. This year's total figure, 136,097, was 312 over the 135,775 total of last year.

Total grossed this season for six chamber music concerts by noted soloists and ensembles, six by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, four public orchestra rehearsals and the Tanglewood on Parade program, was $79,975.

The season's top attendance at the 12 music shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra was 15,624, recorded on Saturday, July 30. The figure is the highest in four years but is 176 under the all-time high of 15,800 in 1951.

Gratification at the high attendance records for the orchestra's concerts and the school's demonstrations was expressed by Thomas D. Perry, Jr., completing his first year as Boston Symphony Orchestra manager.

Concerts' Increase Pleases

He also noted with appreciation the public's indorsement for the second summer of Music Director Charles Munch's plan to increase the number of concerts during the six-week season from 15 to 24.

Munch succeeded the late Serge Koussevitzky in 1951. Koussevitzky's last Tanglewood concerts after 25 years as music director were presented in 1950.

Attendance figures for 15 concerts in previous summers were: In 1953—117,950; 1952 104,875; 1951—112,650; 1950—113,300.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

AUG 14 1955

BOSTON SYMPHONY RENEWS CONTRACT

Lenox, Aug. 13—A long-term renewal of the 40-year recording association of the Boston Symphony Orchestra with RCA Victor Records has been announced. The signing of a new contract extending the existing exclusive recording association of the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras with their respective conductors, Charles Munch and Arthur Fiedler, took place in the library of the main house on the grounds at Tanglewood.

The orchestra's first recording session under its new contract will take place Monday and Tuesday at Symphony Hall, Boston. Conducting one session on the eve of his departure for a European holiday prior to the opening of the Symphony's fall season will be Charles Munch, with Pierre Monteux, guest conductor for the Boston Symphony, conducting the second session.

The first symphony orchestra in the nation to make phonograph records, the Boston Symphony's career on records dates back to 1916 when the first discs were made for the Victor Talking Machine Co.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 130,559

AUG 16 1955

Banner Year for Berkshire Fete

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, ended the 18th Berkshire Festival on a note of triumph Sunday afternoon. Word today discloses that the Festival reached an all-time high in attendance.

In six weeks—from July 6 through August 14—the attendance at 24 concerts has totalled 136,087 as compared with 1954's 135,775. In addition, six chamber music concerts attracted 9,561, and, on August 3, created a record for this series when 2,456 attended in an auditorium designed for 1,200 listeners. Four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the orchestra lured a total of 8,935 persons and 405 students were maintained at the Berkshire Music Center, the only music school in the world supported by an orchestra.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 91,975

AUG 15 1955

MUSIC FESTIVAL HITS NEW HIGH

'Connie' Cuts Expected Attendance Over Closing Week End

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, its Music Director Charles Munch conducting, closed the 18th Berkshire Festival, the 16th since the Boston Symphony participated at Tanglewood in the hills of Western Massachusetts, yesterday afternoon despite torrential rains and high winds, by-products of hurricane "Connie," which cut final week end's crowds to one-third of expectations, attendance for the 24 concerts matched 1954's all-time high. Simultaneous with the close of the Festival, the Berkshire Music Center, the only school of music in the world maintained by an orchestra, dispersed its 405 students as its 13th six-week session ended.

Yesterday's concluding concert, Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, involved the participation of the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra; soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass; the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire

The Daily News
T BRIDGE
USHNER

GAME TONIGHT
Springfield Bridge Club

...suit holding and West comes in ...director of the orchestra, 1951 was the year Charles Munch, who succeeded him, first conducted in the Berkshires.

Highly Gratified

Gratification at the high attendance records for the orchestra's concerts and its school's demon-

FULLY AIR COND.

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 86,944

AUG 16 1955

Tanglewood's Season Comes to a Close

The close of another season—the eighteenth—at Tanglewood in the Berkshires brings home a realization of what musical treasures lie in store there. Little more than two hours drive from Hartford, a season of brilliant music is available. Aside from the minor creature discomforts, such as the valley chill broken by the occasional spells of tropical heat, and the restless mosquitoes, the season is an unmixed blessing. For more than 100,000 visitors over the brief course of the festival, there is an opportunity to hear music at its finest. To this contribute not only the young and earnest students but the polished and practiced men of the Boston Symphony.

The advent of the automobile has added much to the pleasures of the many. Not only in the Berkshires, but at Yale Bowl these summers a short drive has allowed a family a pleasant outdoor evening of music. The Bowl series, set up by the New Haven Junior Chamber of Commerce, has drawn sizable crowds. Farther to the southwest, the Shakespeare Festival is just off the expressway for those who want something more serious than the ordinary summer theater fare. And for those who don't, Connnecticut's summer theaters have been offering a variety of the best, both musical and dramatic.

The selection, both at home and abroad, of entertainment and the arts is broad enough for all. But the finest remains Tanglewood. The outstanding symphonic festival in the nation, it provides, over a season, a sampling of the old and the new in music. It has devoted this season's attention to Beethoven, with spectacular programs. Mr. Munch and the festival authorities deserve a warm hand as they conclude another year.

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 196,593

AUG 16 1955

136,087 Record At Tanglewood

The 18th annual Boston Symphony Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood reached an all-time high in attendance this year.

During the six weeks from July 6 through Aug. 14 attendance at 24 concerts totaled 136,087, ac compared to 135,775 last year.

Six chamber concerts attracted 9,561, including 2,456 on Aug. 3.

Four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the orchestra brought out 8,935.

At the eBrkshire Music Center, only music school supported by an orchestar, 405 students were maintained.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 74,966

AUG 16 1955

Berkshire Music Center Gets $61,776 From Series

Additional $11,000 Contributed by Rockefeller Foundation; Attendance Over That of 1954

Berkshire Music Center, the world's only school of music maintained by an orchestra, benefited to the tune of $61,776 from this season's Berkshire Festival chamber music concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox.

An additional $11,000, contributed by Rockefeller Foundation to match the net receipts for the Music Center from six chamber music concerts, boosted the total to $72,776.

Attendance 136,087

Although hurricane fringe weather cut the final week-end's crowds to one-third the anticipated size, attendance for the 24 concerts of the season that closed Sunday topped the all-time high figure of 1954, Festival officials said. This year's total figure, 136,097, was 312 over the 135,775 total of last year.

Total grossed this season for six chamber music concerts by noted soloists and ensembles, six by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, four public orchestra rehearsals and the Tanglewood on Parade program, was $79,975.

The season's top attendance at the 12 music shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra was 15,624, recorded on Saturday, July 30. The figure is the highest in four years but is 176 under the all-time high of 15,800 in 1951.

Gratification at the high attendance records for the orchestra's concerts and the school's demonstrations was expressed by Thomas D. Perry, Jr., completing his first year as Boston Symphony Orchestra manager.

Concerts' Increase Pleases

He also noted with appreciation the public's indorsement for the second summer of Music Director Charles Munch's plan to increase the number of concerts during the six-week season from 15 to 24

Munch succeeded the late Serge Koussevitzky in 1951. Koussevitzky's last Tanglewood concerts after 25 years as music director were presented in 1950.

Attendance figures for 15 concerts in previous summers were: In 1953—117,950; 1952 104,875; 1951—112,650; 1950—113,300.

INFORMATION OBSCURED

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 91,975

AUG 12 1955

MUSIC FESTIVAL 1955 CONCERTS NEARING CLOSE

Tonight Begins Final Week End of Events at Tanglewood

The final week-end of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at this summer's Berkshire Festival will begin tonight at 8.30, when Charles Munch will conduct a concert of French music in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. The program, slightly revised from that announced originally, will include the "Symphonie Fantastique" by Berlioz; "La Mer" by Debussy; and the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet "Daphnis and Chloe." Berlioz' "Symphonie Fantastique" was one of the outstanding features of last summer's festival, when Mr. Munch conducted all the major orchestral works of the composer in honor of the 150th anniversary of his birth. It is the only Berlioz composition included in this summer's Festival programs.

ADELE ADDISON

In the remaining concerts tomorrow night at 8.30 and Sunday afternoon at 2.30, Pierre Monteux and Charles Munch respectively will conduct. Mr. Monteux' Saturday evening program will include music by Wagner, Brahms, Debussy and Strauss; and on Sunday the 1955 Berkshire Festival will draw to a close with performances of Beethoven's Third "Leonore" Overture and Ninth Symphony conducted by Mr. Munch. Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass; are the soloists with the Festival Chorus, Berkshire Music Center students augmented by that of the Springfield, Symphony Orchestra. Hugh Ross and John Krueger have trained the choristers.

Remaining tickets for these three concerts, as well as the open rehearsal tomorrow morning at 10 for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund, are now on sale at the Tanglewood box-office, and telephone reservations are accepted, Lenox 600. Admission for listening from the lawn will be on sale the day of each concert.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,995

AUG 11 1955

Tanglewood Closes Season on Sunday

Boston Symphony Concludes 16th Berkshire Festival

Pierre Monteux Will Conduct Orchestra Saturday Night and Charles Munch Will Be on Podium in 1955 Farewell Sunday Afternoon in All-Beethoven Program.

The sixteenth summer of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, will conclude this week-end with performances Saturday night at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox.

Saturday evening's concert will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux, a guest conductor annually since 1952 and conductor of the Boston Symphony from 1919 to 1924. The concluding concert Sunday will find Mr. Munch on the podium.

Saturday night Mr. Monteux will lead the 104-piece Boston Symphony in Wagner's Overture to "The Flying Dutchman"; Brahms' Symphony No. 3, in F major; Debussy's Three Nocturnes; and for the first time at Tanglewood the suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" of Richard Strauss. The Debussy nocturne "Sirenes" will include participation by the feminine members of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Miss Iva Dee Hiatt, director of choral music at Smith College, Northampton. She is assistant to Hugh Ross in the Tanglewood student choral department.

Sunday's final concert will be the sixth Il-Bethoven program in the 12-concert Shed series, Mr. Munch's fifth summer program devoted to the works of that composer. It includes the Overture "Leonore," No. 3, and the Symphony No. 9, in D minor, with Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass, as soloists. The first three are former members of the Berkshire Music Center. The enlarged chorus comprises the Festival Chorus of Tanglewood students and a chorus of 50 voices of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra, trained by Hugh Ross and John Krueger, director of the Youngstown, Ohio, Philharmonic and Chorus.

If attendance figures of last summer, when 21,650 persons attended the final two concerts, can be considered a gauge, and if fair weather prevails for the more than 12,000 persons who plan to hear the music on the spacious Tanglewood lawns outside the Music Shed, again all record will be shattered for the third consecutive year in this eighteenth summer of symphonic music in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the sixteenth since the Boston Symphony participated.

The seasonal activities of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood also conclude this week-end. The music school has presented some 40 concerts and demonstrations of its orchestra, chamber music, chorus, opera, composition division and amateur study group departments in this, its thirteenth six-week session.

At Saturday's final concert by the student symphony orchestra in the Music Shed at 3:00 p. m., Ralph Berkowitz, Dean of the B. M. C., will announce scholarships and prize awards. Sunday at 10:00 a. m., in the Chamber Music Hall, is the final program of chamber music by students of the school's Department I (orchestra). These two events are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who may attend through voluntary contributions to the school.

TULSA, OKLAHOMA
EAGLE
AUGUST 18, 1955

Music Critic Says Jazz Is Becoming Respectable in USA

Whitney Balliett, music critic for the New Yorker magazine and the Saturday Review of Literature had this to say during his visit to CBS Radio's "Disk Derby" as host Fred Robbins' "Honor Roll Guest."

"At the ripe old age of seventy, jazz is suddenly becoming as respectable as church. For ten years it's been filling the Carnegie Halls of the nation. For at least five years it's been taught in college. And in the past year or so, it's begun to sprout in New England—of all places—in the form of open-air festivals. Two festivals have already been held in Newport, Rhode Island. Another series of concerts is in progress right now near Tanglewood, that august summer pasture of the Boston Symphony. And a month ago, Louis Armstrong played for two nights in Ipswich, Mass., to a cautious tremble of old Bostonians.

"To date, the two Newport Fes-

Continued On Page 6-A

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

AUG 20 1955

Garage Doors Stabilize Music At Tanglewood

INCREASING popularity of programs in Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall presented a problem which the officials solved a few years ago by installing standard, overhead-type garage doors across the front.

When built, the concert hall, which seats 1,200, was closed at the terrace entrance, with regulation-size doors at the head of each aisle. Increasing numbers of patrons so greatly exceeded the capacity of the hall, that hundreds began sitting outside on the grass during programs.

This was far from an ideal arrangement for music-lovers. So in 1949 the entire front of the hall was taken out, and replaced by the present bank of nine, smart-looking, aluminum overhead doors exactly like those used in thousands of home garages.

These doors slide up and down readily, afford a full view of the stage and permit free flow of the music to listeners on the lawn.

Back Bay Ledger &
Beacon Hill Times
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 10,000 Free
AUG 18 1955

Boston Symphony Closes Season In Berkshires

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, its music director Charles Munch conducting, closed the 18th Berkshire Festival, the 16th since the Boston Symphony participated at Tanglewood in the hills of Western Massachusetts, on Sunday afternoon.

Despite high winds and torrential rains, by-products of Hurricane Carol, which cut the

Continued on Page Four

...DAY, AUGUST 18, 1955

through August 14, the attendance at 24 Berkshire concerts has totalled 136,087, as compared with 135,775 in 1954. Attendance for the 15 concerts in previous summers has been: 1953 — 117,950; 1952 — 104,875; 1951 — 112,650; 1950 — 113,300. 1950 was the year of the late Serge Koussevitzky's last Tanglewood concerts after 25 years as music director of the orchestra; 1951 was the year that Charles Munch, who succeeded him, first conducted in the Berkshires.

INFORMATION OBSCURED

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 91,975

AUG 12 1955

MUSIC FESTIVAL 1955 CONCERTS NEARING CLOSE

Tonight Begins Final Week End of Events at Tanglewood

The final week-end of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at this summer's Berkshire Festival will begin tonight at 8.30, when Charles Munch will conduct a concert of French music in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. The program, slightly revised from that announced originally, will include the "Symphonie Fantastique" by Berlioz; "La Mer" by Debussy; and the Second Suite from Ravel's ballet "Daphnis and Chloe." Berlioz' "Symphonie Fantastique" was one of the outstanding features of last summer's festival, when Mr. Munch conducted all the major orchestral works of the composer in honor of the 150th anniversary of his birth. It is the only Berlioz composition included in this summer's Festival programs.

ADELE ADDISON

In the remaining concerts tomorrow night at 8.30 and Sunday afternoon at 2.30, Pierre Monteux and Charles Munch respectively will conduct. Mr. Monteux' Saturday evening program will include music by Wagner, Brahms, Debussy and Strauss; and on Sunday the 1955 Berkshire Festival will draw to a close with performances of Beethoven's Third "Leonore" Overture and Ninth Symphony conducted by Mr. Munch. Adele A... soprano; Catherine Akos, co... David Lloyd, tenor; and ... Gramm, bass; are the solois... the Festival Chorus, Berkshi... sic Center students augment ... that of the Springfield, Sym... Orchestra. Hugh Ross and John Krueger have trained the choristers.

Remaining tickets for these three concerts, as well as the open rehearsal tomorrow morning at 10 for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund, are now on sale at the Tanglewood box-office, and telephone reservations are accepted, Lenox 600. Admission for listening from the lawn will be on sale the day of each concert.

YELLOW RIPE
7 25
SQI

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,995

AUG 11 1955

Tanglewood Closes Season on Sunday

Boston Symphony Concludes 16th Berkshire Festival

Pierre Monteux Will Conduct Orchestra Saturday Night and Charles Munch Will Be on Podium in 1955 Farewell Sunday Afternoon in All-Beethoven Program.

The sixteenth summer of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, will conclude this week-end with performances Saturday night at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox.

Saturday evening's concert will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux, a guest conductor annually since 1952 and conductor of the Boston Symphony from 1919 to 1924. The concluding concert Sunday will find Mr. Munch on the podium.

Saturday night Mr. Monteux will lead the 104-piece Boston Symphony in Wagner's Overture to "The Flying Dutchman"; Brahms' Symphony No. 3, in F major; Debussy's Three Nocturnes; and for the first time at Tanglewood the suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" of Richard Strauss. The Debussy nocturne "Sirenes" will include participation by the feminine members of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Miss Iva Dee Hiatt, director of choral music at Smith College, Northampton. She is assistant to Hugh Ross in the Tanglewood student choral department.

Sunday's final concert will be the sixth ll-Bethoven program in the 12-concert Shed series, Mr. Munch's fifth summer program devoted to the works of that composer. It includes the Overture "Leonore," No. 3, and the Symphony No. 9, in D minor, with Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass, as soloists. The first three are former members of the Berkshire Music Center. The enlarged chorus comprises the Festival Chorus of Tanglewood students and a chorus of 50 voices of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra, trained by Hugh Ross and John Krueger, director of the Youngstown, Ohio, Philharmonic and Chorus.

If attendance figures of last summer, when 21,650 persons attended the final two concerts, can be considered a gauge, and if fair weather prevails for the more than 12,000 persons who plan to hear the music on the spacious Tanglewood lawns outside the Music Shed, again all record will be shattered for the third consecutive year in this eighteenth summer of symphonic music in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the sixteenth since the Boston Symphony participated.

The seasonal activities of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood also conclude this week-end. The music school has presented some 40 concerts and demonstrations of its orchestra, chamber music, chorus, opera, composition division and amateur study group departments in this, its thirteenth six-week session.

At Saturday's final concert by the student symphony orchestra in the Music Shed at 3:00 p. m., Ralph Berkowitz, Dean of the B. M. C., will announce scholarships and prize awards. Sunday at 10:00 a. m., in the Chamber Music Hall, is the final program of chamber music by students of the school's Department I (orchestra). These two events are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who may attend through voluntary contributions to the school.

TULSA, OKLAHOMA
EAGLE
AUGUST 18, 1955

Music Critic Says Jazz Is Becoming Respectable in USA

Whitney Balliett, music critic for the New Yorker magazine and the Saturday Review of Literature had this to say during his visit to CBS Radio's "Disk Derby" as host Fred Robbins' "Honor Roll Guest."

"At the ripe old age of seventy, jazz is suddenly becoming as respectable as church. For ten years it's been filling the Carnegie Halls of the nation. For at least five years it's been taught in college. And in the past year or so, it's begun to sprout in New England—of all places—in the form of open-air festivals. Two festivals have already been held in Newport, Rhode Island. Another series of concerts is in progress right now near Tanglewood, that august summer pasture of the Boston Symphony. And a month ago, Louis Armstrong played for two nights in Ipswich, Mass., to a cautious tremble of old Bostonians.

"To date, the two Newport Fes-

Continued On Page 6-A

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

AUG 20 1955

Garage Doors Stabilize Music At Tanglewood

INCREASING popularity of programs in Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall presented a problem which the officials solved a few years ago by installing standard, overhead-type garage doors across the front.

When built, the concert hall, which seats 1,200, was closed at the terrace entrance, with regulation-size doors at the head of each aisle. Increasing numbers of patrons so greatly exceeded the capacity of the hall, that hundreds began sitting outside on the grass during programs.

This was far from an ideal arrangement for music-lovers. So in 1949 the entire front of the hall was taken out, and replaced by the present bank of nine, smart-looking, aluminum overhead doors exactly like those used in thousands of home garages.

These doors slide up and down readily, afford a full view of the stage and permit free flow of the music to listeners on the lawn.

...AUGUST 18, 1955

Boston Symphony

Continued from Page One

final week's crowds to one-third of expectations, attendance for the 24 concerts of the season matched 1954's all-time high. Simultaneous with the close of the festival, the Berkshire Music Center, the only school of music in the world maintained by an orchestra, dispersed its 405 students as its 13th six-week session ended.

In six weeks from July 6 through August 14, the attendance at 24 Berkshire concerts has totalled 136,087, as compared with 135,775 in 1954. Attendance for the 15 concerts in previous summers has been: 1953 — 117,950; 1952 — 104,875; 1951 — 112,650; 1950 — 113,300. 1950 was the year of the late Serge Koussevitzky's last Tanglewood concerts after 25 years as music director of the orchestra; 1951 was the year that Charles Munch, who succeeded him, first conducted in the Berkshires.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

AUG 16 1955

Manos

NEAR EXHAUSTION, Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, sits on a chair in his dressing room, after completing the 1955 series of concerts at Tanglewood Sunday, when he directed the 104-piece BSO and the Festival chorus in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Dripping with perspiration following the performance, the conductor remained alone for a few minutes before greeting close friends who went backstage to offer their congratulations for the concert which attracted 9,750 persons.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 222,157

AUG 21 1955

Berkshire Awards t: Musicians Under 30

Seven scholarship awards, including tuition scholarships and cash prizes marked the closing of the Berkshire Music Center's 1955 season in Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass. Winners, all under 30, were chosen from among the more than 400 enrolled this summer from 38 states and 18 foreign countries. Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the music center, presented prizes. On the basis of conspicuous talent, general cooperation and promise of an outstanding career, the Gregor Piatigorsky prize was given to Student Cellist Alice Q. Ober, 23, of Pasadena, Calif. The High Fidelity Magazine Scholarship (first time award) went to Peyton Higgison, 28, of Mobile, Ala., now living in New York City while a student in Juilliard School of Music and Mannes College of Music. Higgison is a vocalist.

The Serge Koussevitzky Composition Prize given by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation in honor of the late conductor of the Boston Symphony, for a work composed in "Tanglewood" this season, went to Edward Jay Miller, 25, of Miami Beach, Fla., who received his Master's degree in music in June from Hartt College, Hartford, Conn. His prize-winning work was "Piece for Pianoforte," performed in a Composers' Forum in Tanglewood recently.

The Samuel Wechsler Commission, gift of a former Tanglewood pupil, goes to Jacob Dr k-man, New York City, who st ed in Berkshire Center tor three seasons and who now s a teaching fellow in Juilliard, New York. He is commissioned to write a piece for solo violin with chamber group to be performed in Tanglewood in 1956.

There was initiated this year, through friendly interest of the Industrial Buildings Corporation of Chicopee, Mass., an annual prize to a student composer, in memory of Raphael Sagalyn. This year's winner is Salvatore Martirano, 28, of New Rochelle. His prize-winning work "Contrasto," played during a student concert, was conducted by Seymour Lipkin. This summer, Martirano studied with Dr. Roger Sessions in "Tanglewood." Recently returned from Florence, Italy, where he studied on a Fulbright Award with Luigi Dallapiccola, Martirano has a bachelor's degree from Oberlin College, O., and a Master of Music degree from Eastman School of Music.

Student Horn Players Barth Bennett, 23, of Miami, Fla., and Richard A. Fiske, 21, of Upton, Mass., are recipients of scholarships cancelling a student's indebtedness to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. In addition, 14 pupils attended the 1955 Music School session on scholarships awarded at the beginning of the 13th session in July.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
POST STANDARD
Circ. D. 89,399 - S. 101,254

AUG 21 1955

Overtones

Berkshire Music School Future Solidly Assured

By WILLIAM FLEMING

Last Sunday with the heroic strains of Beethoven's Choral Symphony ringing in the open air of the Berkshires, the 13th annual Tanglewood Festival at Lenox, Mass., came to a close.

William Fleming

Attending the sessions of the Berkshire Music Center, the only school in the world sponsored by a major symphony orchestra, were some 405 students who gathered from 38 states and 18 foreign countries. This total represents a gain of 30 odd over last year. Solid support for the school's immediate future is assured through a five-year series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation. During this period the fund will donate sums matching equally the money raised from other sources. The school also benefits from individual donors as well as from scholarships established by RCA Victor and other corporations.

Fare Traditional

While the concert fare this summer was mainly of the traditional Bach-Beethoven-Brahms type, the opera workshop managed to get in a little contemporary variety. The group staged a trio of modern one-act operas by composers with Tanglewood associations. Boris Blacher's "Romeo and Juliet," a 50-minute compressed version of Shakespeare's classic, was the first major production of the season. Blacher, director of Berlin's Hochschule fuer Musik, taught on the faculty of Tanglewood this summer. "Ariana Abandoned," a humorous opus by Darius Milhaud and "Comedy on the Bridge" by Bohuslav Martinu completed this summer's operatic novelties.

The Boston Symphony now looks forward to its 75th anniversary season during which it will feature the premieres of 15 specially commissioned new works by the most eminent contemporary composers. The country at large will hear most of them on the regular Saturday night radio broadcasts over NBC. The orchestra plans to participate in the 1956 Edinburgh Festival and has indicated its receptivity to an invitation to tour the Soviet Union. If this comes off, it will be the first American orchestra ever to play in Russia.

Reassuring Response

Meanwhile, the response to the Empire State Music Festival, New York's challenge to Tanglewood, has been so reassuring that it seems destined for a permanent place in the summer scheme of things.

Built on a mountainside farm on a pine and hemlock timbered slope of the Shawangunk range in the Catskills near Ellenville (Ulster County), the heart of the Rip Van Winkle country, the project is estimated to cost $300,000. In addition to a 2,000 seat tent theater, there will be room for upwards of 4,000 more on benches and chairs around the tent. Ground had to be leveled for new roads leading into the festival site and for a parking area to hold some 2,000 automobiles. The stage, tent and grounds were designed by Frederick Kiesler, noted architect from the Vienna Opera. It is hoped by the founders that a permanent amphitheater and stage will be soon constructed as a shrine to music in the Empire State.

Opera Series

One of the founders is John Brownlee, Metropolitan Opera baritone, who is producing the weekly opera series. Sticking this year to the tried-and-true reperatory, Brownlee explained that future seasons will hear less-frequently heard works. Jose Limon and his Spanish dancers are appearing this year, and the dance is expected to increase in importance in coming seasons. seasons. The Toscanini-trained Symphony of the Air is currently providing the orchestral fare.

Eduard van Beinum, the distinguished Dutch conductor who inaugurated the summer symphony concerts at Ellenville, has just been offered the baton of the Los Angeles Symphony. At 55, the leader of Amsterdam's Concertgebouw Orchestra is one of the top European conductors. Van Beinum, who toured with his own orchestra last fall and appeared in the Hollywood Bowl this summer, has six months in which to make his decision. The announcement probably will come when he returns to Los Angeles to conduct four concerts next January. The post is being vacated by Alfred Wallenstein who is resigning at the end of the coming season.

Chronicle (e)
WILLIMANTIC, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 5,350

AUG 31 1955

WORLD OF MUSIC

NEW YORK — (UP) — The Philadelphia Orchestra, now touring Europe, will play at least one American composition in each of the 18 cities on its itinerary.

The American composers represented were Bloch, Barber, Dello, Joio, Hanson, Harl McDonald, Thomson and Yardumian.

The European tour is the first of a major American symphony orchestra. But the New York Philharmonic - Symphony is going to tour Europe in the fall.

The Rockefeller Foundation has agreed to match, dollar-for-dollar, whatever funds the Boston Symphony raises for the support of its Berkshire Music Center, which is the orchestra's summer school of music.

The grant extends for five years, and could total $125,000 since the orchestra usually raises $25,000 annually. The foundation helped the orchestra establish the school in 19-

Kuryer Codzienny (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,670

AUG 26 1955

ZMIANY W BOSTOŃSKIEJ SYMPHONII

—o—

Boston. Mass. — Ostatnio Symphony Orchestra pożegna la w Tangelwood ,— sześciu swoich członków, którzy 14 sierpnia, a zatym z zamknięciem Berkshire Festival, przeszli na emerytturę.

W miejsce ustępujących Boston Symphony zaangażowało nowych, a wśród nich dwóch Polaków - Amerykan, mianowicie zostali zaangażowani p. Richard A. Kapuściński z Cincinati (cellista), oraz N. Bielski z Queens N.Y. (skrzypek).

Pozatym ogłoszono, że parę tygodni temu Boston Symphony Orchestra otrzymała od Fundacji Rockenfellera donację $125,000 na stypendia muzyczne dla tych, którzy studiują w Ośrodku Muzycznym w Berkshire Music Center, Lenox.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

AUG 16 1955

Camera Records Summer Season Delights of the Berkshires

SOFTLY, SOFTLY—Pierre Monteux, 80-year-old famed French conductor, calls for pianissimo passage from Boston Symphony orchestra as he appears as one of its guest conductors during 1955 Berkshire festival season at Tanglewood, Lenox, that ended Sunday.

GUIDES STUDENT MUSICIANS—Seymour Lipkin, noted concert pianist who served on staff of orchestra and conducting department at Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood this season, rehearses student orchestra of 100 which presented six concerts before more than 20,000 hearers.

MAESTRO ON THE PODIUM—Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra and director of the Berkshire Music center, gestures commandingly as he rehearses the Boston organization in one of the Beethoven works that [illegible] 1955 Festival concerts.

NEW YORKER
NEW YORK, N. Y.
AUG 20/55

AUG 20 1955

MUSICAL EVENTS

Tanglewood

I MUST confess to a slight feeling of disappointment over the fact that this year's Berkshire Festival, at Tanglewood, has taken a very conservative course, devoting itself largely to very familiar works by Ludwig van Beethoven. The weekend before last, however, enticed by a group of programs of more than conventional interest, I made my way there, and was rewarded by some fine performances of terribly well-known items and by a few things that were decidedly out of the ordinary. At the conclusion of my short safari, it had been proved again to my satisfaction—if it needed proving—that Ludwig van Beethoven was, after all, a very great composer; that the Boston Symphony is, after all, a magnificent ensemble; that Charles Munch, the reigning conductor at Tanglewood, is, after all, a fastidious and sometimes quite inspired artist; and that Tanglewood itself is an extremely pleasant place to listen to music in. The throngs of people who gathered on the lawns with box lunches and crowded the interior of the Shed for every concert seemed to have no reservations whatever and to be enjoying themselves hugely. They sat with rapt and eager attention on Sunday afternoon while Mr. Munch conducted the Fifth and Eighth Symphonies and collaborated with Eugene Istomin in a performance of the Fourth Piano Concerto. Mr. Munch's musical taste was as impeccable as usual, and the Fifth Symphony in particular rose to some quite effective climaxes under his baton. A violent electrical storm outside the Shed interfered somewhat with my ability to appraise Mr. Istomin's playing of the piano part in the concerto, but he seemed at least to be carrying out his duties with vigor and accuracy.

The other programs that I heard were somewhat more adventurous. On Friday evening, Leonard Bernstein undertook the formidable task of conducting the Missa Solemnis, which, while it is not by any means my favorite among Beethoven's larger compositions, is a work whose gruff, craggy intricacies, awkward vocal hurdles, and occasional ffer a sub-ers of even the whole, allenge, I e ringing al Chorus,

hearsed to e by Hugh ity, as well bly the sotiated their minimum
Bernstein
more dy-ns; in the e Sanctus,
tion of the s the over-and archi-ing, in my one, and
I have reoncert sea-

Ir. Munch
"Fidelio,"
tal forces,
s again and aw, David
Mac Morid Arthur the role of deed, and ork of the l quality—have rare-mances of and things
's were not t by Miss and lovely conducting inctory.
ntire week-
reached in s "Götter-owed the Here Mr.
, as I had Wagnerian
he seemed the playing of passion ncountered
ulous taste,
which he is ething had woodland es of Wag-
thundered dness. Miss usic allotted ccasion with the purely e not heard
f the great

Miss Harshaw
nt declamation
Scene, the audi-
y of shouts and say that only a critical decorum
ding a couple of

e of my visit to remière of a new Rope," by the
Louis Mennini,
Monday evening
e Opera Depart-
Music Center in ll, a smaller au-
e performances.
slight and un-
Mozart called a composition,
grace but which produced that I
nmenting on it.
, was done with proved to be an ual and musical
ose mainly from f dramatic con-
atic composition,
s and technically ess in setting the o music—someommon in con-
pera. Its faults
retto, which was
O'Neill's lesser
as, and involved
markably unin-
ers whose lives
inly with petty
f it all was evi-
t pay, and it was gly enough. But to provide Mr.
affirmative emo-
such flights of bviously capable
was reminded day operas suf-
ibrettos as from ne of the most could be per-pera composers
o provide them
ramatic mate-
t. In any case, ini latches on lay next time,
espectable gifts.

ROP SARGEANT

One cannot resist comparing the Brevard festival to that of the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, operated on a similar principle of a music school with week-end concertizing. Tanglewood of course has the advantage of accessibility to the big concert-going audiences of New York and Boston. And the Brevard forces do not sound like the Boston Symphony Orchestra—indeed, what other orchestra does? On the other hand, it is a disciplined and well-trained group, which last weekend gave a good account of itself under its energetic founder-conductor.

What Mr. Pfohl needs more than anything else is that indispensable ingredient of a summer music festival—a glamorous setting.

Catholic News - August - 1955
of New York

At Berkshire Music Festival

Among the 406 students who come from 48 states and 11 foreign countries to study music at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., under Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, is Father Daniel James Harris of St. Bernard's Abbey, St. Bernard, Alabama. Father Harris came to Tanglewood to join the study group, an amateur group devoted to the mere absorption of music and lectures. When auditioning, however, he was found to be so proficient on the violin that he was asked to join the Music Centers Orchestra for the duration of the semester, and he was offered a scholarship which he refused so that it may be given to another more needy student. Hugh Ross, director of the Glee Club at Marymount, Tarrytown, is in charge of choral music at the Berkshire Music Center.

Tanglewood Center

Aaron Copland, who has been visiting composer for a Peabody college contemporary music symposium, and guest composer of the Nashville Symphony, is spending the summer in Europe. He has taught and been assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Mass., every summer since the school was founded in 1940. Boris Blacher, noted German composer, and Roger Sessions, the distinguished American composer, are teaching composition there this summer.

Boris Goldovsky, who has appeared at Ward Belmont in piano lecture-recital, and who is widely known for his "Opera News on the Air" features at Metropolitan Opera broadcast intermission time, is again in charge of the Tanglewood opera department.

Thor Johnson, who is much admired here as conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony, was guest conductor for one of the chamber orchestra concerts in the Tanglewood Theater during July; and soloists for the concerts include these artists who have appeared in Nashville: Jennie Tourel (Community Concerts), Isaac Stern (Nashville Symphony), Rudolf Serkin (Community Concerts); Gregor Piatigorsky (Community Concerts and Nashville Symphony); Eugene Istomin (Ward Belmont, Community Concerts, Nashville Symphony).

✦ ✦ ✦

NEW YORKER
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Aug 20/55
AUG 20 1955

MUSICAL EVENTS

Tanglewood

I MUST confess to a slight feeling of disappointment over the fact that this year's Berkshire Festival, at Tanglewood, has taken a very conservative course, devoting itself largely to very familiar works by Ludwig van Beethoven. The weekend before last, however, enticed by a group of programs of more than conventional interest, I made my way there, and was rewarded by some fine performances of terribly well-known items and by a few things that were decidedly out of the ordinary. At the conclusion of my short safari, it had been proved again to my satisfaction—if it needed proving—that Ludwig van Beethoven was, after all, a very great composer; that the Boston Symphony is, after all, a magnificent ensemble; that Charles Munch, the reigning conductor at Tanglewood, is, after all, a fastidious and sometimes quite inspired artist; and that Tanglewood itself is an extremely pleasant place to listen to music in. The throngs of people who gathered on the lawns with box lunches and crowded the interior of the Shed for every concert seemed to have no reservations whatever and to be enjoying themselves hugely. They sat with rapt and eager attention on Sunday afternoon while Mr. Munch conducted the Fifth and Eighth Symphonies and collaborated with Eugene Istomin in a performance of the Fourth Piano Concerto. Mr. Munch's musical taste was as impeccable as usual, and the Fifth Symphony in particular rose to some quite effective climaxes under his baton. A violent electrical storm outside the Shed interfered somewhat with my ability to appraise Mr. Istomin's playing of the piano part in the concerto, but he seemed at least to be carrying out his duties with vigor and accuracy.

The other programs that I heard were somewhat more adventurous. On Friday evening, Leonard Bernstein undertook the formidable task of conducting the Missa Solemnis, which, while it is not by any means my favorite among Beethoven's larger compositions, is a work whose gruff, craggy intricacies, awkward vocal hurdles, and occasional

—OVER→

ffer a sub-ers of even the whole, allenge, I e ringing al Chorus, hearsed to e by Hugh ity, as well bly the soiated their minimum
Bernstein
more dy-ns; in the e Sanctus,
tion of the s the over-and arching, in my one, and have reoncert sea-

r. Munch
"Fidelio,"
tal forces,
again and aw, David Mac Mor-
d Arthur the role of deed, and ork of the quality—have rare-mances of and things
s were not t by Miss and lovely conducting nctory.
ntire week-
reached in s "Götter-
owed the
Here Mr.
, as I had Wagnerian
he seemed the playing of passion ncountered
ulous taste,
which he is ething had woodland es of Wagthundered dness. Miss usic allotted casion with the purely e not heard
f the great

Miss Harshaw
nt declamation
Scene, the audi-
y of shouts and say that only a critical decorum
ding a couple of

of my visit to remière of a new Rope," by the
Louis Mennini,
Monday evening
e Opera Depart-
Music Center in l, a smaller au-
e performances.
slight and un-
Mozart called
a composition,
grace but which produced that I
nmenting on it.
, was done with proved to be an ual and musical
ose mainly from f dramatic con-
atic composition,
s and technically ess in setting the o music—someommon in con-
pera. Its faults
retto, which was
O'Neill's lesser
as, and involved
markably unin-
ers whose lives
nly with petty it all was evi-
t pay, and it was gly enough. But
to provide Mr.
affirmative emo-
such flights of bviously capable
was reminded day operas suf-
ibrettos as from ne of the most could be per-pera composers
o provide them
ramatic mate-
t. In any case, nini latches on lay next time,
spectable gifts.

ROP SARGEANT

One cannot resist comparing the Brevard festival to that of the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, operated on a similar principle of a music school with week-end concertizing. Tanglewood of course has the advantage of accessibility to the big concert-going audiences of New York and Boston. And the Brevard forces do not sound like the Boston Symphony Orchestra—indeed, what other orchestra does? On the other hand, it is a disciplined and well-trained group, which last weekend gave a good account of itself under its energetic founder-conductor.

What Mr. Pfohl needs more than anything else is that indispensable ingredient of a summer music festival—a glamorous setting.

Catholic News - August - 19-55
of New York

At Berkshire Music Festival

Among the 406 students who come from 48 states and 11 foreign countries to study music at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., under Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, is Father Daniel James Harris of St. Bernard's Abbey, St. Bernard, Alabama. Father Harris came to Tanglewood to join the study group, an amateur group devoted to the mere absorption of music and lectures. When auditioning, however, he was found to be so proficient on the violin that he was asked to join the Music Centers Orchestra for the duration of the semester, and he was offered a scholarship which he refused so that it may be given to another more needy student. Hugh Ross, director of the Glee Club at Marymount, Tarrytown, is in charge of choral music at the Berkshire Music Center.

Tanglewood Center

Aaron Copland, who has been visiting composer for a Peabody college contemporary music symposium, and guest composer of the Nashville Symphony, is spending the summer in Europe. He has taught and been assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Mass., every summer since the school was founded in 1940. Boris Blacher, noted German composer, and Roger Sessions, the distinguished American composer, are teaching composition there this summer.

Boris Goldovsky, who has appeared at Ward Belmont in piano lecture-recital, and who is widely known for his "Opera News on the Air" features at Metropolitan Opera broadcast intermission time, is again in charge of the Tanglewood opera department.

Thor Johnson, who is much admired here as conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony, was guest conductor for one of the chamber orchestra concerts in the Tanglewood Theater during July; and soloists for the concerts include these artists who have appeared in Nashville: Jennie Tourel (Community Concerts), Isaac Stern (Nashville Symphony), Rudolf Serkin (Community Concerts); Gregor Piatigorsky (Community Concerts and Nashville Symphony); Eugene Istomin (Ward Belmont, Community Concerts, Nashville Symphony).

+ + +

NEW YORKER
NEW YORK, N. Y.
AUG 20/55
AUG 20 1955

Los Ange bound
From pool to Polo Patio from lobby shops to from Coffee Bar to C from gardens to gara from maids to Maitre
the Beverly Hills offe utmost in relaxation, service, cuisine.
BEVERLY HILLS
Hernando Courtright, Pr
BEVERLY HILLS • CA

A PERFECT
OCEAN FRON PLAYGROUND
A new family vacation spot at Fire Is large safe yacht harbor; id a vacation and week-end home.
Building sites within a block waterfront, from $300 per lot; bayfront and right on the beach at $800. Minimum 3 lots.
Color brochure and more informat for the asking. Phone or write FIRE ISLAND PI
On the Atlantic Ocean
125 E. 23rd Street, New York 10
Phone GRamercy 3-6800

Cherio RESTAURANT
LUNCHEON-DINNER TILL 11 P. M.
OPEN SUNDAYS 6 P. M.
46 E. 50TH ST. • MU 8-

moments of exalted beauty offer a substantial challenge to the powers of even the greatest conductors. On the whole, Mr. Bernstein met this challenge, I thought, quite well. The ringing choruses, sung by the Festival Chorus, which had obviously been rehearsed to a point of admirable discipline by Hugh Ross, emerged with great clarity, as well as force. The soloists—notably the soprano Adele Addison—negotiated their difficult roles with grace and a minimum of shouting. I thought Mr. Bernstein was at his best in the work's more dynamic and propulsive sections; in the long, serene melodies of the Sanctus, which to me is the finest portion of the composition, he seemed to miss the overall sweep of Beethoven's grand architectural line. Still, the reading, in my opinion, was a distinguished one, and more satisfying than some I have recently heard during winter concert seasons.

On Saturday evening, Mr. Munch performed the second act of "Fidelio," with appropriately regimental forces, including the Festival Chorus again and the singers Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd, Malcolm Bernstein, Mac Morgan, Christina Cardillo, and Arthur Schoep. Miss Harshaw sang the role of Leonore very beautifully indeed, and the accurate and incisive work of the chorus was of a very special quality—eloquent to a degree that I have rarely heard matched in performances of this work. Elsewhere, I found things a bit spotty. The male singers were not quite up to the standard set by Miss Harshaw's authoritative style and lovely tone, and Mr. Munch's conducting seemed at times rather perfunctory.

The high point of the entire weekend, to my mind, was reached in the excerpts from Wagner's "Götterdämmerung," which followed the "Fidelio" performance. Here Mr. Munch really surprised me, as I had never thought of him as a Wagnerian by temperament. Suddenly, he seemed to come to life and to infuse the playing of the orchestra with a sort of passion and fire that I had rarely encountered in his conducting. The scrupulous taste, lucidity, and elegance for which he is noted were all there, but something had been added. The haunting woodland poetry and the noble climaxes of Wagner's scoring gleamed and thundered with altogether unusual vividness. Miss Harshaw, who sang the music allotted to Brünnhilde, rose to the occasion with a performance that, from the purely vocal point of view, I have not heard surpassed since the days of the great

Miss Harshaw
nt declamation
Scene, the audi-
y of shouts and say that only a critical decorum
ding a couple of

of my visit to remière of a new Rope," by the
Louis Mennini,
Monday evening
e Opera Depart-
Music Center in l, a smaller au-
e performances.
slight and un-
Mozart called
a composition,
grace but which roduced that I
nmenting on it.
, was done with proved to be an ual and musical
ose mainly from f dramatic con-
atic composition,
s and technically ess in setting the o music—someommon in con-
pera. Its faults
retto, which was
O'Neill's lesser
as, and involved
markably unin-
ers whose lives
inly with petty
f it all was evi-
t pay, and it was gly enough. But
to provide Mr.
affirmative emo-
such flights of bviously capable
was reminded day operas suf-
ibrettos as from ne of the most could be per-pera composers
o provide them
ramatic mate-
t. In any case, hini latches on lay next time,
spectable gifts.
ROP SARGEANT

—OVER—

One cannot resist comparing the Brevard festival to that of the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, operated on a similar principle of a music school with week-end concertizing. Tanglewood of course has the advantage of accessibility to the big concert-going audiences of New York and Boston. And the Brevard forces do not sound like the Boston Symphony Orchestra—indeed, what other orchestra does? On the other hand, it is a disciplined and well-trained group, which last weekend gave a good account of itself under its energetic founder-conductor.

What Mr. Pfohl needs more than anything else is that indispensable ingredient of a summer music festival—a glamorous setting.

Catholic News - August - 19-55
of New York

At Berkshire Music Festival

Among the 406 students who come from 48 states and 11 foreign countries to study music at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., under Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, is Father Daniel James Harris of St. Bernard's Abbey, St. Bernard, Alabama. Father Harris came to Tanglewood to join the study group, an amateur group devoted to the mere absorption of music and lectures. When auditioning, however, he was found to be so proficient on the violin that he was asked to join the Music Centers Orchestra for the duration of the semester, and he was offered a scholarship which he refused so that it may be given to another more needy student. Hugh Ross, director of the Glee Club at Marymount, Tarrytown, is in charge of choral music at the Berkshire Music Center.

Tanglewood Center

Aaron Copland, who has been visiting composer for a Peabody college contemporary music symposium, and guest composer of the Nashville Symphony, is spending the summer in Europe. He has taught and been assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Mass., every summer since the school was founded in 1940. Boris Blacher, noted German composer, and Roger Sessions, the distinguished American composer, are teaching composition there this summer.

Boris Goldovsky, who has appeared at Ward Belmont in piano lecture-recital, and who is widely known for his "Opera News on the Air" features at Metropolitan Opera broadcast intermission time, is again in charge of the Tanglewood opera department.

Thor Johnson, who is much admired here as conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony, was guest conductor for one of the chamber orchestra concerts in the Tanglewood Theater during July; and soloists for the concerts include these artists who have appeared in Nashville: Jennie Tourel (Community Concerts), Isaac Stern (Nashville Symphony), Rudolf Serkin (Community Concerts); Gregor Piatigorsky (Community Concerts and Nashville Symphony); Eugene Istomin (Ward Belmont, Community Concerts, Nashville Symphony).

✦ ✦ ✦

NEW YORKER
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Aug 20/55
AUG 20 1955

Kirsten Flagstad. As Miss Harshaw finished her magnificent declamation of the final Immolation Scene, the audience burst into a frenzy of shouts and handclaps, and I must say that only a long-ingrained habit of critical decorum prevented me from adding a couple of shouts myself.

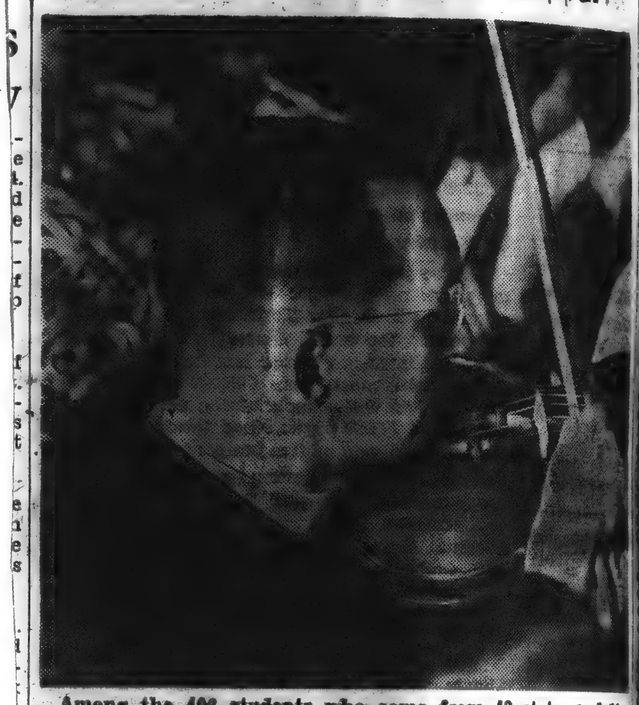
The final adventure of my visit to Tanglewood was the première of a new opera entitled "The Rope," by the American composer Louis Mennini, which took place on Monday evening and was presented by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center in the theatre-concert hall, a smaller auditorium used for stage performances. It was followed by a slight and unimportant operetta by Mozart called "Zaide," which, as a composition, has its points of musical grace but which was so amateurishly produced that I shall refrain from commenting on it. "The Rope," however, was done with considerable care, and proved to be an item of some intellectual and musical interest. Its virtues arose mainly from Mr. Mennini's sense of dramatic continuity, his style of operatic composition, which is both melodious and technically well-knit, and his deftness in setting the inflections of dialogue to music—something that is not too common in contemporary American opera. Its faults lay principally in its libretto, which was based on one of Eugene O'Neill's lesser and more parched dramas, and involved the doings of some remarkably uningratiating Down Easters whose lives seemed concerned mainly with petty larceny. The moral of it all was evidently that greed doesn't pay, and it was demonstrated convincingly enough. But the demonstration failed to provide Mr. Mennini with sufficient affirmative emotion on which to hang such flights of lyric inspiration as he is obviously capable of. In listening to it, I was reminded again that our present-day operas suffer as much from poor librettos as from poor scores, and that one of the most valuable services that could be performed for American opera composers might well be an effort to provide them with more suitable dramatic material than they usually get. In any case, I hope that Mr. Mennini latches on to a more rewarding play next time, for he is a composer of respectable gifts.

—WINTHROP SARGEANT

•

Catholic News - August - 19-55
of New York

At Berkshire Music Festival



Among the 406 students who come from 48 states and 11 foreign countries to study music at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., under Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, is Father Daniel James Harris of St. Bernard's Abbey, St. Bernard, Alabama. Father Harris came to Tanglewood to join the study group, an amateur group devoted to the mere absorption of music and lectures. When auditioning, however, he was found to be so proficient on the violin that he was asked to join the Music Centers Orchestra for the duration of the semester, and he was offered a scholarship which he refused so that it may be given to another more needy student. Hugh Ross, director of the Glee Club at Marymount, Tarrytown, is in charge of choral music at the Berkshire Music Center.

Tanglewood Center

Aaron Copland, who has been visiting composer for a Peabody college contemporary music symposium, and guest composer of the Nashville Symphony, is spending the summer in Europe. He has taught and been assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Mass., every summer since the school was founded in 1940. Boris Blacher, noted German composer, and Roger Sessions, the distinguished American composer, are teaching composition there this summer.

Boris Goldovsky, who has appeared at Ward Belmont in piano lecture-recital, and who is widely known for his "Opera News on the Air" features at Metropolitan Opera broadcast intermission time, is again in charge of the Tanglewood opera department.

Thor Johnson, who is much admired here as conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony, was guest conductor for one of the chamber orchestra concerts in the Tanglewood Theater during July; and soloists for the concerts include these artists who have appeared in Nashville: Jennie Tourel (Community Concerts), Isaac Stern (Nashville Symphony), Rudolf Serkin (Community Concerts); Gregor Piatigorsky (Community Concerts and Nashville Symphony); Eugene Istomin (Ward Belmont, Community Concerts, Nashville Symphony).

✦ ✦ ✦

One cannot resist comparing the Brevard festival to that of the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, operated on a similar principle of a music school with week-end concertizing. Tanglewood of course has the advantage of accessibility to the big concert-going audiences of New York and Boston. And the Brevard forces do not sound like the Boston Symphony Orchestra—indeed, what other orchestra does? On the other hand, it is a disciplined and well-trained group, which last weekend gave a good account of itself under its energetic founder-conductor.

What Mr. Pfohl needs more than anything else is that indispensable ingredient of a summer music festival—a glamorous setting.

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.

AUG 1955

Another Banner Season at Tanglewood

Tanglewood, paradise for music students, music lovers and music critics threw open its gates on July 6 with chamber music. On this occasion the Kroll String Quartet performed Beethoven Quartets, and on subsequent Wednesdays other forms of chamber music by Beethoven were performed by noted groups or soloists. The Chamber Music Orchestra consists of a reduced number of Boston Symphony Orchestra men. The first concert was conducted by Charles Munch, the second by Thor Johnson. We attended a hot and humid session on July 10 with Charles Munch leading the Chamber Symphony Orchestra, Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society in a fine performance of Bach's B Minor Mass. We think all soloists were excellent, particularly soprano Adele Addison distinguished herself. Equally excellent were the first-chair-men who participated in the solo parts. Mr. Munch took several cuts, notably omitting sections 3, 6, 14 and 19. The work was at all times well paced. However, at the end of the performance, Munch looked like he had swam through the Stockbridge Bowl — something we attribute to the intense concentration and intense (90%) humidity and (89 degree) heat. A capacity audience voiced enthusiastic approval.

During the second week, major Chamber Orchestra performances were conducted by Leonard Bernstein, Charles Munch and Hugh Ross. On July 15, Leonard Bernstein, one of the noted alumnus of the school, conducted an all-Mozart program on which he doubled as soloist in the G major piano concerto. Also on the program was the Linz Symphony No. 36, and several arias sung by Jennie Tourel. Vivaldi, Boccherini and more Vivaldi were performed by Charles Munch on July 16. The program included the Concerto Grosso in D minor, and the Concerto Grosso in B minor. The Boccherini Concerto for cello, persuasively played by Samuel Mayes, concluded the first half of the program. The second half, conducted by Hugh Ross, consisted of the Gloria by Vivaldi. Sara Mae Endich, soprano, and Sadie McCollum, with the Festival Chorus assisting. Mr. Ross got a responsive reading from a relatively unequalized group. The Sunday afternoon program, conducted by Charles Munch, and featuring works by Rameau, Ravel, Faure, Milhaud and the Symphony No. 4 by Honegger gave ample evidence of the conductor's concern and excellence in French music. Here more than anywhere else this season, he achieved the apex of exuberance without losing attention to the minutest detail.

The following week the complete Boston Symphony Orchestra assembled in the Music Shed. This Shed-season is going to be a Beethoven cycle and Friday evening started off with the Coriolanus overture, Symphony No. 7 and Violin Concerto played by Isaac Stern. Sunday afternoon Symphonies 1, 4 and 6 were performed. That's a lot of Beethoven under the baton of Charles Munch, and not all of it was very good. We were disappointed in the tempi, the sound of the winds and a general feeling that the performances were underrehearsed. One left the Sixth Symphony with the unfortunate feeling that the programmatic notations of "Dorfmusikanten" might be applicable to these two performances of the great Boston group. Certainly Isaac Stern's playing was on the highest levels, and it deserved more fluent support. Pierre Monteux conducted the Saturday evening concert, and it included music by Bach, Beethoven (Symphony No. 2) Tod und Verklarung by Strauss and Sessions Orchestral Suite from the Black Masters. Certainly Monteux' leadership of the same group was more exciting, better rehearsed and more vivid. The Sessions work, written in 1923, is well phrased incidental music to a play by Andreyeff.—WALTER F. LOEB

1955 Festival Tanglewood's Tops Record

The 18th Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with the Boston Symphony Orchestra led by Charles Munch, closed last Sunday with the performance of Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3 and the Ninth Symphony. In spite of torrential rains of Hurricane Connie, 9,750 persons attended the final concert.

The Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center trained by Hugh Ross and John Kruegar, with soloists, Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd and Donald Gremm, participated in the choral parts of the Beethoven symphony.

Attendance during the six weeks of the festival this year reached an all-time high of 136,087.

Total receipts of six chamber music concerts by soloists and ensembles were $14.724 as compared with $13.007 in 1954. Receipts from the si xchamber music concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra totalled $41,312 this year, $32,-467.50 last year.

Special homage was paid to Beethoven b ythe 1955 Festival, with six of the 12 shed concerts being devoted to his works, as wel as al six chamber music concerts. All nine symphonies, two piano concerti, the violin concer-Solemnis, and Act II in concert form from Fidelio were performed.

The highlight of the Beethoven cycle from both the attendance point and audience reaction, was the evening of July 30, when Rudolf Serkin appeared for the first time at Tanglewood as soolist in the Emperor piano concerto and Charles Munch conducted the Eroica Symphony. The crowd, 15,624 was the highest ofr any single concert in four years.

NSAS CITY STAR, SUNDAY, AUGUST 28, 1955.

RAIN NO FESTIVAL BAR

THOUSANDS SHOW THEIR DEVOTION TO MUSIC AT TANGLEWOOD.

But Sun Rewards Their Patience, Breaking Through in Midst of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

BY JOSEPH KAYE.

New York, Aug. 27.—Audiences at the recent Tanglewood festival demonstrated their devotion to good music by sitting cheerfully in rains triggered by Hurricane Connie to hear the various concerts.

The big shed where the symphonic events are held is open on three sides and many who come to Tanglewood buy the cheaper tickets to sit on the lawn. The drenching downpours did not deter most of these devoted spirits and the final concert drew almost 10,000 people. As if in reward the sun broke through and good weather joined with Beethoven's Ninth symphony to make the day one of true jubilation.

Such enthusiasm on the part of listeners of serious music is a fine promise for the progress of the art in this country, and when committees in Kansas City and all over the American compass become discouraged over the difficulty of campaigning for orchestral or operatic funds, let them take heart. By and large things are okay.

Dirge for Taxpayers.

An unusual event of the closing festivities was the premiere of a "Lament for April 15," or a dirge for income tax day. It was written by a retired New York banker, Avery Claflin, also a musician. Claflin took as his text the instructions on the federal income tax forms and put the composition into a madrigal. The final words were: "After reading these instructions you should be able to prepare your return . . . unless you have complicated problems."

The choral piece was sung by the student chorus under the direction of Hugh Ross. The music is agreeable, but with such lyrics who could pay attention to the music?

Among the closing events was the annual open house at which students of all departments performed. A picnic was held on the lawns, the Boston Pops played, and waltzing was indulged in on the grass. Intermittent showers put a dent in this celebration but the people were there and seemed to enjoy themselves under umbrellas. Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Pops, directed a fine performance of "Davy Crockett."

The final programs were conducted by Charles Munch, director of the festival, Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein. Munch's conducting of the Ninth symphony and Monteux's of Brahms' Third symphony were the peaks. Eventually, however, someone will come right out and say that the melody of the Ode to Joy is banal. We may as well anticipate this presumptuous soul.

Despite the storm that handicapped closing events, the attendance this year was slightly larger than that of 1954, totaling 136,087. The previous year it was 135,775.

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.
AUG 1955

Another Banner Season at Tanglewood

Tanglewood, paradise for music students, music lovers and music critics threw open its gates on July 6 with chamber music. On this occasion the Kroll String Quartet performed Beethoven Quartets, and on subsequent Wednesdays other forms of chamber music by Beethoven were performed by noted groups or soloists. The Chamber Music Orchestra consists of a reduced number of Boston Symphony Orchestra men. The first concert was conducted by Charles Munch, the second by Thor Johnson. We attended a hot and humid session on July 10 with Charles Munch leading the Chamber Symphony Orchestra, Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society in a fine performance of Bach's B Minor Mass. We think all soloists were excellent, particularly soprano Adele Addison distinguished herself. Equally excellent were the first-chair-men who participated in the solo parts. Mr. Munch took several cuts, notably omitting sections 3, 6, 14 and 19. The work was at all times well paced. However, at the end of the performance, Munch looked like he had swam through the Stockbridge Bowl — something we attribute to the intense concentration and intense (90%) humidity and (89 degree) heat. A capacity audience voiced enthusiastic approval.

During the second week, major Chamber Orchestra performances were conducted by Leonard Bernstein, Charles Munch and Hugh Ross. On July 15, Leonard Bernstein, one of the noted alumnus of the school, conducted an all-Mozart program on which he doubled as soloist in the G major piano concerto. Also on the program was the Linz Symphony No. 36, and several arias sung by Jennie Tourel. Vivaldi, Boccherini and more Vivaldi were performed by Charles Munch on July 16. The program included the Concerto Grosso in D minor, and the Concerto Grosso in B minor. The Boccherini Concerto for cello, persuasively played by Samuel Mayes, concluded the first half of the program. The second half, conducted by Hugh Ross, consisted of the Gloria by Vivaldi. Sara Mae Endich, soprano, and Sadie McCollum, with the Festival Chorus assisting. Mr. Ross got a responsive reading from a relatively unequalized group. The Sunday afternoon program, conducted by Charles Munch, and featuring works by Rameau, Ravel, Faure, Milhaud and the Symphony No. 4 by Honegger gave ample evidence of the conductor's concern and excellence in French music. Here more than anywhere else this season, he achieved the apex of exuberance without losing attention to the minutest detail.

The following week the complete Boston Symphony Orchestra assembled in the Music Shed. This Shed-season is going to be a Beethoven cycle and Friday evening started off with the Coriolanus overture, Symphony No. 7 and Violin Concerto played by Isaac Stern. Sunday afternoon Symphonies 1, 4 and 6 were performed. That's a lot of Beethoven under the baton of Charles Munch, and not all of it was very good. We were disappointed in the tempi, the sound of the winds and a general feeling that the performances were underrehearsed. One left the Sixth Symphony with the unfortunate feeling that the programmatic notations of "Dorfmusikanten" might be applicable to these two performances of the great Boston group. Certainly Isaac Stern's playing was on the highest levels, and it deserved more fluent support. Pierre Monteux conducted the Saturday evening concert, and it included music by Bach, Beethoven (Symphony No. 2) Tod und Verklarung by Strauss and Sessions Orchestral Suite from the Black Masters. Certainly Monteux' leadership of the same group was more exciting, better rehearsed and more vivid. The Sessions work, written in 1923, is well phrased incidental music to a play by Andreyeff.—WALTER F. LOEB

1955 Festival Tanglewood's Tops Record

The 18th Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with the Boston Symphony Orchestra led by Charles Munch, closed last Sunday with the performance of Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3 and the Ninth Symphony. In spite of torrential rains of Hurricane Connie, 9,750 persons attended the final concert.

The Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center trained by Hugh Ross and John Kruegar, with soloists, Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd and Donald Gremm, participated in the choral parts of the Beethoven symphony.

Attendance during the six weeks of the festival this year reached an all-time high of 136,087.

Total receipts of six chamber music concerts by soloists and ensembles were $14.724 as compared with $13,007 in 1954. Receipts from the si xchamber music concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra totalled $41,312 this year, $32,-467.50 last year.

Special homage was paid to Beethoven b ythe 1955 Festival, with six of the 12 shed concerts being devoted to his works, as wel as al six chamber music concerts. All nine symphonies, two piano concerti, the violin concer-Solemnis, and Act II in concert form from Fidelio were performed.

The highlight of the Beethoven cycle from both the attendance point and audience reaction, was the evening of July 30, when Rudolf Serkin appeared for the first time at Tanglewood as soolist in the Emperor piano concerto and Charles Munch conducted the Eroica Symphony. The crowd, 15,624 was the highest ofr any single concert in four years.

NSAS CITY STAR, SUNDAY, AUGUST 28, 1955.

RAIN NO FESTIVAL BAR

THOUSANDS SHOW THEIR DEVOTION TO MUSIC AT TANGLEWOOD.

But Sun Rewards Their Patience, Breaking Through in Midst of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

By JOSEPH KAYE.

New York, Aug. 27.—Audiences at the recent Tanglewood festival demonstrated their devotion to good music by sitting cheerfully in rains triggered by Hurricane Connie to hear the various concerts.

The big shed where the symphonic events are held is open on three sides and many who come to Tanglewood buy the cheaper tickets to sit on the lawn. The drenching downpours did not deter most of these devoted spirits and the final concert drew almost 10,000 people. As if in reward the sun broke through and good weather joined with Beethoven's Ninth symphony to make the day one of true jubilation.

Such enthusiasm on the part of listeners of serious music is a fine promise for the progress of the art in this country, and when committees in Kansas City and all over the American compass become discouraged over the difficulty of campaigning for orchestral or operatic funds, let them take heart. By and large things are okay.

Dirge for Taxpayers.

An unusual event of the closing festivities was the premiere of a "Lament for April 15," or a dirge for income tax day. It was written by a retired New York banker, Avery Claflin, also a musician. Claflin took as his text the instructions on the federal income tax forms and put the composition into a madrigal. The final words were: "After reading these instructions you should be able to prepare your return . . . unless you have complicated problems."

The choral piece was sung by the student chorus under the direction of Hugh Ross. The music is agreeable, but with such lyrics who could pay attention to the music?

Among the closing events was the annual open house at which students of all departments performed. A picnic was held on the lawns, the Boston Pops played, and waltzing was indulged in on the grass. Intermittent showers put a dent in this celebration but the people were there and seemed to enjoy themselves under umbrellas. Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Pops, directed a fine performance of "Davy Crockett."

The final programs were conducted by Charles Munch, director of the festival, Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein. Munch's conducting of the Ninth symphony and Monteux's of Brahms' Third symphony were the peaks. Eventually, however, someone will come right out and say that the melody of the Ode to Joy is banal. We may as well anticipate this presumptuous soul.

Despite the storm that handicapped closing events, the attendance this year was slightly larger than that of 1954, totaling 136,087. The previous year it was 135,775.

Patsy Parr Proves She Can Sing, Too

Tanglewood, Aug. 19 — (Staff special)—Patricia Parr, 18-year-old Toronto pianist, has had a new experience as a member of the chorus singing under Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Leonard Bernstein.

Because of her concert with the Toronto Promenade Symphony, Patricia was able to attend only the last two weeks of study at the Birkshire Music Centre.

Even these were shortened through the fact that Patricia was ill during the last week.

"WONDERFUL EXPERIENCE"

"I missed all the best things, although what I did participate in was a wonderful experience for me," she said. "I only wish I had been here for the whole six weeks."

Patricia was one of three Toronto girls at the Berkshire Music Centre. The others were Edith Anne Dorsey of Forest Hill rd., and Catherine Akos.

Miss Akos, a contralto, was one of the soloists at the concluding concert of the festival when she sang under Charles Munch in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Edith Anne Dorsey, like Patricia Parr, is a pianist, a student of Mona Bates, however, she had more luck. She attended the Music Centre for the full six weeks.

BEETHOVEN SEASON

She too, gained a new experience when as a member of the student chorus she sang in the Missa Solemnis, Fidelio, and the Ninth Symphony, all by Beethoven. This has been a Beethoven season at the centre, this year.

PATRICIA PARR
Chorus member

Nineteen-year-old Edith Anne had never done much singing before. The recent graduate from Forest Hill Collegiate said that she was given "a new understanding of music at the centre. I began to realize what music and musicians really are, with the new associations I had with other people my own age with such similar interests."

Last Of Berkshire Concerts Has Attendance Cut By Rain

Muench Conducts Beethoven Symphony; Monteux Shows Versatility On Saturday

By JULIAN SEAMAN
Blade Music Editor

TANGLEWOOD, Mass., Aug. 15—A dampened audience, of reduced proportion, heard a Beethoven program by Charles Muench and the Boston Symphony Orchestra yesterday afternoon, terminating the 18th Berkshire Festival in the music shed.

A performance of the Beethoven "Choral" Symphony (Opus 125, D minor) concluded these festivities. Soloists were Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. The Messrs. Lloyd and Gramm are fairly widely known to the casual ear. The festival chorus had been prepared by Hugh Ross and Iva Dee Hiatti.

Mr. Muench began his ministrations with the legendary Overture "Leonore" No. 3, which has become almost a platitude in the annals of Beethoven.

Interpretation Capricious

His reading of the Ninth Symphony seemed to me capricious; the opening allegro dry and literal, devoid of dark mystery or heroic uproar. His disposition to crowd the world upon a pinhead produced a devastating effect in the Scherzo, often an interval of scrambled and reverberative noise. But he achieved a melting, golden beauty in the adagio, wherein the Boston strings and winds became miraculous.

Beethoven himself had some doubts as to the wisdom of a choral interlude in the last movement. Scholars seem agreed that had Beethoven been able to hear the final movement, much of murky and static singing for chorus and soloists might have been corrected. Mr. Muench maintained a creditable balance throughout these weighty proceedings, but again conceived "prestissimo" to mean hysteria at the very end.

Winds and persistent rains deterred a large segment of the customary crowd from a superb concert Saturday night. Pierre Monteux conducted the overture to Wagner's "Flying Dutchman," a singular but involuntary salute to the turbulent weather; the Brahms third symphony in E (Opus 90); the three orchestral nocturnes of Debussy, including "Sirenes" and its wordless chorus, and an orchestral suite derived from the score of Strauss, "Der Rosenkavalier," excerpts unconfined to the waltzes alone.

Rare Insight Shown

One facet of Mr. Monteux's conducting is worthy of remark. His Gallic precision and pristine song also are colored by a rare insight into Teutonic verities. He is one of the few French conductors of the world to whom Beethoven, Brahms, Bach and the whole category of German musical genius is as clear and eloquent as the music of his native heath.

And so the Brahms symphony emerged in flowing, songful ease, preserving at the same time its essential subtlety and the dark strength that is Brahms. One expects of a French conductor so little but suavity and surface gleam.

The Strauss music departed from the concert hall and became of the theater, though its flashes of humor and its glints of pathos remained as very human syllables. The performance made one long to hear Mr. Monteux do the whole opera.

Attendance this year, with a schedule of more concerts, exceeded the all-time record of last year. Some 136,087 have heard these concerts since mid-July.

The total last year was 135,775, for 24 concerts; in 1953, for 15 concerts, 117,950; in 1952, for 15 concerts, 104,875; in 1951, 112,650, for 15 concerts; in 1950, for 15 concerts under Serge Koussevitzky, 113,300. Koussevitzky died in June of 1951, just before the festival began.

Enrollment in the music school ran a trifle behind the average 400-odd this year. There were six Clevelanders, one each from Cincinnati, Columbus, Dayton, Springfield, Kenton, Maumee, Burton, Lima, Chagrin Falls and Delaware, O. The student from Maumee was Thomas Clymer, choral leader, of 710 Colwell Dr.

Seven scholarships and cash awards were made to students of the Berkshire Music Center on Saturday. There prizes are awarded annually to outstanding students of this summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Winners are from California, Alabama, Florida, New York City and Massachusetts. The Serge Koussevitzky Composition Prize of $250 goes this year to Edward Jay Miller, 25, of Miami Beach, Fla. His prize-winning "Piece for Pianoforte" was performed on a composers' forum here Friday afternoon.

The Berkshire Evening Eagle

Published every week-day afternoon except holidays by the EAGLE PUBLISHING COMPANY
33 Eagle Street, Pittsfield, Massachusetts

Editorials

Tanglewood Season Ends

Yesterday afternoon, to the appropriately climactic strains of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, another Tanglewood season drew to a close—and with it, another occasion to wonder at the miracle that a combination of high artistry and musical showmanship has wrought in our midst. For despite a drenching and hurricane-threatened week that kept attendance for the final concerts down to less than half of expectations—and despite a wave of cancellations that cost upward of $25,000 at the box office—the 1955 Festival once again set an all-time popularity record with a total attendance for the season of 136,087 persons. Surely, no better proof of Tanglewood's firm place as a cultural institution could be sought or offered.

Perhaps the most heartening aspect of Tanglewood's 1955 story, however, is told not in the total attendance figures, but rather in the subtotals that show the relative popularity of the various Festival activities. Attendance at the 12 big concerts in the main Shed this year was some 2,000 below the total for the corresponding 12 concerts of 1954—but this was more than offset by a marked increase in attendance at the chamber music concerts and at the student concerts sponsored by the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Total receipts of the Society this summer surpassed $35,000—an increase of approximately 60 per cent over 1954.

This is cause for eminent satisfaction on several scores. For one thing, the increasing audience for the less sensational and less publicized aspects of the Festival fare reflects a growing musical appreciation on the part of the public and a growing realization that the Shed concerts are not the most significant measure of Tanglewood's contribution to the music world. For another, the sharp increase in the Society of Friends membership gives a propitious start to the Rockefeller's five-year fund-matching program, which it is hoped will eventually make the Berkshire Music Center self-supporting. And finally, from a purely merchandizing viewpoint, the rising popularity of the chamber music and student concerts has the immense virtue of spreading the Tanglewood attendance, and consequently the volume of Berkshire tourist business, over the full six-week span of the Festival.

It should be added, however, that the success of the 1955 season is no evidence that Tanglewood may now rest on its laurels without fear of losing the lustre it has attained over the past two decades. That success inevitably breeds imitators is already evident in the thus far successful venture of Ellenville, N.Y., in the Catskills where a symphonic festival is in operation until Labor Day whose musical and physical pattern strikingly follows the early days of the Berkshire enterprise. In addition, this year marked the entry of music into the three-year-old Shakespearean Festival at Stratford, Ontario, while its counterpart in Stratford, Connecticut, expects to add musical side-dishes to its Elizabethan staple. Hence the need for cultural pioneering at Tanglewood—the need for supplementing the acknowledged pre-eminence of its performances with a willingness to experiment, perhaps in the direction of developing music indigenous to its New England setting and associations—is greater today than ever.

Music

18th Season at Tanglewood Ends With Magnificent Beethoven 9th

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE 18TH Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood ended yesterday afternoon with a thrilling finale of the Beethoven ninth symphony.

In a season in which there was concentration on the music of Beethoven but sufficient diversification to interest and satisfy a catholic audience, the Boston Symphony Orchestra distinguished itself under several conductors. Charles Munch, the musical director of the orchestra, led the closing concert of the season while Pierre Monteux was given the baton the previous Saturday evening.

* * *

WHEN TO PLAY music of paramount excellence is always a matter of concern. There need be no excuse to play such music but there are certain occasions when it is more appropriate. As it had served to inaugurate the great Shed in 1938, yesterday it was used to close the Festival.

The performance was broad and spacious and Munch was fully cognizant of the many lofty passages in the score. Beethoven is said to have planned symphonies after this one, but as though he could have known that he would not be allotted time to work after the ninth, he built it on a framework of tremendous scope. Befitting its greatness, he gave it enduring simplicity. The introduction stays in one harmonic phase long after a lesser composer would have attempted to increase its impact by adding external adornments.

* * *

THE CHORUS was beautifully trained and sang with tremendous tonal solidity. The celli and basses at the beginning of the final movement gave out their declamation with a stentorian authority which was echoed, much later on, in its own variation, by bass soloist Donald Gramm. It is unfortunate that there is so little opportunity in this symphonic movement for the outstanding voices selected as soloists. Adele Addison, soprano, Catherine Akos, contralto, David Lloyd, tenor, have meager assignments in Beethoven's scheme but the quartet of soloists, just before the coda, did some magnificent singing.

The weather swerved from short severe rainfalls to sunny fair spells, almost as quickly as the musicians turned their pages. Mr. Munch and the entire group of orchestra musicians and singers received a thunderous ovation. Munch invited Hugh Ross and John Krueger, who had trained the voices, to come out for bows at the conclusion, and, in a touching gesture, also called to the front those three of the retiring orchestra members who participated yesterday afternoon, Paul Federovsky, Jacob Raichman and Louis Artieres.

The concert had opened with the Leonore No. 3, overture, after which came a short intermission and the symphony was then played with only a short pause between movements.

* * *

SATURDAY EVENING Monteux drew upon widely separated sources for his program. The overture to Wagner's "The Flying Dutchman" was followed by the Brahms third symphony, the Nocturnes of Debussy, including the rarely heard "Sirenes" which calls for a female chorus, and, to close, a suite from Richard Strauss' "Der Rosenkavalier."

Monteux's Brahms symphony was on the mild side, but there was the compensating advantage that he maintained a temperate balance between the strings and winds, an important factor to which less attention has been paid during this festival than it merits. The moderation, however, was a decided favorable attribute in the quieter movements. Themes and harmonies were heard which under greater pressure assail one's ears without penetrating to one's inner receptive apparatus.

In the Nocturnes, the "Fetes" were likewise held in restraint. The cortege was less exuberant than usual but in a comparative sense it has its place. The chorus in the "Sirenes" was not consistently secure but the magic atmosphere that Debussy provides was recreated with sufficient fidelity to afford a very good impression of his imagination.

* * *

ANOTHER WONDERFUL festival is now in the records. The little matter of preparing some 18 complete and different programs in six weeks may be a difficult point for the uninitiated to appreciate. If there have been some deviations from top standards, they probably should be mentioned but the overwhelming percentage of great moments and inspired and lofty achievements are the things which will be remembered. There have been plenty such and while one may be inclined to quibble here and there, let us give credit where credit is due and put down for posterity the fact that we and all our guests from far and near have again had a unique opportunity.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE

A Record 136,087 Attend Tanglewood

In spite of the effect of last week end's weather on attendance, the 1955 Berkshire Festival broke the series' record with a score of 136,087 persons for twenty-four concerts, topping the 1954 figure by 312. In 1953, 117,960 persons heard fifteen concerts. What with wet weather for five of the twelve regular programs, this summer's total for the full Boston Symphony Orchestra's concerts in Tanglewood's Music Shed, of 108,336, missed the 1954 figure by approximately 2,000. But this was more than made up by increased attendance at the six chamber orchestra concerts by Boston Symphony musicians and the six Wednesday night chamber concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall.

The Berkshire Music Center's concerts and forums drew an audience of 27,000. The 4,675 members of this school's Society of Friends contributed $35,766.06, a 60 per cent gain over 1954. The six festival chamber music concerts added approximately $11,000 to the money received by the Center, which the Rockefeller Foundation will match under a five-year plan instituted last spring. The Boston Symphony's Pension Fund received $7,897 from the 8,935 adults and children who attended the orchestra's Saturday morning public rehearsals.

The concert of July 30, when Rudolf Serkin was the soloist in Charles Munch's Beethoven program, neared the 1951 record for attendance at a single concert with 15,624, missing the mark by less than 200.

1955 Continued on Page 142

RACUSE HERALD-AMERICAN, Sunday, August 14, 1955

Music Beethoven 9th Marks Berkshire Closing

By E. V. W.

This afternoon, in the great Music Shed in "Tanglewood" near Lenox, Mass the 1955 Berkshire Festival closes with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony (the Choral), under the direction of the Festival music director, Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Ninth will be presented by the full orchestra which also will play the "Leonore" Overture No. 3. The Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, the eminent choral leader, and by John Kreuger, director of the Youngstown, O. Philharmonic and Chorus will be augmented by 50 voices of the Chorus of the Springfield, Mass. Symphony. Soloists in the Ninth: Adele Addison, soprano; Catherine Akos, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass. This morning there is a concert in the Chamber Music Hall by Chamber Music students of Department I. Last night's concert, conducted by Pierre Monteux, the veteran leader who led the Boston Symphony 1919-24, comprised Wagner's Overture to "The Flying Dutchman", Brahms Third Symphony, in (F Major), Debussy's Three Nocturnes and for the first time in "Tanglewood", the Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" by Richard Strauss. Women members of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music student, trained by Miss Iva Dee Hiatt, participated in the Debussy Nocturne "Sirenes". Miss Hiatt is director of Choral music in Smith College and is assistant to Director Ross in the Tanglewood Student Choral department.

* * *

1956

TACOMA, WASH.
NEWS TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 79,453 - S. 70,626

MAR 4 1956

Berkshire Music Fete Announced

BOSTON. — The Boston Symphony, under direction of Charles Munch, will hold the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., from July 4 to Aug. 12. The festival, together with the trip to Europe which is to follow, will complete the 75th anniversary season of the Boston orchestra. The Berkshire Festival will consist of six weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons and six concerts by chamber music groups on Wednesday evenings.

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school maintained by the Boston orchestra at Tanglewood, will have its 14th session from July 2 through Aug. 12 under the direction of Charles Munch.

Berkshire Festival And School Plans

Lenox, Mass.—Pierre Monteux, Eleazar de Carvalho, Lukas Foss, Leonard Bernstein and Richard Burgin will be guest conductors of the Boston Symphony for the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood here this summer. Charles Munch will be the regular conductor of the festival, which runs from July 4 through Aug. 12.

Six week-ends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons will be the principal orchestral series of the fete. Two week-end programs will be held in the Theater-Concert Hall, four in the Music Shed. In addition, there will be six chamber-music concerts on Wednesday evenings.

Among the soloists for the festival will be pianist Rudolf Serkin; violinist Zino Francescatti; singers Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa, Adele Addison, James Pease, Donald Gramm, David Lloyd and Margaret Willauer. With the music of Mozart being especially honored in the fete's first two weeks, a program of his piano concertos will be presented by Boris Goldovsky, Genia Nemenoff and Pierre Luboshutz. The Yale Glee Club, meanwhile, joins the festival for performances of Bach's "St. John Passion" and Martinu's "Field Mass", while other choral works will be sung by the Festival Chorus, Hugh Ross conducting.

New works composed by Goffredo Petrassi, Aaron Copland, Walter Piston, Howard Hanson and Heitor Villa-Lobos for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony will be featured at the festival. Two Wagner programs will find Mr. Munch presenting the first act of "Die Walkuere" and the final scene of "Die Meistersinger".

The 14th session of the Boston Symphony's school, the Berkshire Music Center, directed by Charles Munch, will be held at Tanglewood from July 2 to Aug. 12.

The Italian composer Goffredo Petrassi will serve as guest teacher of composition. The orchestra and conducting department will be headed by the young Brazilian conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho, who returns to the faculty after five years. The composition department is headed by Aaron Copland.

Instrumental students will study chamber music under the orchestra's concertmaster, Richard Burgin, other members of the orchestra, and William Kroll.

Several programs of opera will be produced under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, while the Tanglewood Study Group will be headed by Ingolf Dahl.

SAVANNAH, GA.
NEWS
Circ. D. 50,897 - S. 58,686

MAR 4 1956

Music Notes

The Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch will give the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., from July 4 to August 12. The festival, together with the trip to Europe which is to follow, will complete the 75th anniversary season of the Boston orchestra.

The internationally famous Vienna Philharmonic, which makes its first American tour this fall, has chosen as its conductors the eminent Andre Cluytens and Carl Schuricht, it is announced by Luben Vichey, president of National Artists Corporation.

VARIETY
NEW YORK, N. Y.

MAR 7 1956

Concert Bits

Joseph Rosenstock, general director of the N.Y. City Opera Co., flies to Japan today (Wed.) to conduct concerts and broadcasts of the Nippon Broadcasting Symphony Orchestra. He'll be back in N.Y. in time to baton the opening of the company's spring season March 28.

Alfred Katz, concert personal manager, flew to Japan yesterday (Tues.), via the Coast, for a month's stay on a film deal.

Italian composer Goffredo Petrassi will serve as this year's guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Mass.

Violinist Roman Totenberg left for Europe March 1 for engagements in Italy, Switzerland and Germany. He returns in April.

I Musici, 12-performer Italian string, ensemble, left for Rome last Friday (2), after completing their second U.S. concert tour under aegis of S. Hurok.

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK, N. Y.

MAR 1956

News (e)
SOUTHBRIDGE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 4,688

MAR 5 1956

Boston Symphony Will Present Annual Berkshire Music Series

BOSTON, March 5—The Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch will present the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., from July 4 to August 12. The festival, together with the trip to Europe which is to follow, will complete the 75th anniversary season of the Boston orchestra.

The Berkshire Festival will consist of six weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons following the plan of last year, when two week-ends of "Bach-Mozart" concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall were followed by four weekends in the Shed. In addition there will be a series of six concerts by chamber music groups on Wednesday evenings in the Theater through this period.

Mr. Munch will conduct the majority of the festival concerts. The guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, Eleazar de Carvalho, Lukas Foss, Richard Burgin and Leonard Bernstein. Mr. Bernstein will dedicate a program to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

Four new works which have been Zino Francescatti, Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa, Adele Addison, James Pease, Donald Gramm, David Lloyd, Margaret Willauer and others. Boris Goldovsky, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia composed for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra and first performed in the course of the present season, will be introduced at Tanglewood. They are by Copland, Piston, Hanson and Villa-Lobos. Mr. Munch will give two all-Wagner programs, including the first act of "The Valkyrie" and the final scene of " The Mastersingers."

The music of Mozart will be especially honored in the "Bach-Mozart" concerts in this, the anniversary year of Mozart's birth. Choral works will include Bach's Passion According to Saint John, Martinu's "Field Mass," which will be performed by the visiting Yale Glee Club—the other choral works being performed by the Festival Chorus under its director, Hugh Ross.

Soloists will be Rudolf Serkin, Nemenoff will present a program of piano concertos by Mozart.

The Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school maintained by this orchestra at Tanglewood, will have its fourteenth session from July 2 through August 12 under the direction of Mr. Munch. Inquiries and renewals should be addressed to the Festival Office at Symphony Hall in Boston.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,064

FIRST WORD OF FESTIVAL PLANS IS ANNOUNCED

The Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch will give the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Massachusetts, from July 4 to August 12. The Festival, together with the trip to Europe which is to follow, will complete the 75th anniversary season of the Boston orchestra. The Berkshire Festival will consist of six weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoons following the plan of last year, when two week-ends of "Bach-Mozart" concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall were followed by four weekends in the Shed. In addition there will be a series of six concerts by chamber music groups on Wednesday evenings in the Theatre through this period.

Charles Munch will conduct the majority of the Festival concerts. The guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, Eleazar de Carvalho, Lukas Foss, Richard Burgin and Leonard Bernstein, Mr. Bernstein dedicating a program to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky. Four new works which have been composed for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra and first performed in the course of the present season, will be introduced at Tanglewood — they are by Copland, Piston, Hanson and Villa-Lobos. Mr. Munch will give two all-Wagner programs, including the first act of "The Valkyrie" and the final scene of "The Mastersingers." The music of Mozart will be especially honored in the "Bach-Mozart" concerts in this, the anniversary year of Mozart's birth. Choral works will include Bach's Passion According to Saint John, Martinu's "Field Mass," which will be performed by the visiting Yale Glee Club — the other choral works being performed by the Festival Chorus prepared by its Director, Hugh Ross.

Soloists will consist of Rudolf Serkin, Zino Francescatti, Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa, Adele Addison, James Pease, Donald Gramm, David Lloyd, Margaret Willauer and others. Boris Goldovsky, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff will present a program of piano concertos by Mozart.

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school maintained by this orchestra at Tanglewood, will have its fourteenth session from July 2 through August 12 under the direction of Charles Munch. Inquiries and renewals should be addressed to the Festival Office at Symphony Hall in Boston.

COLUMBUS, OHIO
DISPATCH
Circ. D. 165,879 - S. 230,366

MAR 6 1956

Famous Festival Opens on July 4

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, will give the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Massachusetts, from July 4 to August 12. The festival, together with the trip to Europe which is to follow, will complete the 75th anniversary season of the Boston orchestra. The Berkshire Festival will consist of six week-ends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons.

In addition there will be a series of six concerts by chamber music groups on Wednesday evenings through this period.

Charles Munch will conduct the majority of the festival concerts. The guest conductors will include Pierre Monteux, Richard Burgin, Leonard Bernstein and others. Mr. Bernstein dedicating a program to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

The orchestra will be presented by the Symphony Club in Columbus next season.

Herald News (e)
FALL RIVER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 39,447

MAR 7 1956

Boston Symphony Plans Festival

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox will be given July 4 to Aug. 12 by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch.

Guest conductors during the six weekends of concerts will include Pierre Monteux, Eleazar de Carvalho, Lukas Foss, Richard Burgin, and Leonard Bernstein.

Appearing as soloists will be Rudolph Serkin, Zino Francescatti, Margaret Harshaw, Albert DeCosta, Adele Addison.

James Pease, Donald Gramm, David Lloyd, and Margaret Willauer.

The festival, with the trip to Europe, which is to follow, will complete the 75th anniversary season of the Boston orchestra.

1956

29

TACOMA, WASH.
NEWS TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 79,453 - S. 70,626
MAR 4 1956

Berkshire Music Fete Announced

BOSTON. — The Boston Symphony, under direction of Charles Munch, will hold the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., from July 4 to Aug. 12. The festival, together with the trip to Europe which is to follow, will complete the 75th anniversary season of the Boston orchestra. The Berkshire Festival will consist of six weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons and six concerts by chamber music groups on Wednesday evenings.

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school maintained by the Boston orchestra at Tanglewood, will have its 14th session from July 2 through Aug. 12 under the direction of Charles Munch.

Berkshire Festival And School Plans

Lenox, Mass.—Pierre Monteux, Eleazar de Carvalho, Lukas Foss, Leonard Bernstein and Richard Burgin will be guest conductors of the Boston Symphony for the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood here this summer. Charles Munch will be the regular conductor of the festival, which runs from July 4 through Aug. 12.

Six week-ends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons will be the principal orchestral series of the fete. Two week-end programs will be held in the Theater-Concert Hall, four in the Music Shed. In addition, there will be six chamber-music concerts on Wednesday evenings.

Among the soloists for the festival will be pianist Rudolf Serkin; violinist Zino Francescatti; singers Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa, Adele Addison, James Pease, Donald Gramm, David Lloyd and Margaret Willauer. With the music of Mozart being especially honored in the fete's first two weeks, a program of his piano concertos will be presented by Boris Goldovsky, Genia Nemenoff and Pierre Luboshutz. The Yale Glee Club, meanwhile, joins the festival for performances of Bach's "St. John Passion" and Martinu's "Field Mass", while other choral works will be sung by the Festival Chorus, Hugh Ross conducting.

New works composed by Goffredo Petrassi, Aaron Copland, Walter Piston, Howard Hanson and Heitor Villa-Lobos for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony will be featured at the festival. Two Wagner programs will find Mr. Munch presenting the first act of "Die Walkuere" and the final scene of "Die Meistersinger".

The 14th session of the Boston Symphony's school, the Berkshire Music Center, directed by Charles Munch, will be held at Tanglewood from July 2 to Aug. 12.

The Italian composer Goffredo Petrassi will serve as guest teacher of composition. The orchestra and conducting department will be headed by the young Brazilian conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho, who returns to the faculty after five years. The composition department is headed by Aaron Copland.

Instrumental students will study chamber music under the orchestra's concertmaster, Richard Burgin, other members of the orchestra, and William Kroll.

Several programs of opera will be produced under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, while the Tanglewood Study Group will be headed by Ingolf Dahl.

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK, N. Y.
MAR 1956

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,064
MAR 1 1956

FIRST WORD OF FESTIVAL PLANS IS ANNOUNCED

The Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch will give the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Massachusetts, from July 4 to August 12. The Festival, together with the trip to Europe which is to follow, will complete the 75th anniversary season of the Boston orchestra. The Berkshire Festival will consist of six weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoons following the plan of last year, when two week-ends of "Bach-Mozart" concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall were followed by four weekends in the Shed. In addition there will be a series of six concerts by chamber music groups on Wednesday evenings in the Theatre through this period.

Charles Munch will conduct the majority of the Festival concerts. The guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, Eleazar de Carvalho, Lukas Foss, Richard Burgin and Leonard Bernstein, Mr. Bernstein dedicating a program to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky. Four new works which have been composed for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra and first performed in the course of the present season, will be introduced at Tanglewood — they are by Copland, Piston, Hanson and Villa-Lobos. Mr. Munch will give two all-Wagner programs, including the first act of "The Valkyrie" and the final scene of "The Mastersingers." The music of Mozart will be especially honored in the "Bach-Mozart" concerts in this, the anniversary year of Mozart's birth. Choral works will include Bach's Passion According to Saint John, Martinu's "Field Mass," which will be performed by the visiting Yale Glee Club — the other choral works being performed by the Festival Chorus prepared by its Director, Hugh Ross.

Soloists will consist of Rudolf Serkin, Zino Francescatti, Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa, Adele Addison, James Pease, Donald Gramm, David Lloyd, Margaret Willauer and others. Boris Goldovsky, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff will present a program of piano concertos by Mozart.

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school maintained by this orchestra at Tanglewood, will have its fourteenth session from July 2 through August 12 under the direction of Charles Munch. Inquiries and renewals should be addressed to the Festival Office at Symphony Hall in Boston.

SAVANNAH, GA.
NEWS
Circ. D. 50,897 - S. 58,686
MAR 4 1956

Music Notes

The Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch will give the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., from July 4 to August 12. The festival, together with the trip to Europe which is to follow, will complete the 75th anniversary season of the Boston orchestra.

The internationally famous Vienna Philharmonic, which makes its first American tour this fall, has chosen as its conductors the eminent Andre Cluytens and Carl Schuricht, it is announced by Luben Vichey, president of National Artists Corporation.

News (e)
SOUTHBRIDGE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 4,688
MAR 6 1956

Boston Symphony Will Present Annual Berkshire Music Series

BOSTON, March 5—The Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch will present the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., from July 4 to August 12. The festival, together with the trip to Europe which is to follow, will complete the 75th anniversary season of the Boston orchestra.

The Berkshire Festival will consist of six weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons following the plan of last year, when two weekends of "Bach-Mozart" concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall were followed by four weekends in the Shed. In addition there will be a series of six concerts by chamber music groups on Wednesday evenings in the Theater through this period.

Mr. Munch will conduct the majority of the festival concerts. The guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, Eleazar de Carvalho, Lukas Foss, Richard Burgin and Leonard Bernstein. Mr. Bernstein will dedicate a program to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

Four new works which have been Zino Francescatti, Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa, Adele Addison, James Pease, Donald Gramm, David Lloyd, Margaret Willauer and others. Boris Goldovsky, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia composed for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra and first performed in the course of the present season, will be introduced at Tanglewood. They are by Copland, Piston, Hanson and Villa-Lobos. Mr. Munch will give two all-Wagner programs, including the first act of "The Valkyrie" and the final scene of "The Mastersingers."

The music of Mozart will be especially honored in the "Bach-Mozart" concerts in this, the anniversary year of Mozart's birth. Choral works will include Bach's Passion According to Saint John, Martinu's "Field Mass," which will be performed by the visiting Yale Glee Club—the other choral works being performed by the Festival Chorus under its director, Hugh Ross.

Soloists will be Rudolf Serkin, Nemenoff will present a program of piano concertos by Mozart.

The Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school maintained by this orchestra at Tanglewood, will have its fourteenth session from July 2 through August 12 under the direction of Mr. Munch. Inquiries and renewals should be addressed to the Festival Office at Symphony Hall in Boston.

COLUMBUS, OHIO
DISPATCH
Circ. D. 165,879 - S. 230,366
MAR 6 1956

Famous Festival Opens on July 4

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, will give the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Massachusetts, from July 4 to August 12. The festival, together with the trip to Europe which is to follow, will complete the 75th anniversary season of the Boston orchestra. The Berkshire Festival will consist of six week-ends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons.

In addition there will be a series of six concerts by chamber music groups on Wednesday evenings through this period.

Charles Munch will conduct the majority of the festival concerts. The guest conductors will include Pierre Monteux, Richard Burgin, Leonard Bernstein and others. Mr. Bernstein dedicating a program to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

The orchestra will be presented by the Symphony Club in Columbus next season.

VARIETY
NEW YORK, N. Y.
MAR 7 1956

Concert Bits

Joseph Rosenstock, general director of the N.Y. City Opera Co., flies to Japan today (Wed.) to conduct concerts and broadcasts of the Nippon Broadcasting Symphony Orchestra. He'll be back in N.Y. in time to baton the opening of the company's spring season March 28.

Alfred Katz, concert personal manager, flew to Japan yesterday (Tues.), via the Coast, for a month's stay on a film deal.

Italian composer Goffredo Petrassi will serve as this year's guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Mass.

Violinist Roman Totenberg left for Europe March 1 for engagements in Italy, Switzerland and Germany. He returns in April.

I Musici, 12-performer Italian string ensemble, left for Rome last Friday (2), after completing their second U.S. concert tour under aegis of S. Hurok.

Herald News (e)
FALL RIVER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 39,447
MAR 7 1956

Boston Symphony Plans Festival

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox will be given July 4 to Aug. 12 by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch.

Guest conductors during the six weekends of concerts will include Pierre Monteux, Eleazar de Carvalho, Lukas Foss, Richard Burgin, and Leonard Bernstein.

Appearing as soloists will be Rudolph Serkin, Zino Francescatti, Margaret Harshaw, Albert DeCosta, Adele Addison.

James Pease, Donald Gramm, David Lloyd, and Margaret Willauer.

The festival, with the trip to Europe, which is to follow, will complete the 75th anniversary season of the Boston orchestra.

Berkshire Courier
BARRINGTON, Mass.
Daily Independent
Circ. 2325

Music Festival Set for July 4-Aug. 12

Marks 75th Anniversary of Boston Symphony

Four New Works Composed Especially for Occasion Will Be Introduced at Tanglewood.— Copland, Piston, Hanson and Villa-Lobos Are Composers.—Soloists Are Listed.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, will give the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox from July 4 to August 12. The festival, together with the trip to Europe which is to follow, will complete the seventy-fifth anniversary season of the Boston orchestra.

The Berkshire Festival will consist of six week-ends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, following the plan of last year, when two week-ends of "Bach-Mozart" concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall were followed by four week-ends in the Shed. In addition there will be a series of six concerts by chamber music groups on Wednesday evenings in the theatre through this period.

Charles Munch will conduct the majority of the Festival concerts. The guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, Eleazar de Carvalho, Lukas Foss, Richard Burgin and Leonard Bernstein, Mr. Bernstein dedicating a program to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

Four new works which have been composed for the seventy-fifth anniversary of the orchestra and first performed in the course of the present season, will be introduced at Tanglewood. They are by Copland, Piston, Hanson and Villa-Lobos. Mr. Munch will give two all-Wagner programs, including the first act of "The Valkyrie" and the final scene of "The Mastersingers."

The music of Mozart will be especially honored in the "Bach-Mozart" concerts in this, the anniversary year of Mozart's birth. Choral works will include Bach's Passion According to Saint John, Martinu's "Field Mass," which will be performed by the visiting Yale Glee Club, the other choral works being performed by the Festival Chorus prepared by its director, Hugh Ross.

Soloists will consist of Rudolf Serkin, Zino Francescatti, Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa, Adele Addison, James Pease, Donald Gramm, David Lloyd, Margaret Willauer and others. Boris Goldovsky, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff will present a program of piano concertos by Mozart.

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school maintained by this orchestra at Tanglewood, will have its fourteenth session from July 2 through August 12 under the direction of Charles Munch. Inquiries and renewals should be addressed to the Festival Office at Symphony Hall in Boston.

ERIE, PA.
DISPATCH
Circ. D. 40,097 S. 44,905
MAR 4 1956

Front Row, Center

By LYLE McKAY

CINERAMA TOUR MARCH 18! Next Saturday, March 10, is the last day to make reservations for The Erie Dispatch-Cinerama Tour on March 18, when Erie caravaners will journey to Buffalo to see "Cinerama Holiday," the second exciting Cinerama presentation. Following the performance, our chartered Greyhound buses will take us to the Hotel Buffalo for a delicious full-course dinner in the Grand Ball Room.

Some lucky lady on each bus will be the recipient of a beautiful corsage before we start, through the courtesy of The Union Bank, and the many beautiful Caravan free gifts will be on display in the Hotel Buffalo ball room.

Chartered Greyhound buses will leave Erie from The Erie Dispatch Building, 12th and French Sts., at 1:30 p. m. There will be a special 5 o'clock showing of "Cinerama Holiday" for us, and at 7:15, the buses will be at the theatre to take us to the hotel. Dinner will be served at 8:15, and the buses will return to the hotel at 10 o'clock to bring us home.

We'll have a police escort out of Erie, and a Buffalo police escort will meet us on the outskirts of Buffalo and take us directly to the theatre.

The price of the tour, which includes: transportation to and from Buffalo, finest reserved seat for "Cinerama Holiday," souvenir "Cinerama Holiday" program, transportation to the Hotel Buffalo, and a full-course dinner, including tip, is $10 per person.

Mail remittance, with stamped, self-addressed envelope, to CINERAMA TOUR, Erie Dispatch, Erie, Pa. Groups wishing to sit together on the bus and at the theatre—please list members of the group — and the one member of the group to whom the tickets will be mailed.

Bus tickets will be mailed out March 12. Reserved seat theatre tickets will be distributed on the bus. Bus tickets are numbered —and so are the buses. Holders of tickets 1 thru 37 will occupy Bus 1—38 thru 74, Bus 2—75 thru 111, Bus 3, etc. Buses will arrive at The Dispatch about 1 o'clock.

* * * *

FOR THE BIRDS: Parisians spray their public statues with camphor to protect them from pigeons. Which is exactly what Director Rudolph Mate did to Warners' brownstone street when some hammy pigeons clustered so closely about Jane Wyman and Van Johnson, during a romantic scene in "Miracle in the Rain," that the pigeons' cooing drowned out the cooing of the actors. Joan Fontaine's role of a wealthy woman in "Serenade" came to (real) life during filming of the picture—the actress received word that a 500-acre Texas oil lease, which she owns, brought in two gushers.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch will give the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood from July 4 to Aug. 12. The Festival, together with the trip to Europe which is to follow, will complete the 75th anniversary season of the Boston orchestra. In spite of activities reported on future dates over the border in Monaco, Grace Kelly will co-star with James Stewart and Cyd Charisse in "Designing Woman," after "High Society." Katharine Hepburn, now in London co-starring with Bob Hope in "The Iron Petticoat," bursts into song for the first time in the picture. As a Rooshian gal, who pilots a Rooshian plane, she sings a song in Russian "double-talk" in a London cafe. Throughout the entire picture, Hepburn wears a Russian pilot's uniform except in one scene when she blossoms out in a little $3,000 Balmain number.

James Cagney, soon to be seen in a super-Western, "Tribute to a Bad Man," may star next in a screen biog of Lon Chaney (Sr.)— one of the all-time movie greats. Chaney, who became the King of Makeup and Pantomime, was the son of deaf mutes, and attributed his acting ability to this fact. After attending the theatre, he would rush home to tell his parents the entire story, acting out all the roles.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 42,039
MAR 6 1956

Music Notes

By D. E. RITZ

The Berkshire Music Center will hold its 14th session at Tanglewood July 2 through Aug. 12 in connection with the Berkshire Festival Concerts at Lenox, Mass.

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will serve as director of the school which was founded in 1940 under the direction of the late Serge Koussevitzky.

Complete information for prospective students may be obtained by writing to the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

Auditions for applicants for the student orchestra and chamber music group will be held March 23 from 2 to 5 p.m. at Carnegie Recital Hall in New York city. Other auditions will be held later in cities as far west as St. Louis.

* * *

GOFFREDO PETRASSI, one of Italy's foremost composers, has accepted Mr. Munch's invitation to serve as guest teacher of composition. Aaron Copland heads the composition department and guest composers in past years have included Hindemith, Ibert, Dallapiccola, Honegger, Milhaud and Blacher. Mr. Petracci's recent work, "Fifth Concerto for Orchestra," commissioned for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is planned for the Berkshire Festival programs.

The center's department for orchestra, including conducting, will have as its head Eleazar de Carvalho, the young Brazilian conductor, who is returning after five years to serve again on the faculty. He will also appear as guest conductor in the festival. Instrumental students also study chamber music under Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; William Kroll, noted violinist; and members of the orchestra.

HUGH ROSS will head the choral department, which will form the Festival Chorus and sing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Munch in Bach's "St. John Passion" and the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger."

Leonard Bernstein, long associated with Tanglewood, will conduct the "Gloria" from Mozart's "Mass in C Minor," in a program dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky. The opera department under Boris Goldovsky will produce several opera programs.

The Tanglewood Study Group for amateurs and music enthusiasts participating in general activities will be headed by Ingolf Dahl and may be attended for two, four or six weeks.

* * *

MUSICAL EVENTS in the serious vein this month include an appearance of the Berkshire String Quartet at Union College Memorial Chapel March 15 at 8:30 p.m. The program is being sponsored by the music committee of the Schenectady Museum.

The Pittsburgh Symphony is scheduled for March 20 in a program in the Civic Music Series. William Steinberg is conductor. The program will be held at the Plaza theater.

A "Festival of Instrumental Music" will be presented by young musicians of the Schenectady school system March 21 at 8:15 p.m. at Mont Pleasant high school auditorium. Elie Siegmeister will serve as guest conductor for the affair.

* * *

THE VIENNA PHILHARMONIC will make its first American concert tour this fall with Andre Cluytens and Carl Schuricht as conductors. The orchestra was founded 114 years ago and has enjoyed the personal direction of Brahms, Bruckner, Mahler, Wagner and Richard Strauss. Announcement of the tour was made by National Artists Corporation of New York.

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 52,692
MAR 7 1956

July 2-Aug. 12 Schedule Set For Berkshire Music Center

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's school, the Berkshire Music Center, will be conducted July 2 to Aug. 12 at Tanglewood in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts, Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra, announced.

One of Italy's foremost composers, Goffredo Petrassi, will serve as guest teacher in the composition department headed by Aaron Copland. Mr. Petrassi's recent work, Fifth Concerto for Orchestra, commissioned for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony, will be performed at the Berkshire Festival.

The Music Center's department for orchestra will have as its head the young Brazilian conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho, who returns after five years to serve again on the faculty. He also will appear as guest conductor in the festival.

Instrumental students also will study chamber music under Richard Burgin, concertmaster of th Boston Symphony; William Kroll, noted violinist, and members of the orchestra.

Hugh Ross again will direct the choral department.

..News.. from

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

SYMPHONY HALL, BOSTON 15, MASSACHUSETTS, COmmonwealth 6-1492

For Release: Saturday, March 26, and Sunday, March 27 /55

FULL PROGRAMS FOR BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

Charles Munch announces the programs in full for the Berkshire Festival to be given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., next summer. The Festival will consist of six weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 8 to August 14, each weekend preceded by a recital of chamber music on the previous Wednesday evening, beginning July 6. These recitals will be devoted to the music of Beethoven and the concerts in the Music Shed by the full orchestra will encompass the principal orchestral and choral works of Beethoven.

The first two weekends will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" concerts by an orchestra of chamber proportions in the Theatre as follows:

FRI., JULY 8: Bach - Sinfonia from the "Easter" Cantata; Bach - Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings; Stravinsky - "Orpheus"; Mozart - "Prague" Symphony.

SAT., JULY 9: Handel - Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12; Haydn - Symphonie Concertante; Hindemith - "Der Schwanendreher"; Haydn - Symphony No. 98; Guest Conductor, Thor Johnson.

SUN., JULY 10: Bach - Mass in B minor, with the choruses from Harvard and Radcliffe.

FRI., JULY 15: Mozart program, including "Don Giovanni" Overture, "Linz" Symphony, Piano Concerto, K. 453, and arias sung by Jennie Tourel; Leonard Bernstein, Guest Conductor and piano soloist.

SAT., JULY 16: Program of Italian music, including Cherubini - "Anacreon" Overture; Boccherini - Cello Concerto (Samuel Mayes); Vivaldi - Concerto Grosso for Four Violins; Vivaldi - Gloria (with chorus).

SUN., JULY 17: French program including Rameau Suite from "Dardanus", Faure - "Pelleas and Melisande" Suite; Faure - Pavane; Milhaud - Serenade; Honegger - Fourth Symphony.

The concerts in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra:

FRI., JULY 22: Beethoven - Overture to "Coriolan", Violin Concerto (Isaac Stern), and Seventh Symphony.

SAT., JULY 23: Bach-Respighi - Passacaglia; Beethoven - Second Symphony; Sessions - Suite from "The Black Maskers"; Strauss - "Death and

..News.. BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Transfiguration"; Guest Conductor - Pierre Monteux.

SUN., JULY 24: Beethoven - First, Fourth and Sixth Symphonies.

FRI., JULY 29: Handel - "Water Music"; Schumann - Fourth Symphony; Barber - "Prayers of Kierkegaard" with Leontyne Price); Brahms - Fourth Symphony.

SAT., JULY 30: Beethoven - "Egmont" Overture, Fifth Piano Concerto (Rudolf Serkin) and "Eroica" Symphony.

SUN., JULY 31: Brahms - Academic Overture, Concerto for Violin and Cello (Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky), Symphony No. 1; Guest Conductor, Pierre Monteux.

FRI., AUGUST 5: Beethoven - Missa Solemnis, conducted by Leonard Bernstein in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

SAT., AUGUST 6: Beethoven - Fidelio, Act II; Wagner - Excerpts from "The Dusk of the Gods" (soloists to include Margaret Harshaw).

SUN., AUGUST 7: Beethoven Fifth and Eighth Symphonies and Fourth Piano Concerto (Eugene Istomin).

FRI., AUGUST 12: Brahms - Haydn Variations; Bloch - "Schelomo" (Piatigorsky); Debussy - "La Mer"; Ravel - "Daphnis and Chloe", Second Suite.

SAT., AUGUST 13: Wagner - "Flying Dutchman" Overture; Brahms - Third Symphony; Debussy - Three Nocturnes; Strauss - "Der Rosenkavalier" Suite; Guest Conductor, Pierre Monteux.

SUN., AUGUST 14: Beethoven - Overture, "Leonore", No. 3 and Ninth Symphony (with chorus and soloists).

For ticket information or information about the Berkshire Music Center, this orchestra's music school at Tanglewood, please address the Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

News from
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
SYMPHONY HALL, BOSTON 15, MASSACHUSETTS, COmmonwealth 6-1492

For Release: Sunday, May 1, 1955

CHARLES MUNCH COMPLETES BOSTON SEASON

Soloists Announced for Berkshire Festival

Boston, April 30: Charles Munch brought the 74th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to a close tonight in Symphony Hall with Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. Having completed his sixth year with this Orchestra, Mr. Munch will fly to France early next week for two months of vacation. He will return to open on July 8 the Berkshire Festival given by his orchestra in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The principal works of Beethoven, occuping a considerable part of the programs in the course of the Festival (July 6-August 14) will include the nine symphonies, choral works, concertos, and chamber works. This will require a number of soloists, both vocal and instrumental. The vocal soloists, here announced, will consist of the following quartet for the Missa Solemnis, to be conducted by Leonard Bernstein on August 5 in memory of Serge Koussevitzky: Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Mac Morgan, bass. The Ninth Symphony, with which Mr. Munch will close the Festival, will have the following soloists: Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd, and Donald Gramm. Mr. Munch will also conduct the Second Act of Beethoven's "Fidelio" in concert form on August 6

News from
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
HONY HALL, BOSTON 15, MASSACHUSETTS, COmmonwealth 6-1492

For Release: Saturday evening, May 14
Sunday, May 15

ROCKEFELLER FOUNDATION MAKES GRANT TO BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER

Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer Music School at Tanglewood
Envisions Secure Future from Five-Year Matching Grant

* * * * *

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra annually since 1940 at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., in connection with its Berkshire Festival, will benefit from a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Over a period of five years, commencing this summer, the Rockefeller Foundation will donate a sum matching equally money raised from other sources for the support of the only school of music in this country maintained by a symphony orchestra. The five appropriations, to be made annually, can amount to $125,000.

It is the second time the Rockefeller Foundation has come to the generous support of the Berkshire Music Center: grants totalling $65,000 in 1940 and 1941 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra enabled the orchestra to start its music school. Now, the Foundation is giving assistance to maintaining this undertaking on a secure financial basis.

A great impetus is thus given to the general public to increase its generosity. "If the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will really rally to its support," was the comment of Henry B. Cabot, President of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Trustees, "the future of the school is assured." Contributions to the music school in 1954 totalled some $25,000. This year a with the following soloists: Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd and Mac Morgan. Bach's Mass in B minor will be given on July 10 with the following soloists: Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm. Jennie Tourel, soprano, will sing airs of Mozart on July 15. Leontyne Price, soprano, will sing in Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" on July 29.

(MORE)

Instrumental soloists in the "Bach-Mozart" concerts during the first two week ends in the Theatre Concert Hall will include Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute, July 8 (Bach's Suite No. 2); Joseph de Pasquale, viola, July 9 ("Der Schwanendreher"); and Samuel Mayes, July 16 (Boccherini's Cello Concerto).

The concerts in the Music Shed through the last four week ends will include Isaac Stern, July 22 (Beethoven's Violin Concerto); Rudolf Serkin, July 30 (Beethoven's Fifth Piano Concerto); Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky, July 31 (Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello); Eugene Istomin, August 7 (Beethoven's Fourth Piano Concerto); and Gregor Piatigorsky, August 12 (Bloch's "Schelomo"). Guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson. The chamber music of Beethoven will be performed at six successive Wednesday evening concerts by The Kroll String Quartet, Beaux Arts Trio, Isaac Stern, the New Music String Quartet, Rudolf Serkin and Gregor Piatigorsky.

Subscription tickets are still being sold at the Subscription Office, in Symphony Hall, the season sale to end June 1.

News . . from BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
HONY HALL, BOSTON 15, MASSACHUSETTS, COmmonwealth 6-1492

For Release: Saturday evening, May 14
Sunday, May 15

ROCKEFELLER FOUNDATION MAKES GRANT TO BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER

Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer Music School at Tanglewood
Envisions Secure Future from Five-Year Matching Grant

* * * * *

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra annually since 1940 at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., in connection with its Berkshire Festival, will benefit from a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Over a period of five years, commencing this summer, the Rockefeller Foundation will donate a sum matching equally money raised from other sources for the support of the only school of music in this country maintained by a symphony orchestra. The five appropriations, to be made annually, can amount to $125,000.

It is the second time the Rockefeller Foundation has come to the generous support of the Berkshire Music Center: grants totalling $65,000 in 1940 and 1941 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra enabled the orchestra to start its music school. Now, the Foundation is giving assistance to maintaining this undertaking on a secure financial basis.

A great impetus is thus given to the general public to increase its generosity. "If the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will really rally to its support," was the comment of Henry B. Cabot, President of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Trustees, "the future of the school is assured." Contributions to the music school in 1954 totalled some $25,000. This year a

(MORE)

with the following soloists: Margaret Harshaw, Da Mac Morgan. Bach's Mass in B minor will be given with the following soloists: Adele Addison, Flor John McCollum and Donald Gramm. Jennie Tourel, s sing airs of Mozart on July 15. Leontyne Price, sing in Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" on Jul

Instrumental soloists in the "Bach-Moz during the first two week ends in the Theatre Cc include Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute, July 8 (Ba Joseph de Pasquale, viola, July 9 ("Der Schwane Samuel Mayes, July 16 (Boccherini's Cello Conce

The cnncerts in the Music Shed throu week ends will include Isaac Stern, July 22 (B Concerto); Rudolf Serkin, July 30 (Beethoven's Concerto); Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky Concerto for Violin and Cello); Eugene Istomi ven's Fourth Piano Concerto); and Gregor Piat (Bloch's "Schelomo"). Guest conductors will Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson. The cha ven will be performed at six successive Wedn
by The Kroll String Quartet, Beaux Arts Tric
New Music String Quartet, Rudolf Serkin and

Subscription tickets are still be tion Office, in Symphony Hall, the season s

News . . from
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
SYMPHONY HALL, BOSTON 15, MASSACHUSETTS, COmmonwealth 6-1492

For Release: Saturday evening, May 14
Sunday, May 15

ROCKEFELLER FOUNDATION MAKES GRANT TO BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER

Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer Music School at Tanglewood
Envisions Secure Future from Five-Year Matching Grant

* * * * *

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra annually since 1940 at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., in connection with its Berkshire Festival, will benefit from a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Over a period of five years, commencing this summer, the Rockefeller Foundation will donate a sum matching equally money raised from other sources for the support of the only school of music in this country maintained by a symphony orchestra. The five appropriations, to be made annually, can amount to $125,000.

It is the second time the Rockefeller Foundation has come to the generous support of the Berkshire Music Center: grants totalling $65,000 in 1940 and 1941 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra enabled the orchestra to start its music school. Now, the Foundation is giving assistance to maintaining this undertaking on a secure financial basis.

A great impetus is thus given to the general public to increase its generosity. "If the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will really rally to its support," was the comment of Henry B. Cabot, President of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Trustees, "the future of the school is assured." Contributions to the music school in 1954 totalled some $25,000. This year a goal of at least $35,000 is sought. The donations are made by music-lovers who enjoy attending concerts by the 400 students enrolled each summer by the Berkshire Music Center, as well as by individuals and organizations who assist the Center through tax-exempt donations to the organization set up for that purpose, the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Now, through the Rockefeller Foundation grants, the Music Center will benefit annually by twice the amount raised through the Friends, in excess of $15,000 annually.

(MORE)

The five-year matching grants will be paid into the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, established in 1949 largely from a series of gifts from the RCA Victor Division of the Radio Corporation of America. The original capital of $50,000, while drawn upon annually to assist the 4,575 students from all parts of the U.S. and many foreign lands who have been enrolled in the school during its twelve sessions, has been increased substantially each year through contributions and the monies raised by the Friends. Under the terms of the Rockefeller Foundation grant, the potential gain to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund by the end of 1959 is estimated at $325,000.

The Berkshire Music Center commences its thirteenth session at Tanglewood July 4. Its five departments are: Instrumental music, with Leonard Bernstein head of orchestra conducting, Richard Burgin and William Kroll heads of chamber music; Choral Music, with Hugh Ross in charge; Composition, with noted composers Roger Sessions (U.S.A.) and Boris Blacher (Germany) this year's guest teachers; Opera, headed by Boris Goldovsky; and the new and increasingly popular Tanglewood Study Group, aimed at lovers of music on a non-professional basis which Ingolf Dahl heads. Charles Munch is Director of the Berkshire Music Center; Aaron Copland is Assistant Director; Ralph Berkowitz is Dean.

(MORE)

In commenting on the grant from the Rockefeller Foundation, CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Director of the Berkshire Music Center said: "The generosity, without precedent, of the Rockefeller Foundation to support our work with young people will be a great service to the future of the art of music."

"This is the first big gift we have ever had and means that if the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center are generous, its future is secure", said DR. LEWIS PERRY, Honorary Chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

MR. WILLIAM J. COX, Chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, said: "This fine offer by the Rockefeller Foundation, will be a challenge to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center to do their utmost to support this fine school. As Chairman of the Friends, I urge everyone to give just as much as he can."

Italian News
BOSTON, Mass.
t Weekly Independen
Circ. 12,414

1956 UP TO PAGE 142

MAR 9 1956

Francescatti named soloist at Tanglewoo Piston's anniversary piece to be in premie

Zino Francescatti will be among the soloists who will play at the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch.

The Festival, together with the trip to Europe which is to follow, will complete the 75th anniversary season of the Boston orchestra.

Four new works which have been composed for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra and first performed in the course of the present season, will be introduced at Tanglewood. One of the works will be by Walter Piston of Belmont, a professor at Harvard University.

The Berkshire Festival will consist of six week-ends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons.

In addition there will be a series of six concerts by chamber music groups on Wednesday evenings in the Theatre through this period. Charles Munch will conduct the majority of the Festival concerts. The guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, Eleazar de Carvalho, Lukas Foss, Richard Burgin and Leonard Bernstein, who will dedicate a program to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

ZINO FRANCESCATTI
Tanglewood Soloist

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school maintained by this orchestra at Tanglewood, will have its fourteenth session from July 2 through August 12 under the direction of Charles Munch. Inquiries and renewals should be addressed to the Festival Office at Symphony Hall in Boston.

Santa Barbara, Calif.
NEWS-PRESS
Circ. D. 21,404 - S. 21,691

MAR 11 1956

Boston Symphony Plans Berkshire Festival Features

The Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch will give the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., from July 4 to Aug. 12. The Festival, together with the trip to Europe which is to follow, will complete the 75th anniversary season of the Boston orchestra.

The Berkshire Festival will consist of six week-ends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons. In addition there will be a series of six concerts by chamber music groups on Wednesday evenings in the Theater through this period.

Charles Munch will conduct the majority of the Festival concerts. The guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, Eleazar de Carvalho, Lukas Foss, Richard Burgin and Leonard Bernstein. Four new works which have been composed for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra and first performed in the course of the present season, will be introduced at Tanglewood — they are by Copland, Piston, Hanson and Villa-Lobos.

ALLENTOWN, PA.
CALL-CHRONICLE
Circ. S. 58,037

MAR 11 1956

Music Lovers Club Planning Summer Trips

Members and friends of the Music Lovers Club are again looking forward to summer trips by chartered bus to Tanglewood, Mass., and to Chautauqua, N.Y. The group has been going to New York City on numerous occasions during the winter season to attend matinee performances at the Metropolitan Opera House.

Membership is open to anyone enjoying fine music.

The Tanglewood trips are scheduled for July 26-29 and Aug. 2-5. Although the date is distant, reservations both for hotel and Boston Symphony performances already are at a premium.

Many fine artists will be heard on the Chautauqua trip, set for Aug. 16-20.

Mrs. Grace Peters of 118 S. Madison St., Allentown, is handling reservations and is reminding interested persons that April 1 is the deadline.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860

MAR 11 1956

BERKSHIRE CENTER LISTS MUSIC PLANS

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer music school operated in conjunction with the Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., will be held this year from July 2 to Aug. 12. Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, will be the director of the school.

Goffredo Petrassi, the Italian composer, will serve as guest teacher of composition. As in past years, Aaron Copland will head the composition department. The orchestral department will be directed by Eleazar de Carvalho, who is returning to the center after a five-year absence.

Instrumental students will work under Richard Burgin, William Kroll and members of the Boston Symphony. Hugh Ross will head the choral department and Boris Goldovsky will be in charge of the opera department. The Tanglewood Study Group will be led by Ingolf Dahl.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

MAR 11 1956

Italian Composer Petrassi Tanglewood Guest Teacher

Boston, March 10—Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, announces that the 14th session of the orchestra's school, the Berkshire Music Center, will be held at Tanglewood from July 2 to Aug. 12 in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts. One of Italy's foremost composers, Goffredo Petrassi, has accepted Mr. Munch's invitation to serve as guest teacher of composition.

The composition department, headed by Aaron Copland, has included in the past such guest composers from other countries as Hindemith, Ibert, Dallapiccola, Honegger, Milhaud and Blacher. Petrassi's recent work, Fifth Concerto for Orchestra, commissioned for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is planned for the Berkshire Festival programs shortly to be announced in full. Mr. Munch continues as director of the school, founded under the direction of the late Serge Koussevitzky in 1940.

De Carvalho Returns

The Berkshire Music Center's department for orchestra, including conducting, will have as its head the young Brazilian conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho, who returns after five years to serve again on the faculty. He will also appear as guest conductor in the festival. Instrumental students will also study chamber music under Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, William Kroll, noted violinist, and members of the orchestra.

The choral department, headed by Hugh Ross, will form the festival chorus, singing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch in Bach's "St. John Passion" and Wagner's "Die Meistersinger," Act III. Leonard Bernstein, long associated with Tanglewood, will conduct the Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C minor, in a program dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

The opera department under Boris Goldovsky will again produce several programs of opera. The Tanglewood Study Group for amateur and music enthusiasts participating in general activities will be headed by Ingolf Dahl and may be attended for two, four or six weeks.

Auditions for applicants for the student orchestra and chamber music will be held at the Carnegie Recital Hall in New York on Friday, the 23d, from 2 to 5 p. m. A later announcement will be made of auditions in other cities as far west as St. Louis Anyone wishing further information should write to the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

CINCINNATI, OHIO
ENQUIRER
Circ. D. 220,412 - S. 282,550

MAR 12 1956

Berkshire Center Plans

BOSTON, March 11 (Special) —Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, announces that the fourteenth session of the Orchestra's school, the Berkshire Music Center, will be held at Tanglewood from July 2nd to August 12th in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

One of Italy's foremost composers, Goffredo Petrassi, has accepted Mr. Munch's invitation to serve as guest teacher of composition. The Composition Department, headed by Aaron Copland, has included in the past such guest composers from other countries as Hindemith, Ibert, Dallapiccola, Honegger, Milhoud and Blacher.

Mr. Petrassi's recent work, Fifth Concerto for Orchestra, commissioned for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is planned for the Berkshire Festival programs shortly to be announced in full. Mr. Munch continues as Director of the school, founded under the direction of the late Serge Koussevitzky in 1940.

★ ★ ★

THE BERKSHIRE Music Center's department for orchestra, including conducting, will have as its head the young Brazilian conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho, who returns after five years to serve again on the faculty.

He will also appear as guest conductor in the Festival.

Instrumental students will also study chamber music under Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; William Kroll, noted violinist, and members of the Orchestra.

★ ★ ★

THE CHORAL Department, headed by Hugh Ross, will form the Festival Chorus, singing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch in Bach's "St. John Passion" and Wagner's "Die Meistersinger," Act III. Leonard Bernstein, long associated with Tanglewood, will conduct the Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, in a program dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

The Opera Department under Boris Goldovsky will again produce several programs of opera. The Tanglewood Study Group for amateur and music enthusiasts participating in general activities will be headed by Ingolf Dahl and may be atended for two, four or six weeks.

Anyone wishing further information should write to the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Massachusetts.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326
MAR 12 1956

Open 14th Season Of Music Center At Lenox July 2

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, announced yesterday that the 14th session of the orchestra's school, the Berkshire Music center, will be held at Tanglewood from July 2 to Aug. 12 in connection with the Berkshire festival concerts.

One of Italy's foremost composers, Goffredo Petrassi, has accepted Mr. Munch's invitation to serve as guest teacher of composition. The Composition department, headed by Aaron Copland, has included in the past such guest composers from other countries as Hindemith, Ibert, Dallapiccola, Honegger, Milhaud and Blacher. Mr. Petrassi's recent work, Fifth Concerto for orchestra, commissioned for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony orchestra, is planned for the Berkshire festival programs shortly to be announced in full.

Mr. Munch continues as director of the school, founded under the direction of the late Serge Koussevitzky in 1940. The Berkshire Music center's department for orchestra, including conducting, will have as its head the young Brazilian conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho, who returns after five years to serve again on the faculty. He will also appear as guest conductor in the festival. Instrumental students will also study chamber music under Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony orchestra, William Kroll, noted violinist, and members of the orchestra.

The choral department, headed by Hugh Ross, will form the festival chorus, singing with the Boston Symphony orchestra under Charles Munch in Bach's "St. John Passion" and Wagner's "Die Meistersinger," Act III. Leonard Bernstein, long associated with Tanglewood, will conduct the Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C minor, in a program dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky. The opera department under Boris Goldovsky will again produce several programs of opera. The Tanglewood Study group for amateur and music enthusiasts participating in general activities will be headed by Ingolf Dahl and may be attended for two, four or six weeks.

Auditions for applicants for the student orchestra and chamber music will be held at the Carnegie recital hall in New York on Friday, March 23, from 2 to 5. A later announcement will be made of auditions in other cities as far West as St. Louis.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4300
Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,241
MAR 13 1956

Berkshire Music Center—1956

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, announces that the 14th session of the Orchestra's school, the Berkshire Music Center, will be held at Tanglewood from July 2 to Aug. 12 in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

One of Italy's foremost composers, Goffredo Petrassi, has accepted Mr. Munch's invitation to serve as guest teacher of composition. The Composition Department is headed by Aaron Copland. Mr. Petrassi's recent work, Fifth Concerto for Orchestra, commissioned for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is planned for the Berkshire Festival programs shortly to be announced in full.

Mr. Munch continues as Director of the school, founded under the direction of the late Serge Koussevitzky in 1940. The Berkshire Music Center's department for orchestra, including conducting, will have as its head the young Brazilian conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho, who returns after five years to serve again on the faculty. He will also appear as guest conductor in the Festival. Instrumental students will also study chamber music under Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, William Kroll, noted violinist, and members of the orchestra.

Choral Works

The Choral Department, headed by Hugh Ross, will form the Festival Chorus, singing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch in Bach's St. John Passion and Wagner's "Die Meistersinger," Act III. Leonard Bernstein, long associated with Tanglewood, will conduct the Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, in a program dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky. The Opera Department under Boris Goldovsky will again produce several programs of opera. The Tanglewood Study Group for amateur and music enthusiasts participating in general activities will be headed by Ingolf Dahl and may be attended for two, four or six weeks.

Anyone wishing further information should write to the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

ATHENS, N. Y.
HERALD
Circ. W. 315
MAR 15 1956

Schedule Set For Berkshire Music Center

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's school, the Berkshire Music Center, will be conducted July 2 to Aug. 12 at Tanglewood in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts, Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra, announced.

One of Italy's foremost composers, Goffredo Petrassi, will serve as guest teacher in the composition department headed by Aaron Copland. Mr. Petrassi's recent work, Fifth Concerto for Orchestra, commissioned for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony, will be performed at the Berkshire Festival.

The Music Center's department for orchestra will have as its head the young Brazilian conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho, who returns after five years to serve again on the faculty. He also will appear as guest conductor in the festival.

Instrumental students also will study chamber music under Richard Burgin, concert-master of the Boston Symphony; William Kroll, noted violinist, and members of the orchestra.

Hugh Ross again will direct the choral department.

GREENVILLE, N. Y.
LOCAL
Circ. W. 469
MAR 14 1956

Schedule Set For Berkshire Music Center

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's school, the Berkshire Music Center, will be conducted July 2 to Aug. 12 at Tanglewood in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts, Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra, announced.

One of Italy's foremost composers, Goffredo Petrassi, will serve as guest teacher in the composition department headed by Aaron Copland. Mr. Petrassi's recent work, Fifth Concerto for Orchestra, commissioned for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony, will be performed at the Berkshire Festival.

The Music Center's department for orchestra will have as its head the young Brazilian conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho, who returns after five years to serve again on the faculty. He also will appear as guest conductor in the festival.

Instrumental students also will study chamber music under Richard Burgin, concert-master of the Boston Symphony; William Kroll, noted violinist, and members of the orchestra.

Hugh Ross again will direct the choral department.

165 Church Street - [illegible]
DETROIT, MICH.
FREE PRESS
Circ. D. 456,261 - S. 485,172
MAR 14 1956

Tanglewood Festival Dates Set

BOSTON—The Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch will give the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., from July 4 to Aug. 12.

The Festival, together with the trip to Europe which is to follow, will complete the 75th anniversary season of the Boston orchestra.

The Berkshire Festival will consist of six weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons.

* * *

IN ADDITION there will be a series of six concerts by chamber music groups on Wednesday evenings through this period.

Munch will conduct most of the Festival concerts. The guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, Eleazar de Carvalho, Lukas Foss, Richard Burgin and Leonard Bernstein.

Four new works which have been composed for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra will be introduced at Tanglewood. They are by Copland, Piston, Hanson and Villa-Lobos.

Soloists will be Rudolf Serkin, Zino Francescatti, Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa, Adele Addison, James Pease, Donald Gramm, David Lloyd, Margaret Willauer and others.

Boris Goldovsky, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff will present a program of piano concertos by Mozart.

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school maintained by the orchestra at Tanglewood, will have its fourteenth session from July 2 through Aug. 12 under the direction of Charles Munch. Inquiries and renewals should be addressed to the Festival Office at Symphony Hall in Boston.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,252 - S. 982,681

MAR 15 1956

Berkshire Lists Two Auditions

Applicants in the New York area for the student orchestra and chamber music division of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its six-week Bershire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be auditioned at Carnegie Hall, New York City, on March 23 and March 24.

Instrumentalists are asked to appear at Carnegie Recital Hall on Friday, March 23, between 2:00 and 5:00 p.m. Harp, tympani and percusion players are asked to appear backstage at Carnegie Hall on Saturday, March 24, at 1:00 p.m.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald News (e)
FALL RIVER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 39,447

MAR 16 1956

Summer Music School Season Announced

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, announces that the 14th session of the orchestra's school, the Berkshire Music Center, will be held at Tanglewood July 2-Aug. 12.

Information on auditions for student applicants may be obtained by writing to the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston.

Goffredo Petrassi, one of Italy's foremost composers, will serve as guest teacher of composition and Eleazar de Carvalho, Brazilian conductor, will return, after five years, to serve on the fac-

MUSICAL COURIER
(NEW YORK CITY)

MAR 15 1956

Mastersingers. The music of Mozart will be especially honored in the Bach-Mozart concerts in this, the anniversary year of Mozart's birth. Choral works will include Bach's Passion According to Saint John, Martinu's "Field Mass," which will be performed by the visiting Yale Glee Club—the other choral works being performed by the Festival Chorus prepared by its Director, Hugh Ross.

The fourteenth session of the Orchestra's school, the Berkshire Music Center, will be held at Tanglewood from July 2nd to August 12th in conection with the Berkshire Festival concerts. One of Italy's foremost composers, Goffredo Petrassi, has accepted Mr. Munch's invitation to serve as guest teacher of composition. The Composition Department, headed by Aaron Copland, has included in the past such guest composers from other countries as Hindemith, Ibert, Dallapiccola, Honegger, Milhaud, and Blacher. Mr. Petrassi's recent work, Fifth Concerto for Orchestra, commissioned for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is planned for the Berkshire Festival programs. Mr. Munch continues as Director of the school, founded under the direction of the late Serge Koussevitzky in 1940. The Berkshire Music Center's department for orchestra, including conducting, will have as its head the young Brazilian conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho, who returns after five years to serve again on the faculty. He will also appear as guest conductor in the Festival. Instrumental students will also study chamber music under Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, William Kroll, noted violinist, and members of the Orchestra.

The Choral Department, headed by Hugh Ross, will form the Festival Chorus, singing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch in Bach's St. John Passion and Wagner's Die Meistersinger, Act III. Leonard Bernstein, long associated with Tanglewood, will conduct the Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, in a program dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky. The Opera Department under Boris Goldovsky will again produce several programs of opera. The Tanglewood Study Group for amateur and music enthusiasts participating in general activities will be headed by Ingolf Dahl.

Reception in honor of Lehman Engel, newly elected President of the Concert Artists Guild. Left to right: MME. MARION FRESCHL, LOUIS PERSINGER, MME MARGARET MATZENAUER, MR. ENGEL. MME. SIMON BARERE, ERNO BALOGH, and in the foreground STANLEY BABIN and HARRY CUMPSON. Mme. Barere was made Honorary President of the Guild.

Stereo Studio—Lisa Obert

Applicants in the New York area for the student orchestra and chamber music division of the Berkshire Music Center will be auditioned at Carnegie Hall, N. Y. C., on Mar. 23 and 24. Instrumentalists are asked to appear at Carnegie Recital Hall on Friday, Mar. 23, between 2:00 and 5:00 p.m.; harp, tympani and percussion players are asked to appear backstage at Carnegie Hall on Saturday, Mar. 24, at 1:00 p.m.

The audition committee consists of the principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and students accepted for the orchestra are eligible for tuition grants from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. Applicants may obtain application forms by writing to the Registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

VARIETY
NEW YORK, N. Y.

MAR 21 1956

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1956 Berkshire Festival, at Tanglewood, Mass., will be held from July 4 to Aug. 12.

Berkshire Summer Plans

The Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch will hold the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Massachusetts, from July 4 to August 12. The Festival, together with the trip to Europe which is to follow, will complete the 75th anniversary season of the Boston orchestra.

Charles Munch will conduct the majority of the Festival concerts. The guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, Eleazar de Carvalho, Lukas Foss, Richard Burgin and Leonard Bernstein. Mr. Bernstein dedicating a program to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky. Four new works which have been composed for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra and first performed in the course of the present season, will be introduced at Tanglewood — they are by Copland, Piston, Hanson and Villa-Lobos. Mr. Munch will give two all-Wagner programs, including the first act of The Valkyrie and the final scene of The

ST. LOUIS, MO.
POST-DISPATCH
Circ. D. 387,398 - S. 460,501

MAR 25 1956

AUDITIONS FOR BERKSHIRE SCHOLARSHIPS TO BE FRIDAY

Auditions for the $300 Berkshire Music Center scholarship, open to young students of orchestral instruments and sponsored by the Women's Association of the St. Louis Symphony Society, will be at 1 p.m. Friday at the Musicians' Club, 3535 Pine street.

Applicants should be advanced students or professionals and must be between the ages of 18 and 25, live in the St. Louis area, have a general education and intend to make music a career.

The award is to cover room and board at the center in western Massachusetts for a six-week course starting about July 1. Applications must be sent by Wednesday to Mrs. C. Read Boles, 7 Anfred Walk, St. Louis 24.

ST. PETERSBURG, FLA.
TIMES
Circ. D. 61,943 - S. 66,444

MAR 25 1956

Boston Symphony School To Be At Tanglewood

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, announces that the 14th session of the orchestra's school, the Berkshire Music Center, will be held at Tanglewood from July 2 to Aug. 12 in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

One of Italy's foremost composers, Goffredo Petrassi, has accepted Munch's invitation to serve as guest teacher of composition.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860

MAR 16 1956

AUDITIONS FOR FESTIVAL...

Instrumentalists to Be Tested Here for Berkshire Center

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer music school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival at Lenox, Mass., will hold auditions for student orchestra and chamber music players next Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Carnegie Recital Hall.

Harp, tympani, and percussion players will be auditioned Saturday afternoon, March 24, at 1 o'clock backstage at Carnegie Hall. Students accepted for the orchestra are eligible for tuition grants from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. Applications may be obtained from the Registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,252 - S. 982,681
MAR 15 1956

Berkshire Lists Two Auditions

Applicants in the New York area for the student orchestra and chamber music division of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its six-week Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be auditioned at Carnegie Hall, New York City, on March 23 and March 24.

Instrumentalists are asked to appear at Carnegie Recital Hall on Friday, March 23, between 2:00 and 5:00 p.m. Harp, tympani and percusion players are asked to appear backstage at Carnegie Hall on Saturday, March 24, at 1:00 p.m.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Herald News (e)
FALL RIVER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 39,447
MAR 16 1956

Summer Music School Season Announced

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, announces that the 14th session of the orchestra's school, the Berkshire Music Center, will be held at Tanglewood July 2-Aug. 12.

Information on auditions for student applicants may be obtained by writing to the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston.

Goffredo Petrassi, one of Italy's foremost composers, will serve as guest teacher of composition and Eleazar de Carvalho, Brazilian conductor, will return, after five years, to serve on the fac-

(NEW YORK CITY)
MAR 15 1956

Mastersingers. The music of Mozart will be especially honored in the Bach - Mozart concerts in this, the anniversary year of Mozart's birth. Choral works will include Bach's Passion According to Saint John, Martinu's "Field Mass," which will be performed by the visiting Yale Glee Club—the other choral works being performed by the Festival Chorus prepared by its Director, Hugh Ross.

The fourteenth session of the Orchestra's school, the Berkshire Music Center, will be held at Tanglewood from July 2nd to August 12th in conection with the Berkshire Festival concerts. One of Italy's foremost composers, Goffredo Petrassi, has accepted Mr. Munch's invitation to serve as guest teacher of composition. The Composition Department, headed by Aaron Copland, has included in the past such guest composers from other countries as Hindemith, Ibert, Dallapiccola, Honegger, Milhaud, and Blacher. Mr. Petrassi's recent work, Fifth Concerto for Orchestra, commissioned for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is planned for the Berkshire Festival programs. Mr. Munch continues as Director of the school, founded under the direction of the late Serge Koussevitzky in 1940. The Berkshire Music Center's department for orchestra, including conducting, will have as its head the young Brazilian conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho, who returns after five years to serve again on the faculty. He will also appear as guest conductor in the Festival. Instrumental students will also study chamber music under Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, William Kroll, noted violinist, and members of the Orchestra.

The Choral Department, headed by Hugh Ross, will form the Festival Chorus, singing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch in Bach's St. John Passion and Wagner's Die Meistersinger, Act III. Leonard Bernstein, long associated with Tanglewood, will conduct the Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, in a program dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky. The Opera Department under Boris Goldovsky will again produce several programs of opera. The Tanglewood Study Group for amateur and music enthusiasts participating in general activities will be headed by Ingolf Dahl.

Applicants in the New York area for the student orchestra and chamber music division of the Berkshire Music Center will be auditioned at Carnegie Hall, N. Y. C., on Mar. 23 and 24. Instrumentalists are asked to appear at Carnegie Recital Hall on Friday, Mar. 23, between 2:00 and 5:00 p.m.; harp, tympani and percussion players are asked to appear backstage at Carnegie Hall on Saturday, Mar. 24, at 1:00 p.m.

The audition committee consists of the principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and students accepted for the orchestra are eligible for tuition grants from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. Applicants may obtain application forms by writing to the Registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

Reception in honor of Lehman Engel, newly elected President of the Concert Artists Guild. Left to right: MME. MARION FRESCHL, LOUIS PERSINGER, MME MARGARET MATZENAUER, MR. ENGEL. MME. SIMON BARERE, ERNO BALOGH, and in the foreground STANLEY BABIN and HARRY CUMPSON. Mme. Barere was made Honorary President of the Guild.

Stereo Studio—Lisa Obert

Berkshire Summer Plans

The Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch will hold the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Massachusetts, from July 4 to August 12. The Festival, together with the trip to Europe which is to follow, will complete the 75th anniversary season of the Boston orchestra.

Charles Munch will conduct the majority of the Festival concerts. The guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, Eleazar de Carvalho, Lukas Foss, Richard Burgin and Leonard Bernstein, Mr. Bernstein dedicating a program to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky. Four new works which have been composed for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra and first performed in the course of the present season, will be introduced at Tanglewood — they are by Copland, Piston, Hanson and Villa-Lobos. Mr. Munch will give two all-Wagner programs, including the first act of The Valkyrie and the final scene of The

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860
MAR 16 1956

AUDITIONS FOR FESTIVAL

Instrumentalists to Be Tested Here for Berkshire Center

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer music school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival at Lenox, Mass., will hold auditions for student orchestra and chamber music players next Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Carnegie Recital Hall.

Harp, tympani, and percussion players will be auditioned Saturday afternoon, March 24, at 1 o'clock backstage at Carnegie Hall. Students accepted for the orchestra are eligible for tuition grants from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. Applications may be obtained from the Registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston.

ST. PETERSBURG, FLA.
TIMES
Circ. D. 61,943 - S. 66,444
MAR 25 1956

Boston Symphony School To Be At Tanglewood

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, announces that the 14th session of the orchestra's school, the Berkshire Music Center, will be held at Tanglewood from July 2 to Aug. 12 in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

One of Italy's foremost composers, Goffredo Petrassi, has accepted Munch's invitation to serve as guest teacher of composition.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

VARIETY
NEW YORK, N. Y.
MAR 21 1956

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1956 Berkshire Festival, at Tanglewood, Mass., will be held from July 4 to Aug. 12.

ST. LOUIS, MO.
POST-DISPATCH
Circ. D. 387,398 - S. 460,501
MAR 25 1956

AUDITIONS FOR BERKSHIRE SCHOLARSHIPS TO BE FRIDAY

Auditions for the $300 Berkshire Music Center scholarship, open to young students of orchestral instruments and sponsored by the Women's Association of the St. Louis Symphony Society, will be at 1 p.m. Friday at the Musicians' Club, 3535 Pine street.

Applicants should be advanced students or professionals and must be between the ages of 18 and 25, live in the St. Louis area, have a general education and intend to make music a career.

The award is to cover room and board at the center in western Massachusetts for a six-week course starting about July 1. Applications must be sent by Wednesday to Mrs. C. Read Boles, 7 Anfred Walk, St. Louis 24.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 221,954
MAR 18 1956

Berkshire Festival Is July 4-Aug. 12

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch director, will give the 1956 Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., from July 4 to Aug. 12.

The Festival, with the trip to Europe to follow, will complete the 75th anniversary season of the Boston Orchestra. The Berkshire Festival will comprise six weekend concerts on Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons, following the plan of last year. In addition, a series of six concerts by Chamber Music groups will be given Wednesday nights in the Theater during this period.

The majority of the Festival concerts will be conducted by director Munch. Guest conductors will be: Pierre Monteux, Eleazar de Carvalho, Lukas Foss, Richard Burgin and Leonard Bernstein. Mr. Bernstein will dedicate a program to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, who conducted the Boston for years.

Four new works which have been composed for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra and first performed in the course of the present season, will be introduced at Tanglewood. They are by Copland, Piston, Hanson and Villa-Lobos. Mr. Munch will give two all-Wagner programs, including the first act of "The Valkyrie" and the final scene of "The Mastersingers."

The music of Mozart will be especially honored in the "Bach-Mozart" concerts in this, the anniversary year of Mozart's birth. Choral works will include Bach's Passion According to Saint John, Martinu's "Field Mass," to be performed by the visiting Yale Glee Club. The other choral works to be performed by the Festive Chorus will be prepared by its director, Hugh Ross. Soloists: Rudolf Serkin, Zino Francescatti, Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa, Adele Addison, James Pease, Donald Gramm, David Lloyd, Margaret Willauer and others.

Boris Goldovsky, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff will present a program of piano concertos by Mozart. The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school maintained by this orchestra in Tanglewood, will have its 14th session July 2 through Aug. 12 under the direction of Charles Munch. Inquiries and renewals should be addressed to the Festival office at Symphony Hall in Boston.

Berkshire Festival Is July 4-Aug. 12 3-18

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch director, will give the 1956 Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., from July 4 to Aug. 12.

The Festival, with the trip to Europe to follow, will complete the 75th anniversary season of the Boston Orchestra. The Berkshire Festival will comprise six weekend concerts on Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons, following the plan of last year. In addition, a series of six concerts by Chamber Music groups will be given Wednesday nights in the Theater during this period.

The majority of the Festival concerts will be conducted by director Munch. Guest conductors will be: Pierre Monteux, Eleazar de Carvalho, Lukas Foss, Richard Burgin and Leonard Bernstein. Mr. Bernstein will dedicate a program to the memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, who conducted the Boston for years.

Four new works which have been composed for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra and first performed in the course of the present season, will be introduced at Tanglewood. They are by Copland, Piston, Hanson and Villa-Lobos. Mr. Munch will give two all-Wagner programs, including the first act of "The Valkyrie" and the final scene of "The Mastersingers."

The music of Mozart will be especially honored in the "Bach-Mozart" concerts in this, the anniversary year of Mozart's birth. Choral works will include Bach's Passion According to Saint John, Martinu's "Field Mass," to be performed by the visiting Yale Glee Club. The other choral works to be performed by the Festive Chorus will be prepared by its director, Hugh Ross. Soloists: Rudolf Serkin, Zino Francescatti, Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa, Adele Addison, James Pease, Donald Gramm, David Lloyd, Margaret Willauer and others.

Boris Goldovsky, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff will present a program of piano concertos by Mozart. The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school maintained by this orchestra in Tanglewood, will have its 14th session July 2 through Aug. 12 under the direction of Charles Munch. Inquiries and renewals should be addressed to the Festival office at Symphony Hall in Boston.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 130,559
MAR 25 1956

Berkshire Festival Plans

6 Weekends of Concerts At Tanglewood July 4-Aug. 12

By ELINOR HUGHES

The Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch will give the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Massachusetts, from July 4 to August 12. The Festival, together with the trip to Europe which is to follow, will complete the 75th anniversary season of the Boston orchestra. The Berkshire Festival will consist of six weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons following the plan of last year, when two week-ends of "Bach-Mozart" concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall were followed by four week-ends in the Shed. In addition there will be a series of six concerts by chamber music groups on Wednesday evenings in the Theater through this period.

Charles Munch will conduct the majority of the Festival concerts. The guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, Eleazar de Carvalho, Lukas Foss, Richard Burgin and Leonard Bernstein, Mr. Bernstein dedicating a program to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky. Four new works which have been composed for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra and first performed in the course of the present season, will be introduced at Tanglewood—they are by Copland, Piston, Hanson and Villa-Lobos.

WAGNER AND MOZART

Mr. Munch will give two all-Wagner programs, including the first act of "The Valkurie" and the final scene of "The Mastersingers." The music of Mozart will be especially honored in the "Bach Mozart" concerts in this, the anniversary year of Mozart's birth. Choral works will include Bach's Passion Avcording to Saint John, Martinu's "Field Mass," which will be performed by the visiting Yale Glee Club—the other choral works being performed by the Festival Chorus prepared by its director, Hugh Ross.

Soloists will consist of Rudolf Serkin, Zino Franeescatti, Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa, Adele Addison, James Lloyd, Margaret Willauer and others. Boris Goldovsky, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff will present a program of piano concertos by Mozart.

THAT ILL WIND

In view of the bad luck that the snowstorm brought to Boston's stage attractions during he pas week, it's good to learn that for the real successes in New York it did no damage at all. On Monday night, even, attendance was better than on the preceding Monday, and such cancellatioms as were made, were at once snapped up by hardy souls who had taken a chance that they might be able to buy seats for hits at the last moment. The only place where this didn't work was at "My Fair Lady," which was fairly beseiged by optimistic but unrewarded would-be patrons who wouldn't take no for an answer or move out of the lobby to allow ticket holders to enter. The police finally had to clear the lobby.

The only real casualty was in the matter of programs: the Playbill Company's truck couldn't get started, so the company settled for cast and credit sheets delivered by messenger.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860
MAR 30 1956

MUSIC NOTES

Events today: Wagner's "Parsifal," Metropolitan Opera, 1 P. M.; Philharmonic-Symphony, Guido Cantelli, conductor, Martha Lipton, mezzo-soprano, Westminster Choir, Carnegie Hall, 2:30; St. John's College Glee Club, Joseph I. Dirvin, conductor, William Knabe & Co., 10 East Forty-eighth Street, 12:30.

Also Schubert's "Miriam's Song of Triumph," A. W. Binder, conductor, Stephen Wise Free Synagogue, 8:15; Jazz Festival, Town Hall, 8:30; Swapping Song Fair, Circle in the Square Theatre, midnight.

The Berkshire Music Center will hold auditions for admission to the opera department of its summer school this afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock at Carnegie Recital Hall. The fourteenth session of the summer school, which is maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be held at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., from July 2 to Aug. 12.

DAYTON, OHIO
JOURNAL-HERALD
Circ. D. 88,500
MAR 30 1956

Berkshire Festival Program Planned

The programs are now announced for the Berkshire festival by the Boston Symphony orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, to be given in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, the summer home of this orchestra in Lenox, Mass.

The Shed concerts will take place on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 20 through Aug. 12.

The "Bach-Mozart" concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the intimate Theatre will precede these on the two previous weekends, July 6 through 15.

Chamber groups will give concerts on the six Wednesday evenings of those weeks.

Subscriptions are now being filled at Symphony Hall, Boston, for these series as well as for the Shed series of each week.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

MAR 31 1956

Benny Goodman and His Clarinet To Make Debut at Tanglewood

Benny Goodman, the famed jazz clarinetist, will make his Tanglewood debut this summer, it was announced today by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Mr. Goodman will play Mozart's clarinet concerto at one of the series of Bach-Mozart concerts to be presented in the Theater Concert Hall from July 6 through July 15 by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony musicians. These concerts will be held two weeks prior to the main Berkshire Music Festival concerts in the Music Shed. (Complete programs will be found on Page 13.

Close Berkshire Ties

Mr. Goodman, who also will be making his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has close ties with Berkshire County. His wife, the former Mrs. Alice Hammond Duckworth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Hammond, is a granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William D. Sloane, who built Elm Court in 1886.

Mr. Sloane, financier and one-time president of the New York Central Railroad, died in 1915. Three years later his widow was married to Henry White, distinguished American diplomat and former ambassador to Italy and France. He died in 1925. Mrs. White continued to spend her summers at Elm Court following the death of her second husband until her death at the Lenox estate in 1946 at the age of 94. Elm Court is now a summer resort, owned and operated by Col. and Mrs. Helm George Wilde of High Lawn. Mrs. Wilde is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William B. Osgood Field and granddaughter of Mrs. White.

Benny Goodman

Mr. and Mrs. Goodman were married in Las Vegas, Nev., in 1942. They have five children, two of their own and three by Mrs. Goodman's former marriage.

Mr. Goodman made his debut in the chamber music field in the East in 1950 when he appeared as a soloist at Music Mountain in Falls Village, Conn. He and his band appeared a few years ago at the State Armory in Pittsfield. Mr. Goodman and his orchestra have been appearing during March at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York.

Other Soloists

Other soloists in the chamber orchestra series at Tanglewood in July will be William Kroll, violinist, and Lukas Foss, pianist. Mr. Foss also will appear as a guest conductor.

The Yale Glee Club will appear under the direction of Hugh Foss, head of the choral department at the Berkshire Music Center. Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department for many seasons at Tanglewood, and Luboshutz and Nemenoff will give a program of Mozart concertos. The series will end with Bach's "Passion According to Saint John," with the Festival chorus and soloists under the direction of Charles Munch, musical director of the BSO. The Bach-Mozart programs will be announced in detail shortly.

Artists to appear in the series of six chamber music programs on Wednesday evenings (July 4 through Aug. 8) will include the Kroll String Quartet; the Beaux Arts Trio; Rudolf Serkin, piano; Margaret Harshaw in a group of lieder; the brass ensemble of the orchestra; and the Boston Symphony woodwind quartet.

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Indep. Republican
Circ. 248,07

APR 1 1956

Berkshire Music Center Announces Plans for Summer

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, announces that the 14th session of the orchestra's school, the Berkshire Music Center, will be held at Tanglewood from July 2 to Aug. 12 in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

One of Italy's foremost composers, Goffredo Petassi, has accepted Mr. Munch's invitation to serve as guest teacher of composition. The composition department, headed by Aaron Copland, has included in the past such guest composers from other countries as Hindemith, Ibert, Dallapiccola, Honegger, Milhaud and Blacher. Mr. Petrassi's recent work, Fifth Concerto for Orchestra, commissioned for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is planned for the Berkshire Festival programs shortly to be announced in full. Mr. Munch continues as director of the school, founded under the direction of the late Serge Koussevitzky in 1940.

The Berkshire Music Center's department for orchestra, including conducting, will have as its head the young Brazilian conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho, who returns after five years to serve again on the faculty. He will also appear as guest conductor in the Festival. Instrumental students will also study chamber music under Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, William Kroll, noted violinist, and members of the orchestra.

The choral department, headed by Hugh Ross, will form the Festival Chorus, singing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch in Bach's "St. John Passion" and Wagner's "Die Meistersinger," Act III. Leonard Bernstein, long associated with Tanglewood, will conduct the Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, in a program dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky. The opera department under Boris Goldovsky will again produce several programs of opera. The Tanglewood Study Group for amateur and music enthusiasts participating in general activities will be headed by Ingolf Dahl and may be attended for two, four or six weeks.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 369,241

APR 1 1956

Berkshire Festival Programs

The programs are announced for the Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, to be given in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The Shed concerts will take place on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 20 through Aug. 12.

The "Bach-Mozart" concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the intimate theatre will precede these on the two previous week-ends, July 6 through 15. Chamber groups will give concerts on the six Wednesday evenings of those weeks. Subscriptions are now being filled at Symphony Hall, Boston, for these series as well as for the Shed series of each week.

The concerts in the Music Shed will be as follows:

FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 20: (Charles Munch) Berlioz—"The Roman Carnival" Overture; Debussy—The Afternoon of a Faun; Ravel—Rapsodie Espagnole; Brahms—Symphony No. 2.

SATURDAY Evening, July 21: (Charles Munch) Wagner—"A Faust Overture"; "Waldweben" from Siegfried; Prelude and "Love-Death" from Tristan and Isolde; Die Walkure, Act I (Soloists: Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert DaCosta, tenor; James Pease, bass).

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, July 22: (Pierre Monteux) Rossini—Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri"; Bartok—Concerto for Orchestra; Schubert—Symphony No. 7 in C Major.

FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 27: (Charles Munch) Beethoven—Overture, "Leonore" No. 2; Petrassi—Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5; Tchaikovsky—Symphony No. 4.

SATURDAY EVENING, JULY 28: (Charles Munch) Hanson—Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky; Schumann—Piano Concerto in A Minor (Soloist: Rudolf Serkin); Honegger—Symphony No. 5; Debussy—"La Mer."

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 29: (Richard Burgin) Handel—Concerto Grosso in D Minor, Opus 6, No. 10; Hindemith—Violin Concerto (Soloist: Ruth Posselt); Mahler—Symphony No. 1.

FRIDAY EVENING, AUG. 3: (Eleazar de Carvalho) Hindemith—"Mathis der Maler"; Ravel—Piano Concerto (Soloist: Jocy de Oliveira); Stravinsky—"Petrouchka."

SATURDAY EVENING, AUG. 4 (Leonard Bernstein) Moevs—Variations for Orchestra; Mozart—Kyrie and Gloria from the Mass in C Minor (with Chorus and Soloists—Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor); Prokofieff—Symphony No. 5 (Concert in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky).

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, AUG. 5: (Charles Munch) Copland—Symphonic Ode; Brahms—Concerto for Violin and Cello (Soloists: Zino Francescatti and Samuel Mayes); Schumann—Symphony No. 2.

FRIDAY EVENING, AUG. 10: (Charles Munch) Haydn—Symphony No. 102 in B Flat; Piston—Symphony No. 6; Strauss—"Don Juan"; Dukas—"L'Apprenti Sorcier."

SATURDAY EVENING, AUG. 11: (Pierre Monteux) Freed—Festival Overture; Brahms—Symphony No. 3; Enesco—Suite for Orchestra; Strauss—Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier."

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, AUG. 12: (Charles Munch) Wagner—Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhauseer; A Siegfried Idyll; Die Meistersinger von Nuernberg, Act III (opening and final scene; chorus and soloists—Marguerite Willauer, Albert Da Costa and James Pease).

Benny Goodman Soloist

In the chamber orchestra series (July 6-15) music of Bach and Mozart will predominate. Benny Goodman will appear as soloist for the first time with this orchestra, playing in Mozart's Clarinet Concerto. The soloists will include William Kroll, violin, and Lukas Foss, piano. Mr. Foss also conducting a concert as guest. The Yale Glee Club will appear under the direction of Hugh Ross. Boris Goldovsky, Luboshutz and Nemenoff will give a program of Mozart Concertos. The series will end with Bach's Passion According to Saint John, with Festival Chorus and soloists under the direction of Charles Munch. The programs will be announced in detail shortly.

Artists to appear in the series of six chamber music programs on Wednesday evenings (July 4 through Aug. 8) will include the Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, Rudolf Serkin, piano; Margaret Harshaw in a group of Lieder; the Brass Ensemble of the Orchestra, and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

APR 1 1956

Shed Programs Arranged For Berkshire Festival

Concerts Announced for Afternoon and Evening Events at Tanglewood, July 20-Aug. 12, With Boston Symphony Orchestra and Soloists

Boston, March 31 — The programs are now announced for the Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, to be given in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, the summer home of the orchestra in Lenox. The Shed concerts will take place on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 20 through Aug. 12.

The "Bach-Mozart" concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the intimate Theater will precede these on the two previous week ends, July 6 through 15. Chamber groups will give concerts on the six Wednesday evenings of those weeks. Subscriptions are now being filled at Symphony Hall, Boston, for these series as well as for the Shed series of each week.

Shed Concerts

The concerts in the Music Shed will be as follows (a star indicates a work commissioned for the 75th anniversary of this orchestra in its first Berkshire Festival performance):

Friday evening, July 20: (Charles Munch) Berlioz "The Roman Carnival" Overture; Debussy "The Afternoon of a Faun"; Ravel "Rapsodie Espagnole"; Brahms Symphony No. 2.

Saturday evening, July 21: (Charles Munch) Wagner "A Faust Overture"; "Waldweben" from Siegfried; Prelude and "Love-Death" from Tristan and Isolde; Die Walkure, Act I (Soloists Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert DaCosta, tenor; James Pease, bass).

Sunday afternoon, July 22: Pierre Monteux) Rossini Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri"; Bartok Concerto for Orchestra; Schubert Symphony No. 7 in C major.

Friday evening, July 27: (Charles Munch) Beethoven Overture, "Leonore" No. 2; *Petrassi Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5; Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 4.

Saturday evening, July 28: (Charles Munch) *Hanson—Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky; Schuman Piano Concerto in A Minor (Soloist Rudolf Serkin); Honegger Symphony No. 5; Debussy "La Mer."

Sunday afternoon, July 29: Richard Burgin) Handel—Concerto Grosso in D Minor, Opus 6, No. 10; Hindemith Violin Concerto (Soloist Ruth Posselt); Mahler Symphony No. 1.

August Events

Friday evening, Aug. 3 (Eleazar de Carvalho) Hindemith "Mathis der Maler"; Ravel Piano Concerto (Soloist Joyce de Oliveira); Stravinsky "Petrouchka."

Saturday evening, Aug. 4 (Leonard Bernstein) Moevs Variations for Orchestra; Mozart Kyrie and Gloria from the Mass in C Minor (Festival Chorus and Soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor); Prokofieff Symphony No. 5 (concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky).

Sunday afternoon, Aug. 5: (Charles Munch) Copland Symphonic Ode; Brahms Concerto for Piano and Cello (Soloists Zino Francescatti and Samuel Mayes); Schumann Symphony No. 2.

Friday evening, Aug. 10: (Charles Munch) Haydn Symphony No. 102 in B flat; *Piston Symphony No. 6; Strauss "Don Juan"; Dukas "L'Apprenti Sorcier."

Saturday evening, Aug. 11: (Pierre Monteux) Freed Festival Overture; Brahms Symphony No. 3; Enesco Suite for Orchestra; Strauss Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier."

Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12: (Charles Munch) Wagner Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhaueser; A Siegfried Idyll; Die Meistersinger von Nuernberg, Act III (opening and final scene, chorus and soloists: Marguerite Willauer, Albert DaCosta and James Pease).

Goodman Soloist

In the chamber orchestra series (July 6-15) music of Bach and Mozart will predominate. Benny Goodman will appear as soloist for the first time with this orchestra, playing in Mozart's clarinet concerto. The soloists will include William Kroll, violin, and Lukas Foss, piano, Foss also conducting a concert as guest.

The Yale Glee Club will appear under the direction of Hugh Ross. Boris Goldovsky, Luboshutz and Nemenoff will give a program of Mozart concertos. The series will end with Bach's "Passion According to Saint John," with festival chorus and soloists under the direction of Charles Munch. The programs will be announced in detail later.

Artists to appear in the series of six chamber music programs on Wednesday evenings (July 4 through Aug. 8) will include the Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, Rudolf Serkin, piano; Margaret Harshaw in a group of lieder, the brass ensemble of the orchestra, and the Boston Symphony woodwind quartet.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860

APR 1 1956

4 NEW WORKS SET FOR TANGLEWOOD

Music Commissioned for 75th Year of Boston Symphony to Be Replayed at Fete

Four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for its seventy-fifth anniversary festival this season will be performed again at the orchestra's Berkshire Music Festival next summer.

The Berkshire Festival, at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., will be held Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 20 to Aug. 12.

The commissioned works to be heard are Petrassi's Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5; Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky," Copland's "Symphonic Ode" and Piston's Sixth Symphony.

Seven of the twelve concerts will be conducted by Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony.

Pierre Monteux will conduct two concerts, and Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin and Leonard Bernstein will conduct one concert each.

Soloists will include Rudolf Serkin, playing the Schumann Piano Concerto; Ruth Posselt, playing the Hindemith Violin Concerto, and Jocy de Oliveira, playing the Ravel Piano Concerto. Zino Francescatti and Samuel Mayes will be heard in the Brahms Concerto for Violin and 'Cello.

Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and David Lloyd, tenor, will sing in Mozart's C minor Mass. Margaret Willauer and Margaret Harshaw, sopranos; Albert DaCosta, tenor, and James Pease, bass, will appear in two programs of Wagnerian excerpts.

Chamber music programs will be presented in the theatre concert hall at Tanglewood between July 4 and Aug. 8. Those to appear are Benny Goodman, clarinetist; the Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, the Boston Symphony Brass Ensemble and Woodwind Quintet, the Yale Glee Club, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, duo-pianists; Boris Goldovsky and Lukas Foss, pianists, Miss Harshaw and Mr. Serkin.

SAVANNAH, GA.
NEWS
Circ. D. 50,897 - S. 58,686

APR 1 1956

Berkshire Festival Soloists Announced

An impressive program of orchestral music and a wide variety of soloists will be featured in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, the summer home of this Orchestra in Lenox, Mass. The Shed concerts will take place on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 20 through Aug. 12. The "Bach-Mozart" concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the intimate Theatre will precede these on the two previous week ends, July 6 through 15. Chamber groups will give concerts on the six Wednesday evenings of those weeks. Subscriptions are now being filled at Symphony Hall, Boston, for these series as well as for the Shed series of each week.

Munch will direct all concerts except that on July 20 to be by Richard Burgin, August 3, Eleazar de Carvalho, August 4, Leonard Bernstein and August 11, Pierre Monteux.

In the chamber orchestra series (July 6-15) music of Bach and Mozart will predominate. Benny Goodman will appear as soloist for the first time with this orchestra, playing in Mozart's Clarinet Concerto. The soloists will include William Kroll, violin, and Lukas Foss, piano, Mr. Foss also conducting a concert as guest. The Yale Glee Club will appear under the direction of Hugh Ross. Boris Goldovsky, Luboshutz and Nemenoff will give a program of Mozart Concertos. The series will end with Bach's Passion According to Saint John, with Festival Chorus and soloists under the direction of Charles Munch. The programs will be announced in detail shortly.

Artists to appear in the series of six chamber music programs on Wednesday evenings (July 4 through August 9) will include the Kroll String Quartet; the Beaux Arts Trio; Rudolf Serkin, piano; Margaret Harshaw in a group of Lieder; the Brass Ensemble of the Orchestra; and the Boston Symphony Woodwin Quartet.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

APR 1 1956

12 Berkshire Concerts For Summer Announced

Complete programs were announced yesterday for the twelve concerts which the Boston Symphony will give in this summer's Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons from July 20 through Aug. 12.

Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, will conduct seven of the concerts. Two will be conducted by Pierre Monteux and one apiece by Richard Burgin, Eleazar de Carvalho and Leonard Bernstein.

The programs follow:

Friday, July 20 (Munch): Berlioz, Roman Carnival Overture; Debussy, Afternoon of a Faun; Ravel, Rapsodie Espagnole; Brahms, Symphony No. 2.

Saturday, July 21 (Munch): Wagner, A Faust Overture; Waldweben from "Siegfried"; Prelude and Liebestod from "Tristan und Isolde" (Margaret Harshaw); "Die Walkuere," Act I (Margaret Harshaw, Albert Da Costa, James Pease).

Sunday, July 22 (Monteux): Rossini, Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri"; Bartok, Concerto for Orchestra; Schubert, Symphony in C.

Friday, July 27 (Munch): Beethoven, "Leonore" Overture No. 2; Petrassi, Concerto for Orchestra; Tchaikovsky, Symphony No. 5.

Saturday, July 28 (Munch): Hanson, Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky; Schumann, Piano Concerto (Rudolf Serkin); Honegger, Symphony No. 5; Debussy, La Mer.

Sunday, July 29 (Burgin): Handel, Concerto Grosso in D minor; Hindemith, Violin Concerto (Ruth Posselt); Mahler, Symphony No. 1.

Friday, Aug. ? (de Carvalho): Hindemith, Mathis der Maler; Ravel, Piano Concerto (Jocy de Oliveira); Stravinsky, Petrouchka.

Saturday, Aug. 4 (Bernstein): Moevs, Variations for Orchestra; Mozart, Kyrie and Gloria from C minor Mass (Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, David Lloyd and chorus); Prokofieff, Symphony No. 5 (Koussevitzky memorial program).

Sunday, Aug. 5 (Munch): Copland, Symphonic Ode; Brahms, Double Concerto (Zino Francescatti and Samuel Mayes); Schumann, Symphony No. 2.

Friday, Aug. 10 (Munch): Haydn, Symphony No. 102; Piston, Symphony No. 6; Strauss, Don Juan; Dukas, L'Apprenti Sorcier.

Saturday, Aug. 11 (Monteux): Freed, Festival Overture; Brahms, Symphony No. 3; Enesco, Suite for Orchestra; Strauss, "Rosenkavalier" Suite.

Sunday, Aug. 12 (Munch): Wagner, Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhaeuser"; Siegfried Idyll; "Die Meistersinger," opening and final scene from Act III (Marguerite Willauer, Albert Da Costa, James Pease and chorus).

Chamber Orchestra Series

The festival's chamber orchestra series of six concerts will be held in Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays from July 6 to 15. Benny Goodman will make his first appearance with the Boston Symphony in Mozart's Clarinet Concerto in A major.

Boris Goldovsky, Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff will share a program of Mozart piano concertos, and the series will end with Bach's St. John Passion under Mr. Munch's direction. The list of soloists and guest artists also includes William Kroll, violinist; Lukas Foss, pianist, who will also conduct in one of the concerts, and the Yale Glee Club.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

APR 2 1956

Programs for T... Major Concerts

The programs for the 12 major concerts of the 1956 Berkshire Music festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, were announced yesterday by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

Goodman to Play

At the same time, it was announced that Benny Goodman, who is known for his work in classic as well as popular music, will appear as soloist in one of the preliminary Bach-Mozart concerts to be given in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood July 6, 7 and 8 and 13, 14 and 15. He and members of the Boston orchestra, comprising a group of chamber orchestra proportions, will perform Mozart's Clarinet concerto.

The 12 major concerts by the full Boston orchestra in the huge music shed at Tanglewood will be given on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons on four successive week-ends starting July 20.

The announcement said subscriptions for series tickets for both the music shed concerts and the preliminary Bach-Mozart concerts are now being received at Symphony hall, Boston.

The Programs

The programs for the shed concerts, indicating who will conduct each, are as follows:

Friday evening, July 20: (Charles Munch) Berlioz—"The Roman Carnival" overture; Debussy — The Afternoon of a Faun; Ravel — Rapsodie Espagnole; Brahms — Symphony No. 2.

Saturday evening, July 21: (Charles Munch) Wagner — "A Faust Overture;" "Waldweben" from Siegfried; Prelude and

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUN 7 1956

...kshire Festival

Five Conductors Scheduled For Concerts at Tanglewood

The programs for the Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, to be given under the direction of Charles Munch this summer in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, are listed below.

The Shed concerts will take place on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 20 through Aug. 12. The "Bach-Mozart" concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the intimate Theater will precede these on the two previous weekends, July 6 through 15.

Chamber groups will give concerts on the six Wednesday evenings of those weeks. Subscriptions are now being filled at Symphony Hall, Boston, for these series, as well as for the Shed series of each week.

In the chamber orchestra series (July 6-15) music of Bach and Mozart will predominate. Benny Goodman will appear as soloist for the first time with the orchestra, playing in Mozart's Clarinet Concerto.

The soloists will include William Kroll, violin, and Lukas Foss, piano, Mr. Foss also conducting a concert as guest. The Yale Glee Club will appear under the direction of Hugh Ross. Boris Goldovsky, in company with Luboshutz and Nemenoff, will give a program of Mozart concertos.

The series will end with Bach's Passion According to Saint John, with Festival Chorus and soloists under the direction of Charles Munch.

Artists to appear in the series of six chamber music programs on Wednesday evenings (July 4 through Aug. 8) will include the Kroll String Quartet; the Beaux Arts Trio; Rudolf Serkin, piano; Margaret Harshaw in a group of lieder; the Brass Ensemble of the Orchestra; and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet.

The concerts in the Music Shed will be as follows (a star indicates a work commissioned for the 75th anniversary of this orchestra in its first Berkshire Festival performance):

Friday evening, July 20: (Charles Munch) Berlioz's "The Roman Carnival" Overture; Debussy's "The Afternoon of a Faun"; Ravel's Rhapsodie Espagnole; Brahms' Symphony No. 2.

Saturday evening, July 21: (Charles Munch) Wagner's "A Faust Overture" "Waldweben" from Siegfried; Prelude and "Love-Death" from Tristan and Isolde; "Die Walkure," Act I (Soloists Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor; James Peace, bass).

Sunday afternoon, July 22: (Pierre Monteux) Rossini's Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri"; Bartók's Concerto for Orchestra; Schubert's Symphony No. 7 in C Major.

Friday evening, July 27: (Charles Munch) Beethoven's Overture, "Leonore" No. 2; *Petrassi's Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5; Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4.

Saturday evening, July 28: (Charles Munch) *Hanson's Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky; Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor (Soloist: Rudolf Serkin); Honegger's Symphony No. 5; Debussy's "La Mer."

Sunday afternoon, July 29: (Richard Burgin) Handel's Concerto Grosso in D minor, Opus 6, No. 10; Hindemith's Violin Concerto (Soloist: Ruth Posselt); Mahler's Symphony No. 1.

Friday evening, Aug. 3: (Eleazar de Carvalho) Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler"; Ravel's Piano Concerto (Soloist: Jocy de Oliveira); Stravinsky's "Petrouchka."

Saturday evening, Aug. 4: (Leonard Bernstein) Moevs' Variations for Orchestra; Mozart's Kyrie and Gloria from the Mass in C minor (with chorus and soloists—Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor); Prokofiev's Symphony No. 5 (concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky).

Sunday afternoon, Aug. 5: (Charles Munch) *Copland's Symphonic Ode; Brahm's Concerto for Violin and Cello (Soloists: Zino Francescatti and Samuel Mayes); Schumann's Symphony No. 2.

Friday evening, Aug. 10: (Charles Munch) Haydn's Symphony No. 102 in B-flat; *Piston's Symphony No. 6; Strauss's "Don Juan"; Dukas' "L'Apprenti Sorcier."

Saturday evening, Aug. 11: (Pierre Monteux) Freed's Festival Overture; Brahms' Symphony No. 3; Enesco's Suite for Orchestra; Strauss's Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier."

Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12: (Charles Munch) Wagner's Overture and Bacchanale from "Tannhaüser"; A Siegfried Idyll; "Die Meistersinger von Nuernberg," Act III (opening and final scene; chorus and soloists—Marguerite Willauer, Albert DaCosta and James Pease).

New Providence, N. J.
Providence Hts. Dispatch
W.
APR 5 1956

...in thick ...stivals all ...anglewood, ...bryo com- ...the Berk- ...ton Sym- ...nch, con- ...t 12. ...val, New

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2325
APR 5 1956

Tanglewood's '56 Programs Listed

Festival Will Start July 20 and End August 12

Boston Symphony Orchestra to Offer Six Week-ends of Concerts As It Observes Its 75th Anniversary.—Chamber Music Recitals Set for Wednesday Evenings.

The programs have been announced for the Berkshire Music Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, to be given in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, the summer home of this orchestra in Lenox. The Shed concerts will take place on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 20 through August 12.

The "Bach-Mozart" concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the intimate theatre will precede these on the two previous week-ends, July 6 through 15. Chamber groups will give concerts on six Wednesday evenings of those weeks. Subscriptions are now being filled at Symphony Hall, Boston, for these series as well as for the Shed series of each week.

The concerts in the Music Shed will be as follows (a star indicates a work commissioned for the 75th anniversary of this orchestra in its first Berkshire Festival performance):

Friday evening, July 20: (Charles Munch) Berlioz—"The Roman Carnival" Overture; Debussy—The Afternoon of a Faun; Ravel—Rapsodie Espagnole; Brahms—Symphony No. 2.

Saturday evening, July 21: (Charles Munch) Wagner—"A Faust Overture"; "Waldweber" from Siegfried; Prelude and "Love-Death" from Thiston and Isolde; Die Walkure, Act I (Soloists: Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert DaCosta, tenor; James Pease, bass.)

Sunday afternoon, July 22: (Pierre Monteux) Rossini — Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri"; Bartok—Concerto for Orchestra; Schubert—Symphony No. 7 in C Major.

Friday evening, July 27: (Charles Munch) Beethoven — Overture, "Lenore" No. 2; *Petrassi—Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5; Tchaikovsky—Symphony No. 4.

Saturday evening, July 28: (Charles Munch) *Hanson—Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky; Schumann—Piano Concerto in A Minor (Soloist: Rudolf Serkin); Honegger — Symphony No. 5; Debussy—"La Mer."

Sunday afternoon, July 29: (Richard Burgin) Handel—Concerto Grosso in D Minor, Opus 6, No. 10; Hindemith—Violin Concerto (Soloist: Ruth Posselt); Mahler—Symphony No. 1.

Friday evening, August 3: (Eleazar de Carvalho) Hindemith—"Mathis der Maler"; Ravel—Piano Concerto (Soloist: Jocy de Oliveira); Stravinsky—"Petrouchka."

Saturday evening, August 4 (Leonard Bernstein) Moevs—Variations for Orchestra; Mozart—Kyrie and Gloria from the Mass in C Minor (with Chorus and Soloists—Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor); Prokofieff—Symphony No. 5. (Concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.)

Sunday afternoon, August 5: (Charles Munch) *Copland—Symphonic Ode; Brahms—Concerto for Violin and Cello (Soloists: Zino Francescatti and Samuel Mayes); Schumann—Symphony No. 2.

Friday evening, August 10: (Charles Munch) Haydn—Symphony No. 102 in B Flat; *Piston—Symphony No. 6; Strauss—"Don Juan); Dukas—"L'Apprenti Sorcier."

Saturday evening, August 11: (Pierre Monteux) Freed—Festival Overture; Brahms—Symphony No. 3; Enesco — Suite for Orchestra; Strauss—Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier."

Sunday afternoon, August 12: (Charles Munch) Wagner—Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhaueser; A Siegfried Idyll; Die Meistersinger von Nurenberg, Act III (opening and final scene; chorus and soloist—Marguerite Willauer, Albert Da Costa and James Peace).

Maplew'd-S. Orange, N. J.
NEWS-RECORD
Circ. W. 2,598
APR 5 1956

...ews
...lass.
...ependent
...14

APR 6

Circulars are coming in thick and fast for summer festivals all over our country. Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., where embryo composers have a chance at the Berkshire Festival, the Boston Symphony with Charles Munch, conductor. July 4 to August 12.

American Dance Festival, New London, Conn. August.

Robin Hood Dell, Concerts. Philadelphia, Pa. June to August.

Stadium Concerts, New York City, June 18 to July 28.

Plymouth Rock Center of Music and Drama, concerts, opera, plays, July and August.

Goffredo Petrassi named to faculty of Tanglewood's Berkshire Center

Goffredo Petrassi, one of Italy's foremost composers, who took part in the recent Salute to Rome, will serve as guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center from July 2 to August 12.

The Center has held sessions for the past 14 years in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. The invitation was extended by Charles Munch, musical director of the orchestra.

Petrassi's recent composition, Fifth Concerto for Orchestra, was commissioned especially for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony orchestra and is one of the works planned for the festival programs. The world premier of this piece was played during the recent Salute to Rome.

Guest composers in the past have included such notables as Hindemith, Ibert, Dallapiccola, Honegger, Milhaud, and Blacher.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

APR 2 1956

Programs for Tanglewood Major Concerts Announced

The programs for the 12 major concerts of the 1956 Berkshire Music festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, were announced yesterday by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

Goodman to Play

At the same time, it was announced that Benny Goodman, who is known for his work in classic as well as popular music, will appear as soloist in one of the preliminary Bach-Mozart concerts to be given in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood July 6, 7 and 8 and 13, 14 and 15. He and members of the Boston orchestra, comprising a group of chamber orchestra proportions, will perform Mozart's Clarinet concerto.

The 12 major concerts by the full Boston orchestra in the huge music shed at Tanglewood will be given on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons on four successive week-ends starting July 20.

The announcement said subscriptions for series tickets for both the music shed concerts and the preliminary Bach-Mozart concerts are now being received at Symphony hall, Boston.

The Programs

The programs for the shed concerts, indicating who will conduct each, are as follows:

Friday evening, July 20: (Charles Munch) Berlioz—"The Roman Carnival" overture; Debussy — The Afternoon of a Faun; Ravel — Rapsodie Espagnole; Brahms — Symphony No. 2.

Saturday evening, July 21: (Charles Munch) Wagner — "A Faust Overture;" "Waldweben" from Siegfried; Prelude and Love-Death" from Tristan and Isolde; Die Walkure, Act I (Soloists: Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert DaCosta, tenor; James Pease, bass).

Sunday afternoon, July 22: (Pierre Monteux) Rossini — Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri;" Bartok — Concerto for Orchestra; Schubert — Symphony No. 7 in C major.

Friday evening, July 27: (Charles Munch) Beethoven — Overture, "Leonore" No. 2; Petrassi — Concerto for Orchestra,, No. 5; Tchaikovski — Symphony No. 4.

Saturday evening, July 28: (Charles Munch) Hanson — Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky; Schumann — Piano Concerto in A minor (Soloist: Rudolf Serkin); Honegger — Symphony No. 5; Debussy — "La Mer."

Sunday afternoon, July 29; (Richard Burgin) Handel — Concerto Grosso in D minor, Opus 6, No. 10; Hindemith — Violin concerto (Soloist: Ruth Posselt); Mahler — Symphony No. 1.

Saturday evening, Aug. 4 zar de Carvalho) Hindemith—"Mathis der Maler;" Ravel — Piano concerto (Soloist: Jocy de Oliveira); Stravinsky — "Petrouchka."

Saturday evening, Aug. 3 (Leonard Bernstein) Moevs — Variations for Orchestra; Mozart — Kyrie and Gloria from the Mass in C minor (with Chorus and Soloists — Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor); Prokofieff — Symphony No. 5. (Concert in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky).

Sunday afternoon, Aug. 5: (Charles Munch) Copland — Symphonic Ode; Brahms — Concerto for Violin and Cello (Soloists: Zino Francescatti and Samuel Mayes); Schumann — Symphony No. 2.

Friday evening, Aug. 10: (Charles Munch) Haydn — Symphony No. 102 in B flat; Piston — Symphony No. 6; Strauss — "Don Juan"; Dukas — "L'Apprenti Sorcier."

Saturday evening, Aug. 11: (Pierre Monteux) Freed — Festival overture; Brahms — Symphony No. 3; Enesco — Suite for Orchestra; Strauss — Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier."

Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12: (Charles Munch) Wagner — Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhaueser; A Siegfried Idyll; Die Meistersinger von Nuernberg, Act III (opening and final scene; chorus and soloists — Marguerite Willauer, Albert Da Costa and James Pease)

Maplew'd-S. Orange, N. J.
NEWS-RECORD
Circ. W. 2,598

APR 5 1956

Circulars are coming in thick and fast for summer festivals all over our country. Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., where embryo composers have a chance at the Berkshire Festival, the Boston Symphony with Charles Munch, conductor. July 4 to August 12.

American Dance Festival, New London, Conn. August.

Robin Hood Dell, Concerts. Philadelphia, Pa. June to August.

Stadium Concerts, New York City, June 18 to July 28.

Plymouth Rock Center of Music and Drama, concerts, opera, plays, July and August.

Italian News
BOSTON, Mass.
t Weekly Independent
Circ. 12,414

APR 6

Goffredo Petrassi named to faculty of Tanglewood's Berkshire Center

Goffredo Petrassi, one of Italy's foremost composers, who took part in the recent Salute to Rome, will serve as guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center from July 2 to August 12.

The Center has held sessions for the past 14 years in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. The invitation was extended by Charles Munch, musical director of the orchestra.

Petrassi's recent composition, Fifth Concerto for Orchestra, was commissioned especially for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony orchestra and is one of the works planned for the festival programs. The world premier of this piece was played during the recent Salute to Rome.

Guest composers in the past have included such notables as Hindemith, Ibert, Dallapiccola, Honegger, Milhaud, and Blacher.

APR 5 1956

Circulars are coming in thick and fast for summer festivals all over our country. Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., where embryo composers have a chance at the Berkshire Festival, the Boston Symphony with Charles Munch, conductor. July 4 to August 12.

American Dance Festival, New London, Conn. August.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2325

APR 5 1956

Tanglewood's '56 Programs Listed

Festival Will Start July 20 and End August 12

Boston Symphony Orchestra to Offer Six Week-ends of Concerts As It Observes Its 75th Anniversary.—Chamber Music Recitals Set for Wednesday Evenings.

The programs have been announced for the Berkshire Music Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, to be given in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, the summer home of this orchestra in Lenox. The Shed concerts will take place on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 20 through August 12.

The "Bach-Mozart" concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the intimate theatre will precede these on the two previous week-ends, July 6 through 15. Chamber groups will give concerts on six Wednesday evenings of those weeks. Subscriptions are now being filled at Symphony Hall, Boston, for these series as well as for the Shed series of each week.

The concerts in the Music Shed will be as follows (a star indicates a work commissioned for the 75th anniversary of this orchestra in its first Berkshire Festival performance):

Friday evening, July 20: (Charles Munch) Berlioz—"The Roman Carnival" Overture; Debussy—The Afternoon of a Faun; Ravel—Rapsodie Espagnole; Brahms—Symphony No. 2.

Saturday evening, July 21: (Charles Munch) Wagner—"A Faust Overture"; "Waldweber" from Siegfried; Prelude and "Love-Death" from Thiston and Isolde; Die Walkure, Act I (Soloists: Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert DaCosta, tenor; James Pease, bass.)

Sunday afternoon, July 22: (Pierre Monteux) Rossini — Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri"; Bartok—Concerto for Orchestra; Schubert—Symphony No. 7 in C Major.

Friday evening, July 27: (Charles Munch) Beethoven — Overture, "Lenore" No. 2; *Petrassi—Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5; Tchaikovsky—Symphony No. 4.

Saturday evening, July 28: (Charles Munch) *Hanson—Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky; Schumann—Piano Concerto in A Minor (Soloist: Rudolf Serkin); Honegger — Symphony No. 5; Debussy—"La Mer."

Sunday afternoon, July 29: (Richard Burgin) Handel—Concerto Grosso in D Minor, Opus 6, No. 10; Hindemith—Violin Concerto (Soloist: Ruth Posselt); Mahler—Symphony No. 1.

Friday evening, August 3: (Eleazar de Carvalho) Hindemith—"Mathis der Maler"; Ravel—Piano Concerto (Soloist: Jocy de Oliveira); Stravinsky—"Petrouchka."

Saturday evening, August 4 (Leonard Bernstein) Moevs—Variations for Orchestra; Mozart—Kyrie and Gloria from the Mass in C Minor (with Chorus and Soloists—Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor); Prokofieff—Symphony No. 5. (Concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.)

Sunday afternoon, August 5: (Charles Munch) *Copland—Symphonic Ode; Brahms—Concerto for Violin and Cello (Soloists: Zino Francescatti and Samuel Mayes); Schumann—Symphony No. 2.

Friday evening, August 10: (Charles Munch) Haydn—Symphony No. 102 in B Flat; *Piston—Symphony No. 6; Strauss—"Don Juan"; Dukas—"L'Apprenti Sorcier."

Saturday evening, August 11: (Pierre Monteux) Freed—Festival Overture; Brahms—Symphony No. 3; Enesco — Suite for Orchestra; Strauss—Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier."

Sunday afternoon, August 12: (Charles Munch) Wagner—Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhaueser; A Siegfried Idyll; Die Meistersinger von Nurenberg, Act III (opening and final scene; chorus and soloist—Marguerite Willauer, Albert Da Costa and James Peace).

140

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 103,999

APR 8 1956

Music

Programs Announced For Berkshire Festival

By RAYMOND MORIN, Telegram Music Critic

The programs are now announced for the Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, to be given in the Music Shed at Tanglewood from July 20 through Aug. 12.

Conductors will be Charles Munch, Pierre Monteux, Richard Burgin, Eleazar de Carvalho and Leonard Bernstein.

Here are the programs:

July 20 (Munch) — Berlioz, "The Roman Carnival Overture"; Debussy, The Afternoon of a Faun; Raval, Rapsodie Espagnole; Brahm, Symphony No. 2.

Wagner

July 21 (Munch) — Wagner, "A Faust Overture"; "Waldweben" from Siegfried; Prelude and "Love-Death" from Tristan and Isolde; Die Walkure, Act 1 (Soloists: Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert DaCosta, tenor; James Pease, bass).

July 22 (Monteux)—Rossini, Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri"; Bartok, Concerto for Orchestra; Schubert, Symphony No. 7 in C major.

July 27 (Much) — Beethoven, Overture, "Leonore" No. 2; Petrassi, Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5; Tchaikovsky, Symphony No. 4.

Hanson

July 28 (Munch) — Hanson, Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky; Schumann, Piano Concerto in A minor (Coloist: Rudolf Serkin); Honegger, Symphony No. 5; Debussy, "La Mer."

July 29 (Burgin) — Handel, Concerto Grosso in D minor, Opus 6, No. 10; Hindemith, Violin Concerto (Soloist: Ruth Posselt); Mahler, Symphony No. 1.

Aug. 3 (Carvalho) — Hindemith, "Mathis der Maler"; Ravel, Piano Concerto (Soloist: Jocy de Oliviera); Stravinsky, "Petrouchka."

Aug. 4 (Bernstein) — Moevs, Variations for Orchestra; Mozart, Kyrie and Gloria from Mass in C minor (with chorus and soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor); Prokofieff, Symphony No. 5.

Aug. 5 (Munch)—Copeland, Symphonic Ode; Brahms, Concerto for Violin and Cello (Soloists: Zino Francescatti and Samuel Mayes); Schumann, Symphony No. 2.

Aug. 10 (Munch) — Haydn, Symphony No. 102 in B flat; Piston, Symphony No. 6; Strauss, "Don Juan"; Dukas, "The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

Festivalann,ekmT"lebm h y,t

Aug. 11 (Monteux) — Freed, Festival Overture; Brahms, Symphony No. 3, Enesco, Suite for Orchestra; Strauss, Suite from "Rosenkavalier."

Aug. 12 (Munch) — Wagner, Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhauser; A Siegfried Idyll; Die Meistersinger, Act III (opening and final scene; chorus and soloists: Marguerite Willauer, Albert Da Costa, and James pease.)

In the chamber orchestra series (July 6-15) music of Bach and Mozart will predominate. Benny Goodman will appear as soloist for the first time with the Boston Symphony playing Mozart's Clarinet Concerto.

Other soloists will include William Kroll, violinist, and Lukas will appear under the direction of Hugh Ross. Boris Goldovsky, Luboshutz and Nemenoff will give a program of Mozart concertos.

The series will end with Bach's Passion According to St. John, with Festival Chorus and soloists directed by Munch.

Artists

Artists to appear in the series of six chamber music programs on Wednesday evenings (July 4 through Aug. 8) will include the Kroll String Quartet; Beaux Arts Trio; Rudolf Serkin; Margaret Hershaw; the brass ensemble of the orchestra, and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet.

The Friday and Saturday Shed concerts are in the evening; Sundays, in the afternoon. Subscriptions are now being filled at Symphony Hall, Boston, for all series.

Sunday Advertiser
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 547,691

APR 8 - 1956

Benny Goodman in Mozart Concerto at Tanglewood

Benny Goodman will appear as soloist for the first time with the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the Berkshire Festival in Lenox this summer, it was announced yesterday. He will play the Mozart Clarinet Concerto, in the chamber orchestra series extending from July 5 to July 16.

This series will concentrate on the music of Bach and Mozart, and will have as other soloists William Kroll, violin and Lukas Foss, piano. The Yale Glee Club will appear under the direction of Hugh Ross.

FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 20: (Charles Munch) Berlioz—"The Roman Carnival" Overture; Debussy—The Afternoon of a Faun; Ravel — Rapsodie Espagnole; Brahms—Symphony No. 2.

SATURDAY EVENING, JULY 21: (Charles Munch) Wagner—"A Faust Overture"; "Waldweben" from Siegfried; Prelude and "Love-Death" from Tristan and Isolde; Die Walkure, Act. I (Soloists: Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert DaCosta, tenor; James Pease, bass).

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, July 22: (Pierre Monteux) Rossini—Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri;" Bartok — Concerto for Orchestra; Schubert—Symphony No. 7 in C Major.

FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 27: (Charles Munch) Beethoven—Overture, "Leonore" No. 2; *Petrassi—Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5; Tchaikovsky—Symphony No. 4.

SATURDAY EVENING, JULY 28: (Charles Munch) *Hanson—Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky; Schumann—Piano Concerto in A Minor (Soloist: Rudolph Serkin); Honegger—Symphony No. 5; Debussy—"La Mer".

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 29: (Richard Burgin) Handel—Concerto Grosso in D Minor, Opus 6, No. 10; Hindemith—Violin Concerto (Soloist: Ruth Posselt); Mahler—Symphony No. 1.

FRIDAY EVENING, AUG. 3—(Eleazar de Carvalho) Hindemith—"Mathis der Maler"; Ravel—Piano Concerto (Soloist: Jocy de Oliveira); Stravinsky—"Petrouchka."

SATURDAY EVENING, AUG. 4—(Leonard Bernstein) Moevs—Variations for Orchestra; Mozart—Kyrie and Gloria from the Mass in C Minor (with Chorus and Soloists—Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor); Prokofieff—Symphony No. 5. (Concert in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky.)

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, AUG. 5—(Charles Munch) *Copland—Symphonic Ode; Brahms — Concerto for Violin and Cello (Soloists: Zino Francescatti and Samuel Mayes); Schumann—Symphony No. 2.

FRIDAY EVENING, AUG. 10—(Charles Munch) Haydn—Symphony No. 102 in B Flat; *Piston—Symphony No. 6; Strauss—"Don Juan"; Dukas—"L'Apprenti Sorcier."

SATURDAY EVENING, AUG. 11—(Pierre Monteux) Freed—Festival Overture; Brahms—Symphony No. 3; Enesco — Suite for Orchestra; Strauss — Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier."

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, AUG. 12—(Charles Munch) Wagner—Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhaueser; A Siegfried Idyll; Die Meistersinger von Nuernberg, Act III (opening and final scene; chorus and soloists—Marguerite Willauer, Albert Da Costa and James Pease).

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081

1 2 1956

Local Man to Compose Work for Tanglewood

Alvin Epstein, young Hartford composer, has been commissioned by the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago, to compose a work to be premiered at Tanglewood this Summer.

Paul Fromm, the Foundation's president, in a letter to Mr. Epstein wrote, "At the suggestion of Aaron Copland, we are inviting you to write a work for one of the two Tanglewood chamber concerts under our sponsorship. We hope you will accept our grant of $350 for this commission."

Mr. Epstein, who spent last year studying abroad at the Salzburg Mozarteum under a Fulbright Fellowship, has won numerous nationwide competitions with his compositions.

Two of these were contests sponsored by the Mannes School in New York, and Broadcast Music Inc. Last year the Women's Committee of the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra of California awarded him a special prize for the work he submitted in their national contest.

The composer is a graduate of Weaver High School, attended the Universities of Connecticut and Maine, and is a composition graduate of Hartt College of Music where he received the bachelor of music degree in 1950, and the master of music degree in 1952.

ALVIN EPSTEIN

His teachers at Hartt have been Dr. Isadore Freed and Arnold Franchetti. Mr. Epstein has been a member of the faculty at Hartt since October, 1950, and lives at 386 Vine St.

Italian News
BOSTON, Mass.
t Weekly Independent
Circ. 12,414

APR 13 1956

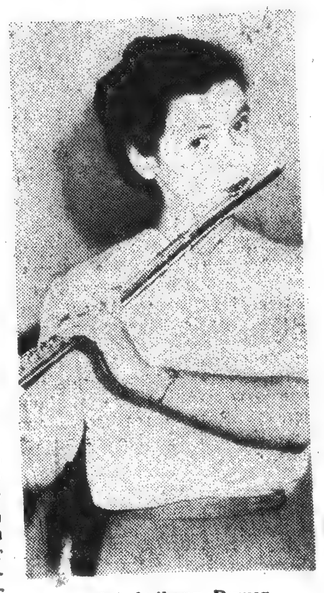
SOLOIST — Zino Francescati, who has been named soloist for the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Aug. 5 presentation of Brahms Concerto for Violin and Cello at Tanglewood.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

APR 14 1956

Mozart Music To Be Featured At Beginning of 1956 Festival

TANGLEWOOD — The music of Mozart will be played in half of the chamber music concerts at Tanglewood next summer. The Bach-Mozart series, by an orchestra of chamber proportions will be heard in the Theater-Concert Hall during the first two weekends of the Festival, prior to the Shed concerts, on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoons July 6, 7, 8 and 13, 14, 15. Charles Munch will conduct the first and last two of the six concerts and Lukas Foss, Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz will conduct the others as guests, it was announced today by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.



Doriot Anthony Dwyer

Goodman Plays July 6

Benny Goodman will play as soloist in Mozart's Clarinet Concerto K. 622, to be performed on Friday evening, July 6. Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony, will be the soloist in Bach's Suite No. 2 in B minor for Flute and Strings, on Saturday evening, July 14. Both Mrs. Dwyer and Mr. Goodman will play under the direction of Munch.

Another series of chamber concerts will be given on the six Wednesday evenings of the Festival, July 4, 11, 18, 25 and Aug. 1 and 8, in the Theater-Concert Hall.

The Shed concerts will take place on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, July 20 to Aug. 12. Mr. Munch will conduct seven of the concerts, Pierre Monteux two, and Leonard Bernstein, Eleazer de Carvalho and Richard Burgin one each. Soloists will be Rudolf Serkin and Jocy de Oliveira, piano; Zino Francescatti and Ruth Posselt, violin; Margaret Harshaw, Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, Marguerite Willauer, Albert Da Costa, David Lloyd and James Pease will sing.

200th Anniversary

Four works commissioned for the 75th anniversary season of the Boston Symphony which the Festival will bring to a close are by Goffredo Petrassi, Walter Piston, Howard Hanson and Aaron Copland.

The programs offer a variety of works by Mozart whose 200th anniversary is being celebrated this year. Two of the symphonies, three piano concertos and the Sinfonia Concertante for woodwinds will be presented as well as the Concerto for clarinet. On Saturday evening, Aug. 4, the Kyrie and Gloria from the C minor Mass will be performed, and the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center plans to present "Cosi Fan Tutte."

The Programs

The program for the chamber music concerts will be as follows:

Friday evening, July 6: Mozart program conducted by Charles Munch—Symphony No. 40 in G Minor; Clarinet Concerto (Soloist: Benny Goodman); Symphony in D, Prague.

Saturday evening, July 7: Charles Munch conducting Mozart—Symphony in D, Haffner and Sinfonia Concertante in E Flat for Woodwinds. Hugh Ross conducting: Martinu—Military Mass; Cowell—Hymn and Fuguing Tune No. 11 (First performance). (both with the Yale Glee Club).

Sunday afternoon, July 8: Lukas Foss conducting: Haydn—Symphony No. 98 in B Flat; Ives—The Unanswered Question; Haieff—Divertimento; Bach-Webern—Fugue from "The Musical Offering"; Bach—Piano Concerto in D Minor (soloist: Lukas Foss).

Friday evening, July 13: A program of Mozart piano concertos—Concerto in F for Three Pianos, K. 242; Piano Concerto in A, K. 488; Concerto in E Flat for Two Pianos, K. 365 (soloists: Luboshutz and Nemenoff and Boris Goldovsky).

Saturday evening, July 14: A Bach program conducted by Charles Munch—Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F; Violin Concerto No. 2 in E (soloist: William Kroll); Suite No. 2 in B Minor for Flute and Strings (soloist: Doriot Anthony Dwyer); Suite No. 3 in D.

Sunday afternoon, July 15: Bach's Passion According to Saint John, Charles Munch conducting. With chorus and soloists including Adele Addison, soprano; David Lloyd, tenor; James Joyce, bass; Mac Morgan, bass.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860

APR 14 1956

BOSTON SYMPHONY TO PLAY AT FETE

Orchestra's Bach-Mozart Programs Will Be Offered During Berkshire Festival

The Bach-Mozart programs of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival will contribute this summer to the Mozart bicentennial celebrations.

The series will be presented during the first two week-ends of the festival, Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, July 6, 7, 8, 13, 14 and 15. In addition to these concerts, the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center, Lenox, Mass., plans to present Mozart's "Cosi fan tutte" on Saturday evening, Aug. 4.

Details of the first two week-ends of concerts follow:

Friday evening, July 6—Mozart program conducted by Charles Munch: Symphony No. 40 in G minor, Clarinet Concerto with Benny Goodman as soloist, "Prague" Symphony in D.

Saturday evening, July 7—Mr. Munch conducts Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony in D and Sinfonia Concertante for Winds in E flat; Hugh Ross conducts Martinu's Military Mass and Cowell's Hymn and Fuguing Tune No. 11, both with the Yale Glee Club.

Sunday afternoon, July 8—Lukas Foss conducts Haydn's B flat Symphony No. 98; Ives' "The Unanswered Question"; Haieff's "Divertimento"; Webern's arrangement of a Fugue from Bach's "Musical Offering," and the Bach D minor Concerto with Mr. Foss as piano soloist.

Friday evening, July 13—Luboschutz and Nemenoff and Boris Goldowsky in a program of Mozart piano concertos: the Three-piano Concerto in F (K. 242), Solo Piano Concerto in A (K. 488) and Two-piano Concerto in E flat (K. 365).

Saturday evening, July 14—Bach program conducted by Mr. Munch: Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F, Violin Concerto No. 2 in E with William Kroll as soloist, Suite No. 2 in B minor; Suite No. 3 in D.

Sunday afternoon, July 15: Bach's "Passion According to St. John," with Mr. Munch conducting; Adele Addison, soprano, David Lloyd, tenor; James Joyce, bass, and Mac Morgan, bass.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2325

APR 19 1956

Lists Programs of Bach and Mozart

Scheduled for Tanglewood on Two July Week-ends

Chamber Orchestra of Boston Symphony Will Offer Variety of Works by Mozart, Including Two Symphonies.—Bach's Passion According to Saint John Booked.

The Bach-Mozart programs of the Berkshire Festival were announced this week from Symphony Hall, Boston. This series of concerts by a chamber orchestra from the Boston Symphony Orchestra, now in its 75th anniversary season, will be heard in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood in Lenox during the first two week-ends of the Festival, on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, July 6, 7, 8, and 13, 14 and 15.

The programs offer a variety of works by Mozart, whose 200th anniversary is being celebrated this year; two of the symphonies, three piano concertos, the Concerto for Clarinet and the Sinfonia Concertante for Woodwinds. On Saturday evening, August 4, in the Music Shed, the Kyrie and Gloria from the C Minor Mass will be performed, and the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center plans to present "Cosi Fan Tutte."

Of the works of Bach in the Bach-Mozart series there will be a violin concerto, a piano concerto and a suite for flute among other works, culminating in a performance of the great Passion According to Saint John.

The clarinetist, Benny Goodman, will make his first appearance as soloist at Tanglewood. Details of programs and soloists for the Bach-Mozart concerts are as follows:

Friday evening, July 6: Mozart program conducted by Charles Munch: Symphony No. 40 in G minor; Clarinet Concerto (Soloist: Benny Goodman); Symphony in D, "Prague."

Saturday evening, July 7, Charles Munch conducting: Mozart, Symphony in D, "Haffner" and Sinfonia Concertante in E Flat for Woodwinds. Hugh Ross conducting: Martinu, Military Mass; Cowell, Hymn and Fuguing Tune No. 11 (first performance) (Both with the Yale Glee Club.)

Sunday afternoon, July 8, Lukas Foss conducting: Haydn, Symphony No. 98 in B Flat; Ives, The Unanswered Question; Haieff, Divertimento Bach-Webern, Fugue from "The Musical Offering"; Bach, Piano Concert in D Minor (Soloist: Lukas Foss).

Friday evening, July 13, a program of Mozart Piano Concertos: Concert in F for Three Pianos, K. 242; Pian Concerto in A. K. 488; Concer to in E Flat for Two Piano K. 365 (Soloists: Luboshutz and Nen enoff and Boris Goldovsky).

Saturday evening, July 14, a Bac program conducted by Charl Munch: Brandenburg Concerto N 2 in F; Violin Concerto No. 2 in (Soloist: William Kroll); Suite N 2 in B Minor for Flute and String (Soloist: Doriot Anthony Dwyer Suite No. 3 in D.

Sunday afternoon, July 15, Bach Passion According to Saint Joh Charles Munch conducting. Wit chorus and soloists including Ade Addison, soprano; David Lloyd, te or; James Joyce, bass; Mac Morga bass.

Standard-Times (e)
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 58,894

17 1956

Music Festival Program Is Set

Tanglewood Concerts Will Begin July 20

Special to The Standard-Times

BOSTON, April 17 — The programs are now announced for the Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch to be given in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, the Summer home of this orchestra in Lenox.

The Shed concerts will take place on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 20 through August 12. The "Bach-Mozart" concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the intimate Theater will precede these on the two previous week-ends, July 6 through 15.

Chamber groups will give concerts on the six Wednesday evenings of those weeks. Subscriptions are now being filled at Symphony Hall, Boston, for these series as well as for the Shed series of each week.

The concerts in the Music Shed will be as follows:

FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 20: Charles Munch) Berlioz—"The Roman Carnival Overture; Debussy—The Afternoon of a Faun; Ravel—Rapsodie Espagnole Brahms—Symphony No. 2.

SATURDAY EVENING, JULY 21: (Charles Munch) Wagner—"A Faust Overture;" "Waldweben" from Siegfried; Prelude and "Love-Death" from Tristan and Isolde; Die Walkure, Act I (soloists: Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor; James Pease, bass).

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 22: Pierre Monteux) Rossini—Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri;" Bartok—Concerto for Orchestra: Schubert—Symphony No. 7 in C Major.

FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 27: Charles Munch) Beethoven—Overture, Leonore No. 2; Petrassi—Concerto for Orchestra No. 5; Tchaikovsky—Symphony No. 4.

SATURDAY EVENING, JULY 28: (Charles Munch) Hansen—Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky; Schumann—Piano Concerto in A Minor (soloist Rudolf Serkin); Honegger—Symphony No. 3; Debussy—"La Mer."

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 29: Richard Burgin) Handel—Concerto Grosso in D Minor, Opus 6, No. 10; Hindemith—Violin Concerto (soloist Ruth Posselt); Mahler—Symphony No. 1.

FRIDAY EVENING, AUG. 3: Eleazar Carvalho) Hindemith—"Metamorphoses;" Ravel—Piano Concerto (soloist Jocy de Oliveira); Stravinsky—Petrouchka.

SATURDAY EVENING, AUG. 4: Leonard Bernstein) Mozart—Kyrie and Gloria from the Mass in C Minor (with chorus and soloists—Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor); Prokofieff—Symphony No. 5; Concerto in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, AUG. 5: Charles Munch) Copland—Symphonic Ode; Brahms—Concerto for Violin and Cello (soloists Zino Francescatti and Samuel Mayes); Schumann—Symphony No. 2.

FRIDAY EVENING, AUG. 10: Charles Munch: Haydn—Symphony No. 98 in B Flat; Piston—Symphony No. 4; Strauss—"Don Juan;" Dukas—"L'Apprenti Sorcier."

SATURDAY EVENING, AUG. 11: Pierre Monteux: Ferroud—Feerie; Debussy—Brahms—Symphony No. 1; Ibert—Suite for Orchestra; Strauss—Suite from Rosenkavalier.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, AUG. 12: (Charles Munch) Wagner—Overture to "Tannhauser;" Bacchanale from Tannhauser; Siegfried Idyll; Die Meistersinger, Act III (excerpts); Alban Berg—Three Pieces for chorus and orchestra; Mahler—Symphony No. 4 (soloist Mary Davis Albert DaCosta and James Pease).

In the chamber orchestra series music of Bach and Mozart will predominate. Benny Goodman will appear as soloist for the first time with this orchestra playing in Mozart's Clarinet Concerto. The soloists will include William Kroll, violin, and Lukas Foss, piano. Mr. Foss also conducting a concert as guest.

The Yale Glee Club will appear under the direction of Hugh Ross. Boris Goldovsky, Luboshutz and Nemenoff will give a program of Mozart concertos. The series will end with Bach's Passion According to Saint John with Festival Chorus and soloists under the direction of Charles Munch. The programs will be announced in detail shortly.

Artists to appear in the series of six chamber music programs on Wednesday evenings will include the Kroll String Quartet; the Beaux Arts Trio; Rudolf Serkin, piano; Margaret Harshaw in a group of Lieder; the Brass Ensemble of the orchestra, and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet.

141

rd-Times (e)
DFORD, Mass.
ependent
rc. 58,894

1956 c Festival ram Is Set lewood Concerts Begin July 20

he Standard-Times
N, April 17 — The pro- now announced for the Festival by the Bos- phony Orchestra under ction of Charles Munch, en in the Music Shed at od, the Summer home chestra in Lenox.

ed concerts will take Friday and Saturday and Sunday afternoons 20 through August 12. h-Mozart" concerts by r orchestra of Boston players in the in- heater will precede the two previous week- 6 through 15.

r groups will give con- he six Wednesday eve- those weeks. Subscrip- now being filled at Hall, Boston, for these well as for the Shed each week.

ncerts in the Music be as follows:

VENING, JULY 20: (Charles lioz—"The Roman Carnival" bussy—The Afternoon of a —Rapsodie Espagnole; Brahms No. 2.

EVENING, JULY 21: nch) Wagner—"A Faust Over- weben" from Siegfried; Pre- ove-Death" from Tristan and Valkure, Act I (soloists: Mar- w, soprano; Albert DaCosta, Pease, bass).

FTERNOON, JULY 22: (Pierre ssini—Overture to "L'Italiana Bartok—Concerto for Orches- — Symphony No. 7 in C VENING, JULY 27: (Charles thoven—Overture, "Leonore" ssi—Concerto for Orchestra, ikovsky—Symphony No. 4.

EVENING, JULY 28: nch) Hanson—Elegy in Mem- e Koussevitsky; Schumann— to in A Minor (soloist: Ru- ; Honegger—Symphony No. 5: Mer."

FTERNOON, JULY 29: (Rich- Handel—Concerto Grosso in pus 6, No. 10: Hindemith— erto (soloist: Ruth Posselt); phony No. 1.

VENING, AUG. 3: (Eleazar de indemith—"Mathis der Maler;" Concerto (soloist: Jocy de travinsky—"Petrouchka."

EVENING, AUG. 4: (Leon- ein) Moevs—Variations for Mozart—Kyrie and Gloria from C Minor (with chorus and le Addison, soprano; Eunice ltralto; David Lloyd, tenor); ymphony No. 5. (Concert in Serge Koussevitsky.)

FTERNOON, AUG. 5: (Charles land—Symphonic Ode; Brahms for Violin and Cello (soloists: escatti and Samuel Mayes); Symphony No. 3.

VENING, AUG. 10: (Charles ydn—Symphony No. 102 in B —Symphony No. 6; Strauss— Dukas—"L'Apprenti Sorcier."

EVENING, AUG. 11: (Pierre Freed—Festival Overture. mphony No. 3; Enesco—Suite ra; Strauss—Suite from "Der er."

AFTERNOON, AUG. 12: unch) Wagner—Overture and from Tannhauser; A Sing- Die Meistersinger von Nuern- III (opening and final scene. soloists—Marguerite Willauer. osta and James Pease).

chamber orchestra se- ic of Bach and Mozart ominate. Benny Good- appear as soloist for the with this orchestra, n Mozart's Clarinet Con- The soloists will include Kroll, violin, and Lukas no, Mr. Foss also con- concert as guest.

ale Glee Club will ap- er the direction of Hugh oris Goldovsky, Lubo- d Nemenoff will give a of Mozart concertos. es will end with Bach's According to Saint John, tival Chorus and soloists he direction of Charles The programs will be an- in detail shortly.

to appear in the series hamber music programs esday evenings will in- e Kroll String Quartet; ux Arts Trio; Rudolf piano; Margaret Har- a group of Lieder; the semble of the orchestra; Boston Symphony Wood- artet.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

APR 17 1956

Bach-Mozart Series At Tanglewood Will Be Started July 6

The "Bach-Mozart" programs for the Berkshire festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, were announced today from Symphony hall, Boston.

This series of concerts by a chamber orchestra from the Boston Symphony orchestra, now in its 75th anniversary season, will be heard in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood during the first two week-ends of the festival season, on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, July 6, 7, 8 and 13, 14, 15.

The programs offer a variety of works by Mozart, whose 200th anniversary is being celebrated this year; two of the symphonies, three piano concertos, the Concerto for Clarinet and the Sinfonia Concertante for Woodwinds. On Saturday evening, Aug. 4, in the Music Shed, the Kyrie and Gloria from the C minor mass will be performed, and the Opera department of the Berkshire Music center plans to present "Cosi Fan Tutte."

Of the works of Bach in the "Bach-Mozart" series there will be a violin concerto, a piano concerto and a suite for flute among other works, culminating in a performance of the great Passion According to Saint John.

The clarinetist, Benny Goodman, will make his first appearance as soloist at Tanglewood in one of the concerts.

Details of programs and soloists for the "Bach-Mozart" concerts are as follows:

Friday evening, July 6: Mozart program conducted by Charles Munch—Symphony No. 40 in G minor; Clarinet concerto (Soloist: Benny Goodman); Symphony in D, "Prague."

Saturday evening, July 7: Charles Munch conducting: Mozart—Symphony in D, "Haffner" and Sinfonia Concertante in E flat for Woodwinds. Hugh Ross conducting: Martinu—Military mass; Cowell—Hymn and Fuguing Tune No. 11 (First performance) (Both with the Yale Glee club).

Sunday afternoon, July 8: Lukas Foss conducting: Haydn—Symphony No. 98 in B Flat; Ives—The Unanswered Question; Haieff—Divertimento; Bach-Webern — Fugue from "The Musical Offering"; Bach—Piano Concerto in D Minor (Soloist: Lukas Foss).

Friday evening, July 13: A program of Mozart piano concertos—Concerto in F for Three Pianos, K. 242; Piano Concerto in A, K. 488; Concerto in E flat for Two Pianos, K. 365 (Soloists: Luboshutz and Nemenoff and Boris Goldovsky).

Saturday evening, July 14: a Bach program conducted by Charles Munch — Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F; Violin Concerto No. 2 in E (Soloist: William Kroll); Suite No. 2 in B Minor for Flute and Strings (Soloist: Doriot Anthony Dwyer); Suite No. 3 in D.

Sunday afternoon, July 15: Bach's Passion According to Saint John, Charles Munch conducting. With chorus and soloists including Adele Addison, soprano; David Lloyd, tenor; James Joyce, bass; Mac Morgan, bass.

The major shed concerts of the festival will take place during the subsequent four week-ends, on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons (July 20-Aug. 12). Charles Munch will conduct seven of the concerts; Pierre Monteux, two; and Leonard Bernstein, Eleazor de Carvalho and Richard Burgin one each. Soloists will include Rudolf Serkin and Jocy de Oliveira, piano; Zino Francescatti and Ruth Posselt, violin, and the following singers: Margaret Harshaw, Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, Marguerite Willauer, Albert Da Costa, David Lloyd and James Pease.

Back Bay Ledger &
Beacon Hill Times
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 10,000 Free

APR 19 1956

TanglewoodSc Summer Plans

The programs are now ar Festival by the Boston Symp direction of Charles Munch, to at Tanglewood, the summer Lenox, Mass. The Shed concer and Saturday evenings and Su 20 through August 12. The " chamber orchestra of Boston intimate Theatre will precede week-ends, July 6 through 15 concerts on the six Wednesda Subscriptions are now being fi ton, for these series as well as week.

The concerts in the Music Shed will be as follows (a star indicates a work commissioned for the 75th anniversary of this orchestra in its first Berkshire Festival performance):

Friday evening, July 20: (Charles Munch) Berlioz, "The Roman Carnival" Overture; Debussy, The Afternoon of a Faun; Ravel, Rhapsodie Espagnole; Brahms, Symphony No. 2.

Sat. evening, July 21: (Chas. Munch) Wagner, "A Faust Overture;" Waldeweben" from Siegfried; Prelude and "Love-Death" from Tristan and Isolde; Die Walkure, Act 1 (soloists: Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert DaCosta, tenor; James Pease, bass).

Sunday afternoon, July 22: (Pierre Monteux) Rossini, Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri"; Bartok, Concerto for Orchestra, Schubert, Symphony No. 7 in C Major.

Fri. evening, July 27: (Chas. Munch) Beethoven, Overture, "Leonore" No. 2; *Petrassi, Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5; Tchaikovsky, Symphony No. 4.

Sat. evening, July 28: (Chas. Munch) *Hanson, Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky; Schumann, Piano Concerto in A Minor (soloist: Rudolf Serkin); Honegger, Symphony No. 5; Debussy, "La Mer."

Sun. afternoon, July 29: (Richard Burgin) Handel, Concerto Grosso in D Minor, Opus 6, No. 10; Hindemith, Violin Concerto (soloist: Ruth Posselt); Mahler, Symphony No. 1.

Fri. evening, Aug. 3: Ravel, Piano Concerto (soloist: Jocy de Oliveira); Stravinsky, "Petrouchka."

Sat. evening, Aug. 4 (Leonard Bernstein) Moevs, Variations for Orchestra; Mozart, Kyrie and Gloria from the Mass in C Minor with chorus and soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Prokofief, Symphony No. 5. Concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

Sun. afternoon, Aug. 5: (Chas. Munch) *Copland, Symphonic Ode; Brahms, Concerto for Violin and Cello (soloists: Zino Francescatti and Samuel Mayes); Schumann, Symphony No. 2.

Fri. evening, Aug. 10: (Chas. Munch) Haydn, Symphony No. 102 in B Flat; *Piston, Symphony No. 6; Strauss, "Don Juan"; Dukas, "L'Apprenti Sorcier."

Sat. evening, Aug. 11: (Pierre Monteux) Freed, Festival Overture; Brahms, Symphony No. 3; Enesco, Suite for Orchestra; Strauss, Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier."

Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12: (Charles Munch) Wagner, Ov-

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.
STAR
Circ. D. [illegible] 34

APR 27 1956

11 Compete for Music Scholarships

Six pianists and five vocalists will compete in the finals of the Minneapolis Star and Tribune Tanglewood scholarship contest at 7:30 p.m. today at Benton hall in the YWCA.

Auditions will be open to the public. The winner will receive a scholarship, all expense paid, to a six-week summer school study at the world-famed Tanglewood music center in Massachusetts.

The competition was established through the newspapers' charities fund out of proceeds from the annual Aquatennial Star Night and Coronation show co-sponsored by the papers and the Aquatennial association.

Pianists in the finals are Arlene Anderson, Duluth; Barbara Blon, 2809 Dupont avenue S.; James L. Bonn, 1893 Highland parkway, St. Paul; Lothar Klein, 4027 Wentworth avenue; Dwight Peltzer, 3247 NE. Taylor street, and Judith Peschken, Carleton college.

Vocalists are Richard Cross, Faribault, Minn.; Fred Ewing, 4436 Fourth avenue S.; Mary Jane Gantenbein, College of St. Catherine, St. Paul; Mrs. Joanne Schmidt, 3202 Bloomington avenue, and Emily Sigurdson, 2723 York avenue N.

Mr. Kroll will give a program of Mozart Concertos. The series will end with Bach's Passion According to Saint John, with Festival Chorus and soloists under the direction of Charles Munch. The programs will be announced in detail shortly.

Artists to appear in the series of six chamber music programs on Wednesday evenings, (July 4 through August 8) will include the Kroll String Quartet; the Beaux Arts Trio; Rudolf Serkin, piano; Margaret Harshaw in a group of Lieder; the Brass Ensemble of the Orchestra; and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 369,241

APR 22 1956

Berkshire Scholarships

An increased number of special awards and scholarships will be granted this year to students at the Berkshire Music Center, the six-week Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., in conjunction with the annual Berkshire Festival. The Berkshire Music Center office, in Symphony Hall, Boston, until June 1, is now receiving applications from which more than 400 students will be accepted for the 14th session, June 2-Aug. 12.

142

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

APR 21 1956

Berkshire Music Center Scholarships Increased This Year

An increased number of special awards and scholarships will be granted this year to students at the Berkshire Music center, the six-week summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, in conjunction with the annual Berkshire Festival.

Special Awards

The special awards extend the recognition given to many advanced young musicians beyond the tuition scholarship plan of of the school.

More than 400 students will be accepted for the 14th session, July 2-Aug. 12.

The awards are highlighted by the Jascha Heifetz prize, a value of $700 for 1956, given by the noted violinist to the best student performer of that instrument; Koussevitzky Memorial scholarship, value $500, to the outstanding student of conducting, the interest on a fund established by the Berkshire by neighbors at Tanglewood in memory of the former conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra and first director of the Berkshire Music center; the Gregor Piatigorsky prize, value $300, given by Mr. Piatigorsky to the summer's outstanding cello student and the High Fidelity Magazine scholarship, value $300, to a student of special merit.

Five awards are available for students of composition, who will study this year under Aaron Copland, Goffredo Petrassi (from Italy), Lukas Foss and Irving Fine; the Samuel Wechsler award, of $300, a commission given by a former Tanglewood pupil; the Raphael Sagalyn award, value $300, instituted for the first time in 1955 through the friendly interest of the Industrial Buildings corporation of Chicopee; the Serge Koussevitzky composition prize, value $250, given by the Koussevitzky Music foundation in honor of the former conductor; and two awards of $250 each, given by Margaret Lee Crofts. The Florence Easton scholarship of $250 for a singer in the opera department is also provided by Mrs. Crofts.

Music Center Offers

The Berkshire Music Center offers four $250 scholarships and two Ann M. Gannett scholarships, value $200 each, a total of six, provided by the National Federation of Music clubs; and three scholarships each valued at $150, which cancel a student's indebtedness to the Tanglewood revolving scholarship fund for tuition advanced by this fund; the Selly A. Eisemann, the Carlotta M. Dreyfus scholarships, and the Jennie Fels Memorial scholarship.

In addition, the following grants to the Tanglewood revolving scholarship fund assist Berkshire Music center students: $345 for the Minneapolis Star and Tribune scholarship; $325 for the Portland Junior Symphony scholarship; $300 from the Women's Association of the St. Louis Symphony orchestra; $200 from the Music Study club of Newark and the Oranges, New Jersey; $150 from Delta Omicron, a national musical fraternity.

In 1956, as in former sessions of the summer music school, the Koussevitzky Music Foundation will provide a sum of $1,000 to allocate for living expenses of especially talented young musicians who could not otherwise accept their tuition scholarships. Other underwriting of students' expenses comes from generous individuals and philanthropic organizations interested in furthering the training of promising musicians.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

APR 17 1956

Bach-Mozart Series At Tanglewood Will Be Started July 6

The "Bach-Mozart" programs for the Berkshire festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, were announced today from Symphony hall, Boston.

This series of concerts by a chamber orchestra from the Boston Symphony orchestra, now in its 75th anniversary season, will be heard in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood during the first two week-ends of the festival season, on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, July 6, 7, 8 and 13, 14, 15.

The programs offer a variety of works by Mozart, whose 200th anniversary is being celebrated this year; two of the symphonies, three piano concertos, the Concerto for Clarinet and the Sinfonia Concertante for Woodwinds. On Saturday evening, Aug. 4, in the Music Shed, the Kyrie and Gloria from the C minor mass will be performed, and the Opera department of the Berkshire Music center plans to present "Cosi Fan Tutte."

Of the works of Bach in the "Bach-Mozart" series there will be a violin concerto, a piano concerto and a suite for flute among other works, culminating in a performance of the great Passion According to Saint John.

The clarinetist, Benny Goodman, will make his first appearance as soloist at Tanglewood in one of the concerts.

Details of programs and soloists for the "Bach-Mozart" concerts are as follows:

Friday evening, July 6: Mozart program conducted by Charles Munch—Symphony No. 40 in G minor; Clarinet concerto (Soloist: Benny Goodman); Symphony in D, "Prague."

Saturday evening, July 7: Charles Munch conducting: Mozart—Symphony in D, "Häffner" and Sinfonia Concertante in E flat for Woodwinds. Hugh Ross conducting: Martinu—Military mass; Cowell—Hymn and Fuguing Tune No. 11 (First performance) (Both with the Yale Glee club).

Sunday afternoon, July 8: Lukas Foss conducting: Haydn—Symphony No. 98 in B Flat; Ives—The Unanswered Question; Haieff—Divertimento; Bach-Webern — Fugue from "The Musical Offering"; Bach—Piano Concerto in D Minor (Soloist: Lukas Foss).

Friday evening, July 13: A program of Mozart piano concertos—Concerto in F for Three Pianos, K. 242; Piano Concerto in A, K. 488; Concerto in E flat for Two Pianos, K. 365 (Soloists: Luboshutz and Nemenoff and Boris Goldovsky).

Saturday evening, July 14: a Bach program conducted by Charles Munch — Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F; Violin Concerto No. 2 in E (Soloist: William Kroll); Suite No. 2 in B Minor for Flute and Strings (Soloist: Doriot Anthony Dwyer); Suite No. 3 in D.

Sunday afternoon, July 15: Bach's Passion According to Saint John, Charles Munch conducting. With chorus and soloists including Adele Addison, soprano; David Lloyd, tenor; James Joyce, bass; Mac Morgan, bass.

The major shed concerts of the festival will take place during the subsequent four week-ends, on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons (July 20-Aug. 12). Charles Munch will conduct seven of the concerts; Pierre Monteux, two; and Leonard Bernstein, Eleazor de Carvalho and Richard Burgin one each. Soloists will include Rudolf Serkin and Jocy de Oliveira, piano; Zino Francescatti and Ruth Posselt, violin, and the following singers: Margaret Harshaw, Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, Marguerite Willauer, Albert Da Costa, David Lloyd and James Pease.

Back Bay Ledger &
Beacon Hill Times
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 10,000 Free

APR 19 1956

Tanglewood School Announces Summer Plans And Staff

The programs are now announced for the Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, to be given in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, the summer home of this Orchestra in Lenox, Mass. The Shed concerts will take place on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 20 through August 12. The "Bach-Mozart" concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the intimate Theatre will precede these on the two previous week-ends, July 6 through 15. Chamber groups will give concerts on the six Wednesday evenings of those weeks. Subscriptions are now being filled at Symphony Hall, Boston, for these series as well as for the Shed series of each week.

The concerts in the Music Shed will be as follows (a star indicates a work commissioned for the 75th anniversary of this orchestra in its first Berkshire Festival performance):

Friday evening, July 20: (Charles Munch) Berlioz, "The Roman Carnival" Overture; Debussy, The Afternoon of a Faun; Ravel, Rhapsodie Espagnole; Brahms, Symphony No. 2.

Sat. evening, July 21: (Chas. Munch) Wagner, "A Faust Overture;" Waldeweben" from Siegfried; Prelude and "Love-Death" from Tristan and Isolde; Die Walkure, Act 1 (soloists: Margaret Harshaw, soprano; Albert DaCosta, tenor; James Pease, bass).

Sunday afternoon, July 22: (Pierre Monteux) Rossini, Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri"; Bartok, Concerto for Orchestra, Schubert, Symphony No. 7 in C Major.

Fri. evening, July 27: (Chas. Munch) Beethoven, Overture, "Leonore" No. 2; *Petrassi, Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5; Tchaikovsky, Symphony No. 4.

Sat. evening, July 28: (Chas. Munch) *Hanson, Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky; Schumann, Piano Concerto in A Minor (soloist: Rudolf Serkin); Honegger, Symphony No. 5; Debussy, "La Mer."

Sun. afternoon, July 29: (Richard Burgin) Handel, Concerto Grosso in D Minor, Opus 6, No. 10; Hindemith, Violin Concerto (soloist: Ruth Posselt); Mahler, Symphony No. 1.

Fri. evening, Aug. 3: Ravel, Piano Concerto (soloist: Jocy de Oliveira); Stravinsky, "Petrouchka."

Sat. evening, Aug. 4 (Leonard Bernstein) Moevs, Variations for Orchestra; Mozart, Kyrie and Gloria from the Mass in C Minor with chorus and soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Prokofief, Symphony No. 5. Concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

Sun. afternoon, Aug. 5: (Chas. Munch) *Copland, Symphonic Ode; Brahms, Concerto for Violin and Cello (soloists: Zino Francescatti and Samuel Mayes); Schumann, Symphony No. 2.

Fri. evening, Aug. 10: (Chas. Munch) Haydn, Symphony No. 102 in B Flat; *Piston, Symphony No. 6; Strauss, "Don Juan"; Dukas, "L'Apprenti Sorcier."

Sat. evening, Aug. 11: (Pierre Monteux) Freed, Festival Overture; Brahms, Symphony No. 3; Enesco, Suite for Orchestra; Strauss, Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier."

Sunday afternoon, Aug. 12: (Charles Munch) Wagner, Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhaueser; A Siegfried Idyll; Die Meistersinger von Nuernberg, Act III (opening and final scene; chorus and sololsts: Marguerite Willauer, Albert Da Costa and James Pease).

In the chamber orchestra series, July 6-15, music of Bach and Mozart will predominate. Benny Goodman will appear as soloist for the first time with this orchestra, playing in Mozart's Clarinet Concerto. Soloists will include William Kroll, violin and Lukas Foss, piano; Mr. Foss also conducting a concert as guest. The Yale Glee Club will appear under the direction of Hugh Ross. Boris Goldovsky, Luboshut, and Nemenoff will give a program of Mozart Concertos. The series will end with Bach's Passion According to Saint John, with Festival Chorus and soloists under the direction of Charles Munch. The programs will be announced in detail shortly.

Artists to appear in the series of six chamber music programs on Wednesday evenings, (July 4 through August 8) will include the Kroll String Quartet; the Beaux Arts Trio; Rudolf Serkin, piano; Margaret Harshaw in a group of Lieder; the Brass Ensemble of the Orchestra; and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 369,241

APR 22 1956

Berkshire Scholarships

An increased number of special awards and scholarships will be granted this year to students at the Berkshire Music Center, the six-week Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., in conjunction with the annual Berkshire Festival. The Berkshire Music Center office, in Symphony Hall, Boston, until June 1, is now receiving applications from which more than 400 students will be accepted for the 14th session, June 2-Aug. 12.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

APR 21 1956

Berkshire Music Center Scholarships Increased This Year

An increased number of special awards and scholarships will be granted this year to students at the Berkshire Music center, the six-week summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, in conjunction with the annual Berkshire Festival.

Special Awards

The special awards extend the recognition given to many advanced young musicians beyond the tuition scholarship plan of of the school.

More than 400 students will be accepted for the 14th session, July 2-Aug. 12.

The awards are highlighted by the Jascha Heifetz prize, a value of $700 for 1956, given by the noted violinist to the best student performer of that instrument; Koussevitzky Memorial scholarship, value $500, to the outstanding student of conducting, the interest on a fund established by the Berkshire by neighbors at Tanglewood in memory of the former conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra and first director of the Berkshire Music center; the Gregor Piatigorsky prize, value $300, given by Mr. Piatigorsky to the summer's outstanding cello student and the High Fidelity Magazine scholarship, value $300, to a student of special merit.

Five awards are available for students of composition, who will study this year under Aaron Copland, Goffredo Petrassi (from Italy), Lukas Foss and Irving Fine; the Samuel Wechsler award, of $300, a commission given by a former Tanglewood pupil; the Raphael Sagalyn award, value $300, instituted for the first time in 1955 through the friendly interest of the Industrial Buildings corporation of Chicopee; the Serge Koussevitzky composition prize, value $250, given by the Koussevitzky Music foundation in honor of the former conductor; and two awards of $250 each, given by Margaret Lee Crofts. The Florence Easton scholarship of $250 for a singer in the opera department is also provided by Mrs. Crofts.

Music Center Offers

The Berkshire Music Center offers four $250 scholarships and two Ann M. Gannett scholarships, value $200 each, a total of six, provided by the National Federation of Music clubs; and three scholarships each valued at $150, which cancel a student's indebtedness to the Tanglewood revolving scholarship fund for tuition advanced by this fund; the Selly A. Eisemann, the Carlotta M. Dreyfus scholarships, and the Jennie Fels Memorial scholarship.

In addition, the following grants to the Tanglewood revolving scholarship fund assist Berkshire Music center students: $345 for the Minneapolis Star and Tribune scholarship; $325 for the Portland Junior Symphony scholarship; $300 from the Women's Association of the St. Louis Symphony orchestra; $200 from the Music Study club of Newark and the Oranges, New Jersey; $150 from Delta Omicron, a national musical fraternity.

In 1956, as in former sessions of the summer music school, the Koussevitzky Music Foundation will provide a sum of $1,000 to allocate for living expenses of especially talented young musicians who could not otherwise accept their tuition scholarships. Other underwriting of students' expenses comes from generous individuals and philanthropic organizations interested in furthering the training of promising musicians.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR
Circ. D. 36,182
JUN 2 1955

Sixth Annual 'Pops' Concert Set June 18

Plans for Schenectady's sixth annual "Symphony Under the Stars" were mapped last night at a meeting of the Orchestra Association "Pops" Committee. Chairman Francis J. Greisler announced that the outdoor concert will be held June 18 at 8:30 p.m. on Daley Field, Union College.

The "pops" orchestra, under the direction of Anthony R. Stefan, will present a program of popular favorites and light classical selections.

A feature of this year's program will be the use of the kind of seating which has been utilized at the Tanglewood concerts in the Berkshires. The arrangement will dispense with tables and chairs, and concert-goers will be seated on the lawn, although anyone may take folding chairs or blankets to the concert.

Light refreshments will be served. Members of the Schenectady Junior League will serve as waitresses. Mrs. R. C. Buell, Schenectady, will play an electric organ before the concert and during the intermission.

To encourage family attendance, a special rate will be offered for tickets purchased in blocks of three until the Wednesday evening before the concert. After that time all tickets will be sold at regular price. They will be available at local music stores and also at the gate.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246
JUN 21 1955

Berkshire Festival Subscriptions Pass All Previous Records

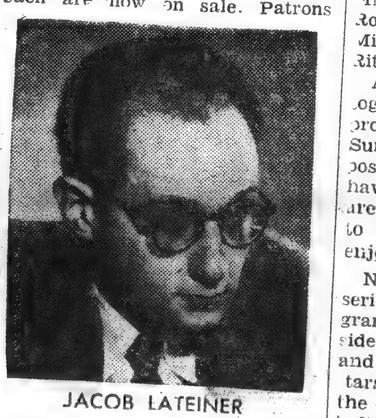
Subscriptions surpassing all previous records have been received for the 1955 Berkshire Festival series by the Boston Symphony orchestra for four Friday evenings, July 22—Aug. 12; four Saturday evenings, July 23—Aug. 13; and four Sunday afternoons, July 24—Aug. 13, in the Music Shed.

An all-time record of 135,775 persons heard the six-week festival of 1954 according to Manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office. Mail orders for single concerts are also filled on receipt. Checks and money orders should be payable to the Boston Symphony orchestra, Inc., and accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope for return of tickets. Telephone orders are accepted.

Four weekends featuring much of Beethoven's music will be held this year, including all nine symphonies, the second act of "Fidelio", the "Missa Solemnis", the violin concerto, two piano concertos, and three overtures.

Music Director Charles Munch conducts the 104-piece Boston Symphony orchestra with Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein as guest conductors.



DOLORES WILSON

JACOB LATEINER

tickets cost an additional five dollars and include seats in the front portion of the Auditorium. Patrons will be listed in the program book. Much credit is due the program book advertisers whose advertisements have helped defray many

VENTNOR, N. J.
CRIER
Circ. W. 4,150
JUN 24 1955

1955

Ventnor Summer Festival A Top Downbeach Attraction

Summer indicates a respite several months of the indoor formal concert season and marks the beginning of the straw-hat circle in the theatre and many classical mucical events under the stars.

Noted artists and orchestras travel to such famous festivals as the Berkshire in New England and Edinburgh in Scotland in addition to appearnaces at Lewishohn Stadell, Philadelphia, the Hollywood Bowl and the Ventnor Summer Festival on the Ventnor Pier.

Some of the great names of classical music performing the leading works have appeared out over the ocean and among them Jan Peerce, Isaac Stern, Frank Guarrera, Curtis String Quartet, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, Eugene Conley, Michael Rabin, and Margaret Harshaw. Sknce the inception of these concerts many unknowns with great classical skill and beautiful intepretations have appeared mer in a series highlighted by the appearance of Robert Merril leading Metropolitan Opera baritone.

(Continued on Page 5)

August 2 Opening

The festival, eighth annual i the series will open Tuesday, Au gust 2 in the Main Auditorium of the Pier featuring glamorous Metropolitan coloratura Dolores Wilson. These concerts have brought world wide fame to Ventnor and many summer vacationists spend August here to attend these concerts.

BENNO RABINOF

The Festival is conducted on a non-profit basis and since its inception has grown to include a substantial budget which permits the appearance of at least one "big name" in music. In the past has tripled

Only once, the Festival vice e money detickets goes sts' expenses nter into the vast financial setup. But the main thing is the voluntary services rendered by many downbeach and offshore residents who spend many hours preparing the details entailed in such an undertaking.

DOLORES WILSON

The hard-working committee visualizes a bright future for the series with many more of the great artists slated to appear when the financial situation permits it.

There are two goals in mind first, to bring the great names of classical music to our summer audiences and second, make them available at reasonable prices.

On Aug. 9, the Rabinofs will appear followed on Aug. 16 by outstanding pianist, Jacob Lateiner. Leonard Rose will perform Aug 23 and Robert Merrill closes out the series Aug. 30.

Series tickets at seven dollars each are now on sale. Patrons isle Mecaskie, recording secretary and Roy Dessauer, treasurer. Committee chairmen will be announced later.

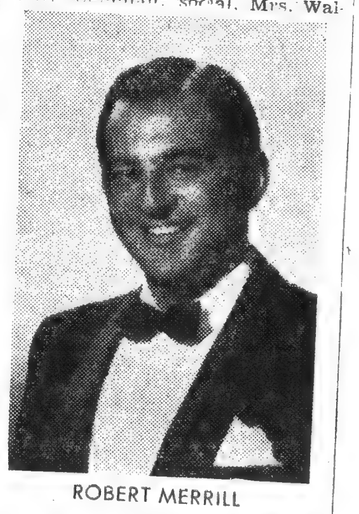
Although complete committees have not been organized the following persons have successfully handled all the preliminary details:

Artists and programs, Abigail K. Hoffman; program book, Dr. Samuel Solomon and Owen Kenland; ticket distribution, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Perskie; house, Eugenia Godfrey; patron and patroness, Mrs. E. H. Nickman, Mrs. M. Green; hospitality, Bernard Swartz; historian, Mrs. Myron Krawitz; publicity, Roy Dessauer and Thomas Kenny; telephone, Mrs. Jacob Walker, Mrs. Joseph Abrams and Mrs. Harry Sley; poster distribution, Mrs. Bert Wilson, Mrs. Robert Silverman and Mrs. H. Kleinman; social, Mrs. Wal-



ROBERT MERRILL

er Stein, Mrs. Howard Bodner nd Mrs. Leonard Ellenbogen, and ighting, Martin Gruen.

The membership list is as follows:

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Bliz, Myon Krawitz, Mrs. Thomas Kenny, Mrs. Bernard Swartz, Paul Aiken, Mr. and Mrs. Saul Arkus, Mrs. lice Baggs, Mrs. Jules Dasen Mrs. Charles Jonas, Joseph Kauffman, Mayor Leon Leopardi, Maurice Mayfield, Mrs. Louis McCorkle, Reverend Oran Presley, Lee Sachs, Miss Jeane Schneider, Mr. nd Mrs. Donald Weining, Miss Judith Stein, Miss Janet Yamron, Mrs. William Burke, Robert Heath Robert Nesbitt, Miss Holly Nesbitt, William Saalman, Mr. and Mrs Max Olesker, Mrs. Paul Devereux,

LEONARD ROSS

Mrs. Clark Woodhouse, Miss Sally Royal, Mr. and Mrs. Ward Bright, Miss Helene Talley, Miss Ruth Ritter and Mrs. Carl Bell.

All these people have banded together to insure that the annual program offered in the Ventnor Summer Festival is of the finest possible. Each year, the results have been gratifying to those who are in the planning picture and to the many people who have enjoyed the program.

Not a year has passed since the series first began that the program has not been improved considerably, both in the production and in the calibre of the concert tars made available. Many of the performers themselves have indicated that they would desire "repeats" in the following season because of the cordial atmosphere they find among the people who handle the program and the warm response they have experienced with Summer Festival audiences.

JACOB LATEINER

Jewish News
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly
Circ. 3,560
JUN 3 1955

Berkshire Music Barn Set For Opening July 2

The Berkshire Music Barn, the first summer music hall devoted to concert jazz and related music, will open July 2, at Lenox, Mass., just a mile down the road from the Boston Symphony's famous Music Shed.

The Music Barn, sponsored by Stephanie and Philip Barber, will be hospitable to all phases of Jazz. For its opening on the July 4th weekend, Blue and Dixieland will be featured. During the next five weeks of the Tanglewood Season, however, the emphasis will definitely be on Modern Jazz in the form of a Modern Jazz Workshop. During this period, young musicians, who are endeavoring to push forward the boundaries of Jazz, will be residence at the Music Barn. Housed and fed at nearby Music Inn, the musicians will work creatively together on compositions and arrangements, perhaps interreacting with the classical musicians of the area.

Thus for the first time, the summer Boston Symphony audiences and musicians will readily be able to get a taste of the new developments in Jazz. Manager of the Modern Jazz Workshop will be Robert Reisner, who for the last two years has been presenting Modern Jazz on Sunday nights at the Open Door in New York City, and is librarian of the Institute of Jazz Studies.

Public performances of Modern Jazz will be presented every Sunday night during the Tanglewood Season, starting on July 10, with well-known Modern Jazz musicians featured. Among the groups already signed are Art Farmer, Thelonius Monk, Teddy Charles, Dizzy Gillespie, and the Modern Jazz Quartet. A special concert has been scheduled for July 28, featuring Count Basie and his band.

On five Saturday afternoon at 4, the Berkshire Music Barn will present Richard Dyer-Bennet America's foremost singer of English and American Folk Ballads.

Tickets are available at Music In The Round, 16 Hampden St., Springfield.

SCHENECTADY
UNION-STAR
Circ. D. 36,182
JUN 2 1955

Sixth Annual 'Pops' Concert Set June 18

Plans for Schenectady's sixth annual "Symphony Under the Stars" were mapped last night at a meeting of the Orchestra Association "Pops" Committee. Chairman Francis J. Greisler announced that the outdoor concert will be held June 18 at 8:30 p.m. on Daley Field, Union College.

The "pops" orchestra, under the direction of Anthony R. Stefan, will present a program of popular favorites and light classical selections.

A feature of this year's program will be the use of the kind of seating which has been utilized at the Tanglewood concerts in the Berkshires. The arrangement will dispense with tables and chairs, and concert-goers will be seated on the lawn, although anyone may take folding chairs or blankets to the concert.

Light refreshments will be served. Members of the Schenectady Junior League will serve as waitresses. Mrs. R. C. Buell, Schenectady, will play an electric organ before the concert and during the intermission.

To encourage family attendance, a special rate will be offered for tickets purchased in blocks of three until the Wednesday evening before the concert. After that time all tickets will be sold at regular price. They will be available at local music stores and also at the gate.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246
JUN 21 1955

tract. He then will move to Lake Parmachenee, Maine for the week end—and some fishing.

Monday calls for a visit at the Fairgrounds in Skowhegan, Maine and a talk at the Dow Air Force Base in Bangor before taking the Washington - bound plane Monday evening.

Golden Agers

...days evenings, July 22—Aug. 12; four Saturday evenings, July 23—Aug. 13; and four Sunday afternoons, July 24—Aug. 13, in the Music Shed.

An all-time record of 135,775 persons heard the six-week festival of 1954 according to Manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office. Mail orders for single concerts are also filled on receipt. Checks and money orders should be payable to the Boston Symphony orchestra, Inc., and accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope for return of tickets. Telephone orders are accepted.

Four weekends featuring much of Beethoven's music will be held this year, including all nine

1955 ummer Festival Success Result Of Public Interest

World Known Concert Personalities Are Secured For Schedule Of Summer Concerts

(Continued from Page 2)

going on to greater fame. Among them were Leonard Rose, cellist and Benno and Sylvia Rabinof violin-piano duo. Rose and the Rabinoffs will appear again this summer in a series highlighted by the appearance of Robert Merrill leading Metropolitan Opera baritone.

August 2 Opening

The festival, eighth annual i the series will open Tuesday, Au gust 2 in the Main Auditorium of the Pier featuring glamorous Metropolitan coloratura Dolores Wilson. These concerts have brought world wide fame to Ventnor and many summer vacationists spend August here to attend these concerts.

BENNO RABINOF

The Festival is conducted on a non-profit basis and since its inception has grown to include a substantial budget which permits the appearance of at least one "big name" in music. In the past eight years the festival has tripled its original allowance. Only once, in its third year, did the Festival fail to clear the financial hurdles.

Voluntary Service

Although most of the money derived from the sale of tickets goes toward paying the artists' expenses many other costs enter into the vast financial setup. But the main thing is the voluntary services rendered by many downbeach and offshore residents who spend many hours preparing the details entailed in such an undertaking.

DOLORES WILSON

The hard-working committee visualizes a bright future for the series with many more of the great artists slated to appear when the financial situation permits it.

There are two goals in mind first, to bring the great names of classical music to our summer audiences and second, make them available at reasonable prices.

On Aug. 9, the Rabinofs will appear followed on Aug. 16 by outstanding pianist, Jacob Lateiner. Leonard Rose will perform Aug. 23 and Robert Merrill closes out the series Aug. 30.

Series tickets at seven dollars each are now on sale. Patrons

JACOB LATEINER

tickets cost an additional five dollars and include seats in the front portion of the Auditorium. Patrons will be listed in the program book. Much credit is due the program book advertisers whose advertisements have helped defray many expenses.

Officers of the Festival include Joseph Abrams, president; Nathan Hoffman, vice president; Virginia Locke, corresponding secretary; Elsie Macaskie, recording secretary and Roy Dessauer, treasurer. Committee chairmen will be announced later.

Although complete committees have not been organized the following persons have successfully handled all the preliminary details:

Artists and programs, Abigail K. Hoffman; program book, Dr. Samuel Solomon and Owen Kenland; ticket distribution, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Perskie; house, Eugenia Godfrey; patron and patroness, Mrs. E. H. Nickman, Mrs. M. Green; hospitality, Bernard Swartz; historian, Mrs. Myron Krawitz; publicity, Roy Dessauer and Thomas Kenny; telephone, Mrs. Jacob Walker, Mrs. Joseph Abrams and Mrs. Harry Sley; poster distribution, Mrs. Bert Wilson, Mrs. Robert Silverman and Mrs. H. Kleinman; social, Mrs. Wal-er Stein, Mrs. Howard Bodner nd Mrs. Leonard Ellenbogen, and ighting, Martin Gruen.

ROBERT MERRILL

The membership list is as follows:

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Bliz, Myron Krawitz, Mrs. Thomas Kenny, Mrs. Bernard Swartz, Paul Aiken, Mr. and Mrs. Saul Arkus, Mrs. lice Baggs, Mrs. Jules Dasen Mrs. Charles Jonas, Joseph Kauffman, Mayor Leon Leopardi, Maurice Mayfield, Mrs. Louis McCorkle, Reverend Oran Presley, Lee Sachs, Miss Jeane Schneider, Mr. nd Mrs. Donald Weining, Miss udith Stein, Miss Janet Yamron, Mrs. William Burke, Robert Heath Robert Nesbitt, Miss Holly Nesbitt, William Saalman, Mr. and Mrs. Max Olesker, Mrs. Paul Devereux,

LEONARD ROSS

Mrs. Clark Woodhouse, Miss Sally Royal, Mr. and Mrs. Ward Bright, Miss Helene Talley, Miss Ruth Ritter and Mrs. Carl Bell.

All these people have banded together to insure that the annual program offered in the Ventnor Summer Festival is of the finest possible. Each year, the results have been gratifying to those who are in the planning picture and to the many people who have enjoyed the program.

Not a year has passed since the series first began that the program has not been improved considerably, both in the production and in the calibre of the concert tars made available. Many of the performers themselves have indicated that they would desire "repeats" in the following season because of the cordial atmosphere they find among the people who handle the program and the warm response they have experienced with Summer Festival audiences.

Jewish News
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly
Circ. 3,560
JUN 3 1955

Berkshire Music Barn Set For Opening July 2

The Berkshire Music Barn, the first summer music hall devoted to concert jazz and related music, will open July 2, at Lenox, Mass., just a mile down the road from the Boston Symphony's famous Music Shed.

The Music Barn, sponsored by Stephanie and Philip Barber, will be hospitable to all phases of Jazz. For its opening on the July 4th weekend, Blue and Dixieland will be featured. During the next five weeks of the Tanglewood Season, however, the emphasis will definitely be on Modern Jazz in the form of a Modern Jazz Workshop. During this period, young musicians, who are endeavoring to push forward the boundaries of Jazz, will be residence at the Music Barn. Housed and fed at nearby Music Inn, the musicians will work creatively together on compositions and arrangements, perhaps interreacting with the classical musicians of the area.

Thus for the first time, the summer Boston Symphony audiences and musicians will readily be able to get a taste of the new developments in Jazz. Manager of the Modern Jazz Workshop will be Robert Reisner, who for the last two years has been presenting Modern Jazz on Sunday nights at the Open Door in New York City, and is librarian of the Institute of Jazz Studies.

Public performances of Modern Jazz will be presented every Sunday night during the Tanglewood Season, starting on July 10, with well-known Modern Jazz musicians featured. Among the groups already signed are Art Farmer, Thelonius Monk, Teddy Charles, Dizzy Gillespie, and the Modern Jazz Quartet. A special concert has been scheduled for July 28, featuring Count Basie and his band.

On five Saturday afternoon at 4, the Berkshire Music Barn will present Richard Dyer-Bennet America's foremost singer of English and American Folk Ballads.

Tickets are available at Music In The Round, 16 Hampden St., Springfield.

HOLIDAY MAGAZINE
PHILADELPHIA, PA.
JUL 1955

July 3-Aug. 2. [illegible] exhibition, Cranbrook Academy of Art, Bloomfield Hills, Mich. Paintings, sculpture, ceramics, weavings, textiles, prints, jewelry, metalwork, industrial design, architecture.

July 7-Aug. 14. Berkshire Festival, Lenox, Mass. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor. Music Shed, Tanglewood. Orchestra with guest soloists.

July 7-Sept. 5. [illegible] Newport, R.I.

July 15-24. [illegible] Olympic [illegible] parades.

July 16-23. [illegible] Long Bea[illegible] beautiful [illegible]

July 20-22. [illegible] OF THE SOUTHERN [illegible] Asheville, N.C. Demonstrations and sale of work by professional craftsmen of the Southern mountain area. Music, dancing and tale-telling.

July 25-26. FIESTA OF ST. JAMES [illegible] ST. ANNE, Taos, N.M. [illegible] procession, music, games, races, costume ball, corn dances by Taos Indians.

July 26-30. FRONTIER DAYS, Cheyenne, Wyo. Old-fashioned rodeo with U.S. and Canadian champions; costumes, parade, carnival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872
JUL 1 1955

144

Weekend Programs: Around the Dials on AM, FM, and Television

The Boston Tea Party of Dec. 16, 1773, will be dramatized on CBS-TV "You Are There" series Sunday at 1:30 p.m., on WNAC-TV.

Arch Macdonald, WBZ broadcaster, will report on an old-fashioned Fourth of July celebration from New Boston, N.H., Sunday afternoon at 1:30. The little New Eugland town has advanced its annual observance of Independence Day from Monday to Sunday in order to share their celebration, including a parade, with the town band, to the village green, the annual picnic, the ball game and the fireworks, with NBC network listeners throughout the country.

"The Inca of Perusalem," a one-act play by George Bernard Shaw, will be the first presentation on "Cameo Theater," which begins an eight-week season of half-hour dramas on WBZ-TV Sunday at 10 p. m. Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Mary Scott will appear in the leading roles. Albert McCleery, producer and director of the series, has announced that this will be the first time this drama by Shaw has been performed in the United States.

Ann Lee, Hayden Rorke, and child actor Peter Votrian will appear on "Your Play Time" Saturday night at 10:30 on WBZ-TV, in a drama entitled "The Loner" by Lawrence Kimball. The story is about a lonely child's search for affection and companionship, which he does not receive from his wealthy and successful parents.

Beginning Sunday, July 3, Martin Bookspan will originate his WCOP "Sunday Evening Concert" program from Pittsfield and Tanglewood, where he has gone for this summer's Berkshire Festival as radio and television coordinator for the Boston Symphony Orchestra. (Mr. Bookspan's program is broadcast every Sunday night from 8 o'clock until midnight.) Mr. Bookspan is planning to introduce from time to time to his radio audience visiting soloists and conductors attending the Berkshire Festival.

Among the feature films to be telecast on Sunday will be "The Lisbon Story," starring David Farrar, Patricia Benke, and Walter Rilla on WNAC-TV at 6:30 p.m. At 11 p.m., same station, a full-length motion picture production of Shakespeare's "Macbeth" will be telecast, starring Orson Welles, Roddy McDowall, and Dan O'Herlihy.

A doubleheader game between the Red Sox and Baltimore Orioles will be telecast Sunday at 2 p.m., from Memorial Stadium in Baltimore, on WNAC-TV, and simultaneously on WHDH.

Feature films tentatively scheduled for telecast on WBZ-TV Sunday will be "The Jungle Book" at 8:35 a.m. and "The Iron Crown" at 1 p.m., on "Sunday Cinema." "The Celebrated Mrs. Rowland," starring Gertrude Michael, will be telecast on WBZ-TV's "Royal Playhouse" at 2:30 p.m.

Item (e)
LYNN, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 21,384
JUL 8 [illegible]

Lawrence. . . . Rolland Tapley, conductor of the North Shore Philharmonic Orchestra, is concertmaster of the 80-piece Esplanade concerts orchestra this Summer in Boston. Mr. Tapley, who conducted the Pops Orchestra several times in Symphony Hall last month, played a violin solo on opening night at the Esplanade this week. . . . Local club members who traveled to Salem Rotary this week for a special illustrated report on the 50th Rotary International convention included: Anthony Frasca and Clinton Pickering of Lynn, James D. McCarriston of Swampscott. Superintendent of Schools Aura W. Coleman, Dr. Frank Ireson and C. Elliott Roundy of Marblehead.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872
JUL 9 1955

Tanglewood Programs

Next week's Berkshire Festival concerts will be given in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30. The programs include:

Wednesday

Trio in C minor, Op. 1 . . . . Beethoven
Trio in D major, Op. 70. . . . Beethoven
"Archduke" Trio in B flat, Op. 97 Beethoven
Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano)

Friday

Overture to "Don Giovanni" . . Mozart
Symphony in C major (K. 425) Mozart
Arias, "Al Desio" (K. 577), "Zefiretti" and "Non Temer" from "Idomeneo" . . . . . Mozart
Soloist: Jennie Tourel, soprano
Piano Concerto in G major (K.453) Mozart
Soloist: Leonard Bernstein
Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting

Saturday

Concerto Grosso in D, Op. 3 Vivaldi
Concerto Grosso in B minor, Op. 3 Vivaldi
Concerto for Cello. . . . . Boccherini
Soloist: Samuel Mayes
Gloria . . . . . Vivaldi
Festival Chorus
Soloists: Saramae Endich, soprano; Sadie Ruth McCollum, mezzo-soprano
Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra, Hugh Ross conducting

Sunday

Suite from "Dardanus" . . . . . Rameau
"Le Tombeau de Couperin" . . . . . Ravel
Pavane . . . . . Fauré
Serenade . . . . . Milhaud
Symphony No. 4. . . . . Honegger
Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.
UNION
Circ. D. 69,790 - S. 150,600
JUL 11 1955

ROBERT GERLE
Featured in Symphony

Concert Will Feature Gerle And His Violin

certmaster, San Diego on with the a, will be iolin in the tomorrow
k Bowl. noted on ll play Vi-

n of Robert the orches-
Overture to ioven, Epi-Caesar" by haikowsky's

rentage,
Italy and est, receivloma from he interna-
petition in violin soloadio before ited States winner, this rsky schol-

ng in the
Tanglewood, me head of nent in the the Univerand in 1954
began work on his doctorate at the University of California, where he has taught violin in the past year.

At the close of the season here he will go to Baltimore to join the staff of the Peabody Conservatory.

DAYTON, OHIO
NEWS
S. 161,004
JUL 3 1955

Music

Orchestra Concert Set For Monday

A SPECIAL Fourth of July concert will be given by the Dayton Summer orchestra at the Diehl Municipal shell at Island park. Paul Katz will direct the Monday program which is to begin at 8 p.m. Because of the holiday weekend the concert was transferred from Sunday to Monday.

The concert, part of the series sponsored by the Dayton Musicians association, the City of Dayton and the Chamber of Commerce, will feature as soloist Charlotte Hollo-[illegible] pianist.

[illegible] made her Town hall [illegible] February, 1954, is a graduate of Howard university and has a master of arts degree from [illegible] college, Columbia university. She also studied at the [illegible] School of Music in London and at the opera workshop of the Berkshire Music center at [illegible], Mass. She was presented in recital at the Dayton Art [illegible] this spring.

[illegible] Sousa, Hanson, and [illegible] be played by the orchestra. A [illegible] trio made up of Paul [illegible] Paul McCrea and [illegible] LeFevre will be featured.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538
JUL 16 1955

BSO Brilliance Partly Due to Its Special Pitch

LISTENERS at Tanglewood need not be trained musicians to realize the Boston Symphony Orchestra has a tonal brilliance all its own. Nor is it by chance. The classical musical "A" is exactly 422 vibrations a second, to which most orchestras are attuned. The Boston Symphony, however, is pitched to 444 per second.

The late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky raised the pitch years ago when he took over leadership of the organization. This high pitch is considered one reason for the popularity of the orchestra.

During the recent BSO European tour however, so unused were listeners there to the unusual pitch that it required half a concert for them to accept the difference, according to reports. To change the pitch to natural "A" in all the hundreds of instruments employed by the orchestra would cost thousands of dollars, and would be neither feasible nor advisable since the public still prefers the higher register.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538
JUL 19 1955

Edward A. Taft of Boston is staying at the Lenox Club. Mr. Taft, a trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, attended the concerts of the Berkshire Festival weekend at Tanglewood.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 389,011 - S. 258,545
JUL 21 1955

WORDS and MUSIC
By Harriett Johnson

New Music Festival at Ellenville

Beginning Wednesday, Aug. 3, New York will launch its own music festival, at present being organized on a scale to rival the famed Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony in Lenox, Mass. Located at Ellenville, in the heart of the Rip Van Winkle country, the Empire State Music Festival, as it is called, will open with the Symphoney of the Air as its orchestra and Eduard Van Beinum as conductor.

Other symphonic maestros who will appear during the five-week season are Alfred Wallenstein, Erich Leinsdorf, Morton Gould, Hugh Ross, Leroy Anderson and Izler Solomon. Opera will also be presented under the direction of Emerson Buckley, Tibor Kozma and Leinsdorf.

The programs will be presented in a 4,000-seat natural amphitheater now being completed, together with the raising of a $35,000 tent which will cover half of the amphitheater. Located on the side of a mountain, the outdoor concert hall will be the focal point of a 110-acre estate in the heart of the Ulster County resort country. A special stage, designed by Frederick Kiesler of Vienna, was built in New York and is now being assembled. Parking space for 2,000 cars will be provided.

Behind all of this excitement, from the artistic standpoint, are primarily two people who function as co-directors: Jascha Rushkin, violinist in the Symphony of the Air, and John Brownlee, Metropolitan Opera baritone. Singer Frank Forest, is treasurer.

Harry Resnick, chairman of the Catskill Mountain Civic Corp., and one of Ellenville's leading industrialists, is solidly behind the venture, and announces that the subscription campaign for the five-weeks' season has already topped the $125,000 mark.

Beethoven-Brahms to Open

Van Beinum, who leaves his illustrious Concertgebouw Orchestra in Holland to lead the opening, has chosen the following program for the event; Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and the Eighth Symphony; plus Brahms' First Symphony.

Puccini's "La Boheme" is scheduled for Aug. 4 and 6 of opening week with Emerson Buckley as conductor. Lucia Evangalista will sing Mimi and Eugene Conley, Rololfo. During subsequent weeks, "Madama Butterfly"; "La Traviata"; and "Cosi fan tutte," the latter with Tibor Kozma as conductor, will be heard.

Jose Limon and his Dance Company will be seen in Spanish Dances during the week of Aug. 24th, together with the presentation of a one-act opera by Cimarosa, "Love Triumphant."

Sibelius' 'The Tempest'

The Festival's final programs will be Sept. 2 and 3, when a performance of "The Tempest," based on Shakespeare's play using incidental music by Jan Sibelius, is the novel bill.

Seats are priced from $5 on down with general admission to the grounds at $1.50. In fair weather, the latter may be the most popular tickets, as music lovers can then enjoy their entertainment from the relaxed vantage point of a blanket and pillows, minus the constraints of a chair.

For further information contact the local Festival offices at 36 West 44 St.

HOLIDAY MAGAZINE
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

JUL 1955

July 3–Aug. 28. CHAUTAUQUA INSTITUTION, Chautauqua, N.Y. Concerts, operas, religious activities, plays, lectures, recreation.

July 6–Aug. 14. BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Charles Munch and Boston Symphony Orchestra with guest artists.

July 11–16. JUNIOR [illegible] SHOW, Lexington, Ky. [illegible] show with leading horses [illegible] over U.S.

July 12–Aug. 5. [illegible] FESTIVAL, near Denver, [illegible] ver Symphony Orchestra [illegible] SaulCaston Promenade Pagues [illegible]

July 15–17. NEWPORT JAZZ FESTIVAL, Newport, R.I. Top jazz artists.

July 15–24. AQUATENNIAL, Minneapolis, Minn. Aqua Follies with Olympic diving stars, water ballet, parades, sports.

July 16–23. MISS UNIVERSE PAGEANT, Long Beach, Cal. Contest for most beautiful girl in the world.

July 18–22. CRAFTSMEN'S FAIR OF THE SOUTHERN HIGHLANDS, Asheville, N.C. Demonstration and sale of work by professional craftsmen of the Southern mountain area. Music, dancing and tale-telling.

July 25–26. FIESTA OF ST. JAMES AND ST. ANNE, Taos, N.M. Torchlight procession, music, games, races, costume ball, corn dances by Taos Indians.

July 26–30. FRONTIER DAYS, Cheyenne, Wyo. Old-fashioned rodeo with U.S. and Canadian champions; costumes, parade, carnival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872
JUL 1 1955

Weekend Programs: Around the Dials on AM, FM, and Television

The Boston Tea Party of Dec. 16, 1773, will be dramatized on CBS-TV "You Are There" series Sunday at 1:30 p.m., on WNAC-TV.

Arch Macdonald, WBZ broadcaster, will report on an old-fashioned Fourth of July celebration from New Boston, N.H., Sunday afternoon at 1:30. The little New Eugland town has advanced its annual observance of Independence Day from Monday to Sunday in order to share their celebration, including a parade, with the town band, to the village green, the annual picnic, the ball game and the fireworks, with NBC network listeners throughout the country.

"The Inca of Perusalem," a one-act play by George Bernard Shaw, will be the first presentation on "Cameo Theater," which begins an eight-week season of half-hour dramas on WBZ-TV Sunday at 10 p. m. Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Mary Scott will appear in the leading roles. Albert McCleery, producer and director of the series, has announced that this will be the first time this drama by Shaw has been performed in the United States.

Ann Lee, Hayden Rorke, and child actor Peter Votrian will appear on "Your Play Time" Saturday night at 10:30 on WBZ-TV, in a drama entitled "The Loner" by Lawrence Kimball. The story is about a lonely child's search for affection and companionship, which he does not receive from his wealthy and successful parents.

Beginning Sunday, July 3, Martin Bookspan will originate his WCOP, "Sunday Evening Concert" program from Pittsfield and Tanglewood, where he has gone for this summer's Berkshire Festival as radio and television coordinator for the Boston Symphony Orchestra. (Mr. Bookspan's program is broadcast every Sunday night from 8 o'clock until midnight.) Mr. Bookspan is planning to introduce from time to time to his radio audience visiting soloists and conductors attending the Berkshire Festival.

Among the feature films to be telecast on Sunday will be "The Lisbon Story," starring David Farrar, Patricia Benke, and Walter Rilla on WNAC-TV at 6:30 p.m. At 11 p.m., same station, a full-length motion picture production of Shakespeare's "Macbeth" will be telecast, starring Orson Welles, Roddy McDowall, and Dan O'Herlihy.

A doubleheader game between the Red Sox and Baltimore Orioles will be telecast Sunday at 2 p.m., from Memorial Stadium in Baltimore, on WNAC-TV, and simultaneously on WHDH.

Feature films tentatively scheduled for telecast on WBZ-TV Sunday will be "The Jungle Book" at 8:35 a.m. and "The Iron Crown" at 1 p.m., on "Sunday Cinema." "The Celebrated Mrs. Rowland," starring Gertrude Michael, will be telecast on WBZ-TV's "Royal Playhouse" at 2:30 p.m.

Item (e)
LYNN, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 21,384
JUL 8 1955

[illegible] on his private law practice in an office in Lawrence. . . . Rolland Tapley, conductor of the North Shore Philharmonic Orchestra, is concertmaster of the 80-piece Esplanade concerts orchestra this Summer in Boston. Mr. Tapley, who conducted the Pops Orchestra several times in Symphony Hall last month, played a violin solo on opening night at the Esplanade this week. . . . Local club members who traveled to Salem Rotary this week for a special illustrated report on the 50th Rotary International convention included: Anthony Frasca and Clinton Pickering of Lynn, James D. McCarriston of Swampscott, Superintendent of Schools Aura W. Coleman, Dr. Frank Ireson and C. Elliott Roundy of Marblehead.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872
JUL 9 1955

Tanglewood Programs

Next week's Berkshire Festival concerts will be given in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30. The programs include:

Wednesday

Trio in C minor, Op. 1 . . . . Beethoven
Trio in D major, Op. 70 . . . Beethoven
"Archduke" Trio in B flat, Op. 97 . . . Beethoven
Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano)

Friday

Overture to "Don Giovanni" . . . Mozart
Symphony in C major (K. 425) Mozart
Arias, "Al Desio" (K. 577), "Zemretil" and "Non Temer" from "Idomeneo" . . . . . Mozart
Soloist: Jennie Tourel, soprano
Piano Concerto in G major (K.453) Mozart
Soloist: Leonard Bernstein
Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting

Saturday

Concerto Grosso in D, Op. 3 . Vivaldi
Concerto Grosso in B minor, Op. 3 Vivaldi
Concerto for Cello . . . . . Boccherini
Soloist: Samuel Mayes
Gloria . . . . . Vivaldi
Festival Chorus
Soloists: Saramae Endich, soprano; Sadie Ruth McCollum, mezzo-soprano
Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra, Hugh Ross conducting

Sunday

Suite from "Dardanus" . . . . . Rameau
"Le Tombeau de Couperin" . . . . . Ravel
Pavane . . . . . Fauré
Serenade . . . . . Milhaud
Symphony No. 4 . . . . . Honegger
Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.
UNION
Circ. D. 69,790 - S. 150,600
JUL 11 1955

ROBERT GERLE
Featured in Symphony

Concert Will Feature Gerle And His Violin

Robert Gerle, concertmaster who is returning to San Diego for his fourth season with the Symphony Orchestra, will be featured with his violin in the opening concert tomorrow night in Balboa Park Bowl.

The string artist, noted on two continents, will play Vivaldi's "Seasons."

Under the direction of Robert Shaw, conductor, the orchestra will present "Overture to Egmont" by Beethoven, Epilogue to "Julius Caesar" by Kurka, and Tchaikowsky's "Symphony No. 4."

Of Hungarian parentage, Gerle was born in Italy and educated in Budapest, receiving his artist's diploma from Franz Liszt.

The winner of the international music competition in France he became violin soloist on the French radio before coming to the United States in 1950, again a winner, this time of the Piatigorsky scholarship.

After participating in the music festival at Tanglewood, Mass., Gerle became head of the string department in the school of music at the University of Oklahoma and in 1954 began work on his doctorate at the University of California, where he has taught violin in the past year.

At the close of the season here he will go to Baltimore to join the staff of the Peabody Conservatory.

DAYTON, OHIO
NEWS
Circ. D. 130,338 - S. 161,004
JUL 3 1955

Music

Orchestra Concert Set For Monday

A SPECIAL Fourth of July concert will be given by the Dayton Summer orchestra at the Diehl Municipal shell at Island park. Paul Katz will direct the Monday program which is to begin at 8 p. m. Because of the holiday weekend, the concert was transferred from Sunday to Monday.

The concert, part of the series sponsored by the Dayton Musicians association, the City of Dayton and the Chamber of Commerce, will have as soloist Charlotte Holloman, soprano.

The singer made her Town hall debut in February, 1954, is a graduate of Howard university and holds a master of arts degree from Teachers college, Columbia university. She also studied at the Guildhall School of Music in London and at the opera workshop of the Berkshire Music center at Tanglewood, Mass. She was presented in recital at the Dayton Art Institute this spring.

Miss Holloman will sing excerpts from Gershwin's Porgy and Bess and Carmen Jones version of Bizet's opera.

Music by Sousa, Hanson, and White will be played by the orchestra. A trumpet trio made up of Paul Biagg, Paul McCrea and Franklin LeFevre will be featured.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538
JUL 16 1955

BSO Brilliance Partly Due to Its Special Pitch

LISTENERS at Tanglewood need not be trained musicians to realize the Boston Symphony Orchestra has a tonal brilliance all its own. Nor is it by chance. The classical musical "A" is exactly 422 vibrations a second, to which most orchestras are attuned. The Boston Symphony, however, is pitched to 444 per second.

The late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky raised the pitch years ago when he took over leadership of the organization. This high pitch is considered one reason for the popularity of the orchestra.

During the recent BSO European tour however, so unused were listeners there to the unusual pitch that it required half a concert for them to accept the difference, according to reports. To change the pitch to natural "A" in all the hundreds of instruments employed by the orchestra would cost thousands of dollars, and would be neither feasible nor advisable since the public still prefers the higher register.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538
JUL 19 1955

Edward A. Taft of Boston is staying at the Lenox Club. Mr. Taft, a trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, attended the concerts of the Berkshire Festival weekend at Tanglewood.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 389,011 - S. 258,545
JUL 21 1955

WORDS and [illegible]
By Harriett Jo[illegible]

New Music Festival a[illegible]

Beginning Wednesday, Aug. 3, [illegible] its own music festival, at present being [illegible] to rival the famed Berkshire Festival [illegible] phony in Lenox, Mass. Located at [illegible] of the Rip Van Winkle country, the [illegible] Festival, as it is called, will open [illegible] with the Symphoney of the Air [illegible] as its orchestra and Eduard Van Beinum as conductor.

Other symphonic maestros who will appear during the five-week season are Alfred Wallenstein, Erich Leinsdorf, Morton Gould, Hugh Ross, Leroy Anderson and Izler Solomon. Opera will also be presented under the direction of Emerson Buckley, Tibor Kozma and Leinsdorf.

The programs will be presented in a 4,000-seat natural amphitheater now being completed, together with the raising of a $35,000 tent which will cover half of the amphitheater. Located on the side of a mountain, the outdoor concert hall will be the focal point of a 110-acre estate in the heart of the Ulster County resort country. A special stage, designed by Frederick Kiesler of Vienna, was built [illegible] being as [illegible] for 2,000 [illegible]

Behind [illegible] from the [illegible] primarily [illegible] as co-dir[illegible] violinist [illegible] Air, and [illegible] politan [illegible] Frank F[illegible] Harry [illegible] Catskill [illegible] and one [illegible] industrial [illegible] the ventu[illegible] the subscr[illegible] five-weeks[illegible] topped the [illegible] Beethoven [illegible] Van Bei[illegible] illustrious [illegible] chestra in[illegible] opening, h[illegible] starring France's top comic, [illegible]nandel, will [illegible] an Amer[illegible] premiere A[illegible] at the Fine[illegible] Theater, [illegible] planting [illegible] long-run[illegible] Paris W[illegible] Love." The [illegible] lic actor is [illegible] remembered [illegible] "The Li[illegible] World of [illegible] Camillo," [illegible] Well - Di[illegible] Daughter" [illegible] "Carnet de Bal." "Sheep" [illegible] his 150th movie—and in [illegible] creates six individual char[illegible] zations: A French wine g[illegible] and his quintuplet sons, w[illegible] rounded up on their 40th [illegible] day to bring public attent[illegible] the little village of their [illegible] Raoul Ploquin produce[illegible] Henrie Verneuil directed th[illegible] duction.

FERNANDEL

JLLY COOL
RES O[illegible]

TIGHT BINDING

BUTLER, PA.
EAGLE
Circ. D. 19,395
JUL 22 1955

Concerts In Summer Watched By Musicians

By W. G. ROGERS
Associated Press Arts Editor

NEW YORK (AP)—Now that vegetables are ready to pick in the garden, now that fruit is taking shape and color in the orchard, now that the time for harvest is drawing nearer, who watches the weather every minute with an anxious eye?

The music lover.

The big halls in the big squares in the big cities have closed their doors, cut off the lights; the caretakers are all off on vacation. But not the artists! They are busy right this minute, have been for a month, will be for another two months, taking a busman's holiday at summer concerts in this country and Europe.

Many or most of our concerts are outdoors, in the park, at the Bowl, in the Stadium, at the river's edge. No farmer watches the sky with more concern, or reads weather forecasts with livelier hopes and fears, than the concert manager who may sell 10,000 tickets if it stays fair tonight, but lose his shirt if a single rain-bearing cloud blows up.

After the managers and their performers, it's the countless patrons, like the thousands going to the two big outdoor atractions in this city, who are weather conscious right up to starting time. They don't forget about it, either, during the Beethoven and Brahms and so on, for a shower can call it all off in the middle and send them scurrying for cover.

But it's more fair than foul, and more scheduled concerts, by far, are presented than cancelled—in New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, the Berkshires, the Colorado Mountains.

In this city Stadium concerts, with the Stadium Symphony Orchestra conducted by Mitropoulos, Smallens, Monteux, Kurtz, among others, are held at Lewisohn Stadium, get their soloists from among the very best names: Serkins, Elman, Morini, Warfield, Peerce. The Guggenheim Memorial concerts, which besides their Central Park programs are given every week in Brooklyn's Prospect Park, feature Goldman's Band. Both series are now in their 38th seasons.

Cincinnati Zoo opera is under way, with such stars as Herva Nelli and Roberta Peters. The Philadelphia orchestra, back from Europe, has now become, for this month, the Robin Hood Dell orchestra and plays at the Dell for summertime audiences.

The open-neck, shirt-sleeved, slack-wearing audiences gathered this week for the famed Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass. Main attraction will be the Boston Symphony; and the principal composer will be Beethoven.

The Newport (R.I.) festival opens tomorrow. The Marlboro (Vt.) music festival runs to Aug. 25. There are, here, there and everywhere, pop concerts, Bach festivals, jazz festivals, light opera series, folk singing, barbershop quartet sings.

The Aspen (Colo.) music festival, which like the Berkshire has its own school, is in session to Aug. 27. Conducted this year under the management of participating musicians, it has a special attraction for students from the Universities of Colorado, Denver and Wyoming: they get academic credit for attendance. Among the artists performing there are Primrose, Vronsky and Babin, and Uninsky.

A newcomer to the summer-concert field is the Empire State Music Festival planned for Ellenville, N.Y., on the edge of the mountain resort area, in August. It is hoped that members of the Symphony of the Air will take part.

There is also a newcomer abroad: the first annual Festival of Athens opening Aug. 27. Dino Yannapoulos, of New York's Metropolitan, is artistic director, and among the stars will be Mitropoulos and the singers Nikolaidi, Thebom, Stevens and Steber.

The Edinburgh Festival of Music and Drama opens Aug. 21 and continues to Sept. 20. The Salzburg festival runs from July 24 to Aug. 30. The fifth Festival of Herlin will open Sept. 17.

In France several popular events are scheduled. At the moment the Prades Festival, under the direction of Pablo Casals, is under way and will last another week. The Aix-en-Provence programs start tomorrow and continue through the month.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
MIRROR
Circ. D. 901,735 - S. 1,709,854
JUL 22 1955

Robert Coleman's THEATRE:

Music Under Stars Gaining Momentum

• Ellenville, N. Y., latest site to offer the three Bs in the fresh air.

Over the past few years we have had three leading music centers in the East: Stadium Concerts in our own Lewisohn Stadium, the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass. and Robin Hood Dell in Philadelphia's Fairmount Park. They have offered outstanding orchestras, conductors and soloists at popular prices.

NOW, NEW YORK STATE is to have another music mecca near Ellenville. This is in the Catskill country made famous by Washington Irving. It was up there that Rip Van Winkle bowled with the little men, took a few swigs of a potent drink and had himself a 20-year nap. It's historic country, cool and picturesque.

Arturo Toscanini formed a world-renowned group known as the NBC Symphony. When the eminent maestro retired, his loyal musicians decided to carry on as the Symphony of the Air. All year around. Jascha Rushkin, one of the violinists, was delegated to find a Summer home for the outfit, while it was touring Japan, Korea, etc. under State Department auspices.

Rushkin selected a 110-acre farm near Ellenville as a site for an annual Empire State Music Festival. He interested John Brownlee, noted Met baritone; Frank Forest, erstwhile opera singer and now the head of a big pharmaceutical concern; and leading citizens of the Catskills. So far, $125.000 has been raised for the initial season of five weeks.

AND THEY HOPE to have $300,000 by opening night, Aug. 3. For the venture will be a costly one. Two thousand people will be seated in a huge tent, with accomodations for another 2,000 on benches and chairs surrounding it. A special stage, designed by Frederick Kiesler, has been built in Manhattan and is now being assembled on the Festival site.

The premiere will be a salute to Toscanini, and dedicated "to

Continued on Next Page

Ellenville is but 85 miles from New York City. It can be reached by car in about two and a half hours without breaking any speed limits. There are excellent bus facilities, and additional schedules will be inaugurated especially for music lovers. Some of the finest hotels and restaurants in the country are also located within easy driving distance of the Festival grounds.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 509,171 - S. 1,117,392
JUL 22 1955

BERKSHIRE BENEFIT WILL BE HELD AUG. 11

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center in Lenox, Mass., will take place Thursday, Aug. 11. The day's activities, beginning at 4 P. M. and ending at 11, will include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, an evening concert, drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

The evening's concert, beginning at 8:15 in the Music Shed, will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, in the first performance of Mr. Bernstein's suite from the film score for "On the Waterfront."

Mr. Bernstein also will be soloist with Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." Copland's "Lincoln Portrait" and Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Capriccio Espagnole" will complete the program.

The first of the season's concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood will be given tonight, with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony in an all-Beethoven program. Issac Stern will be soloist in the Violin Concerto.

CORPUS CHRISTI, TEX.
CALLER-TIMES
Circ. S. 62,176
JUL 17 1955

FOR OPEN AIR CONCERTS

Musicians Watch Weather Closer Than Many Farmers

By W. G. ROGERS
Associated Press Arts Editor

NEW YORK, July 16. (AP) — Now that vegetables are ready to pick in the garden, now that fruit is taking shape and color in the orchard, now that the time for harvest is drawing nearer, who watches the weather every minute with an anxious eye?

The music lover.

The big halls in the big squares in the big cities have closed their doors, cut off the lights- the caretakers are all off on vacation. But not the artists! They are busy right this minute, have been for a month, will be for another two months, taking a busman's holiday at summer concerts in this country and Europe.

Many or most of our concerts are outdoors, in the park, at the Bowl, in the Stadium, at the river's edge. No farmer watches the sky with more concern, or reads weather forecasts with livelier hopes and fears, than the concert manager who may sell 10,000 tickets if it stays fair tonight, but lose his shirt if a single rain-bearing cloud blows up.

After the managers and their performers, its the countless patrons, like the thousands going to the two big outdoor attractions in this city, who are weather conscious right up to starting time. They don't forget about it, either, during the Beethoven and Brahms and so on, for a shower can call it all off in the middle and send them scurrying for cover.

But it's more fair than foul, and more scheduled concerts, by far, are presented than canceled—in New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, the Berkshires, the Colorado mountains.

In this city Stadium concerts, which the Stadium Symphony orchestra conducted by Mitropoulos, Smallens, Monteux, Kurtz, among others, are held at Lewisohn Stadium, get their soloists from among the very best names: Serkin, Elman, Morini, Warfield, Peerce. The Guggenheim Memorial concerts, which besides their Central Park programs are given every week in Brooklyn's Prospect Park, feature Goldman's Band. Both series are now in their 38th seasons.

Cincinnati Zoo opera is under way, with such stars as Herva Nelli and Roberta Peters. The Philadelphia orchestra, back from Europe, has now become, for this month, the Robin Hood Dell orchestra and plays at the Dell for summertime audiences.

The open-neck, shirt-sleeved, slack-wearing audiences gathered this week for the famed Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass. Main attraction will be the Boston Symphony; and principal composer will be Beethoven.

The Newport (R.I.) festival opens tomorrow. The Marlboro (Vt.) music festival runs to Aug. 25. There are, here, there and everywhere, pop concerts, Bach festivals, jazz festivals, light opera series, folk singing, barbershop quartet sings.

The Aspen (Colo.) music festival, which like the Berkshire has its own school, is in session to Aug. 27. Conducted this year under the management of participating musicians, it has a special attraction for students from the Universities of Colorado, Denver and Wyoming: they get academic credit for attendance. Among the artists performing there are Primrose, Vronsky and Babin, and Uninsky.

A newcomer to the summer-concert field is the Empire State Music Festival planned for Ellenville, N.Y., on the edge of the mountain resort area, in August. It is hoped that members of the Symphony of the Air will take part.

There is also a newcomer abroad: the first annual Festival of Athens opening Aug. 27. Dino Yannapoulos, of New York's Metropolitan, is artistic director, and among the stars will be Mitropoulos and the singers Nikolaidi, Thebom, Stevens and Steber.

The Edinburgh Festival of Music and Drama opens Aug. 21 and continues to Sept. 20. The Salzburg festival runs from July 24 to Aug. 30. The fifth Festival of Herlin will open Sept. 17.

In France several popular events are scheduled. At the moment the Prades Festival, under the direction of Pablo Casals, is under way and will last another week. The Aix-en-Provence programs start tomorrow and continue through the month.

We would advise those desiring to attend more than one program over a weekend to make their reservations early. That is, if they want the best rooms and dining facilities. Further information may be obtained by writing Nat Dorfman, 1501 Broadway, New York 36, N. Y. Please send along a self-addressed stamped envelope for his reply.

...S TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 79,453 - S. 70,626
JUL 22 1955

Jazz Overcomes Classics As Hubby Succumbs

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor

If you feel an inferiority complex when people discuss long-hair music in hushed voices, try bringing the discussion around to jazz, advises Stephanie Barber, a young woman who has succeeded in converting a culture-conscious husband into a rabid jazz enthusiast.

Stephanie is a blonde who worked as a fashion publicist in New York, married her boss, a [illegible] dweller named [illegible] moved him to the Berkshires [illegible]rted into an es[illegible]ed Music Inn.

[illegible]n and bred in [illegible] took to country [illegible]ten to cream, [illegible] at turning a group of ancient farm buildings into a modern inn, then set about the business of running it as a profitable enterprise while her husband, Phil, carried on his business in New York.

Liked Jazz Best

Since the inn is situated near Lenox, Mass., home of the famous annual Berkshire Music Festival, Stephanie couldn't escape the atmosphere of highbrow music. She personally preferred jazz. Neighbors now remark thoughtfully that one really never should underestimate the power of a woman, for this year Phil and Stephanie are opening their music barn, where, deep in the long-hair music country, they are offering a program of folk and jazz concerts, with appearances by such well-known downbeat artists as Count Basie, Richard Dyer-Bennet and Dizzy Gillespie.

Stephanie has been building up to this point for some time, having started an annual folk and jazz round table at the inn six years ago, and reveling in the arguments and performances of the jazz musicians who attend it.

Attracts Artists

Phil, though a little dazed by the changes wrought in his life by his wife, is filled with nothing but admiration for her. Having taught drama at Yale for six years, he likes having a country theater of his own.

He also likes having an innkeeping wife, who can attract the country's top jazz artists to their little establishment. He likes best, perhaps, the fact that she is able to show a profit on her enterprises, and that despite her talent for hard work and business acumen she continues to look like a glamour girl.

The Barber property in the Berkshires covers 100 acres and includes two lakes. The two Barber sons, Willson and Ben, both teen-agers, have grown husky and healthy on country air, fresh vegetables—and jazz.

Says Phil: "When you meet a city girl who looks like she belongs strictly in a Stork Club atmosphere, look out. She may have you milking cows before you know what's happening."

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 - S. 3,653,302
JUL 23 1955

Busy Strea... You Ca...

By DOUG...

A country boy named J... big city the other day for a... ways happens on these vi... little under the strain.

John, who has a house on th... almost inaccessible top of ... Vermont hill, quickly reporte... the following things:

(1) He has finished the word... to eight songs for the musica... version of "Ah, Wilderness" tha... David Merrick will produce, an... it looks as though the show wi... come to Broadway next spring.

Opera in Works

(2) The opera that he an... Douglas Moore have been writin... about Baby Doe Tabor is tenta... tively titled "The Silver Echo." ... Although Latouche's libretto i... complete, Moore's score is onl... about half done, so it won't b... ready in time to have its pre... miere at Central City, Colo., thi... summer, as previously planned. ... Instead, it may make its debu... next summer at Tanglewood, ... Lenox, Mass., as part of the an... nual Berkshire Music Festival.

(3) [illegible] for which ... he wrote the lyrics, ready to en... ter production soon, every acto... actress, musical director, re... hearsal pianist and seamstress i... town has been after him for ... job.

(4) He has had the pool in th... meadow below his Vermont hous... stretched into a small lake, an... the man who did it used a divin... ing rod in his labors.

Aside from these things, La... touche has nothing really urgen... bothering him. Just a few hun... dred ideas for movies, ballets, re... epic poem... ...santly in hi...

Best

One of the regulars aroun... Sardi's bar reported Thursda... night that a lady producer (we'l... call her Miss Johnson) with ... deep sharp voice got on the phon... last week and called a youn... writing fellow who has had equa... success with books and plays. Sh... had the rights to a property sh... felt he might be willing to adap... for the stage.

The lad's mother answered th... phone, said her son wasn't ... home, listened to the woman wi... the low, short voice, and final... asked who was calling.

"Miss Johnson," said the pr... ducer.

"Listen," said mother. "I do...

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
TIMES-HERALD
Circ. D. 10,258
JUL 26 1955

Beethoven, Barber And Brahms Top Tanglewood Bill

LENOX, Mass. — The Berkshi... Festival of the Boston Symphon... Orchestra at Tanglewood, ... into the fourth of its six weeks ... summer symphonic music, openi... with the fourth of the Wednesd... evening series of chamber music ... Beethoven, a program of thr... quartets played by the New Mus... String Quartet, tomorrow in t... theatre-concert hall.

Charles Munch, music director ... the Boston Symphony, conducts t... of the weekend's three concerts ... the huge music shed on Friday a... Saturday evenings, and Pier... Monteux takes the podium w... the orchestra Sunday afternoon ... the second of his three guest a... pearances this summer.

Mr. Munch's Friday progra... comprises orchestral music of Ha... del, Schumann and Brahms, ... the Tanglewood premiere of Sa... uel Barber's "Prayers of Kier... gaard," which had its first perf... mance last winter by the Bos... Symphony Orchestra.

Serkin Plays "Emperor"

Charles Munch gives his th... all-Beethoven program of the ... Festival, which is largely devo... to the music of the German c... poser, on Saturday evening, w... Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist ... Tanglewood neighbor in Verm... makes his first appearance in ... music shed as soloist in the "E... peror" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-B... gram of Sunday afternoo... Isaac Stern and Gregor ... as soloists in the Conce...

TIGHT BIN

BUTLER, PA.
EAGLE
Circ. D. 19,395

JUL 22 1

Concerts In Watched B

By W. G. ROGERS
Associated Press Arts Editor

NEW YORK (AP)—Now that vege tables are ready to pick in th garden, now that fruit is takin shape and color in the orchard now that the time for harvest i drawing nearer, who watches th weather every minute with a anxious eye?

The music lover.

The big halls in the big square in the big cities have closed their doors, cut off the lights; the care-takers are all off on vacation. But not the artists! They are busy right this minute, have been for a month, will be for another two months, taking a busman's holiday at summer concerts in this country and Europe.

Many or most of our concerts are outdoors, in the park, at the Bowl, in the Stadium, at the river's edge. No farmer watches the sky with more concern, or reads weather forecasts with livelier hopes and fears, than the concert manager who may sell 10,000 tickets if it stays fair tonight, but lose his shirt if a single rain-bearing cloud blows up.

After the managers and their performers, it's the countless patrons, like the thousands going to the two big outdoor atractions in this city, who are weather conscious right up to starting time. They don't forget about it, either, during the Beethoven and Brahms and so on, for a shower can call it all off in the middle and send them scurrying for cover.

But it's more fair than foul, and more scheduled concerts, by far, are presented than cancelled—in New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, the Berkshires, the Colorado Mountains.

In this city Stadium concerts, with the Stadium Symphony Orchestra conducted by Mitropoulos, Smallens, Monteux, Kurtz, among others, are held at Lewisohn Stadium, get their soloists from among the very best names: Serkins, Elman, Morini, Warfield, Peerce. The Guggenheim Memorial concerts, which besides their Central Park programs are given every week in Brooklyn's Prospect Park, feature Goldman's Band. Both series are now in their 38th seasons.

Cincinnati Zoo opera is under way, with such stars as Herva Nelli and Roberta Peters. The Philadelphia orchestra, back from Europe, has now become, for this month, the Robin Hood Dell orchestra and plays at the Dell for summertime audiences.

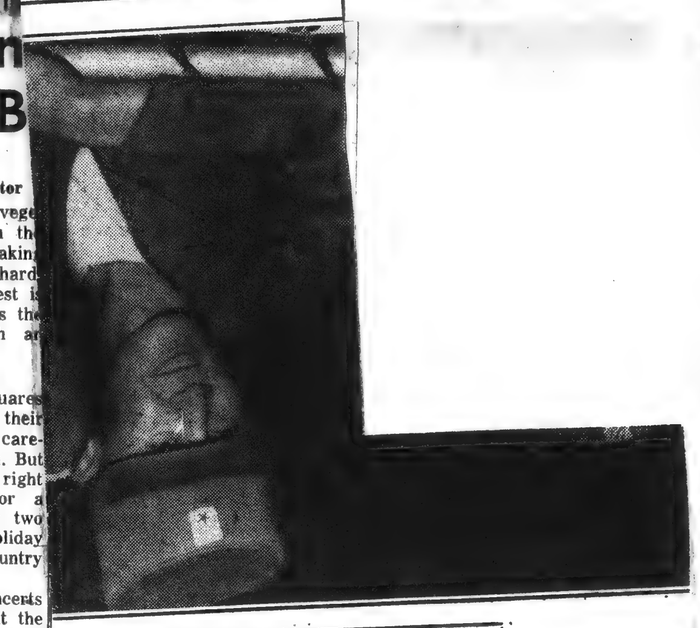
The open-neck, shirt-sleeved, slack-wearing audiences gathered this week for the famed Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass. Main attraction will be the Boston Symphony; and the principal composer will be Beethoven.

The Newport (R.I.) festival opens tomorrow. The Marlboro (Vt.) music festival runs to Aug. 25. There are, here, there and everywhere, pop concerts, Bach festivals, jazz festivals, light opera series, folk singing, barbershop quartet sings.

The Aspen (Colo.) music festival, which like the Berkshire has its own school, is in session to Aug. 27. Conducted this year under the management of participating musicians, it has a special attraction for students from the Universities of Colorado, Denver and Wyoming: they get academic credit for attendance. Among the artists performing there are Primrose, Vronsky and Babin, and Uninsky.

A newcomer to the summer-concert field is the Empire State Music Festival planned for Ellenville, N.Y., on the edge of the mountain resort area, in August. It is hoped that members of the Symphony of the Air will take part.

There is also a newcomer abroad: the first annual Festival of Athens opening Aug. 27. Dino



U.S.-bound, with the 39th Army Base. As a Saturday at Brooklyn Army Base. As a special "Welcome Home" salute that day, THE MIRROR will begin a lively two-article feature on the 1st's fighting men and the rotation plan that sped their return, "Operation Gyroscope." Don't miss it!

Continued from Preceding Page

the perpetuation of the ideals and traditions of the master musician." Others expected to attend are Gov. Averill Harriman, Lieut. Gov. George DeLuca, Attorney General Jacob Javits, Mayor Robert Wagner, Park Commissioner Robert Moses and dignitaries from cities along the Hudson River Valley.

Eduard Van Beinum, Alfred Wallenstein, Morton Gould, Hugh Ross, Leroy Anderson and Izler Solomon will conduct the instrumental programs, while Erich Leinsdorf, Emerson Buckley and Tibor Kozma will batoneer the operatic performances. Leading instrumental, dance and opera stars have been signed for the series.

THE OPENING BILL will comprise Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture and Eighth Symphony, and Brahms' First Symphony. Van Beinum will conduct. The first opera to be given is "La Boheme," with Lucia Evangelista, Eugene Conley, Frank Guarrera, Gloria Lind, William Wilderman, Clifford Harvuot and Ezio Flagello.

Ellenville is but 35 miles from New York City. It can be reached by car in about two and a half hours without breaking any speed limits. There are excellent bus facilities, and additional schedules will be inaugurated especially for music lovers. Some of the finest hotels and restaurants in the country are also located within easy driving distance of the Festival grounds.

We would advise those desiring to attend more than one program over a weekend to make their reservations early. That is, if they want the best rooms and dining facilities. Further information may be obtained by writing Nat Dorfman, 1501 Broadway, New York 2[illegible] N. Y. Please send along a self-addressed stamped envelope for his reply.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 509,171 - S. 1,117,392

JUL 22 1955

Music Center in Lenox, Mass., will take place Thursday, Aug. 11. The day's activities, beginning at 4 P. M. and ending at 11, will include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, an evening concert, drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

The evening's concert, beginning at 8:15 in the Music Shed, will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, in the first performance of Mr. Bernstein's suite from the film score for "On the Waterfront."

Mr. Bernstein also will be soloist with Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." Copland's "Lincoln Portrait" and Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Capriccio Espagnole" will complete the program.

The first of the season's concerts in the Music Shed at

CORPUS CHRISTI, TEX.
CALLER-TIMES
Circ. S. 62,176

JUL 17 1955

FOR OPEN AIR CONCERTS

Musicians Watch Weather Closer Than Many Farmer

By W. G. ROGERS
Associated Press Arts Editor

NEW YORK, July 16. (AP) — Now that vegetables are ready to pick in the garden, now that fruit is taking shape and color in the orchard, now that the time for harvest is drawing nearer, who watches the weather every minute with an anxious eye?

The music lover.

The big halls in the big squares in the big cities have closed their doors, cut off the lights- the caretakers are all off on vacation. But not the artists! They are busy right this minute, have been for a month, will be for another two months, taking a busman's holiday at summer concerts in this country and Europe.

Many or most of our concerts are outdoors, in the park, at the Bowl, in the Stadium, at the river's edge. No farmer watches the sky with more concern, or reads weather forecasts with livelier hopes and fears, than the concert manager who may sell 10,000 tickets if it stays fair tonight, but lose his shirt if a single rain-bearing cloud blows up.

After the managers and their performers, its the countless patrons, like the thousands going to the two big outdoor attractions in this city, who are weather conscious right up to starting time. They don't forget about it, either, during the Beethoven and Brahms and so on, for a shower can call it all off in the middle and send them scurrying for cover.

But it's more fair than foul, and more scheduled concerts, by far, are presented than canceled—in New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, the Berkshires, the Colorado mountains.

In this city Stadium concerts, which the Stadium Symphony orchestra conducted by Mitropoulos, Smallens, Monteux, Kurtz, among others, are held at Lewisohn Stadium, get their soloists from among the very best names: Serkin, Elman, Morini, Warfield, Peerce. The Guggenheim Memorial concerts, which besides their Central Park programs are given every week in Brooklyn's Prospect Park, feature Goldman's Band. Both series are now in their 38th seasons.

Cincinnati Zoo opera is under way, with such stars as Herva Nelli and Roberta Peters. The Philadelphia orchestra, back from Europe, has now become, for this month, the Robin Hood Dell orchestra and plays at the Dell for summertime audiences.

The open-neck, shirt-sleeved, slack-wearing audiences gathered this week for the famed Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass. Main attraction will be the Boston Symphony; and principal composer will be Beethoven.

The Newport (R.I.) festival opens tomorrow. The Marlboro (Vt.) music festival runs to Aug. 25. There are, here, there everywhere, pop concerts, festivals, jazz festivals, light series, folk singing, barbe quartet sings.

The Aspen (Colo. musi val, which like the Berksh its own school, is in sessi Aug. 27. Conducted this year the management of partici musicians, it has a spec traction for students from t versities of Colorado, Denv Wyoming: they get ac credit for attendance. Am artists performing there are rose, Vronsky and Bab Uninsky.

A newcomer to the sum cert field is the Empire Music festival planned for ville, N.Y., on the edge mountain resort area, in It is hoped that members Symphony of the Air will ta

There is also a ne abroad: the first annual of Athens opening Aug. Yannapoulos, of New York ropolitan, is artistic direc among the stars will be M los and the singers Nicola bom, Stevens and Steber.

The Edinburgh Fes Music and Drama opens and continues to Sept. Salzburg festival runs 24 to Aug. 30. The

ARIBUNE
Circ. D. 79,453 - S. 70,626

JUL 22 1955

Jazz Overcomes Classics As Hubby Succumbs

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor

If you feel an inferiority complex when people discuss long-hair music in hushed voices, try bringing the discussion around to jazz, advises Stephanie Barber, a young woman who has succeeded in converting a culture-conscious husband into a rabid jazz enthusiast.

Stephanie is a blonde who worked as a fashion publicist in New York, married her boss, a good-lookiing city dweller named Phil Barber, and moved him to an old estate in the Berkshires which they converted into an establishment named Music Inn.

Stephanie, born and bred in New York City, took to country life like a kitten to cream, worked furiously at turning a group of ancient farm buildings into a modern inn, then set about the business of running it as a profitable enterprise while her husband, Phil, carried on his business in New York.

Liked Jazz Best

Since the inn is situated near Lenox, Mass., home of the famous annual Berkshire Music Festival, Stephanie couldn't escape the atmosphere of highbrow music. She personally preferred jazz. Neighbors now remark thoughtfully that one really never should underestimate the power of a woman, for this year Phil and Stephanie are opening their music barn, where, deep in the long-hair music country, they are offering a program of folk and jazz concerts, with appearances by such well-known downbeat artists as Count Basie, Richard Dyer-Bennet and Dizzy Gillespie.

Stephanie has been building up to this point for some time, having started an annual folk and jazz round table at the inn six years ago, and reveling in the arguments and performances of the jazz musicians who attend it.

Attracts Artists

Phil, though a little dazed by the changes wrought in his life by his wife, is filled with nothing but admiration for her. Having taught drama at Yale for six years, he likes having a country theater of his own.

He also likes having an innkeeping wife, who can attract the country's top jazz artists to their little establishment. He likes best, perhaps, the fact that she is able to show a profit on her enterprises, and that despite her talent for hard work and business acumen she continues to look like a glamour girl.

The Barber property in the Berkshires covers 100 acres and includes two lakes. The two Barber sons, Willson and Ben, both teen-agers, have grown husky and healthy on country air, fresh vegetables—and jazz.

Says Phil: "When you meet a city girl who looks like she belongs strictly in a Stork Club atmosphere, look out. She may have you milking cows before you know what's happening."

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 - S. 3,653,302

JUL 23 1955

Busy Stra... You Ca...

By DOUG...

A country boy named ... big city the other day for ... ways happens on these v... little under the strain.

John, who has a house on t... almost inaccessible top of ... Vermont hill, quickly report... the following things:

(1) He has finished the wor... to eight songs for the musi... version of "Ah, Wilderness" th... David Merrick will produce, a... It looks as though the show w... come to Broadway next sprin...

Opera in Works

(2) The opera that he s... Douglas Moore have been writi... about Baby Doe Tabor is ten... tively titled "The Silver Ech... Although Latouche's libretto ... complete, Moore's score is o... about half done, so it won't ... ready in time to have its p... miere at Central City, Colo., t... summer, as previously plann... Instead, it may make its de... next summer at Tanglewo... Lenox, Mass., as part of the ... ual Berkshire Music Festiva...

(3) [illegible] for wh... he wrote the lyrics, ready to ... er production soon, every ac... actress, musical director, ... hearsal pianist and seamstress... town has been after him fo... job.

(4) He has had the pool in ... meadow below his Vermont ho... stretched into a small lake, ... he man who did it used a di... ng rod in his labors.

Aside from these things, ... touche has nothing really ur... bothering him. Just a few i... red ideas for movies, ballets, ...

One of ... regulars are ... ardi's ... reported Thur... night that a lady producer ... call her Miss Johnson) wi... deep sharp voice got on the p... last week and called a y... writing fellow who has had ... success with books and plays ... had the rights to a propert... felt he might be willing to ... for the stage.

The lad's mother answere... phone, said her son wasn... home, listened to the woman ... the low, short voice, and f... asked who was calling.

"Miss Johnson," said the ... ducer.

"Listen," said mother. "I...

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
TIMES-HERALD
Circ. D. 10,258

JUL 26 1955

...eethoven, Barb... ...And Brahms Top... ...anglewood Bil...

LENOX, Mass. — The Ber... festival of the Boston Sym... chestra at Tanglewood, ... to the fourth of its six we... summer symphonic music, o... ith the fourth of the Wed... ening series of chamber m... ethoven, a program of ... artets played by the New ... ring Quartet, tomorrow ... eatre-concert hall.

Charles Munch, music dir... e Boston Symphony, cond... the weekend's three con... e huge music shed on Fri... aturday evenings, and ... onteux takes the podiu... e orchestra Sunday after... e second of his three g... earances this summer.

Mr. Munch's Friday ... mprises orchestral music ... l, Schumann and Brah... he Tanglewood premiere ... l Barber's "Prayers of ... ard," which had its firs... ance last winter by th... ymphony Orchestra.

Serkin Plays "Empe...

Charles Munch gives ... l-Beethoven program of ... estival, which is largely ... the music of the Ger... oser, on Saturday even... dolf Serkin, noted pi... anglewood neighbor in ... akes his first appearan... usic shed as soloist in ... eror" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-B... ram of Sunday afterno... ase Stern and Gregor... soloists in the Con...

TIGHT BIN

BUTLER, PA.
EAGLE
Circ. D. 19,395

JUL 22 19

Concerts In Watched B

By W. G. ROGERS
Associated Press Arts Editor

NEW YORK (AP)—Now that vege tables are ready to pick in th garden, now that fruit is takin shape and color in the orchard now that the time for harvest i drawing nearer, who watches the weather every minute with an anxious eye?

The music lover.

The big halls in the big squares in the big cities have closed their doors, cut off the lights; the caretakers are all off on vacation. But not the artists! They are busy right this minute, have been for a month, will be for another two months, taking a busman's holiday at summer concerts in this country and Europe.

Many or most of our concerts are outdoors, in the park, at the Bowl, in the Stadium, at the river's edge. No farmer watches the sky with more concern, or reads weather forecasts with livelier hopes and fears, than the concert manager who may sell 10,000 tickets if it stays fair tonight, but lose his shirt if a single rain-bearing cloud blows up.

After the managers and their performers, it's the countless patrons, like the thousands going to the two big outdoor atractions in this city, who are weather conscious right up to starting time. They don't forget about it, either, during the Beethoven and Brahms and so on, for a shower can call it all off in the middle and send them scurrying for cover.

But it's more fair than foul, and more scheduled concerts, by far, are presented than canceled—in New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, the Berkshires, the Colorado Mountains.

In this city Stadium concerts, with the Stadium Symphony Orchestra conducted by Mitropoulos, Smallens, Monteux, Kurtz, among others, are held at Lewisohn Stadium, get their soloists from among the very best names: Serkins, Elman, Morini, Warfield, Peerce. The Guggenheim Memorial concerts, which besides their Central Park programs are given every week in Brooklyn's Prospect Park, feature Goldman's Band. Both series are now in their 38th seasons.

Cincinnati Zoo opera is under way, with such stars as Herva Nelli and Roberta Peters. The Philadelphia orchestra, back from Europe, has now become, for this month, the Robin Hood Dell orchestra and plays at the Dell for summertime audiences.

The open-neck, shirt-sleeved, slack-wearing audiences gathered this week for the famed Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass. Main attraction will be the Boston Symphony; and the principal composer will be Beethoven.

The Newport (R.I.) festival opens tomorrow. The Marlboro (Vt.) music festival runs to Aug. 25. There are, here, there and everywhere, pop concerts, Bach festivals, jazz festivals, light opera series, folk singing, barbershop quartet sings.

The Aspen (Colo.) music festival, which like the Berkshire has its own school, is in session to Aug. 27. Conducted this year under the management of participating musicians, it has a special attraction for students from the Universities of Colorado, Denver and Wyoming: they get academic credit for attendance. Among the artists performing there are Primrose, Vronsky and Babin, and Uninsky.

A newcomer to the summer-concert field is the Empire State Music Festival planned for Ellenville, N.Y., on the edge of the mountain resort area, in August. It is hoped that members of the Symphony of the Air will take part.

There is also a newcomer abroad: the first annual Festival of Athens opening Aug. 27. Dino turn, "Operation Gyroscope." Don't miss it!

U.S.-bound, with the Brooklyn Army Base. As a special "Welcome Home" salute that day, THE MIRROR will begin a lively two-article feature on the 1st's fighting men and the rotation plan that sped their re-

Continued from Preceding Page

the perpetuation of the ideals and traditions of the master musician." Others expected to attend are Gov. Averill Harriman, Lieut. Gov. George DeLuca, Attorney General Jacob Javits, Mayor Robert Wagner, Park Commissioner Robert Moses and dignitaries from cities along the Hudson River Valley.

Eduard Van Beinum, Alfred Gould, Hugh everland.

Jeff Chandler tried to get to a bar to buy some soft drinks for r children. If there were any water fountains they were hidden all the shops—there are more shops than exhibits. New York, Philadelphia, nati, the Berkshires, the Colorado Mountains.

Tibor Kozma will [illegible] operatic performances. Leading instrumental, dance and opera stars have been signed for the series.

THE OPENING BILL will comprise Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture and Eighth Symphony, and Brahms' First Symphony. Van Beinum will conduct. The first opera to be given is "La Boheme," with Lucia Evangelista, Eugene Conley, Frank Guarrera, Gloria Lind, William Wil-from New York City [illegible] be reached by car in about two and a half hours without breaking any speed limits. There are excellent bus facilities, and additional schedules will be inaugurated especially for music lovers. Some of the finest hotels and restaurants in the country are also located within easy driving distance of the Festival grounds.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 509,171 - S. 1,117,392

JUL 22 1955

Music Center in Lenox, Mass., will take place Thursday, Aug. 11. The day's activities, beginning at 4 P. M. and ending at 11, will include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, an evening concert, drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

The evening's concert, beginning at 8:15 in the Music Shed, will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, in the first performance of Mr. Bernstein's suite from the film score for "On the Waterfront."

Mr. Bernstein also will be soloist with Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." Copland's "Lincoln Portrait" and Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Capriccio Espagnole" will complete the program.

The first of the season's concerts in the Music Shed at

CORPUS CHRISTI, TEX.
CALLER-TIMES
Circ. S. 62,176

JUL 17 1955

FOR OPEN AIR CONCERTS

Musicians Watch Weather Closer Than Many Farmers

By W. G. ROGERS
Associated Press Arts Editor

NEW YORK, July 16. (AP) — Now that vegetables are ready to pick in the garden, now that fruit is taking shape and color in the orchard, now that the time for harvest is drawing nearer, who watches the weather every minute with an anxious eye?

The music lover.

The big halls in the big squares in the big cities have closed their doors, cut off the lights- the caretakers are all off on vacation. But not the artists! They are busy right this minute, have been for a month, will be for another two months, taking a busman's holiday at summer concerts in this country and Europe.

Many or most of our concerts are outdoors, in the park, at the Bowl, in the Stadium, at the river's edge. No farmer watches the sky with more concern, or reads weather forecasts with livelier hopes and fears, than the concert manager who may sell 10,000 tickets if it stays fair tonight, but lose his shirt if a single rain-bearing cloud blows up.

After the managers and their performers, its the countless patrons, like the thousands going to the two big outdoor attractions in this city, who are weather conscious right up to starting time. They don't forget about it, either, during the Beethoven and Brahms and so on, for a shower can call it all off in the middle and send them scurrying for cover.

But it's more fair than foul, and more scheduled concerts, by far, are presented than canceled —in New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, the Berkshires, the Colorado mountains.

In this city Stadium concerts, which the Stadium Symphony orchestra conducted by Mitropoulos, Smallens, Monteux, Kurtz, among others, are held at Lewisohn Stadium, get their soloists from among the very best names: Serkin, Elman, Morini, Warfield, Peerce. The Guggenheim Memorial concerts, which besides their Central Park programs are given every week in Brooklyn's Prospect Park, feature Goldman's Band. Both series are now in their 38th seasons.

Cincinnati Zoo opera is under way, with such stars as Herva Nelli and Roberta Peters. The Philadelphia orchestra, back from Europe, has now become, for this month, the Robin Hood Dell orchestra and plays at the Dell for summertime audiences.

The open-neck, shirt-sleeved, slack-wearing audiences gathered this week for the famed Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass. Main attraction will be the Boston Symphony; and principal composer will be Beethoven.

The Newport (R.I.) festiv opens tomorrow. The Marl (Vt.) music festival runs to A 25. There are, here, there everywhere, pop concerts, festivals, jazz festivals light series, folk singing, barber quartet sings.

The Aspen (Colo.) music val, which like the Berkshire its own school, is in session Aug. 27. Conducted this year the management of participa musicians, it has a special traction for students from the versities of Colorado, Denver Wyoming: they get academic credit for attendance. Among artists performing there are Primrose, Vronsky and Babin, and Uninsky.

A newcomer to the summer-cert field is the Empire State Music festival planned for Ellenville, N.Y., on the edge of the mountain resort area, in August. It is hoped that members of the Symphony of the Air will take part.

There is also a newcomer abroad: the first annual Festival of Athens opening Aug. 27. Dino Yannapoulos, of New York Metropolitan, is artistic director among the stars will be Mitropoulos and the singers Nikolaidi bom, Stevens and Steber.

The Edinburgh Festival Music and Drama opens Aug. and continues to Sept. 10. Salzburg festival runs from 24 to Aug. 30. The fifth Festival of Berlin will open Sept. 17.

In France several pageant events are scheduled. At the ment the Prades Festival, the direction of Pablo Casals, under way and will last a week. The Aix-en-Provence grams start tomorrow and through the month.

TACOMA, WASH.
NEWS TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 79,453 - S. 70,626

JUL 22 1955

Jazz Overcomes Classics As Hubby Succumbs

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor

If you feel an inferiority complex when people discuss long-hair music in hushed voices, try bringing the discussion around to jazz, advises Stephanie Barber, a young woman who has succeeded in converting a culture-conscious husband into a rabid jazz enthusiast.

Stephanie is a blonde who worked as a fashion publicist in New York, married her boss, a good-lookiing city dweller named Phil Barber, and moved him to an old estate in the Berkshires which they converted into an establishment named Music Inn.

Stephanie, born and bred in New York City, took to country life like a kitten to cream, worked furiously at turning a group of ancient farm buildings into a modern inn, then set about the business of running it as a profitable enterprise while her husband, Phil, carried on his business in New York.

Liked Jazz Best

Since the inn is situated near Lenox, Mass., home of the famous annual Berkshire Music Festival, Stephanie couldn't escape the atmosphere of highbrow music. She personally preferred jazz. Neighbors now remark thoughtfully that one really never should underestimate the power of a woman, for this year Phil and Stephanie are opening their music barn, where, deep in the long-hair music country, they are offering a program of folk and jazz concerts, with appearances by such well-known downbeat artists as Count Basie, Richard Dyer-Bennet and Dizzy Gillespie.

Stephanie has been building up to this point for some time, having started an annual folk and jazz round table at the inn six years ago, and reveling in the arguments and performances of the jazz musicians who attend it.

Attracts Artists

Phil, though a little dazed by the changes wrought in his life by his wife, is filled with nothing but admiration for her. Having taught drama at Yale for six years, he likes having a country theater of his own.

He also likes having an innkeeping wife, who can attract the country's top jazz artists to their little establishment. He likes best, perhaps, the fact that she is able to show a profit on her enterprises, and that despite her talent for hard work and business acumen she continues to look like a glamour girl.

The Barber property in the Berkshires covers 100 acres and includes two lakes. The two Barber sons, Willson and Ben, both teen-agers, have grown husky and healthy on country air, fresh vegetables—and jazz.

Says Phil: "When you meet a city girl who looks like she belongs strictly in a Stork Club atmosphere, look out. She may have you milking cows before you know what's happening."

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 - S. 3,653,302

JUL 23 1955

Busy Stra You Ca

By DOU

A country boy named J big city the other day for ways happens on these ni little under the strain.

John, who has a house on t almost inaccessible top of Vermont hill, quickly report the following things:

(1) He has finished the wor to eight songs for the music version of "Ah, Wilderness" th David Merrick will produce, a it looks as though the show w come to Broadway next sprin

Opera in Works

(2) The opera that he a Douglas Moore have been writi about Baby Doe Tabor is ten tively titled "The Silver Ech Although Latouche's libretto complete, Moore's score is o about half done, so it won't ready in time to have its p miere at Central City, Colo., t summer, as previously plann Instead, it may make its de next summer at Tanglewo Lenox, Mass., as part of the nual Berkshire Music Festival

(3) [illegible] he wrote the lyrics, ready to ter production soon, every ac actress, musical director, hearsal pianist and seamstress town has been after him fo job.

(4) He has had the pool in meadow below his Vermont ho stretched into a small lake, the man who did it used a di ing rod in his labors.

Aside from these things, touche has nothing really urg bothering him. Just a few dred ideas for movies, ballets, vue sketches and epic po knocking around pleasantly in head.

Ma Knows Best

One of the regulars a Sardi's bar reported Thur night that a lady producer call her Miss Johnson) w deep sharp voice got on the last week and called a writing fellow who has had success with books and play had the rights to a propert felt he might be willing to for the stage.

The lad's mother answered phone, said her son wasn home, listened to the woman the low, short voice, and f asked who was calling.

"Miss Johnson," said the ducer.

"Listen," said mother, "I

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
TIMES-HERALD
Circ. D. 10,258

JUL 26 1955

Beethoven, Barb And Brahms Top Tanglewood Bil

LENOX, Mass. — The Be festival of the Boston Sym orchestra at Tanglewood into the fourth of its six we summer symphonic music, with the fourth of the We evening series of chamber m Beethoven, a program of quartets played by the New String Quartet, tomorrow theatre-concert hall.

Charles Munch, music dire the Boston Symphony, con the weekend's three co the huge music shed on F Saturday evenings, a Monteux takes the podi the orchestra Sunday after the second of his three g appearances this summer.

Mr. Munch's Friday comprises orchestral music el, Schumann and Brah the Tanglewood premiere Barber's "Prayers of ard," which had its firs mance last winter by th Symphony Orchestra.

Serkin Plays "Emp

Charles Munch gives h all-Beethoven program of festival, which is largely the music of the Ger poser, on Saturday even Rudolf Serkin, noted pi Tanglewood neighbor in makes his first appearan music shed as soloist i Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-B gram of Sunday after Isaac Stern and Gre soloists in the C

...Weather
...y Farme

...composer will be Beetho...
The Newport (R.I.) fe... opens tomorrow. The ...
(Vt.) music festival runs ...
25. There are, here, th... everywhere, pop concert... festivals, jazz festivals, li... series, folk singing, ba... quartet sings.

The Aspen (Colo.) mu... val, which like the Berk... its own school, is in s...
Aug. 27. Conducted this ye... the management of par...
musicians, it has a sp...
traction for students from... versities of Colorado, De...
Wyoming; they get ... credit for attendance. A... artists performing there ...
rose, Vronsky and Ba...
Uninsky.

A newcomer to the sum...
cert field is the Emp...
Music festival planned ...
ville, N.Y., on the edg... mountain resort area, i...
It is hoped that membe...
Symphony of the Air will ...

There is also a ... abroad: the first annua... of Athens, opening Aug. ...
Yannapoulos, of New Y... ropolitan, is artistic dir...
among the stars will be ...
los and the singers Nico...
bom, Stevens and Stebe...

The Edinburgh Fe...
Music and Drama ope... and continues to Sept...
Salzburg festival runs ...
24 to Aug. 30. The fift... of Berlin will open Sept...

In France several p... events are scheduled. A... ment the Prades Festi... the direction of Pablo ...
under way and will, la...
week. The Aix-en-Pro... grams start tomorrow a...
through the month.

...s Classics ...cumbs

...ffering a program of folk ...zz concerts, with appear... by such well-known down... ...rtists as Count Basie, Rich... Dyer-Bennet and Dizzy ...bie.

...hanie has been building up ...s point for some time, hav... ...arted an annual folk and ...ound table at the inn six ... ago, and reveling in the ...ents and performances of ...zz musicians who attend it.

Attracts Artists

...though a little dazed by ...anges wrought in his life ...wife, is filled with nothing ...dmiration for her. Having ... drama at Yale for six ... he likes having a country ...r of his own.

...also likes having an inn... ...g wife, who can attract the ...ry's top jazz artists to their ...establishment. He likes best ...ps, the fact that she is able ...ow a profit on her enter... ...and that despite her talent ...rd work and business acu... ...he continues to look like a ...ur girl.

...Barber property in the ...hires covers 100 acres and ...es two lakes. The two Bar... ...ns, Willson and Ben, both ...gers, have grown husky and ...y on country air, fresh ...ables—and jazz.

...s Phil: "When you meet a ...irl who looks like she be... ...strictly in a Stork Club at... ...here, look out. She may ...you milking cows before ...now what's happening."

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 - S. 3,653,302

JUL 23 1955

Busy Stranger in Town; You Can't Fool Mom

By DOUGLAS WATT

A country boy named John Latouche came back to the big city the other day for a visit; and immediately, as always happens on these visits, the city began to bend a little under the strain.

John, who has a house on the almost inaccessible top of a Vermont hill, quickly reported the following things:

(1) He has finished the words to eight songs for the musical version of "Ah, Wilderness" that David Merrick will produce, and it looks as though the show will come to Broadway next spring.

Opera in Works

(2) The opera that he and Douglas Moore have been writing about Baby Doe Tabor is tentatively titled "The Silver Echo." Although Latouche's libretto is complete, Moore's score is only about half done, so it won't be ready in time to have its premiere at Central City, Colo., this summer, as previously planned. Instead, it may make its debut next summer at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., as part of the annual Berkshire Music Festival.

(3) [illegible] Denham," for which he wrote the lyrics, ready to enter production soon, every actor, actress, musical director, rehearsal pianist and seamstress in town has been after him for a job.

(4) He has had the pool in the meadow below his Vermont house stretched into a small lake, and the man who did it used a divining rod in his labors.

Aside from these things, Latouche has nothing really urgent bothering him. Just a few hundred ideas for movies, ballets, revue sketches and epic poems knocking around pleasantly in his head.

Ma Knows Best

One of the regulars around Sardi's bar reported Thursday night that a lady producer (we'll call her Miss Johnson) with a deep sharp voice got on the phone last week and called a young writing fellow who has had equal success with books and plays. She had the rights to a property she felt he might be willing to adapt for the stage.

The lad's mother answered the phone, said her son wasn't at home, listened to the woman with the low, short voice, and finally asked who was calling.

"Miss Johnson," said the producer.

"Listen," said mother. "I don't care what you boys call each other among yourselves, but to me you're MISTER Johnson." And hung up.

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.
INDEPENDENT

JULY 24, 1955

SD Symphony Concert Set

A program of real contrasts will be offered next Tuesday evening at 8:30 p.m. in Balboa Park Bowl when Metropolitan Opera Soprano, Margaret Harshaw, will sing the title role in the English language's first opera, Purcell's "Dido and Aeneas," as well as selections from Wagner's "The Flying Dutchman," "Tannhauser" and "Tristan und Isolde."

The Purcell opera, to be performed in its entirety with a chorus of 160 voices, will be a unique experience for San Diego audiences. First composed in 1689, in London, by Henry Purcell, proprietor of a girls' school, [illegible]y [illegible]r- [illegible]of Miss Harshaw, herself, sang the title role while attending the graduate school of the Juilliard School of Music in New York City.

Margaret Harshaw is best known, however, as a Wagnerian soprano, performing Senta's role in "The Flying Dutchman," with the Metropolitan Opera in 1951, at which her second performance played to standing room only. In succeeding years she won considerable praise as Bruennhilde in "Goetterdaemmerung," as Kundry in "Parsifal" and as Isolde in "Tristan und Isolde."

Next Tuesday evening Miss Harshaw will sing Senta's "Ballade" from "The Flying Dutchman," "Prelude" and "Liebestod" from "Tristan und Isolde," as well as "Dich Teure Halle" from "Tannhauser." The contrasts between the early English "Dido and Aeneas" and her more recent roles from Wagner should prove tremendously interesting.

Critics have praised Miss Harshaw's ability. The New York Times says "a rich, clear, dramatic voice . . ." Time Magazine, "Emotional depth and ringing top tones . . . ," and the Christian Science Monitor, "a stunning soprano . . ."

Margaret Harshaw, leading soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Association, was born in Philadelphia. While she was still in high school she entered and won the Eistedfodd contest in Philadelphia. Soon after she was awarded the coveted Biennial First Prize of the National Federation of Music Clubs, which was followed by a scholarship to the Juilliard School of Music where she continued her studies under the guidance of Mme. Schoen-Renee.

In 1942 Miss Harshaw won the Metropolitan Auditions of the Air and made her debut that same year at the world famed Metropolitan Opera House. A contralto when she first came to public attention, Miss Harshaw developed through experience, study and maturity to a soprano of the first rank.

Miss Harshaw has not confined her operatic triumphs to the Metropolitan. She has been equally successful in San Francisco, Paris, Mexico and South America. Not exclusively an opera star, she has sung with practically every orchestra in the country and each year between opera seasons she goes on an extensive concert tour. Also to her credit are engagements at the Lewisohn Stadium, Robin Hood Dell, the Worcestershire Festival and Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

Next Tuesday's concert will be presented by the San Diego Symphony Orchestra Association as Opera Night in cooperation with the San Diego Opera Guild. Robert Shaw will conduct the San Diego Symphony and accompanying chorus.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
TIMES-HERALD
Circ. D. 10,258

JUL 26 1955

Beethoven, Barber And Brahms Top Tanglewood Bill

LENOX, Mass. — The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet, tomorrow in the theatre-concert hall.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the weekend's three concerts in the huge music shed on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Pierre Monteux takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon for the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

Mr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," which had its first performance last winter by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Serkin Plays "Emperor"

Charles Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, which is largely devoted to the music of the German composer, on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist and Tanglewood neighbor in Vermont, makes his first appearance in the music shed as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program of Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

TUCSON ARIZ. CITIZEN

JUL 23 1955

146

The Music Box

New York Develops Own Outdoor Music

By Irving Kolodin
Music Editor,
The Saturday Review

As everyone in-the-know of New York's musical life realizes, the world's greatest city sorely needs a suitable summer complement to its indoor music-making as London has Glyndebourne, Vienna has Salzburg, Chicago has Ravinia Park, and Boston has Tanglewood. None are exactly similar solutions of the problems, which is as it should be, since every problem is different.

Now a group of enterprising people headed by Metropolitan baritone John Brownlee have, in the spirit of Brigham Young, looked over the landscape and decided, on behalf of Ellenville in Ulster County, that "this is the place." To implement their decision they have engaged the Symphony of the Air (former NBC-"Toscanini" orchestra) as the resident ensemble, and taken advantage of the presence in this country of Holland's celebrated Eduard van Beinum to appoint him for the ceremonial opening on Aug. 3, followed by concerts on the 5th and 7th.

ALREADY PROJECTED are two further series of Wednesday-Friday-Sunday orchestral concerts, to be led by Erich Leinsdorf and Alfred Wallenstein. On Thursday and Saturday evenings of each week operas will be presented under the direction of Emerson Buckley, recently associated with the New York City Center Opera Co. To judge from a not wholly dependable prospectus, "Boheme" will be the first attraction, followed by "Butterfly." Each work will be given twice, with casts made up of Metropolitan-City Center personnel.

There are, however, some local factors which cause one to wonder whether "this is the place" or "is this the place?" is the more suitable motto, Ellenville, as most people in this part of the world are aware, may have its roots in Ulster County, but its heart belongs to Sullivan County—which is to say, to that gaily disorganized vacation-land containing within itself what is commonly called the Borscht Belt, as theatrically memorialized in the play "Having Wonderful Time" and musical "Wish You Were Here."

I WOULDN'T attempt to prophesy how far people will go to escape the heat of New York and/or to hear fine music well performed, but I permit myself some faint doubt that they will repair in large numbers to this particular terrain. It must strike others, as it strikes me, as luring more people into an area already overcrowded in summer time. One of the attractions of Tanglewood is its isolation, leading in turn to the probability that most people who attend a concert there have come for the purpose rather than regarding it as a way to "kill an evening" incidental to a vacation.

However, no such venture can possibly be proved or disproved on speculation alone, and the Empire State Music Festival, as it is being called, has my hearty good wishes for success. I doubtless shall make the two-hour, or so, drive myself in early August, for investigatory purposes.

I ONLY HOPE (a) that all overnight accommodations are not pre-empted by vacationers; (b) that it doesn't rain. Arrangements have been made for sheltering half the 4,000 seats by a tent, but lap-room is likely to be at a premium if the skies open up and the other 2,000 start looking for shelter. Better bring your so'wester, Mynheer van Beinum; August is a rough month in the Catskills.

* * *

A NAME of some distinction in music-making of the '20s turned up in the news recently with the information that Eino Rautavarra, of Helsinki, had been nominated by Jan Sibelius for advanced compositional studies in America, first at the Berkshire Music Center (Tanglewood) and then at the Juilliard School. Music-lovers who recall their Glyndebourne recordings of the mid-'30s will remember that the role of the Countess in Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro" was sung by Aulikki Rautavarra. Whether this was his mother or an aunt (Rautavarra was born in 1928), the announcement does not clarify, stating rather that his "father was a noted Finnish opera singer." While at Tanglewood the young musician's support is underwritten by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation.

* * *

THE AMERICAN Symphony Orchestra League had some of the pleasantest surroundings imaginable for its recent western conference in California. This was the Asilomar Hotel and Conference Grounds, Pacific Grove, on the Monterey Peninsula. Anybody who knows the Monterey Peninsula will wager that it took extra special effort to keep the attention from wandering to the nearby blue Pacific. Among the speakers were John Edwards, manager of the Pittsburgh Symphony and president of the league; Alan Watrous of the Wichita Symphony, Wichita, Kan.; Alexander F. Haas, a member of the board of the Pasadena Symphony, and Mrs. Helen M. Thompson, executive secretary of the league. A representative of the Bridgeport Brass Co., Bridgeport, Conn., discussed the interest and responsibility of industry in a community's cultural development.

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 52,205

JUL 27 1955

Bernstein Names Son After Koussevitzky

Leonard Bernstein, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra Aug. 5 at Tanglewood in a concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, has named his new son after the great conductor and founder of the Berkshire Music Festival.

The son, 3 weeks old, has been named Alexander Serge. Koussevitzky was Serge Alexander.

Mr. Bernstein was a protege of Mr. Koussevitzky before he made a name for himself in the world of music.

ATHENS, N. Y.
HERALD
Circ. W. 315

JUL 28 1955

Berkshire Festival Concerts Enter Their Fourth Week

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet tomorrow, July 27, in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, conducts two of the week end's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday (July 29) and Saturday (July 30) evenings, and Pierre Monteux takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon (July 31).

Mr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard"

Charles Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, which is largely devoted to the music of that German composer, on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin makes his first appearance in the Music Shed, as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program of Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 52,205

JUL 28 1955

Art Show Set At Tanglewood

An exhibition of paintings, drawings and prints by Ture Bengtz, head of the Bengtz School of Art at Lenox School, Lenox, will be on display starting Saturday at the exhibition hall at the main gate in Tanglewood.

The Bengtz show, in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be on view until Aug. 6.

A native of Finland, Mr. Bengtz came to America in 1927 and studied at the Boston Museum School, where he is head of the department of drawing and graphic arts.

His Tanglewood exhibit will include such recent work as "Olive Bank," oil painting abstract of a Swedish sailing vessel; "Horses Resting," "The Fiddler" and "Children in the Countryside."

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 - S. 3,653,302
JUL 23 1955

Busy Stranger in Town; You Can't Fool Mom

By DOUGLAS WATT

A country boy named John Latouche came back to the big city the other day for a visit; and immediately, as always happens on these visits, the city began to bend a little under the strain.

John, who has a house on the almost inaccessible top of a Vermont hill, quickly reported the following things:

(1) He has finished the words to eight songs for the musical version of "Ah, Wilderness" that David Merrick will produce, and it looks as though the show will come to Broadway next spring.

Opera in Works

(2) The opera that he and Douglas Moore have been writing about Baby Doe Tabor is tentatively titled "The Silver Echo." Although Latouche's libretto is complete, Moore's score is only about half done, so it won't be ready in time to have its premiere at Central City, Colo., this summer, as previously planned. Instead, it may make its debut next summer at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., as part of the annual Berkshire Music Festival.

(3) With Dietrich, for which he wrote the lyrics, ready to enter production soon, every actor, actress, musical director, rehearsal pianist and seamstress in town has been after him for a job.

(4) He has had the pool in the meadow below his Vermont house stretched into a small lake, and [illegible] a divine sketches and epic poems knocking around pleasantly in his head.

Ma Knows Best

One of the regulars around Sardi's bar reported Thursday night that a lady producer (we'll call her Miss Johnson) with a deep sharp voice got on the phone last week and called a young writing fellow who has had equal success with books and plays. She had the rights to a property she felt he might be willing to adapt for the stage.

The lad's mother answered the phone, said her son wasn't at home, listened to the woman with the low, short voice, and finally asked who was calling.

"Miss Johnson," said the producer.

"Listen," said mother. "I don't

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.
INDEPENDENT
JULY 24, 1955

SD Symphony Concert Set

A program of real contrasts will be offered next Tuesday evening at 8:30 p.m. in Balboa Park Bowl when Metropolitan Opera Soprano, Margaret Harshaw, will sing the title role in the English language's first opera, Purcell's "Dido and Aeneas," as well as selections from Wagner's "The Flying Dutchman," "Tannhauser" and "Tristan und Isolde."

The Purcell opera, to be performed in its entirety with a chorus of 160 voices, will be a unique experience for San Diego audiences. First composed in 1689, in London, by Henry Purcell, proprietor of a girls' school, and performed that same year by students in the school, the Purcell opera lay idle until its rediscovery in the latter part of the last century.

Miss Harshaw, herself, sang the title role while attending the graduate school of the Juilliard School of Music in New York City.

Margaret Harshaw is best known, however, as a Wagnerian soprano, performing Senta's role in "The Flying Dutchman," with the Metropolitan Opera in 1951, at which her second performance played to standing room only. In succeeding years she won considerable praise as Bruennhilde in "Goetterdaemmerung," as Kundry in "Parsifal" and as Isolde in "Tristan und Isolde."

Next Tuesday evening Miss Harshaw will sing Senta's "Ballade" from "The Flying Dutchman," "Prelude" and "Liebestod" from "Tristan und Isolde," as well as "Dich Teure Halle" from "Tannhauser." The contrasts between the early English "Dido and Aeneas" and her more recent roles from Wagner should prove tremendously interesting.

Critics have praised Miss Harshaw's ability. The New York Times says "a rich, clear, dramatic voice . . ." Time Magazine, "Emotional depth and ringing top tones . . . ," and the Christian Science Monitor, "a stunning soprano . . ."

Margaret Harshaw, leading soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Association, was born in Philadelphia. While she was still in high school she entered and won the Eistedfodd contest in Philadelphia. Soon after she was awarded the coveted Biennial First Prize of the National Federation of Music Clubs, which was followed by a scholarship to the Juilliard School of Music where she continued her studies under the guidance of Mme Schoen-Renes.

In 1942 Miss Harshaw won the Metropolitan Auditions of the Air and made her debut that same year at the world famed Metropolitan Opera House. A contralto when she first came to public attention, Miss Harshaw developed through experience, study and maturity to a soprano of the first rank.

Miss Harshaw has not confined her operatic triumphs to the Metropolitan. She has been equally successful in San Francisco, Paris, Mexico and South America. Not exclusively an opera star, she has sung with practically every orchestra in the country and each year between opera seasons she goes on an extensive concert tour. Also to her credit are engagements at the Lewisohn Stadium, Robin Hood Dell, the Worcestershire Festival and Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

Next Tuesday's concert will be presented by the San Diego Symphony Orchestra Association as Opera Night in cooperation with the San Diego Opera Guild. Robert Shaw will conduct the San Diego Symphony and accompanying chorus.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
TIMES-HERALD
Circ. D. 10,258
JUL 26 1955

Beethoven, Barber And Brahms Top Tanglewood Bill

LENOX, Mass. — The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet, tomorrow in the theatre-concert hall.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the weekend's three concerts in the huge music shed on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Pierre Monteux takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon for the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

Mr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," which had its first performance last winter by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Serkin Plays "Emperor"

Charles Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, which is largely devoted to the music of the German composer, on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist and Tanglewood neighbor in Vermont, makes his first appearance in the music shed as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program of Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

TUCSON ARIZ. CITIZEN
JUL 23 1955

146

The Music Box

New York Develops Own Outdoor Music

By Irving Kolodin
Music Editor,
The Saturday Review

As everyone in-the-know of New York's musical life realizes, the world's greatest city sorely needs a suitable summer complement to its indoor music-making as London has Glyndebourne, Vienna has Salzburg, Chicago has Ravinia Park, and Boston has Tanglewood. None are exactly similar solutions of the problems, which is as it should be, since every problem is different.

Now a group of enterprising people headed by Metropolitan baritone John Brownlee have, in the spirit of Brigham Young, looked over the landscape and decided, on behalf of Ellenville in Ulster County, that "this is the place." To implement their decision they have engaged the Symphony of the Air (former NBC-"Toscanini" orchestra) as the resident ensemble, and taken advantage of the presence in this country of Holland's celebrated Eduard van Beinum to appoint him for the ceremonial opening on Aug. 3, followed by concerts on the 5th and 7th.

ALREADY PROJECTED are two further series of Wednesday - Friday - Sunday orchestral concerts, to be led by Erich Leinsdorf and Alfred Wallenstein. On Thursday and Saturday evenings of each week operas will be presented under the direction of Emerson Buckley, recently associated with the New York City Center Opera Co. To judge from a not wholly dependable prospectus, "Boheme" will be the first attraction, followed by "Butterfly." Each work will be given twice, with casts made up of Metropolitan - City Center personnel.

There are, however, some local factors which cause one to wonder whether "this is the place" or "is this the place?" is the more suitable motto. Ellenville, as most people in this part of the world are aware, may have its roots in Ulster County, but its heart belongs to Sullivan County—which is to say, to that gaily disorganized vacation-land containing within itself what is commonly called the Borscht Belt, as theatrically memorialized in the play "Having Wonderful Time" and musical "Wish You Were Here."

I WOULDN'T attempt to prophesy how far people will go to escape the heat of New York and/or to hear fine music well performed, but I permit myself some faint doubt that they will repair in large numbers to this particular terrain. It must strike others, as it strikes me, as luring more people into an area already overcrowded in summer time. One of the attractions of Tanglewood is its isolation, leading in turn to the probability that most people who attend a concert there have come for the purpose rather than regarding it as a way to "kill an evening" incidental to a vacation.

However, no such venture can possibly be proved or disproved on speculation alone, and the Empire State Music Festival, as it is being called, has my hearty good wishes for success. I doubtless shall make the two-hour, or so, drive myself in early August, for investigatory purposes.

I ONLY HOPE (a) that all overnight accommodations are not pre-empted by vacationers; (b) that it doesn't rain. Arrangements have been made for sheltering half the 4,000 seats by a tent, but lap-room is likely to be at a premium if the skies open up and the other 2,000 start looking for shelter. Better bring your sou'wester, Mynheer van Beinum; August is a rough month in the Catskills.

* * *

A NAME of some distinction in music-making of the '20s turned up in the news recently with the information that Eino Rautavarra, of Helsinki, had been nominated by Jan Sibelius for advanced compositional studies in America, first at the Berkshire Music Center (Tanglewood) and then at the Juilliard School. Music-lovers who recall their Glyndebourne recordings of the mid-'30s will remember that the role of the Countess in Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro" was sung by Aulikki Rautavarra. Whether this was his mother or an aunt (Rautavarra was born in 1928), the announcement does not clarify, stating rather that his "father was a noted Finnish opera singer." While at Tanglewood the young musician's support is underwritten by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation.

* * *

THE AMERICAN Symphony Orchestra League had some of the pleasantest surroundings imaginable for its recent western conference in California. This was the Asilomar Hotel and Conference Grounds, Pacific Grove, on the Monterey Peninsula. Anybody who knows the Monterey Peninsula will wager that it took extra special effort to keep the attention from wandering to the nearby blue Pacific. Among the speakers were John Edwards, manager of the Pittsburgh Symphony and president of the league; Alan Watrous of the Wichita Symphony, Wichita, Kan.; Alexander F. Haas, a member of the board of the Pasadena Symphony, and Mrs. Helen M. Thompson, executive secretary of the league. A representative of the Bridgeport Brass Co., Bridgeport, Conn., discussed the interest and responsibility of industry in a community's cultural development.

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 52,205
JUL 27 1955

Bernstein Names Son After Koussevitzky

Leonard Bernstein, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra Aug. 5 at Tanglewood in a concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, has named his new son after the great conductor and founder of the Berkshire Music Festival.

The son, 3 weeks old, has been named Alexander Serge. Koussevitzky was Serge Alexander.

Mr. Bernstein was a protege of Mr. Koussevitzky before he made a name for himself in the world of music.

ATHENS, N. Y.
HERALD
Circ. W. 315
JUL 28 1955

Berkshire Festival Concerts Enter Their Fourth Week

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet tomorrow, July 27, in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, conducts two of the week end's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday (July 29) and Saturday (July 30) evenings, and Pierre Monteux takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon (July 31).

Mr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard"

Charles Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, which is largely devoted to the music of that German composer, on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin makes his first appearance in the Music Shed, as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program of Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 52,205
JUL 28 1955

Art Show Set At Tanglewood

An exhibition of paintings, drawings and prints by Ture Bengtz, head of the Bengtz School of Art at Lenox School, Lenox, will be on display starting Saturday at the exhibition hall at the main gate in Tanglewood.

The Bengtz show, in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be on view until Aug. 6.

A native of Finland, Mr. Bengtz came to America in 1927 and studied at the Boston Museum School, where he is head of the department of drawing and graphic arts.

His Tanglewood exhibit will include such recent work as "Olive Bank," oil painting abstract of a Swedish sailing vessel; "Horses Resting," "The Fiddler" and "Children in the Countryside."

All photos by Pinetts

During intermission occupants of Roger W. Wellington's box chat with friends. Left to right are Harriet L. Amber, Harry C. Dutton, Mrs. Amber, Mr. Wellington and Lenox resident Robert Hibbard. The short intermission was followed by door prize drawings, with Boris Goldovsky as master of ceremonies.

Between numbers Mrs. Marion R. Hollingsworth of Lenox chats with Lt. Gov. Sumner Whittier, Lenox Selectman Ralph Henry Barnes and State Police Sgt. John LaPointe, guests of the Boston Symphony.

Dr. Robert P. Knight, medical director of Riggs Foundation, Stockbridge, second from right, and his brother, Paul D. Knight of Chicago, discuss the Tanglewood on Parade program with the latter's wife. Seated at left is Mrs. Adele Blasingame. Paul Knight is a speech pathologist in private practice.

County Residents, Guests At Tanglewood On Parade

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

AUG 12 1955

RALEIGH, N. C.
NEWS & OBSERVER
Circ. D. 117,496 - S. 126,087

AUG 1 1955

On the Air.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, will present the Berkshire Festival concert over WPTF tonight at 8:15 o'clock. Isaac Stern, violinist, will be the guest soloist. The entire 45-minute program will be devoted to Beethoven's Concerto in D for violin and orchestra.

MT. VERNON, N. Y.
ARGUS
Circ. D. 15,667

AUG 2 1955

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman

WESTCHESTER MUSIC STUDENTS AT TANGLEWOOD

MUSIC MAKERS

The recent announcement that an Empire State Festival is to take place in Ellenville, N. Y., indicates that the sponsors of that activity have caught up with the special fervor for Summer music that has been so long a feature of the Massachusetts' vacation lure. The Ellenville project will include the contribution of the NBC Symphony Orchestra which was formerly conducted by Arturo Toscanini and besides a series of operas the first of which will be "La Boheme" to be followed by "Madame Butterfly", "La Traviata" and "Cosi Fan Tutte". There will also be a series of soloists among whom are Eugene List, pianist; Leonard Rose, cellist, Oscar Shumsky, violinist, and Jose Limon and his company of dancers. In short, the festival spirit has caught up with New York State and this indicates an awareness on the part of the promoters that the Summer weeks are just right for a projection of these art forms.

* * *

For a long time now the festival of music urge has been bustin' out all over and no little credit must be given to that long known establishment located in the Berkshires, in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

* * *

This writer, in his Summer wandering along the eastern seaboard inspecting Summer theatres, show-tents which feature popular operettas, the full program of dance at Jacob's Pillow, and the Berkshire music program, has repeatedly pointed out in these columns that a vast amount of New Yorkers were making pilgrimages to the excellent anchorage there of melody under the auspices of the Boston Symphony Orchestra with the chief direction by Charles Munch. Now that New York State is joining in, the interest in symphony and opera will only tend to widen the audiences for both festivals; and if we are in for more hot Summers the caravans to the mountains will increase as appeal for this type of popular bearing spreads.

* * *

A particularly interesting facet of the Berkshire Music Center is the campus for music students who come from 38 states and 18 foreign countries to study in the very lap of the Boston Symphony. This center was established in 1940 so that serious young musicians may add to their professional training and artistic experience. The faculty of the school has proven a magnet for the young people. It includes such notables as Leonard Bernstein, Richard Burgin, Boston Symphony's Associate Conductor, William Kroll, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Ingolf Dahl and members of the symphony. This season 405 students have come to study and among them are top composers from Japan, Chile, France, Brazil and other quarters of this ever growing smaller world.

* * *

Ten of the students have enrolled from Westchester County. Some are Salvatore Martirano, Suzanne Heckman, Alice Handleman, Jack Gottlieb, Helene Goldberg and Robert Miller who are shown above with Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the school.

The Berkshire Festival ends August 14th but the Ellenville tones go on through the first week of September.

MAMARONE
TIM
Circ. D.
AUG 2

at the
NEW

WESTCHESTER

MUSIC MAKERS

The recent announc an Empire State Fe take place in Ellenvill dicates that the spon activity have caught special fervor for Sum that has been so lon of the Massachuset lure. The Ellenville include the contribu
NBC Symphony Orch was formerly conduct ro Toscanini and besi of operas the first of
be "La Boheme" to
by "Madame Butte
Traviata" and "Cosi F
There will also be soloists among whom List, pianist; Leonard list, Oscar Shumsky and Jose Limon and h of dancers. In short, spirit has caught up
York State and this an awareness on the promoters that the weeks are just right jection of these art fo

* * *

For a long time now val of music urge has in' out all over and credit must be given to known establishment the Berkshires, in Te
Lenox, Mass.

* * *

This writer, in his wandering along the ea board inspecting Sum tres, show-tents whic popular operettas, the gram of dance at Jacob and the Berkshire m gram, has repeatedly po in these columns tha amount of New York making pilgrimages to cellent anchorage there dy under the auspices Boston Symphony Orche
the chief direction by Munch. Now that N
State is joining in, the in symphony and opera tend to widen the audi both festivals; and if w for more hot Summers vans to the mountains crease as appeal for of popular bearing spre

* * *

A particularly interes of the Berkshire Music
the campus for music who come from 38 states and 18 foreign countries to study in the MAMARONECK, N. Y.

TIMES
Circ. D. 4,164
AUG 2 1955

at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman

WESTCHESTER MUSIC STUDENTS AT TANGLEWOOD

MUSIC MAKERS

The recent announcement that an Empire State Festival is to take place in Ellenville, N. Y. indicates that the sponsors of that activity have caught up with the special fervor for summer music that has been so long a feature of the Massachusetts' vacation lure. The Ellenville project will include the contribution of the NBC Symphony Orchestra which was formerly conducted by Arturo Toscanini and besides a series of operas the first of which will be "La Boheme" to be followed by "Madame Butterfly", "La Traviata" and "Cosi Fan Tutte". There will also be a series of soloists among whom are Eugene List, pianist; Leonard Rose, cellist, Oscar Shumsk, violinist and Jose Limon and his company of dancers. In short the festival spirit has caught up with New York State and this indicates an awareness on the part of the promoters that the Summer weeks are just right for a projection of these art forms.

• • •

For a long time now the festival of music urge has been bustin' out all over and no little credit must be given to that long known establishment located in the Berkshires in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

• • •

This writer in his Summer wandering along the eastern seaboard inspecting Summer theatres, show-tents which feature popular operettas, the full program of dance at Jacob's Pillow, and the Berkshire music program, has repeatedly pointed out in these columns that a vast amount of New Yorkers were making pilgrimages to the excellent anchorage there of melodic under the auspices of the Boston Symphony Orchestra with the chief direction by Charles Munch. Now that New York State is joining in the interest in symphony and opera will only tend to widen the audiences for [illegible] festivals and if we are in for more hot Summers [illegible] cause an appeal f[illegible] of popular hearing sure very lap of the Boston Symphony. This center was established in 1940 so that serious young musicians may add to their professional training and artistic experience. The faculty of the school has proven a magnet for the young people. It includes such notables as Leonard Bernstein, Richard Burgin, Boston Symphony's Associate Conductor, William Kroll, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Ingolf Dahl and members of the symphony. This season 405 students have come to study and among them are top composers from Japan, Chile, France, Brazil and other quarters of this ever growing smaller world.

• • •

Ten of the students have enrolled from Westchester County. Some are Salvatore Martirano, Suzanne Heckman, Alice Handleman, Jack Gottlieb, Helene Goldberg and Robert Miller who are shown above with Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the school.

The Berkshire Festival ends August 14th but the Ellenville tones go on through the first week of September.

Week End Foul-Up Hurts Tanglewood

BOSTON POST

By TUCKER KEISER

One more week end like the last and the Boston Symphony will be hard pressed to restore its Berkshire Festival to popular favor. After wrenching their way through a traffic snarl that made the name Tanglewood seem a bitter jest, thousands of maddened motorists may well be resolved to attend summer musical events elsewhere, if at all.

The Boston Symphony concerts at Tanglewood undoubtedly constitute the most important summer music festival in the western hemisphere; the range of programs is extremely wide and the level of performance is extremely high.

Every major newspaper here and in Europe carries accounts of the performances. The NBC radio network broadcasts parts of the program each week. The publicity is so universal that cars can be seen from every State in the Union, from Canada and from Mexico.

It becomes increasingly evident, however, that Lenox and Pittsfield cannot cope with the crowds, particularly when other events in the area attract additional visitors.

Last Saturday night's concert dramatically pointed up the problem.

Concert Half Over

Thousands of listeners did not reach Tanglewood until the concert was half over. Tickets were still being sold as the musicians began to play the "Eroica," the last work on the program, and as the final chords were sounded people were still entering the gates. Some of the musicians, as a matter of fact, arrived only after intermission.

The huge turnout was predictable. Mr. Munch had planned a very popular Beethoven program, with Rudolf Serkin playing the "Emperor" Concerto. The weather was ideal—cool and moonlit—and this always means big crowds. It was the height of the vacation season.

The State police and local police had foreseen trouble and despatched every available officer to the area; both groups handled an impossible situation with commendable efficiency.

But the parking facilities were inadequate for the flood of automobiles. By 7:45 p. m. cars were backed up two or three miles and were three abreast on the eastern approaches to Tanglewood, and I assume the western roads were equally clogged.

No plan had been made for handling such a foreseeable emergency. Many cars were abandoned in ditches or in backroad areas. One farm just across from the main gate picked up a tidy bit of change by accommodating over 1000 cars in a hayfield at 50 cents apiece, it is reported.

Some Obligation

Tanglewood assumes certain responsibilities when it sells tickets. Among these is the responsibility to provide adequate facilities. A ticket entitles the purchaser to hear a concert, not simply hear about it.

Surely the Boston Symphony could plan for emergency parking areas, either in hayfields like those organized that night on a personal enterprise basis, or in the large sweep of land between the lake and the Tanglewood grounds.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 509,171 - S. 1,117,392
AUG 13 1955

148

Music: Big Play at Lenox

Ball Goes From Boston to Pops to Puccini

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 11—"Tanglewood on Parade," the hours-long fiesta wherein the hundreds of musicians at Tanglewood strut their stuff, took place Thursday afternoon and evening with undiminished spirit despite overcast skies, frequent showers and the pother about the wind named Connie.

The bad weather cut down the size of the crowd, which was too bad for those who had planned to come and found they couldn't. It was also too bad for the exchequer, since the proceeds go to the school here known as the Berkshire Music Center.

But there were almost 7,000 men, women and children on the Tanglewood grounds. And if they were curious and their legs and ears held out, they could hear anything from old music to new, symphonic music to opera, serious material to cheerful stuff. From 4 to 11 P. M. there was scarcely a moment when one couldn't hear some kind of musical performance.

•

The big show took place in the big shed when the Boston Symphony Orchestra, first in its own identity and then converted by the mere use of a different name into the Boston Pops Orchestra, did the performing.

Leonard Bernstein was the conductor in the first half of this program. He directed the Boston Symphony in the first performance of his suite based on his music for the film "On the Waterfront." With Claude Rains as narrator, he also directed Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait."

Mr. Bernstein's suite makes great, big, beautiful sounds. It conveys some atmosphere, but if you had not seen the movie, you would have difficulty associating this music with its violence. Every bit of it comes off, but it goes on too long. It has a kind of spaciousness that might pass for nobility.

Passing through the lobby of my hotel Sunday morning, I overheard what might be described as an emotionally disturbed lady summing up in what might be called emphatic tones:

The performance of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" was the Koussevitzky memorial concert of the season. Here in the Berkshires. It was a fortunate choice prepared lovingly by the late conductor's protegee Leonard Bernstein and presented with all the solemnity the occasion demanded.

Nearly 7000 persons attended to pay respect to the memory of Dr. Koussevitzky whose presence is still felt in every quarter at Tanglewood.

The "Missa" is one of those curious works, an undisputed masterpiece which, however, are rarely performed. It takes its place among the most profound works of the composer, but since it is comfortable neither in the cathedral nor the concert hall, conductors shy away from tackling so formidable a piece.

To bring it off with any degree of effectiveness a conductor must avoid striving for sublety yet, never fall into the trap of alternating thunderous fortissimo and whispered pianissimos, coloring only in black and white as it were. He must preserve the 16th century-like unity of its structure and at the same time take into account the dramaic setting of the text.

Mr. Bernstein tonight trod a path somewhere between the two extremes. There was considerable variety in his dynamic levels and he paid particular attention to the thematic development, the formal design of the work.

The music moved serenely from section to section without ever becoming sectionalized.

replying, "The ghost of Richard Strauss."

Mr. Bernstein got a rousing performance of this work from the Boston Symphony. Then he did equally well with Mr. Copland's touching hymn to Lincoln and democracy. Mr. Rains read the soaring words of the sixteenth President with fervor.

In the second half Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Boston Pops, took over on the podium. He conducted Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Capriccio Espagnol," Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue, with the busy Mr. Bernstein as the piano soloist, and the Strauss-Dorati "Graduation Ball" suite. Mr. Fiedler, who knows how to get some fun out of music, led performances of characteristic humor and gusto.

The day began with performances by the Tanglewood study group in the barn. At the same time the Opera Department offered Puccini's "Gianni Schicchi" in the theatre-concert hall. Showers caused the transfer of this show from the formal garden.

Then at 5:45 there was a fanfare and Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the center, formally welcomed the audience. Simultaneous performances followed, by the student orchestra, led by student conductors in the shed; opera scenes by the Opera Department in the theatre-concert hall, and music by Tanglewood composers in the chamber music hall.

•

During the afternoon the signing of a new contract between the Boston Symphony and R. C. A. Victor took place. A group of officials led by Frank M. Folsom, president of the Radio Corporation of America, came up for the day to sign the agreement. Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the orchestra; Charles Munch, its conductor, and Mr. Fiedler took part in the ceremony.

While the official announcement said only that the contract was "a long-term renewal of the forty-year recording association" of these two groups, it was learned from a Victor official that the pact was for five years. Under its terms Victor is expected to [illegible] its major effort in [illegible]y on the Boston [illegible] and the Boston forcing of either chorus for effect, [illegible]re were moving and even thrilling passages along the way.

H. T.

The soloists, Adele Addison, EuniceAlberts, David Lloyd and Mac Morgan, remained well within the spirit of the proceedings and the chorus, coached thoroughly by Mr. Bernstein, contributed some excellent singing.

In fact, it was the only choral work I have heard worthy of the Berkshire Festival all summer.

Circus Resumes

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 5 (AP)—The show went on as scheduled today in the big top of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey Circus after a walkout of prop men shut down the St. Paul performance last night after the first act.

A Ringling official said it was the first time in the history of the circus that a walkout had shut down "the greatest show on earth" after the performance was under way.

Scrapbook Poem

MORNING CLOUDS

By D. MAUDE GILLESPIE

Clouds . . . the long night's coolness slept upon . . .
Night transmuted into dawn.
Disrobed of dark . . . and warmed
By the ascending hearth of sun,
The clouds evolve . . . with gold
Impregnated . . . day's genesis begun.
An infinite realm of clouds!
Yet . . . not one the same.
Angels alone know intimately
each
By its heaven-chosen name.

MAMARONECK, N. Y.
TIMES
1955 at the

NEW YORK THEATERS

Charles K. Freeman

WESTCHESTER MUSIC STUDENTS AT TANGLEWOOD

MUSIC MAKERS

The recent announcement that an Empire State festival is to take place in Rochester, N. Y. indicates that the sponsors of that activity have caught up with the speed limit for summer music that has been showing a feature of the Massachusetts vacation hire. The Rochester project will include the construction of the NBC Symphony Orchestra which was formerly conducted by Arturo Toscanini and besides a series of operas the first of which will be "La Boheme" to be followed by "Madame Butterfly", "La Traviata" and "Cosi Fan Tutte". There will also be a series of soloists among whom are Eugene List, pianist, Leonard Rose cellist, Oscar Shumsky violinist and Jose Limon and his company of dancers. In short the festival spirit has caught up with New York State and this indicates an awareness on the part of the promoters that the Summer weeks are just right for a projection of these art forms.

• • •

For a long time now the festival of music urge has been bustin' out all over and no little credit must be given to that long known establishment located in the Berkshires, in Tanglewood, Lenox space.

• • •

This writer in his Summer wanderings along the eastern seaboard inspecting Stock or theatres show-tents which feature popular operettas the full program of dance at Jacob's Pillow and the Berkshire music program has repeatedly pointed out in these columns that a vast amount of New Yorkers were making pilgrimages to the excellent and scenic areas of the Boston Symphony orchestra with the chief direction by Charles Munch. Now that New York State is joining in the interest in symphony and opera will undoubtedly tend to widen the audience for festivals and of course for more hot Summers there is no music as appeal [illegible] very lap of the Boston Symphony. This center was established in 1940 so that serious young musicians may add to their professional training and artistic experience. The faculty of the school has proven a magnet for the young people. It includes such notables as Leonard Bernstein, Richard Burgin, Boston Symphony's Associate Conductor, William Kroll, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Ingolf Dahl and members of the symphony. This season 405 students have come to study and among them are top composers from Japan, Chile, France, Brazil and other quarters of this ever growing smaller world.

• • •

Ten of the students have enrolled from Westchester County. Some are Salvatore Martirano, Suzanne Heckman, Alice Handleman, Jack Gottlieb, Helene Goldberg and Robert Miller who are shown above with Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the school.

The Berkshire Festival ends August 14th but the Ellenville tones go on through the first week of September.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 509,171 - S. 1,117,392
AUG 13 1955

148

Music: Big Play at Lenox

Ball Goes From Boston to Pops to Puccini

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 11—"Tanglewood on Parade," the hours-long fiesta wherein the hundreds of musicians at Tanglewood strut their stuff, took place Thursday afternoon and evening with undiminished spirit despite overcast skies, frequent showers and the pother about the wind named Connie.

The bad weather cut down the size of the crowd, which was too bad for those who had planned to come and found they couldn't. It was also too bad for the exchequer, since the proceeds go to the school here known as the Berkshire Music Center.

But there were almost 7,000 men, women and children on the Tanglewood grounds. And if they were curious and their legs and ears held out, they could hear anything from old music to new, symphonic music to opera, serious material to cheerful stuff. From 4 to 11 P. M. there was scarcely a moment when one couldn't hear some kind of musical performance.

•

The big show took place in the big shed when the Boston Symphony Orchestra, first in its own identity and then converted by the mere use of a different name into the Boston Pops Orchestra, did the performing.

Leonard Bernstein was the conductor in the first half of this program. He directed the Boston Symphony in the first performance of his suite based on his music for the film "On the Waterfront." With Claude Rains as narrator, he also directed Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait."

Mr. Bernstein's suite makes great, big, beautiful sounds. It conveys some atmosphere, but if you had not seen the movie, you would have difficulty associating this music with its violence. Every bit of it comes off, but it goes on too long. It has a kind of spaciousness that might pass for nobility. When James Stagliano, the first horn player, went offstage for a few moments, someone asked, "Who was that who went off?" One felt like replying, "The ghost of Richard Strauss."

Mr. Bernstein got a rousing performance of this work from the Boston Symphony. Then he did equally well with Mr. Copland's touching hymn to Lincoln and democracy. Mr. Rains read the soaring words of the sixteenth President with fervor.

In the second half Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Boston Pops, took over on the podium. He conducted Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Capriccio Espagnol," Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue, with the busy Mr. Bernstein as the piano soloist, and the Strauss-Dorati "Graduation Ball" suite. Mr. Fiedler, who knows how to get some fun out of music, led performances of characteristic humor and gusto.

The day began with performances by the Tanglewood study group in the barn. At the same time the Opera Department offered Puccini's "Gianni Schicchi" in the theatre-concert hall. Showers caused the transfer of this show from the formal garden.

Then at 5:45 there was a fanfare and Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the center, formally welcomed the audience. Simultaneous performances followed, by the student orchestra, led by student conductors in the shed; opera scenes by the Opera Department in the theatre-concert hall, and music by Tanglewood composers in the chamber music hall.

•

During the afternoon the signing of a new contract between the Boston Symphony and R. C. A. Victor took place. A group of officials led by Frank M. Folsom, president of the Radio Corporation of America, came up for the day to sign the agreement. Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the orchestra; Charles Munch, its conductor, and Mr. Fiedler took part in the ceremony.

While the official announcement said only that the contract was "a long-term renewal of the forty-year recording association" of these two groups, it was learned from a Victor official that the pact was for five years. Under its terms Victor is expected to concentrate its major effort in this country on the Boston Symphony and the Boston Pops.

H. T.

We Hu

BOSTON FO

By TUCKER KEISER

One more week end like the last and the Boston Symphony will be hard pressed to restore its Berkshire Festival to popular favor. After wrenching their way through a traffic snarl that made the name Tanglewood seem a bitter jest, thousands of maddened motorists may well be resolved to attend summer musical events elsewhere, if at all.

The Boston Symphony concerts at Tanglewood undoubtedly constitute the most important summer music festival in the western hemisphere; the range of programs is extremely wide and the level of performance is extremely high.

Every major newspaper here and in Europe carries accounts of the performances. The NBC radio network broadcasts parts of the program each week. The publicity is so universal that cars can be seen from every State in the Union, from Canada and from Mexico.

It becomes increasingly evident, however, that Lenox and Pittsfield cannot cope with the crowds, particularly when other events in the area attract additional visitors.

Last Saturday night's concert dramatically pointed up the problem.

Concert Half Over

Thousands of listeners did not reach Tanglewood until the concert was half over. Tickets were still being sold as the musicians began to play the "Eroica," the last work on the program, and as the final chords were sounded people were still entering the gates. Some of the musicians, as a matter of fact, arrived only after intermission.

The huge turnout was predictable. Mr. Munch had planned a very popular Beethoven program, with Rudolf Serkin playing the "Emperor" Concerto. The weather was ideal—cool and moonlit—and this always means big crowds. It was the height of the vacation season.

The State police and local police had foreseen trouble and despatched every available officer to the area; both groups handled an impossible situation with commendable efficiency.

But the parking facilities were inadequate for the flood of automobiles. By 7:45 p. m. cars were backed up two or three miles and were three abreast on the eastern approaches to Tanglewood, and I assume the western roads were equally clogged.

No plan had been made for handling such a foreseeable emergency. Many cars were abandoned in ditches or in backroad areas. One farm just across from the main gate picked up a tidy bit of change by accommodating over 1000 cars in a hayfield at 50 cents apiece, it is reported.

Some Obligation

Tanglewood assumes certain responsibilities when it sells tickets. Among these is the responsibility to provide adequate facilities. A ticket entitles the purchaser to hear a concert, not simply hear about it.

Surely the Boston Symphony o'clock. Relatives and friends kindly invited.

BROWN—Of Somerville, Aug. 5, Doris L., of 82 Newbury st., beloved daughter of Helen (Thomas) and Oscar T. Brown, and sister of Helen A. and Julia M. Brown. Funeral service in Paddock Memorial Chapel, St. James' Episcopal Church, Mass. ave., at Beech st., North Cambridge, Monday, Aug. 8, at 2 p. m. Friends may call at the residence Sunday after 1 p. m.

[illegible] In Beachmont, Aug. 5,

Solemn High Mass of Requiem Church of St. Joseph at 9 o' Relatives and friends are kind vited. Visiting hours 2-5 and Interment in Holy Cross Cemete

EKMAN—In Cambridge, Aug. 5, William E. Ekman, late residen Prince st., brother of Mrs. Mabel win. Funeral services in the of the Watson Funeral Hom Magazine st., at Central sq., Tue Aug. 9, at 1 p. m. Relatives friends invited. Calling hours M

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, Aug. 5 — The performance of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" was the Koussevitzky memorial concert of the season. Here in the Berkshires. It was a fortunate choice prepared lovingly by the late conductor's protegee Leonard Bernstein and presented with all the solemnity the occasion demanded.

Nearly 7000 persons attended to pay respect to the memory of Dr. Koussevitzky whose presence is still felt in every quarter at Tanglewood.

The "Missa" is one of those curious works, an undisputed masterpiece which, however, are rarely performed. It takes its place among the most profound works of the composer, but since it is comfortable neither in the cathedral nor the concert hall, conductors shy away from tackling so formidable a piece.

To bring it off with any degree of effectiveness a conductor must avoid striving for sublety yet, never fall into the trap of alternating thunderous fortissimo and whispered pianissimos, coloring only in black and white as it were. He must preserve the 16th century-like unity of its structure and at the same time take into account the dramaic setting of the text.

Mr. Bernstein tonight trod a path somewhere between the two extremes. There was considerable variety in his dynamic levels and he paid particular attention to the thematic development, the formal design of the work.

The music moved serenely from section to section without ever becoming sectionalized. There was no forcing of either orchestra or chorus for effect alone, yet there were moving and even thrilling passages along the way.

The soloists, Adele Addison, EuniceAlberts, David Lloyd and Mac Morgan, remained well within the spirit of the proceedings and the chorus, coached thoroughly by Mr. Bernstein, contributed some excellent singing.

In fact, it was the only choral work I have heard worthy of the Berkshire Festival all summer.

Circus Resumes

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 5 (AP) —The show went on as scheduled today in the big top of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey Circus after a walkout of prop men shut down the St. Paul performance last night after the first act.

A Ringling official said it was the first time in the history of the circus that a walkout had shut down "the greatest show on earth" after the performance was under way.

Scrapbook Poem

MORNING CLOUDS

By D. MAUDE GILLESPIE.

Clouds . . . the long night's coolness slept upon . . .
Night transmuted into dawn!
Disrobed of dark . . . and warmed
By the ascending hearth of sun,
The clouds evolve . . . with gold
Impregnated . . . day's genesis begun.
An infinite realm of clouds!
Yet . . . not one the same.
Angels alone know intimately
each
By its heaven-chosen name.

MAMARONECK, N. Y.
TIMES
1955 at the NEW YORK THEATERS

by Charles K. Freeman

WESTCHESTER MUSIC STUDENTS AT TANGLEWOOD

MUSIC MAKERS

The recent announcement that an Empire State [illegible] is to take place in Ellenville, N. Y. indicates that the sponsors of that activity race can keep up with the space race, for summer music that has been so big a feature of the Massachusetts vacation culture. The Ellenville project will include the construction of the NBC Symphony Orchestra which was formerly conducted by Arturo Toscanini and, besides a series of operas the first of which will be "La Boheme" to be followed by "Madame Butterfly," "La Traviata" and "Cosi Fan Tutte". There will also be a series of soloists among whom are Eugene List, pianist; Leonard Rose, cellist, Oscar Shumsky, violinist and Jose Limon and his company of dancers. In short the festival spirit has caught up with New York State and this indicates an awareness on the part of the promoters that the Summer weeks are just right for a production of these art forms.

• • •

For a long time now the festival of music urge has been bursting out all over and no little credit must be given to that long known establishment located in the Berkshires, in Tanglewood, Lenox [illegible]

• • •

This writer in his Summer wanderings along the eastern seaboard inspecting Summer theatres, show-tents which feature popular operettas who full program of dance at Jacob's Pillow and the Berkshire music program has repeatedly pointed out in these columns that a vast amount of New Yorkers were making pilgrimages to the excellent anchorage [illegible] to do under the auspices of the Boston Symphony Orchestra with the chief direction by Charles Munch. Now that New York State is joining in the interest in symphony and opera will only tend to widen the audiences for festivals and if we are to have more hot Symphonies [illegible] as appeal [illegible] very lap of the Boston Symphon. This center was established in 1940 so that serious young musicians may add to their professional training and artistic experience. The faculty of the school has proven a magnet for the young people. It includes such notables as Leonard Bernstein, Richard Burgin, Boston Symphony's Associate Conductor, William Kroll, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Ingolf Dahl and members of the symphony. This season 405 students have come to study and among them are top composers from Japan, Chile, France, Brazil and other quarters of this ever growing smaller world.

• • •

Ten of the students have enrolled from Westchester County. Some are Salvatore Martirano, Suzanne Heckman, Alice Handleman, Jack Gottlieb, Helene Goldberg and Robert Miller who are shown above with Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the school.

The Berkshire Festival ends August 14th but the Ellenville tones go on through the first week of September.

We Hu

BOSTON POST

By TUCKER KEISER

One more week end like the last and the Boston Symphony will be hard pressed to restore its Berkshire Festival to popular favor. After wrenching their way through a traffic snarl that made the name Tanglewood seem a bitter jest, thousands of maddened motorists may well be resolved to attend summer musical events elsewhere, if at all.

The Boston Symphony concerts at Tanglewood undoubtedly constitute the most important summer music festival in the western hemisphere; the range of programs is extremely wide and the level of performance is extremely high.

Every major newspaper here and in Europe carries accounts of the performances. The NBC radio network broadcasts parts of the program each week. The publicity is so universal that cars can be seen from every State in the Union, from Canada and from Mexico.

It becomes increasingly evident, however, that Lenox and Pittsfield cannot cope with the crowds, particularly when other events in the area attract additional visitors.

Last Saturday night's concert dramatically pointed up the problem.

Concert Half Over

Thousands of listeners did not reach Tanglewood until the concert was half over. Tickets were still being sold as the musicians began to play the "Eroica," the last work on the program, and as the final chords were sounded people were still entering the gates. Some of the musicians, as a matter of fact, arrived only after intermission.

The huge turnout was predictable. Mr. Munch had planned a very popular Beethoven program, with Rudolf Serkin playing the "Emperor" Concerto. The weather was ideal—cool and moonlit—and this always means big crowds. It was the height of the vacation season.

The State police and local police had foreseen trouble and despatched every available officer to the area; both groups handled an impossible situation with commendable efficiency.

But the parking facilities were inadequate for the flood of automobiles. By 7:45 p. m. cars were backed up two or three miles and were three abreast on the eastern approaches to Tanglewood, and I assume the western roads were equally clogged.

No plan had been made for handling such a foreseeable emergency. Many cars were abandoned in ditches or in backroad areas. One farm just across from the main gate picked up a tidy bit of change by accommodating over 1000 cars in a hayfield at 50 cents apiece, it is reported.

Some Obligation

Tanglewood assumes certain responsibilities when it sells tickets. Among these is the responsibility to provide adequate facilities. A ticket entitles the purchaser to hear a concert, not simply hear about it.

Surely the Boston Symphony

o'clock. Relatives and friends kindly invited.

BROWN—Of Somerville, Aug. 5, Doris L., of 82 Newbury st., beloved daughter of Helen (Thomas) and Oscar T. Brown, and sister of Helen A. and Julia M. Brown. Funeral service in Paddock Memorial Chapel, St. James' Episcopal Church, Mass. ave., at Beech st., North Cambridge, Monday, Aug. 8, at 2 p. m. Friends may call at the residence Sunday after 1 p. m.

[illegible]—In Beachmont, Aug. 5, [illegible]

Solemn High Mass of Requiem Church of St. Joseph at 9 o' Relatives and friends are kind vited. Visiting hours 2-5 and Interment in Holy Cross Cemete

EKMAN—In Cambridge, Aug. 5, William E. Ekman, late residen Prince st., brother of Mrs. Mabel win. Funeral services in the of the Watson Funeral Hom Magazine st., at Central sq., Tu Aug. 9, at 1 p. m. Relatives friends invited. Calling hours M

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 509,171 - S. 1,117,392
AUG 13 1955

148

Music: Big Play at Lenox

Ball Goes From Boston to Pops to Puccini

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 11—"Tanglewood on Parade," the hours-long fiesta wherein the hundreds of musicians at Tanglewood strut their stuff, took place Thursday afternoon and evening with undiminished spirit despite overcast skies, frequent showers and the pother about the wind named Connie.

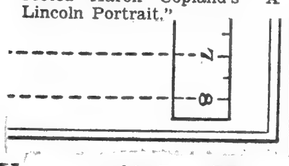
The bad weather cut down the size of the crowd, which was too bad for those who had planned to come and found they couldn't. It was also too bad for the exchequer, since the proceeds go to the school here known as the Berkshire Music Center.

But there were almost 7,000 men, women and children on the Tanglewood grounds. And if they were curious and their legs and ears held out, they could hear anything from old music to new, symphonic music to opera, serious material to cheerful stuff. From 4 to 11 P. M. there was scarcely a moment when one couldn't hear some kind of musical performance.

•

The big show took place in the big shed when the Boston Symphony Orchestra, first in its own identity and then converted by the mere use of a different name into the Boston Pops Orchestra, did the performing.

Leonard Bernstein was the conductor in the first half of this program. He directed the Boston Symphony in the first performance of his suite based on his music for the film "On the Waterfront." With Claude Rains as narrator, he also directed Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait."



replying, "The ghost of Richard Strauss."

Mr. Bernstein got a rousing performance of this work from the Boston Symphony. Then he did equally well with Mr. Copland's touching hymn to Lincoln and democracy. Mr. Rains read the soaring words of the sixteenth President with fervor.

In the second half Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Boston Pops, took over on the podium. He conducted Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Capriccio Espagnol," Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue, with the busy Mr. Bernstein as the piano soloist, and the Strauss-Dorati "Graduation Ball" suite. Mr. Fiedler, who knows how to get some fun out of music, led performances of characteristic humor and gusto.

The day began with performances by the Tanglewood study group in the barn. At the same time the Opera Department offered Puccini's "Gianni Schicchi" in the theatre-concert hall. Showers caused the transfer of this show from the formal garden.

Then at 5:45 there was a fanfare and Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the center, formally welcomed the audience. Simultaneous performances followed, by the student orchestra, led by student conductors in the shed; opera scenes by the Opera Department in the theatre-concert hall, and music by Tanglewood composers in the chamber music hall.

•

During the afternoon the signing of a new contract between the Boston Symphony and R. C. A. Victor took place. A group of officials led by Frank M. Folsom, president of the Radio Corporation of America, came up for the day to sign the agreement. Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the [illegible] was kidnapped, bound and beaten early today. The organizer for the A. F. L. Teamsters Union was found shortly before dawn, his hands bound to a telephone pole, on a little-used road six miles out of Sebastopol. He had been beaten

Koussevitzky Memorial

Music in Review

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, Aug. 5 — The performance of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" was the Koussevitzky memorial concert of the season. Here in the Berkshires. It was a fortunate choice prepared lovingly by the late conductor's protegee Leonard Bernstein and presented with all the solemnity the occasion demanded.

Nearly 7000 persons attended to pay respect to the memory of Dr. Koussevitzky whose presence is still felt in every quarter at Tanglewood.

The "Missa" is one of those curious works, an undisputed masterpiece which, however, are rarely performed. It takes its place among the most profound works of the composer, but since it is comfortable neither in the cathedral nor the concert hall, conductors shy away from tackling so formidable a piece.

To bring it off with any degree of effectiveness a conductor must avoid striving for sublety yet, never fall into the trap of alternating thunderous fortissimo and whispered pianissimos, coloring only in black and white as it were. He must preserve the 16th century-like unity of its structure and at the same time take into account the dramaic setting of the text.

Mr. Bernstein tonight trod a path somewhere between the two extremes. There was considerable variety in his dynamic levels and he paid particular attention to the thematic development, the formal design of the work.

The music moved serenely from section to section without ever becoming sectionalized. There was no forcing of either orchestra or chorus for effect alone, yet there were moving and even thrilling passages along the way.

The soloists, Adele Addison, EuniceAlberts, David Llloyd and Mac Morgan, remained well within the spirit of the proceedings and the chorus, coached thoroughly by Mr. Bernstein, contributed some excellent singing.

In fact, it was the only choral work I have heard worthy of the Berkshire Festival all summer.

Circus Resumes

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 5 (AP) —The show went on as scheduled today in the big top of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey Circus after a walkout of prop men shut down the St. Paul performance last night after the first act.

A Ringling official said it was the first time in the history of the circus that a walkout had shut down "the greatest show on earth" after the performance was under way.

Scrapbook Poem

MORNING CLOUDS
By D. MAUDE GILLESPIE

Clouds . . . the long night's coolness slept upon . . .
Night transmuted into dawn!
Disrobed of dark . . . and warmed
By the ascending hearth of sun,
The clouds evolve . . . with gold
Impregnated . . . day's genesis begun.
An infinite realm of clouds!
Yet . . . not one the same.
Angels alone know intimately
each
By its heaven-chosen name.

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 52,205

JUL 27 1955

Behind the Pianist and Left of the Bassoons

Protocol Leads a Newspaperman into the Middle of Tanglewood's Orchestra

By DUANE LA FLECHE

There was a certain protocol to be followed.

The manager and the personnel manager were consulted. There was a formal request by the manager to the orchestra committee for its approval. Then, as matters proceeded well, on a recent day a letter from the Boston Symphony Orchestra brought the information that I might sit in with the players at a rehearsal under the baton of Pierre Monteux.

The place was Tanglewood, which last weekend opened its four-week season of Boston Symphony concerts.

I was to present myself at 9:30 a. m. Saturday to Rozario Mazzeo, the orchestra's personnel manager. I would be given, I was told, "words of help, caution and advice," and would be seated "strategically" among the players.

I would, it was implied, make no nuisance of myself, remain inconspicuous and keep myself in tune with the nature of the occasion.

I did so solemnly promise.

The words of "help, caution and advice" from Mr. Mazzeo (an amateur ornithologist of note—and quite used to rare birds) proved not so formidable as the summons to his presence had indicated. He eyed me once from head to toe, greeted me graciously and, as we walked toward the great Tanglewood shed, he asked only that I be discreet.

His request proved easy to fulfill. There was nothing to be discreet about, save, perhaps, that a certain bass clarinetist couldn't resist poking with his toe that part of the posterior of an oboist that bulged through a chair ahead of him—(that in a lull in the proceedings)—or the prodigious wink given me by a bass violist after, with professional nonchalance, he plucked a particularly gutty plunk from his instrument at just the split second it was called for. But those things I do NOT mention. I had promised to be discreet.

FAMED CONDUCTOR—Pierre Monteux, in an informal portrait taken as he rehearsed the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

• • •

MY strategic sitting place proved to be just behind the pianist, a bit to the left of the bassoonists, in a curve formed by the bass players, close at hand to the violoncellos and, a bit to my dismay, directly in line with the somewhat questioning eye of M. Monteux.

But at this moment M. Monteux had not yet taken his place on the podium. All about me were the players. The pianist was asking that the top be removed from the huge concert grand; all about were plunks and toots, thumps and twangs, as the players tuned their instruments. There was a babel as well, as more than 100 men and two women relaxed and readied themselves for the work ahead of them.

We (and on such an occasion certainly I may say we) were to rehearse what might be called a somewhat difficult program. Not, perhaps, of particular difficulty to the musicians, for playing such works is their profession, but rather, difficult for the listener.

The Beethoven Second Symphony is familiar enough, and Beethoven is always heart-warming. Not so easy to hear, and, in hearing, comprehend, would be the orchestral suite from "The Black Maskers," by the American composer, Roger Sessions (in residence this summer at Tanglewood and present for the rehearsal). Bach's Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor isn't listened to casually, and the Strauss tone poem, "Death and Transfiguration," requires a bit more attention than a juke box ballad.

But before the arrival of M. Monteux it seemed appropriate to become acquainted with some of the musicians about me.

• • •

THE young American lad at my right, blowing negligently into that grandpa of all woodwinds—a contra-bassoon—and producing a moan with a built-in vibration, he had a kindly look.

RICHARD PLASTER, 27, from Winston-Salem, N. C., in his third season with the Boston Symphony after graduation from the Juilliard School of Music and playing with the Baltimore Symphony.

However did one become a contra-bassoonist? He was asked.

It developed one doesn't just become a contra-bassoonist, he more often has the instrument thrust on him. He starts off, perhaps, as a clarinetist and then, in high school or such, a bassoon and contra-bassoon player is needed in the orchestra. A likely lad is selected and the world has a new bassoonist.

But Mr. Plaster also had an aim and a practical eye. He wanted to play with a great orchestra; the contra-bassoonists in the three or four great orchestras in the East were growing old. Mr. Plaster first applied himself, then applied to the Boston Symphony for an audition. He made it.

Cellists Bob Ripley and Richard Kapuscinski (whose Polish name isn't to confuse you—he was born in Milwaukee).

Mr. Ripley, 33, once a student at Tanglewood; a graduate of Curtis Institute and the Cleveland Symphony; in his first season with the Boston. He was in the Army in the war and spent three years playing with Glenn Miller's Army band.

Mr. Kapuscinski, 31, is likewise a graduate of Curtis Institute and the Cleveland Orchestra and in his first year with the Boston.

Doriot Anthony Dwyer, one of the two women members and a flutist—pardon me, first flutist—with the orchestra. She doesn't find it strange being surrounded by men; her husband is a physician in Boston; both she and her husband have similar attitudes toward their professions; they make music and medicine mix. She will keep on playing.

The other woman member is Olivia Luetcke, harpist for five years with the Boston and divorced from her husband, a San Antonio attorney.

Henry Freeman, violist, one of those seven violists ranged in a quarter circle behind me. He is from Rochester, where his father played first trumpet with the Rochester Symphony. Mr. Freeman has been with the Boston 11 years. He is a practical man.

Bernard Zighera, pianist with the orchestra since 1926 and a harpist as well. He has an engaging, toothy grin and doesn't mind my peering over his shoulder at the score. He asks what I am doing. Told I am an newspaperman, he beams happily. "We thought you were from TV," he says.

I didn't have an opportunity to ask why such a thought had ever come into his mind, for he disappeared immediately after the session's work was rehearsed.

Martin Hoherman, a cellist and a Pole, despite his German name. Born in Warsaw, playing in Paris when his homeland was invaded, years of travel (sometimes it was flight) while a stateless person, 2½ years in the British Army, making his way about Europe and the East "on the green"—that is without a passport and in somewhat undercover fashion. Eventually to Ceylon, then to Canada, and since three years ago with the Boston. Stateless no longer, he is becoming an American citizen.

• • •

BUT suddenly the talking, the plinking, the plunking and the toots halt. The members of the orchestra rise, there is a burst of applause and here and there a bravo. M. Monteux has arrived.

WOMAN MEMBER OF ORCHESTRA — Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and one of the two women members of the orchestra, practices on the lawn at Tanglewood.

In a quick, little trot, he crosses the stage from the wings and mounts the podium. With a smile and a twinkle in his eyes he says:

"Thank you just the same."

Then, directly to business, he says, "First the Sessions. We will play it without cuts." He pronounces Sessions as only a Frenchman would.

This M. Monteux, perhaps five feet tall, perhaps three feet around, with his longish, black hair, his full white moustache, his spectacles, his knowledge and his dignity, is, at 80, a miracle man of music.

Last night he was conducting the Chicago Symphony. Sunday night, June 26, he was conducting another of his former orchestras, the Concertgebouw, in Amsterdam. Twenty-four hours later he was leading the New York Philharmonic. In the late spring he had been in London and Brussels for concerts and in Paris for recordings.

But now his baton is descending at Tanglewood and the orchestra is alert to his commands as the first notes of the Sessions work are sounded. For a time it is a stop-and-go business as he bring the orchestra to silence to say:

"Don't make any crescendo"; to a bassoonist, "Can you play louder?"; to the tuba, "Do not play too loud." To a violist he addresses a remark that cannot be heard in the farther ranks, then illustrates, curling the fingers of his left hand as if holding the instrument and using his baton as a bow.

Without halting the music, he says, as a little passage particularly pleases him, "Nice."

Now the music swells. Cellos and basses are humming, kettle drums booming. The volume of sound shakes one.

• • •

IT is different listening to an orchestra from within. The non-professional finds it difficult to hear, as a whole, the work being played. His attention is constantly being diverted as music bursts out all about him—now from the woodwinds, now from the brasses, again from the piano.

Then comes the quieter finale, and as the last notes fade away, M. Monteux orders the work replayed.

Again it is a matter of stop and go with a "shh" to the flutes not to drown out the violins; a bit of difficulty with a horn player about how loud he should play at a certain moment—leading to a colloquy on the matter, every word in French. A moment later a lifted chin and a nod brings in the piano for a measure or two.

Satisfied now with the performance, M. Monteux orders a playing of the Bach. No work this time for the pianist. Quick as a wink, he disappears.

Not quite so much stop and go with the Bach. At its conclusion, the musicians begin chattering. M. Monteux merely looks sad and quiet is restored.

In good fun, he threatens:

"I'll make another speech."

The orchestra chuckles and grows quiet.

• • •

THEN is rehearsed the "Death and Transfiguration"—much attention now to the brasses and more pronounced direction from the conductor. The harpist wins a smile and a quiet "good" as she brings in a tiny trill of notes.

It is time now for an intermission.

The players set down their instruments and disperse to smoke and rest. M. Monteux remains a moment to answer a question or two. Then, unhurried and unharried, he disappears into his off-stage haunts.

The time of my invitation to sit with the orchestra had run out. I left the stage to sit in the auditorium and hear, from my more familiar place, the playing of the Beethoven.

It sounded wonderful!

DETROIT, MICH.
NEWS
Circ. D. 442,665—S. 549

JUL 30 1955

Detroiters Enroll at Music Center

LENOX, Mass., July 30—Among the students at the Berkshires Music Center this summer are Carol Lichtenmann, 6 Lakeshore drive, and Mrs. Thomas Cole, 3 Lakeshore drive, Detroit. The music center, situated at Tanglewood, is the location of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer festival.

ODESSA, TEX.
AMERICAN
Circ. D. 7,142—S. 20

JUL 28 19

On I

I recently walked into a store and bought three boo because the pictures on them very wicked. The salesman three books were popular an well. They were either 5 cents a piece—cheap or ten-agers, about the pric sumable in the same drug The first book was plain ter page 10. It was the man who wrote it must ed a perverted mind or wro order and then prayed to be given his sins. The second as one of those pseudo scie compilations that cover a de of advice on sex stimuli some unstable statistics. I read chnical language. some adults with teen-age hing and threw it on the here it burned rapidly. The third book I read with scination. It was the ribbies of writing since Zola pro "Nana," Zola, at any rate, the excuse that he was tryin more from romanticism to rea and landed into a sordid rom ism. Zola was a paradoxical cian who fictionized his ca stories which became more than case history. The a the printing job I bough drug store for 25 or 35 wish I could remember wh the extra dime—had no d cuse but that the job was because plenty of teen-age some adults with teen-age will read anything that them as a sex stimulant book was burned too. The real objection to these is that they are displayed in drug stores where young p come for ice cream and othe placed close to the door they must be seen quickly where the wicked pictures covers can attract attention told that often the pictures ar ceptive; that they are much than the covers and are often unre to the text, at all. Be that as it may, the druggist would be arrested sold medications which pro the same physical results the adolescent as these book He would be arrested if he these books, temporarily, the same purpose, some of which is permitted to sell these evil and to display these wicke tures. It is not necessary to be a to object to this display of raphy. It is not necessary to that the government should oppose the sale of salacio the literary output of the ma ing to minors. I do not give the names o books for two reasons: 1. Because I burned the do not recall their names. 2. Because I have no e advertise them. My next excursion into n be the purchase of some zines which I am told have circulations among teen-age

ODESSA, TEX.
AMERICAN
Circ. D. 20,142 - S. 20,384
JUL 28 1955

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

(Copyright, 1955, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

On Books

I recently walked into a drug store and bought three books because the pictures on them were very wicked. The salesman at the cigar counter told me that these three books were popular and sold well. They were either 25 or 35 cents a piece—cheap enough for teen-agers, about the price of a sundae in the same drug store.

The first book was discarded after page 10. It was plain dirt. The man who wrote it must have had a perverted mind or wrote to order and then prayed to be forgiven his sins. The second book was one of those pseudo scientific compilations that cover a multitude of advice on sex stimulation by some unstable statistics and technical language. I read the thing and threw it on the pyre where it burned rapidly.

The third book I read with some fascination. It was the filthiest bit of writing since Zola produced "Nana." Zola, at any rate, had the excuse that he was trying to move from romanticism to realism and landed into a sordid romanticism. Zola was a paradoxical physician who fictionized his case histories which became more fiction than case history. The author of the printing job I bought in a drug store for 25 or 35 cents—I wish I could remember which cost the extra dime—had no other excuse but that the job would sell because plenty of teen-agers and some adults with teen-age minds will read anything that serves them as a sex stimulant. That book was burned too.

The real objection to these books is that they are displayed freely in drug stores where young people come for ice cream and other fatteners. The bookstands are usually placed close to the door where they must be seen quickly and where the wicked pictures on the covers can attract attention. I was told that often the pictures are deceptive: that they are much worse than the printed material inside the covers and are often unrelated to the text, at all.

Be that as it may, the same druggist would be arrested if he sold medications which produced the same physical results upon the adolescent as these books do. He would be arrested if he sold narcotics, some of which serve the same purpose, temporarily, as these books do temporarily. But he is permitted to sell these evil books and to display these wicked pictures.

It is not necessary to be a prude to object to this display of pornography. It is not necessary to agree that the government should control the literary output of the nation to oppose the sale of salacious printing to minors.

I do not give the names of these books for two reasons:

1. Because I burned them and do not recall their names;
2. Because I have no desire to advertise them.

My next excursion into filth will be the purchase of some magazines which I am told have large circulations among teen-agers and which specialize in stories dealing with illicit sex and with major crimes. I have never seen the worst of these magazines but if they are no better than the three books to which I make reference, surely both the publishers and the distributors should be held accountable.

Perhaps all this is like Minsky's Burlesque which used to be a comparatively clean show for adults with adolescent minds. I went to one of those performances when they were legal on Broadway and found the audience more interesting than the show. However, I have seen worse on the so-called legitimate stage on Broadway, where so many authors seem to feel that the only way to amuse Americans is to include words in their text which the juvenile used to write on the outhouse walls, when there were outhouses. There was an author, Chic Sale, who made a tidy penny out of this penchant for vulgarity.

It might be interesting for pedagogues and sociologists to devote themselves to a comparative study of the over-emphasis on sex and crime among our young people. Maybe it is all exaggerated. Maybe they prefer to while their time away listening to recordings of Beethoven and Brahms, like the young people who spend their summers at Tanglewood. But it does not seem to me sound that these horrible little books and magazines should circulate in drug stores which ought to be devoted to curatives, not corruptions.

DETROIT, MICH.
NEWS
Circ. D. 442,665 - S. 549,629
JUL 30 1955

Detroiters Enrolled at Music Center

LENOX, Mass., July 30. — Among the students at the Berkshires Music Center this summer are Carol Lichtermann, 660 Whitmore, a chorus student, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cole, 3250 Chicago west, in the opera department. The music center is maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its annual Berkshires festival.

Music in Review

BOSTON POST

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, July 31 — The beautiful all-Brahms concert by Pierre Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra this afternoon must have come as sweet consolation to the thousands who, because of the vicious traffic tie-up last night had to miss part of the Beethoven concert or the hundreds who did not get here at all.

The audience this afternoon reached the not inconsiderable number of 12,000 persons; the total for the week end was an impressive 35,000, the second biggest shed week end in Tanglewood history.

Mr. Monteux opened the program with a reading of the academic festival overture so full of "Gemutlich" that the one listener at least reached involuntarily for a stein of good German beer. These student songs, comprising the themes of the piece, have seldom sounded more invigorating.

Originally scheduled for the second work was the concerto for violin and cello in which Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky were to be soloists. However, Mr. Piatigorkgy became ill and the violin concerto was substituted.

Mr. Stern performed with his customary elan and elicited the customary bravos at the conclusion. Conductor and soloist were so incredibly attuned in matters of interpretation that the concerto became a symphony with added solo part rather than any example of virtuoso display.

The final work, Symphony No. 1 in C Minor, was designed to bring any audience to its feet, particularly since the fourth movement has that thrilling melody which dominates the last pages. Mr. Monteux, not fussing about details, allowed the orchestra to sing it in a straightforward manner, and the effect was stimulating, to say the least.

All through the concert, Monteux accented the lyrical qualities of each work. The result was a Brahms, warm and heart-touching rather than either firey or square-cut.

For this delighted listener, it was the best concert so far this season.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 42,039
JUL 28 1955

150

Where Play Means Work

Tanglewood's Training Thorough

By DOROTHY E. RITZ

With an enrollment of 405 music students the Berkshire Music Center is in the midst of its 13th annual six-week session at the Tanglewood estate in the Berkshires near Lenox, Mass.

* * *

LAST WEEK we decided to visit the school for ourselves to hear and see. We picked Wednesday as a typical day and arrived in time for the 9:30 a.m. class in the Shed. Members of the Department I orchestra were assembling as were members of the conducting class.

Leonard Bernstein was in charge and student conductors waited their turns in front of the huge stage. The student orchestra assembled early to warm up their fingers and instruments in morning sunshine, which felt fine in the cool mountain air. Sweaters were in evidence in the Shed which was much cooler than outside.

For three hours, with a 15 minute break at 11 a.m., the orchestra practiced. Four conductors, three from Bernstein's conducting class, led the group in a varied program including Berlioz, the Dvorak Symphony number 2 in D minor (first movement), Schoenberg's "Survivor from Warsaw" with both orchestra and chorus and the Prokofieff violin concerto number 2 with Paul Gurevich as the solo violinist.

* * *

WE WERE PARTICULARLY interested in hearing the Prokofieff conducted by Scheneotady's Kenneth Schermerhorn, who has been awarded the Koussevitzky conducting scholarship at the school.

Other student conductors participating in the morning program were Henry Janicek and Arthur Winograd. The conducting class, which we were told numbers 15 this year, includes three women.

The orchestra, made up of the cream of student musicians selected by a vigorous screening process, includes Bruce Paine of Canajoharie, trombonist.

Most thorough training is offered and no detail is small enough to escape Bernstein's quick ear. Time and again the orchestra was stopped to rework, rework and rework tricky passages in the Dvorak. Although Bernstein conducted for an hour the rehearsal was so intense that the orchestra had only half played through the first movement when intermission arrived.

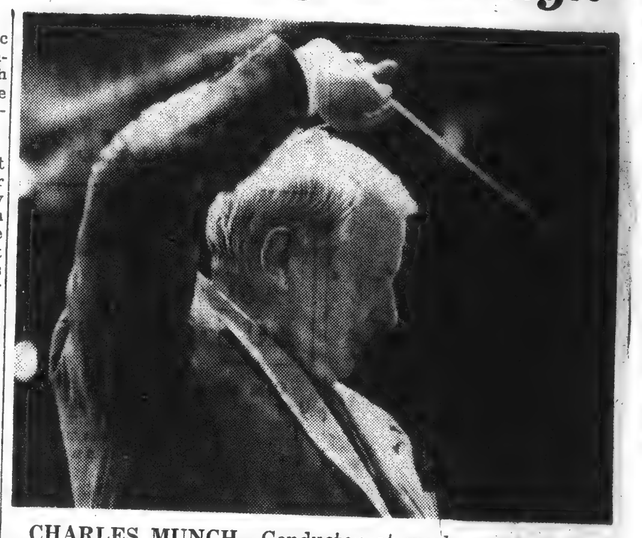
* * *

WHEN THE STUDENTS conducted the orchestra Bernstein, from the vantage point of a leader's chair, offered advice when necessary.

Winograd had the worst of the morning assignments. The orchestral music of Schoenberg is enough to cope with but in addition there was the men's chorus and a narrator. A 12-tone scale, Bernstein overseeing from his vantage point and Hugh Ross, who had prepared the chorus, inserting his tempos and ideas — Winograd had his troubles. He came through nobly however. The number, which we had never heard before, is stark writing.

AN EXCELLENT CAFETERIA is available for students, faculty and guests. During the lunch period we were introduced to several of the faculty including Roger Sessions, professor of music at Princeton University and Boris Blacher, director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin. Sessions and Blacher are sharing the post of guest composer at the Center this summer.

Center students gathered in groups on the Tanglewood lawns for informal discussion of music and sharing of experiences. Bits of vocal and instrumental music came from every direction and a class in solfege started up as we visited Composer Sessions' lecture as a guest.



CHARLES MUNCH—Conductor at work.

Sessions discussed, very informally, his "Black Maskers" suite, which was presented by the Boston Symphony in a Shed concert Saturday night under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Slightly built and balding, Sessions is now in his 59th year. He is a sincere musician and not given to eccentricities and the lecture was simple and straightforward with no attempt to unduly impress.

He stated first that the composition, written in 1923, was the "oldest work of mine I am on speaking terms with." (He had been composing for 14 years previous to that date.) He also hoped that the class did not expect any musical analysis of the work as "I have no enthusiasm for analyzing my own work."

* * *

WE CONCLUDED the afternoon by a visit to the barn to hear the Tanglewood Study Group afternoon session. Very intense and serious, like amateurs the world over, the group was working on the Hassler "Intraden aus dem Lustgarten," a six-part early composition.

By that time our ears were getting a bit frazzled and we decided that though classes were continuing all over the place we would quit for the day. We returned however for the evening sonata program in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

The Berkshire Music Center has the distinction of being the only school in the world sponsored by a major symphony orchestra.

It offers intensive study under expert musicians but does not offer either degrees or diplomas to its students. It was established in 1940.

* * *

THIS YEAR there are 110 students registered from New York state including 73 from New York city alone. Massachusetts has sent 48 to study including 31 from greater Boston. Students from Pennsylvania number 28; Illinois, 20; New Jersey, 18; Ohio, 17; Michigan, 15; and Connecticut, 10. A total of 14 students are enrolled from California, Washington, Oregon and Wyoming. Students from the south, number 20, include Florida, Louisiana, Texas, Georgia and Mississippi as their home states.

Canada has nine students and there are 20 foreign students.

A number of foreign students are composers. There are two Japanese composers studying at the school, Mrs. Michiko Toyama of Osaka and Tossi Ichiyanagi of Tokyo. Eino Rautavaara has come to the school from Helsinki, Finland, nominated by no less a person than composer Jean Sibelius. George Sicilianos has come from Athens, Greece, to study composition.

Miss Genia Palasanian, violinist in the student orchestra, comes from Teheran, Iran; and Israel Borouchoff, flutist in the student symphony, comes from Bat-Yam in Israel. Hiroshi Hatoyama, violinist, hails from Tokyo and Joza M. Karas, also a violinist, from Czecho-Slovakia.

* * *

STUDENTS AT THE CENTER this year range in age from 18 to 71 and occupations are many and varied ranging from priest, armed services officers, macaroni manufacturer, salesman, housewives, secretaries and medical doctors to educators.

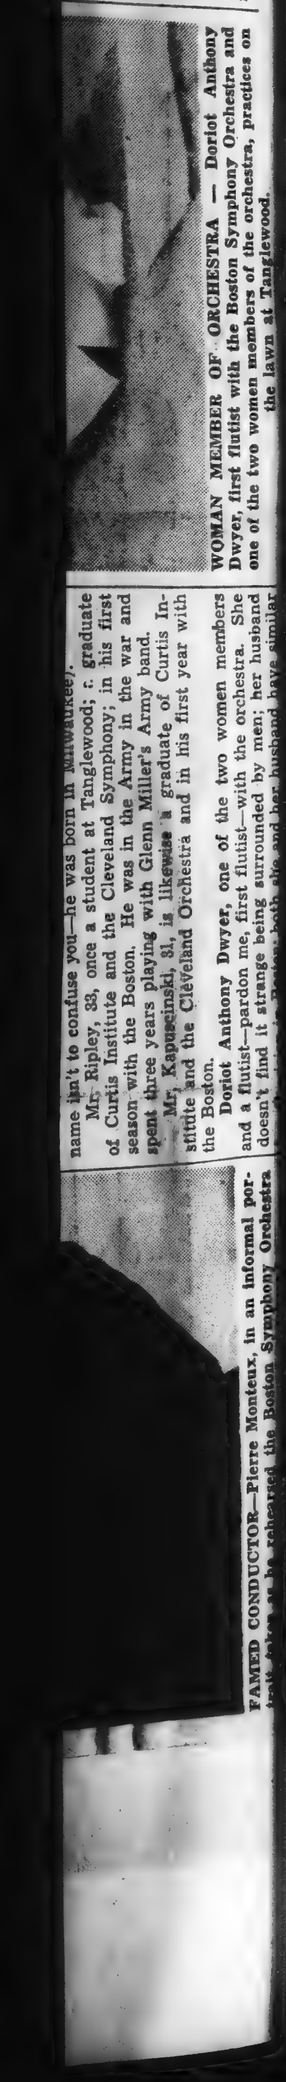
Rev. Daniel Harris, the priest of St. Bernard's Abbey at St. Bernard, Alabama, is playing second violin in the student symphony. He offers mass at St. Anne's, the Roman Catholic church in Lenox, during the temporary absence of its regular priest.

The Berkshire Music Center has a remarkable record of achievement. Its former students scattered through the world now total 4,987 and over 10 per cent of the membership of all major United States symphony orchestras is composed of former Tanglewoodians.

Tanglewood's opera department has given the American premieres of Britten's "Peter Grimes" and "Albert Herring;" Mozart's "Idomeneo;" Ibert's "Le Roi d'Yvetot;" and Gretry's "Richard the Lion-Hearted." This year the department will premiere a short opera especially composed at Tanglewood, "The Rope," by Louis Mennini from an Eugene O'Neil play; and, as far as is known, the first performance in this country of Mozart's unfinished opera, "Zaide."

Tanglewood is a lovely spot with its gardens and music and its atmosphere of sincere study.

EASY LISTENING—Overflow audience from concert shed.



WOMAN MEMBER OF ORCHESTRA — Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and one of the two women members of the orchestra, practices on the lawn at Tanglewood.

FAMED CONDUCTOR—Pierre Monteux, in an informal portrait pose as he rehearsed the Boston Symphony Orchestra name isn't to confuse you—he was born in Milwaukee).

Mr. Ripley, 33, once a student at Tanglewood; a graduate of Curtis Institute and the Cleveland Symphony; in his first season with the Boston. He was in the Army in the war and spent three years playing with Glenn Miller's Army band.

Mr. Kapuscinski, 31, is likewise a graduate of Curtis Institute and the Cleveland Orchestra and in his first year with the Boston.

Doriot Anthony Dwyer, one of the two women members and a flutist—pardon me, first flutist—with the orchestra. She doesn't find it strange being surrounded by men; her husband tion from the conductor. The harpist wins a smile and a quiet "good" as she brings in a tiny trill of notes.

It is time now for an intermission.

The players set down their instruments and disperse to smoke and rest. M. Monteux remains a moment to answer a question or two. Then, unhurried and unharried, he disappears into his off-stage haunts.

The time of my invitation to sit with the orchestra had run out. I left the stage to sit in the auditorium and hear, from my more familiar place, the playing of the Beethoven.

It sounded wonderful!

LIBERTY, N. Y.
REGISTER
Circ. W. 2,112
JUL 28 1955

HUGE MODERN CENTER OF MUSIC READY FOR OPENING WEDNESDAY

Ellenville is to be Setting for $300,000 Project to Bring Art to the Catskills

By Sheldon Lessen

A modern, newly-built $300,000 music center will house the Empire State Music Festival, which opens for the first time next Wednesday at Ellenville. It will be the largest event of its kind in the Catskills and may well be the largest, with exception of New York City presentations, in the entire state.

The initial offering will be devoted to Beethoven's third "Lenore" overture and Eighth Symphony, and the First Symphony of Brahms, a program that will be repeated Friday. The Symphony of the Air, comprising 75 musicians who played under Arturo Toscanini when this orchestra was the NBC Symphony, has been engaged to play for the entire season. The inaugural concert will be given as "A Salute to Toscanini."

A statement from the festival's Ellenville office said that "upwards of $125,000 worth of tickets for the festival have already been sold by local committees" working in Ulster and Sullivan counties. Harry Resnick, chairman of the Catskill Mountain Civic Corporation, which is bringing the festival to Ellenville, stated in the report that the corporation pledged $100,000 to the festival corporation in order to be able to stage the event.

Beautiful music "will engulf the Catskill Mountains" five days every week from opening night until Labor Day. Three concerts will be given every week, two of them repeats on Wednesday and Friday evenings, at 8:30, with a third, composed in main of lighter music, on Sunday afternoons at 3:30. Opera will be presented on Thursday and Saturday nights. There will also be ballet.

Metropolitan Star to Sing

Chosen for opening week presentation in Puccini's "La Boheme," Lucia Evangalista, of the New York City Opera, and Metropolitan Opera Star Eugene Conley will sing Mimi and Rulolfo respectively. Other "Met" stars will be Frank Guarrera, Clifford Harvot and William Wilderman. During subsequent weeks, "Madam Butterfly," "La Traviata," and "Cosi Fan Tutte" will be heard. A beautiful musical adaptation of Shakespeare's immortal "The Tempest," using incidental music by Jan Sibelius, will highlight the festival's final programs during the Labor Day week end.

Organized on a scale "to rival the famed Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony in Lenox, Mass.," the programs will be presented in "a 4,000 seat natural amphitheater now being completed, together with the raising of a $35,000 tent which will cover half of the amphitheater" the report stated. There will be parking space for 2,000 cars. A special stage, built by Frederick Kiesler, of Vienna, will be used.

Symphonic maestros who will appear during the five-week season are Eduard Van Beinum, who will conduct the "Salute to Toscanini," Alfred Wallenstein, Erich Leinsdorf, Morton Gould, Hugh Ross, Leroy Anderson and Isler Solomon. Opera will be presented under direction of Emerson Buckley, Tibor Kozma and Leinsdorf.

The Board of Directors of the festival includes John Brownlee, Metropolitan Opera baritone; Frank Forest, operatic tenor and treasurer of the festival; Jascha Rushkin, a violinist under Toscanini for more than a decade; and Jerome Hershon, Ellenville business man. Mayor Eugene Glusker, of Ellenville, has proclaimed August 3 to 10 as "Music Festival Week" and has urged business men and housesholders to fly bags and bunting.

VALATIE, N. Y.
ROUGH NOTES
Circ. W. 1,000
JUL 29 1955

Tanglewood:

Bernstein Will Conduct Koussevitsky Memorial

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, moves into its semi-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with the fifth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three piano sonatas performed by Rudolf Serkin, on August 3 in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Beethoven and Wagner provide the fare for the three weekend concerts in the huge Music Shed.

* * *

Leonard Bernstein will conduct Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" on Friday evening as a memorial to his patron Serge Koussevitsky. Soloists on this occasion will be Adele Addison, soprano, Eunice Alberts, contralto, David Lloyd, tenor, Mac Morgan, bass.

* * *

Charles Munch's Saturday evening program will commence with a first Tanglewood performance of Beethoven's opera "Fidelio," Act II. The second half of the program is devoted to excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung," with Margaret Harshaw soloist in the Immolation Scene.

The Sunday afternoon concert Mr. Munch will devote to Beethoven, whose music i sa feature of the 1955 Berkshire Festival, with Eugene Istomin, pianist, making his debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra as soloist in the Concerto No. 4. Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m.

Adele Addison, who will be soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood on August 5 and 14.

ST. LOUIS, MO.
POST-DISPATCH
Circ. D. 390,772 - S. 451,820
JUL 31 1955

Prison Visit On Schedule For Monitor

VISITS to the Federal Youth Authority, a prison for juvenile delinquents at Ashland, Ky., will be among features on Monitor on KSD today and tonight. Starting at 2:30 this afternoon, there will be periodic visits to the prison. Also on Monitor, at 2 this afternoon and at later periods, will be broadcasts from the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood.

A program on the Community Chest will be heard on It's Our Town on KWK at 10 tonight.

Jazz singer Ella Fitzgerald, pop singer Don Cherry, mezzo-soprano Gloria Lane and The Chordettes will be heard on "What's New in Music" on KMOX at 4:30 this afternoon. Victor Young will be the conductor in the absence of vacationing Percy Faith.

Family Theater on KWK at 9:30 tonight will star Jack Haley as a writer who wants to revise fairy tales to make them milder and less frightening. Debra Paget will be the program hostess.

* * *

IN TONIGHT'S MUNY Opera Previews, on KSD at 9, Frank Eschen will talk about "Allegro," the Rodgers and Hammerstein operetta which will open at the Municipal Opera tomorrow night.

The Rev. Elmer Knoernschild of St. Louis will be the second of three Lutheran Hour summer speakers, beginning today. Lutheran Hour is heard on KWK at 11:30 a.m. and on KFUO at 2:30 p.m.

The Rt. Rev. Henry H. Daniels, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Montana, will be the 9 a.m. speaker on Church of the Air on KMOX this morning. His topic will be "The Relationship of God and Man." The Rev. Dr. Robert J. Lamont, Presbytery of Pittsburg, will be the speaker in the 9:30 period, talking on "Christianity—Cellar Style."

In the fifth in a series of talks by Catholic laymen, Anton Pegis will be heard on Catholic Hour on KSD at 1 this afternoon. Pegis is an author, educator and philosopher.

Third Week At Berkshire Music Festival

The third week of concerts at the Berkshire Music Festival signals the opening of the programs by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra. A chamber group of Boston players provided the concerts given during the past two weeks while the rest of the musicians were completing their assignments with the Boston Pops series and the Esplanade concerts on the Charles River basin. The 104-piece orchestra will give 12 weekend concerts in the Shed during the remaining four weeks of the current Berkshire Festival.

This week's Festival programs comprise an evening of Beethoven violin sonatas by Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin on Wednesday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall; two all-Beethoven concerts by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony, the first on Friday evening with violinist Stern as soloist and the second on Sunday afternoon; and a program of Bach, Beethoven, Sessions, and Richard Strauss on Saturday evening. Pierre Monteux, who was the regular conductor of the Boston Orchestra from 1919 to 1924, will conduct the latter program. The veteran conductor, late of the San Francisco Symphony, has been acting as a guest conductor for Festival programs since 1951.

A featured work on next Saturday evening's program is to be a Suite in four movements, by Roger Sessions. The Suite is comprised of several incidental numbers taken from the music which the composer wrote for Leonid Andreyev's play, "The Black Maskers," first given at Smith College in 1923. Professor Sessions is now a member of the music faculty at Princeton University and this summer is a guest teacher of composition at Tanglewood (Berkshire Music Center). The Suite will receive its Tanglewood premiere on Saturday evening.

Finnish Composer Studying At Tanglewood

One of 33 students from 18 foreign countries attending the Berkshire Music Center this summer is the young Finnish composer, Eino Rautavaara. The 26-year-old composer from Helsinki is studying at Tanglewood through the efforts and good will of Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the former conductor of the Boston Orchestra. Rautavaara was nominated for a Tanglewood scholarship by the eminent Finnish composer, Jean Sibelius, whose 90th birthday will be celebrated on December 8 of this year. Mrs. Koussevitzky, incidentally, is chairman of an international Sibelius Committee which is making plans for a world-wide observance of the composer's birthday. The committee is enlisting the co-operation of conductors both here and abroad in performing programs and whole cycles of Sibelius music this year.

The Koussevitzky Music Foundation, in co-operation with the Berkshire Music Center, provided both a scholarship and full living expenses for young Rautavaara at Tanglewood. The Finlandia Foundation of New York is defraying his travel expenses to and from Finland. Rautavaara will continue his studies at the Juilliard School of Music in New York after his stay at the Berkshire Music Center this summer. One of his compositions, a work for brass and percussion, recently won an international contest and a prize awarded by Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony. Johnson, himself a former student at the Berkshire Music Center, was the guest conductor of a Festival concert on July 9.

